The Common Cause, 23rd. October. 1914. 652/1 652.

Work for Professional Women.

Clerical Workers.

We are glad to learn that the Central Committee for the Employment of Women is devising schemes for the employment of clerical workers, and also for giving training, together with maintenance, to those who are partially trained. Meanwhile, private enterprise is already active in finding work for the many secretaries, typists, and others, thrown out of employment by the war. Among the first to suffer from the general cutting down of business were the clerical workers, many of whom found themselves thrown out of employment with a week's salary in their pockets and no prospect whatever of earning a livelihood.

In some instances, we are told, those who had gone on holiday received no notice and came back to find work at a standstill, shutters up, and that their income had suddenly ceased. Still worse off were the English girls who had been working in Germany or Austria, and who had banked, or invested, their money in those countries. Forced to fly with hand luggage only, leaving their hard-earned savings behind, they have arrived here in the clothes they stand up in and absolutely beggared of everything else they possessed.

Some panic stricken employers, themselves facing ruin, dismissed their employees in batches; others, less badly hit, followed suit, and hastened to subscribe large sums to Relief Funds; others, again, offered to retain the services of their staffs at salaries reduced 25 per cent. or 50 per cent., sometimes for shorter hours, or—better still—for three days' work, thus saving three days' fares. Half-wage and half-time, however, did not invariably march hand in hand, nor was the former always a living wage. It must be borne in mind, too, that the Government exacts the full health insurance contribution from the half-time worker. If, therefore, women in this profession were not to lose their sickness benefits, when health might the more readily fail through over anxiety and actual want, something had to be done for them, and at once.

War Emergency Fund for Clerical Workers.

At this crisis, the Association of Women Clerks and Secretaries, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand, opened its doors to all British clerical workers in distress, and immediately started a War Emergency Fund. Its first appeal for aid was made to the more fortunate among the profession itself, who had been able to retain their posts and their salaries intact. They were asked to subscribe at the rate of 6d. in the £ of their weekly earnings, but, of course, with due consideration of any private calls they might have upon them. The delusion cherished by many leisured and well-to-do people, that middle class workers are invariably financed by their relatives and should, therefore, be paid less than men, is a delusion at the best of times: at this, worst of times, it deserves a stronger term. "I have kept a sick sister for years and now my brother who has six children is out of work," said the recipient of 27s. 6d. per week, in fear that she might soon lose this sum, so pitifully inadequate to the calls she had to meet. "My father is in a lunatic asylum, and mother's pension is not enough for herself: she's ill with all the trouble she's had and can do nothing," was the dreary statement of a forlorn-looking girl, who had been earning 13s. a week when she lost her work days ago. She was one of many quite unqualified for this profession, who had drifted into its lowest rank because she had not been taught to earn a livelihood in any way suitable to her capacity.

Prospects Brightening.

Already employment has been found for a considerable number of clerical workers, and the offices of the Fund have become a depôt for copying. Through a friend's kindness advertisements inserted by her in various papers asking for family letters and documents to copy, have brought in a precious log-book kept by a naval officer in 1810. Banks and insurance companies, too, are slowly making up their minds to give the women a chance, and as their staffs are being steadily depleted by men going to the front, prospects of employment for women should rapidly improve. Miss Helen C. Gordon, Hon. Organiser and Treasurer of the War Emergency Fund, from whom the above information was received, hopes that sufficient support may be forthcoming to enable women clerical workers to tide over the evil days that have befallen them, and asks for continuation throughout the war of the assistance received, both subscriptions and orders for typing being urgently needed.

A Free Employment Bureau.

Mrs. Hoster, whose work in improving the pay and status of clerical workers is known to many of our readers, has sent out the following letter to members of the Chamber of Commerce and the heads of a great number of firms:—

"Dear Sir,—I am writing to ask you whether you are likely to have any vacancies for educated women as clerks, foreign correspondents, or secretaries.

"Owing to the war, a large number of trained workers have been thrown out of employment, and as they are for the most part entirely dependent on their earnings, they will soon be in great distress if work cannot be found for them.

"My interest in the matter lies in the fact that I have, for a great many years, conducted at my own expense, a Free Registry for the benefit of secretarial and clerical workers, and therefore it is naturally to me that they are now coming to seek work and advice.

"In order to meet this increased demand, I am enlarging my Registry, and am using every means in my power to find suitable openings. I may add that every applicant is tested by one of my secretaries, and her qualifications duly entered on a card and indexed. I would like to make it quite clear that there is no charge whatever to either employer or employed.

"I append the names of some of my referees, who will speak for the

The Needs of Professional Women.

The Times of October 20th criticises the action of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, especially with regard to the failure to help clerical workers thrown out of work. Perhaps The Times will lend its powerful support to our plea that the enormous mass of clerical work necessarily employed in connection with the Prince of Wales's Fund, and all relief, should be done by paid women. At present no grants are made for this purpose, and, consequently, volunteers are being largely employed. Presumably, the unemployed clerical workers will, if the distress continues, obtain in the form of relief the money that they might have earned as wages. This seems to us frankly idiotic.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Town Girls for the Country.

One of the most interesting experiments which owes its origin to the outbreak of the war is that of taking factory girls from the dismal, over-crowded conditions of industrial towns to the fresh air and vigorous life of the country. In the far West of England a factory is being created in which the working women of surrounding districts find a new employment in all forms of fruit-pulping, in drying vegetables, in bottling new unsweetened fruit preserves. By means of this work hundreds of tons of fruit which would otherwise have been wasted have been dealt with, supplies for the army and other public sources provided, and a trade hitherto centred in Germany, developed in this country. It is hoped that within a short time this industry will be established on a paying basis, and probably 100 girls will be enjoying the healthy life of the country.

Closer at hand, at Radlett, in Herts., East London girls will soon be hard at work developing a good acreage of land with fruit and vegetables and flowers. Here the girls will be under the direction of two lady gardeners, who will train them in this work with a view to establishing them as skilled market gardeners and fruit growers in the future.

The Central Committee for Women's Employment is for a limited time paying the wages of the workers until they shall be ready for good employment elsewhere, and their work shall give them a livelihood without further assistance. The care of the Committee does not end with the payment of wages, but they keep careful supervision as to the comfort and well-being of these young women, many of them between eighteen and twenty, who are necessarily away from their homes.

Justice, October 22nd 1914.

At the last meeting of the committee of the London Women's Branch of the Printers' Warehousemen and Cutters, the following resolution was adopted: "This committee, representing 5,000 women, protests against employment of women at 3d. per hour, for 40 hours, or 10s. per week, on relief work, as from practical experience we know that it is impossible to feed, clothe and house a woman in London, especially while the price of food is so terribly high, on that money, besides being over 50 per cent. below the trade union rate."

Irish Life, October 23rd. 1914.

One day last week the Queen, attended by Lady Bertha Dawkins and Mr. Wallington, visited the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment at Cannon Street Road, Piccadilly, and Park Street. At each centre Her Majesty walked through the rooms leisurely pausing at each table to speak to the workers, asking them questions as to their earnings, their work and how they managed on their wages. The women were very gratified at the interest taken in them, and were most enthusiastic about her kindness later. Amongst those who received Her Majesty and conducted her round the rooms were the Marchioness of Crewe, Mrs. H. J. Tennant, the Mayor and Mayoress of Stepney, Sir Bampfylde Fuller, Miss Mary Macarthur, Miss Anderson, Mrs. Heaton, and others.

Clerical Workers.

We are glad to learn that the Central Committee for the Employment of Women is devising schemes for the employment of clerical workers, and also for giving training, together with maintenance, to those who are partially trained. Meanwhile, private enterprise is already active in finding work for the many secretaries, typists, and others, thrown out of employment by the war. Among the first to suffer from the general cutting down of business were the clerical workers, many of whom found themselves thrown out of employment with a week's salary in their pockets and no prospect whatever of earning a livelihood.

In some instances, we are told, those who had gone on holiday received no notice and came back to find work at a standstill, shutters up, and that their income had suddenly ceased. Still worse off were the English girls who had been working in Germany or Austria, and who had banked, or invested, their money in those countries. Forced to fly with hand luggage only, leaving their hard-earned savings behind, they have arrived here in the clothes they stand up in and absolutely beggared of everything else they possessed.

Some panic stricken employers, themselves facing ruin, dismissed their employees in batches; others, less badly hit, followed suit, and hastened to subscribe large sums to Relief Funds; others, again, offered to retain the services of their staffs at salaries reduced 25 per cent. or 50 per cent., sometimes for shorter hours, or—better still—for three days' work, thus saving three days' fares. Half-wage and half-time, however, did not invariably march hand in hand, nor was the former always a living wage. It must be borne in mind, too, that the Government exacts the full health insurance contribution from the half-time worker. If, therefore, women in this profession were not to lose their sickness benefits, when health might the more readily fail through over anxiety and actual want, something had to be done for them, and at once.

War Emergency Fund for Clerical Workers.

At this crisis, the Association of Women Clerks and Secretaries, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand, opened its doors to all British clerical workers in distress, and immediately started a War Emergency Fund. Its first appeal for aid was made to the more fortunate among the profession itself, who had been able to retain their posts and their salaries intact. They were asked to subscribe at the rate of 6d. in the £ of their weekly earnings, but, of course, with due consideration of any private calls they might have upon them. The delusion cherished by many leisured and well-to-do people, that middle class workers are invariably financed by their relatives and should, therefore, be paid less than men, is a delusion at the best of times: at this, worst of times, it deserves a stronger term. "I have kept a sick sister for years and now my brother who has six children is out of work," said the recipient of 27s. 6d. per week, in fear that she might soon lose this sum, so pitifully inadequate to the calls she had to meet. "My father is in a lunatic asylum, and mother's pension is not enough for herself: she's ill with all the trouble she's had and can do nothing," was the dreary statement of a forlorn-looking girl, who had been earning 13s. a week and lost her work days ago. She was one of many quite unqualified for this profession, who had drifted into its lowest rank because she had not been taught to earn a livelihood in any way suitable to her capacity.

Prospects Brightening.

Already employment has been found for a considerable number of clerical workers, and the offices of the Fund have become a depôt for copying. Through a friend's kindness advertisements inserted by her in various papers asking for family letters and documents to copy, have brought in a precious log-book kept by a naval officer in 1810. Banks and insurance companies, too, are slowly making up their minds to give the women a chance, and as their staffs are being steadily depleted by men going to the front, prospects of employment for women should rapidly improve. Miss Helen C. Gordon, Hon. Organiser and Treasurer of the War Emergency Fund, from whom the above information was received, hopes that sufficient support may be forthcoming to enable women clerical workers to tide over the evil days that have befallen them, and asks for continuation throughout the war of the assistance received, both subscriptions and orders for typing being urgently needed.

A Free Employment Bureau.

Mrs. Hoster, whose work in improving the pay and status of clerical workers is known to many of our readers, has sent out the following letter to members of the Chamber of Commerce and the heads of a great number of firms:—

"Dear Sir,—I am writing to ask you whether you are likely to have any vacancies for educated women as clerks, foreign correspondents, or secretaries.

"Owing to the war, a large number of trained workers have been thrown out of employment, and as they are for the most part entirely dependent on their earnings, they will soon be in great distress if work cannot be found for them.

"My interest in the matter lies in the fact that I have, for a great many years, conducted at my own expense, a Free Registry for the benefit of secretarial and clerical workers, and therefore it is naturally to me that they are now coming to seek work and advice.

"In order to meet this increased demand, I am enlarging my Registry, and am using every means in my power to find suitable openings. I may add that every applicant is tested by one of my secretaries, and her qualifications duly entered on a card and indexed. I would like to make it quite clear that there is no charge whatever to either employer or employed.

"I append the names of some of my referees, who will vouch for the good faith of my appeal.—Yours faithfully,

"Constance Hoster."

This letter has already borne fruit in a good many inquiries and Mrs. Hoster has also had an application from one Society organising assistance during the war. Applications from others are likely to follow, as voluntary workers begin to tire of their unaccustomed duties or are found to be inefficient.

"At present," writes Miss Gordon, "competent women clerks are vainly applying for employment to the relief the failure to help clerical workers thrown out of work. Perhaps The Times will lend its powerful support to our plea that the enormous mass of clerical work necessarily employed in connection with the Prince of Wales's Fund, and all relief, should be done by paid women. At present no grants are made for this purpose, and, consequently, volunteers are being largely employed. Presumably, the unemployed clerical workers will, if the distress continues, obtain in the form of relief the money that they might have earned as wages. This seems to us frankly idiotic.

R.S.A.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Town Girls for the Country.

One of the most interesting experiments which owes its origin to the outbreak of the war is that of taking factory girls from the dismal, over-crowded conditions of industrial towns to the fresh air and vigorous life of the country. In the far West of England a factory is being created in which the working women of surrounding districts find a new employment in all forms of fruit-pulping, in drying vegetables, in bottling new unsweetened fruit preserves. By means of this work hundreds of tons of fruit which would otherwise have been wasted have been dealt with, supplies for the army and other public sources provided, and a trade hitherto centred in Germany, developed in this country. It is hoped that within a short time this industry will be established on a paying basis, and probably 100 girls will be enjoying the healthy life of the country.

Closer at hand, at Radlett, in Herts., East London girls will soon be hard at work developing a good acreage of land with fruit and vegetables and flowers. Here the girls will be under the direction of two lady gardeners, who will train them in this work with a view to establishing them as skilled market gardeners and fruit growers in the future.

The Central Committee for Women's Employment is for a limited time paying the wages of the workers until they shall be ready for good employment elsewhere, and their work shall give them a livelihood without further assistance. The care of the Committee does not end with the payment of wages, but they keep careful supervision as to the comfort and well-being of these young women, many of them between eighteen and twenty, who are necessarily away from their homes.

Justice, October 22nd 1914.

At the last meeting of the committee of the London Women's Branch of the Printers' Warehousemen and Cutters, the following resolution was adopted: "This committee, representing 5,000 women, protests against employment of women at 3d. per hour, for 40 hours, or 10s. per week, on relief work, as from practical experience we know that it is impossible to feed, clothe and house a woman in London, especially while the price of food is so terribly high, on that money, besides being over 50 per cent. below the trade union rate."

Irish Life, October 23rd. 1914.

One day last week the Queen, attended by Lady Bertha Dawkins and Mr. Wallington, visited the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment at Cannon Street Road, Piccadilly, and Park Street. At each centre Her Majesty walked through the rooms leisurely pausing at each table to speak to the workers, asking them questions as to their earnings, their work and how they managed on their wages. The women were very gratified at the interest taken in them, and were most enthusiastic about her kindness later. Amongst those who received Her Majesty and conducted her round the rooms were the Marchioness of Crewe, Mrs. H. J. Tennant, the Mayor and Mayoress of Stepney, Sir Bampfylde Fuller, Miss Mary Macarthur, Miss Anderson, Mrs. Heaton, and others.

funds, and when they are told that the clerical work is all done on a voluntary basis, feel, with considerable bitterness, that well-to-do women are taking the bread out of their mouths. In excuse, it has been argued that money subscribed by the charitable for an express purpose is eaten up in its administration by highly-paid officials. No doubt there is some truth in this, but it would be interesting to know the occasion on which clerical women workers attained the exalted position of officials with large salaries. When philanthropy is concerned, this has usually been considered a wholly sufficient plea for under-paying, rather than over-paying."

Since writing the above, we have learnt from Mrs. Hoster that one of the banks which has started taking women is so satisfied with the work of those she sent that it has asked her to send two more. Mrs. Hoster has also seen Sir William Soulsby on the subject of employment for women in the City, and a branch has been started at the Guildhall under Mr. Alfred Cox. A leader in The Times of October 21st, suggests that larger clerical staffs should be employed at the War Office, official need being "at the same time an opportunity for mitigating unemployment among clerical workers."

Altogether, the prospects for clerical workers look decidedly brighter than they did a few weeks ago.

National Care of Maternity.

Deputation to Mr. Herbert Samuel.

A deputation, arranged by the Women's Co-operative Guild, in conjunction with the Women's Labour League and the Railway Women's Guild, waited on Mr. Herbert Samuel on Monday, and urged upon him, in his two-fold capacity of Chairman of the Government Distress Committee and President of the Local Government Board, the desirability of giving Government support to a scheme for the national care of maternity in time of war.

Miss Llewelyn Davies, Secretary of the Women's Co-operative Guild, explained the scheme, and pointed out that the needs of the women for whom they appealed were not met by the forms of help which had so far been given official recognition. The proposals are :—

The provision of regular and systematic medical advice and help for expectant and nursing mothers, and children up to school age.

The provision of nourishment, of doctor or midwife at confinements, and of sick-room help.

The deputation urged Mr. Samuel to :—

(1) Give special encouragement to the formation of Maternity Centres under the Public Health Authorities.

(2) Recommend the Representative Committees to adopt a scheme for the provision of nourishment and medical aid at confinements and sickroom helps, and to make grants for this purpose from the Prince of Wales's Fund.

Mr. Herbert Samuel, speaking of what had already been done, said :—

"With respect to maternity centres, a circular was issued on July 30th, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer assented to half the cost of those centres being defrayed from the National Exchequer. The proposals in the circular embraced arrangements for an ante-natal clinic for expectant mothers; for the medical supervision of midwives; maternity hospital provision; arrangements for giving skilled and prompt assistance to mothers; systematic attendance and treatment for infants; clinics and dispensaries for children up to school age; and home visitation. These various proposals could only be matured gradually, but they look forward to the kind of work set out becoming part of the normal operations of the Public Health service and to that end they were most anxious to combine both the forces of the public authorities and the philanthropic activity of the existing voluntary organisations. Up to now the circular has been replied to by seventy voluntary agencies and forty local authorities."

With regard to grants from the Prince of Wales's Fund, he pointed out that this fund could only be used to relieve cases of distress specifically due to the war; it could not be used for the general needs of motherhood. He suggested that the work necessary to be done for mothers in extreme need owing to the war could not be carried out only by maternity centres, because in many places they did not exist. Such cases should be referred to the local Relief Committees.

With respect to the provision of food through dining-rooms, he did not like to pronounce any very definite opinion; it was a matter to some extent for the local committees themselves.

"While on the one hand it is economical and assists to defeat the incorrigible self-sacrifice of mothers, who if provided with food in their homes would often give it to their children rather than have any of it themselves, on the other hand it has the disadvantage of taking the Evening Standard, October 23rd. 1914.

WORK OF CENTRAL COMMITTEE ON WOMAN'S EMPLOYMENT.

KNITTING MACHINES LENT.

One hundred and eleven workshops have now been given contracts through the agency of the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

In spite of the fact, however, that a large number of dressmakers have been employed by this means, the distress in the dressmaking trade still continues. Day after day employers come to the committee with the same story. Told in a Court dressmaker's words, it is this:—

"All my gowns for September were cancelled, and ladies are not ordering gowns. Since August I have kept my staff on making stock, but I cannot do this any longer as I have no means of disposing of it at present. There are thousands of dressmakers unemployed, and it is terrible to contemplate what will become of some of them unless work is found."

From an East-end workroom the cry is the same: "I have a workroom in which during normal times I have employed thirty young women and girls. My staff is reduced to twenty-one, who are doing less than one-third time, and there is every indication that I must shortly close down entirely."

The increase in the order for 5000 flannel belts weekly for the French army to 8000 or 10,000 will enable the committee to provide work for over thirty firms until early in December. Further, if the order is enlarged, to the persons with whom the committee is dealing the weekly contract will be renewed.

A good many workshops can undertake hosiery work. Knitting machines have been loaned, and it is found that a girl can learn to use them in three or four days' time. There is certain to be a large demand for this class of goods, not only for our own troops, but for those of our Allies. It is hoped, therefore, that opportunity will be given to place orders so as to most benefit unemployed women. Small orders are not desired, but the committee would gladly place weekly orders of substantial size.

Burnley Express, Oct. 24th. 1914.

WOMEN'S WORKROOM.

THE POSITION AT BURNLEY.

About three weeks ago women in Burnley in need of employment were officially asked to register themselves at the Labour Exchange. The Burnley Distress Committee appointed an Employment of Women Sub-Committee, with Councillor W. Buchanan as chairman, and in order to find out what steps had been taken to establish a workroom for the women a "Burnley Express" reporter has had an interview with the sub-committee chairman.

Our reporter was informed that three weeks ago last Tuesday the sub-committee met, and as a result the Central Committee in London, of which Miss Mary MacArthur is the secretary, were put in possession of all the facts relating to unemployment among women in Burnley. Lengthy correspondence ensued, and a wire was received on Wednesday by the chairman, as follows:—"Scheme under consideration by Cabinet Committee to-day. No work should be undertaken till grant made.—MacArthur."

The scheme, as prepared by the local sub-committee, would find employment for the 53 women who have registered, and also provide clothing for poor children, and, if possible, for adults. The scheme would also assist traders through the purchase of materials locally. The Central Committee, however, have seriously reduced the amount provided in the estimates for materials, and therefore it has been necessary for the Mayoress to appeal for materials, etc. "Personally," said Councillor Buchanan, "I have been anxious to refrain from appealing to our own townspeople, as we are all aware how much they have suffered through bad trade, and it appeared to me that the money subscribed to the Queen Mary Fund would be paid out in amounts which would supply a reasonable quantity of materials. We have had several offers of school premises, one of which has been favourably reported on by H.M. Inspector of Factories. It would not take the committee very long to get the workroom going if only something definite in the form of a grant was forthcoming from London."

Western Mercury 552/2 October 23rd. 1914.

Overlapping.

There are widespread complaints of overlapping in connection with the agencies set up to deal with distress consequent on the war, although a great deal has been done in the past few weeks to co-ordinate their work. The Joint Classification and Women's Work Committee of the Central Unemployed Body has been considering the matter for some time, and to-morrow the Central Body is to be asked to approach the Local Government Board.

The Committee's resolution alleges that, owing to the setting up of the Cabinet local committees, there is unnecessary duplication of machinery, and points out that the Central Body is the statutory authority for dealing with distress arising from lack of employment. The setting up of other committees to do the same work, it urges, is to be deprecated.

Kensington News, Oct. 24th.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Hammersmith Mayoress's Committee, appointed to consider the question of the provision of work for women, has succeeded in submitting a scheme to the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and to the Mayor's Local Representative Committee, to provide work for women in Hammersmith, which has been approved by both authorities and also by the Cabinet Committee. It will be gratifying information for the public of Hammersmith, who have responded so splendidly to the Mayor's appeal for funds, that authority has been received from headquarters to open as early as possible a workroom for needlework women out of work on account of the war, and a substantial grant has been received by the Mayor from the Central Fund to meet the expenses. We understand that the Mayoress hopes to be in a position to start the workroom early next week.

We believe that arrangements have been made for the workroom to be established for the time being at the Hammersmith Town Hall, under the immediate supervision of the Mayoress, and a small committee of ladies who are assisting the Mayoress in this particular branch of the work. The women employed will be selected upon application to the various Ward Committees established throughout the borough by his Worship the Mayor to prevent and relieve distress among the civilians arising on account of the war. It is not expected that very many will be engaged in the first place in the workroom, but we believe the organisation has been framed to enable the numbers to increase or decrease as circumstances require.

The general outline of the scheme of employment for women provides that the women shall be employed particularly in the production of useful articles such as clothing for cases of distress amongst civilians, nightdresses, bed jackets, for poor sick women nursed in hospitals or their own homes, all kinds of garments, but especially knitted garments, for poor people, cheap cradles, and various accessories which are often lacking but are always desirable in the nursing of the sick poor and in maternity cases.

Particular care is being taken that nothing should be made which would, but for the scheme, be produced and purchased in the ordinary course of business, and also that the articles produced shall not, generally speaking, be offered for sale, but are to be given through the Mayor's Local Representative Committee or other approved sources, to persons who otherwise would not be able to obtain such articles. Applicants for work should in the first instance make application to the Ward Committees, who in due course will report upon the applications to the Central Committee sitting under the chairmanship of the Mayor at the Town Hall, and we believe arrangements have been made for dealing with all applications properly.

Newcastle Chronicle October 26th 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £78,201 7s. 11d.

As an instance of the good the Central Committee are accomplishing it may be mentioned that in one district alone—Paddington—300 women have been registered as unemployed, and of these the majority are skilled dressmakers and good-class tailoresses. Every case is investigated by the woman investigator for the district, and 50 per cent. of them are reported by her to be in urgent distress.

South London Press 6 52. Oct. 23rd. 1914.

WORK FOR LAMBETH WOMEN.

The Executive Committee of the Lambeth Relief Fund will have before them at their meeting this evening (Friday) a scheme to provide work for women out of employment in the borough.

It is proposed to utilise Ilford House, Lambeth Walk, as a workroom for 50 women over 18 years of age, especially from the unskilled class. They will be provided with work from 8.30 a.m. to 5.30 p.m. on five days of the week, an hour being allowed for dinner.

The work will consist, in the main, of repairing, renovating and cutting down old clothes and such-like employment, and the work, when completed, will be disposed of as gifts to hospitals, Care Committees and other charitable organisations.

It is estimated that the cost per week will just exceed £36, which will be partly covered by a grant from Queen Mary's Fund.

Up to Friday relief had been granted to 38 cases, amounting in all to £45 11s. 4d.

Daily Telegraph, Oct. 24th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

PROVISION OF WORK.

In London alone over 3,000 women who were thrown out of work on account of the war have now found employment through the agencies of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and the Central Unemployed Body. In addition, over 114 ordinary trade work-rooms which would otherwise have been shut down as a result of the war have been kept going, and women retained in employment who would otherwise have swollen the ranks of the workless.

Besides the experimental schemes which the Central Committee has started as models of how work may be provided, twenty-nine schemes proposed by local representatives all over the country have been approved. The relief work is by no means confined to needlework, but includes training schemes by which the women and girls will be fitted for better work in the future.

The Women's Employment Sub-Committee of St. Pancras is adopting several of the schemes drawn up by the Central Committee. A domestic economy training centre is to be established, and a number of women are to be trained as sick-room helps. The practical training will be carried out in the homes of the sick in the district under the supervision of trained nurses, and class teaching is to be given in cookery, laundry work, and the elements of hygiene and infant care. Gifts of crockery and kitchen utensils are urgently needed by the Central Committee for the training kitchens. The receiving depôt is at 12, Park-street, Park-lane.

A private exhibition of garments made in the special training-room for forewomen will be held at 12, Park-street, on Wednesday next. Admission cards will be issued to a limited number of people interested in this special scheme on application to the hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, S.W.

The Fund now amounts to £77,867, yesterday's contributions including £102 collected by the Mayoress of Reading, and further instalments of £55 and £27 collected respectively by the Mayoresses of Nuneaton and Hastings.

Westminster Gazette Oct. 24th.

THE ST. MARYLEBONE DISTRESS COMMITTEE.

This Committee, the headquarters of which are at the Town Hall, was formed several years ago for the purpose of providing work for the unemployed. The work consists of colony work, agricultural labour, and other public employments for men, while employment for women is to be found in workrooms. At the present time there are a large number of dressmakers' assistants in need of employment, also domestic servants and an ever increasing number of charwomen. It is a matter of regret to learn that the present number of workrooms which have been provided by the Committee are quite inadequate to accomodate the number of applicants and it is essential that more should be installed immediately.

Morning Post. October 24th 1914.

652

652/3

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The amount contributed to the Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday was £288 5s. 11d., making a total of £77,867 15s. 5d. The following were included:

	£	s.	d.
Collected by the Mayoress of Reading (including receipts from entertainment given on Saturday, October 10, £25 8s.; collected by Miss Smith, £12 10s. 6d.; and by Mrs. Bull, £10 19s. 8d.)	102	6	5
Collected by the Mayoress of Nuneaton, further instalment (including proceeds of concert given by the Congregational Church Choir, £40)	55	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Hastings, further instalment (including Mr. Herbert Neal, £10; Mrs. Edward Kent, £10)	27	0	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Weston-super-Mare (further instalment)	16	1	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Brighton (further instalment) ...	14	5	6
Mr. and Mrs. James A. Morris	10	0	0
Other Subscriptions	63	13	0

All communications concerning the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner.

A private exhibition of garments made in the Central Committee on Women's Employment special training-room for forewomen will be held at 12, Park-street, Park-lane, on Wednesday, between 10.30 a.m. and 4.30 p.m. Admission cards will be issued to a limited number of persons interested in this special scheme on application to the hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place.

SATISFACTORY RESULTS.

In London alone over 3,000 women who were thrown out of work on account of the war have now found employment through the agencies of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and the Central Unemployed Body. In addition, over 114 ordinary trade work-rooms which would otherwise have been shut down as a result of the war, have been kept going and women retained in employment who would otherwise have swollen the ranks of the workless. Besides the experimental schemes which the Central Committee has started as models of how work may be provided twenty-nine schemes proposed by local representatives all over the country have been approved by the Central Committee. The relief work is by no means confined to needlework, but includes training schemes by which the women and girls will be fitted for better work in the future.

St. Pancras Scheme.

The Women's Employment Sub-Committee of St. Pancras is adopting several of the schemes drawn up by the Central Committee. A Domestic Economy Training Centre is to be established, and a number of women are to be trained as sick-room helps. The practical training will be carried out in the homes of the sick in the district under the supervision of trained nurses, and class teaching is to be given in cookery, laundry work, and the elements of hygiene and infant care.

Gifts of crockery and kitchen utensils are urgently needed by the Central Committee for the training kitchens. The receiving depot is at 12, Park-street, Park-lane. A sorting department has had to be opened at the depot to deal with the enormous quantities of second-hand garments which have been sent in response to the appeal of the Committee. One room is always piled high with unopened parcels, for they come in faster than it is possible to deal with them. The first consignment of finished baby garments has arrived from the relief work-rooms, containing 30 or 40 complete baby sets. These will be distributed through the Local Representative Committees to poor mothers. Material which was supplied to the National Organisation of Girls' Clubs has also been made up, and seven enormous bundles of clothing returned.

A second waggon-load of sample pieces has arrived from Sir George Pragnell. With the pieces are some large rolls of stockinette, which are very welcome for underclothing. Some ladies are ordering pieces of material to be sent from shops. One such gift contains 10 lengths of serge from 1 yard to 4½ yards, 14 yards of cretonne, 12 lengths of flannel from 1 yard to 6 yards long.

Belts for Soldiers.

Orders from the Queen's Gift to Soldiers Fund, amounting to £8,000, for belts have been placed through the Central Committee. Forty orders, ranging in value from 7s. 6d. to £50, for various articles of clothing, have been received from private persons who wish the Committee to distribute them where work is needed. Very small orders are not desired. The order for 5,000 flannel belts weekly for the French Army, which has been placed through the Central Committee, has been increased to 8,000 or 10,000 per week.

In order to get work at the women's work-rooms opened through the agency of the Central Committee women should apply to their Local Representative Committee. Workers are never taken on at the work-rooms. Only women who are themselves thrown out of work by the war can be engaged. Distress caused by unemployment among men cannot be relieved by giving employment in special work-rooms to wives who were not wage-earners before the war began.

The Times,
October 24th. 1914.

WORKROOMS FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO BETHNAL GREEN.

The Queen, accompanied by Lady Katharine Coke and Mr. E. W. Wallington, yesterday visited the workrooms opened through the agency of the Central Committee on Women's Employment in Bethnal Green. Her Majesty was received at St. Simon's Institute by representatives of the Central Committee, and by the Mayor and Mayoress of Bethnal Green, Sir Edwin Cornwall, M.P., Miss James, chairman of the Women's Sub-Committee, and the vicar of St. Simons. At St. Andrew's Institute the Queen was received by Miss Young, hon. secretary of the Women's Sub-Committee and by the Rev. D. Rhys.

The following subscriptions to the Queen's Fund were received yesterday:—

Collected by the Mayoress of Dudley (including Mrs. Holden, Mr. O'Dowd, and Netherton Ladies, £18 3s.; Mrs. Hillman and helpers, £15 18s. 7½d.; Mrs. Maitland and helpers, £10 16s. 6d.)	£125	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Nottingham (further instalment, including Mrs. J. D. Player, £10; Lady Robertson, £10; Mr. Whitchurch, £10)	57	11	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Plymouth (further instalment, including Messrs. Spooner and Co., £25)	57	6	10
Sir George Gibb	25	0	0
£20 EACH.—Mrs. and Mr. J. Jacob, Miss K. M. Lazenby.
Proceeds of a concert given by Mme. Florence Thorne's Choir	16	0	0
Messrs. W. Hayford and Sons	10	10	0
Collection at St. Stephen's, Walbrook, E.C. (per the Lady Mayoress of London)	10	7	3
£10 EACH.—Lady Acton, Lady and Miss Inglis, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Farrer.
Other Subscriptions	70	2	9
Yesterday's Total	451	17	10
Previously Acknowledged	78,201	7	11
Total to Date	£78,653	5	9

In addition to the above, Lady Egerton of Tatton has sent a donation of £20 to provide socks for the troops at the front.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

Evening Standard. October 24th.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

WORK OF CENTRAL COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

GIFTS OF CROCKERY NEEDED

In London alone over 3000 women who were thrown out of work on account of the war have now found employment through the agencies of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and the Central Unemployed Body.

In addition, over 114 ordinary trade workrooms which would otherwise have been shut down as a result of the war, have been kept going and women retained in employment who would otherwise have swollen the ranks of the workless.

Besides the experimental schemes which the Central Committee has started as models of of how work may be provided, twenty-nine schemes proposed by local representatives all over the country have been approved by the Central Committee.

The relief work is by no means confined to needlework, but includes training schemes by which the women and girls will be fitted for better work in the future.

Sick Room Helps.

The Women's Employment Sub-Committee of St. Pancras is adopting several of the schemes drawn up by the Central Committee. A Domestic Economy Training Centre is to be established, and a number of women are to be trained as sick room helps. The practical training will be carried out in the homes of the sick in the district under the supervision of trained nurses, and class teaching is to be given in cookery, laundry work, and the elements of hygiene and infant care.

Gifts of crockery and kitchen utensils are urgently needed by the Central Committee for the training kitchens. The receiving depot is at 12, Park-street, Park-lane.

A sorting department has had to be opened at the depot to deal with the enormous quantities of second-hand garments which have been sent in response to the appeal of the committee. One room is always piled high with unopened parcels, for they come in faster than it is possible to deal with them.

Finished Baby Garments.

The first consignment of finished baby garments has arrived from the relief workrooms containing thirty or forty complete baby sets. These will be distributed through the Local Representative Committees to poor mothers. Material which was supplied to the National Organisation of Girls' Clubs has also been made up and seven enormous bundles of clothing returned.

A second wagon-load of sample pieces has arrived from Sir George Pragnell. With the pieces are some large rolls of stockingette, which are very welcome for underclothing.

Some ladies are ordering pieces of material to be sent from shops. One such gift contains ten lengths of serge from one yard to four yards and a half, fourteen yards of cretonne, twelve lengths of flannel from one yard to six yards long.

Orders from the Queen's Gift Fund amounting to £8000 for belts have been placed through the Central Committee.

Flannel Belts for the French Army.

Forty orders ranging in value from 7s. 6d. to £50 for various articles of clothing have been received from private persons who wish the committee to distribute them where work is needed. Very small orders are not desired.

The order for 5000 flannel belts weekly for the French Army which has been placed through the Central Committee has been increased to 8000 or 10,000 per week.

In order to get work at the women's workrooms opened through the agency of the Central Committee, women should apply to their Local Representative Committee. Workers are never taken on at the workrooms.

Only women who are themselves thrown out of work by the war can be engaged. Distress caused by unemployment among men cannot be relieved by giving employment in special workrooms to wives who were not wage-earners before the war began.

Adaptation of Left-off Clothing.

St. Pancras Gazette, October 24th. 1914.

ST. PANCRAS

WORKROOM FOR WOMEN OPENED.

A committee authorised by the Mayor (Councillor T. A. Collins, J.P.), on October 5th, has been formed, composed of the Ward Sub-Committees, the women members of the Mayor's executive committee, and four members of women's industrial organisations, and two social workers, the object of this committee being to deal with unemployment among women in St. Pancras arising from the war.

The committee at its second meeting appointed a sub-committee of three to draw up a scheme for a workroom, and this sub-committee accordingly applied to the Queen's Central Committee on Women's Employment, at Grosvenor place, for advice, and were informed that the Central Committee were willing to start a workroom, and provide management, materials, and wages, if the local committee would supply suitable premises, with lighting and heating, and recruit the workers from the Ward Committees.

Application was accordingly made at the Town Hall to know if the Borough Council would be willing to grant the use of rooms at the St. Pancras Baths, Prince of Wales road; members of the committee obtained the loan of tressels, tables, irons, and sewing machines, from the County Council and other sources; and the consent of the Baths Committee of the Borough Council being obtained, the committee were enabled to open the workroom on Monday. Ultimately provision will be made for 150 workers.

Manchester Guardian, October 26th. 1914.

WORKROOM FOR UNEMPLOYED WOMEN IN SALFORD.—The Mayoress of Salford writes:—Your readers are no doubt aware that we have a workroom at the Queen Street Institute, Salford, where, under the supervision of a committee of ladies, work is being provided for a number of otherwise unemployed women, owing to the war. The work upon which they are engaged consists very largely of sewing and machining, for which purpose second-hand garments which may be put into good order for use, or materials for making up clothing, are urgently required. The Committee will therefore feel greatly obliged for any gifts of the nature indicated, which may be forwarded to me at the Salford Town Hall, or to Mrs. Edith Hampson, hon. secretary, 81, Camp Street, Broughton.

North Middlesex Chronicle, October 31st. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The need for help with the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund increases with each day, for the workrooms and schemes for unemployed women provided by the Central Committee on Women's employment are multiplying every week. If the wages of these women in distress through the war are to be paid, and a still greater number employed, a regular income is a necessity. The centres of work already opened are as follows:—

Besides their own experimental schemes for providing work for women, the Committee has considered and approved a large number of schemes submitted by Local Representative Committees. These have been forwarded to the Government Committee for consideration of the question whether a grant in aid of them should be recommended.

Other work for women which is to be started by the Central Committee this week includes domestic economy training at centres situated at Bethnal Green, Finsbury and Islington, and training for working women in market-gardening, fruit and flower-growing at Radlett, Hertfordshire.

Employment is also to be found as soon as possible for the trained clerical worker, and instruction with maintenance given to her partially trained sister.

Morning Post. October 26th. 1914.

652

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Saturday's contributions to the Queen Work for Women Fund amounted t £333 12s. 6d., making a total of £78,201.

	£	s.	d.
Scottish Donations are now augmented by the First Contribution of the recently formed Scotland Branch, per the Marchioness of Linlithgow (including Mrs. Chalmers (Bathgate) £100, Mrs. Moubray £20, Mr. James L. Anderson £10)	168	11	8
Mrs. Paget	30	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Leeds (further instalment)	14	9	0
Collected by the Countess of Lonsdale	14	2	6
Collected by the Mayoress of Totnes	13	9	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Little Crosby	11	12	0
Mr. Brodie Henderson	10	10	0
Other Subscriptions	70	18	4

Princess Marie-Louise of Schleswig-Holstein, accompanied by Miss Collin, of the "Friends of the Poor," visited the headquarters of the Central Committee on Women's Employment on Saturday.

All communications with reference to the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner.

A PADDINGTON SCHEME.

What is being done for dressmakers in distress? In many districts, where schemes of work have been approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, the answer is ready. Paddington, a dressmaking district, is typical. Three hundred women are registered as unemployed, and of these the majority are skilled dressmakers and good tailoresses. Every case is investigated by the woman investigator for the district, and 50 per cent. are reported by her to be in urgent distress. "Only three of the people I have visited," she said on Friday, "have proved unsatisfactory. The reason people think that there is no distress among the better-class workers is that they keep their troubles to themselves. They are too proud to say they are hungry."

Several ladies in the district have individually turned their dining-rooms into work-rooms, and employed ten or so of these distressed dressmakers. For the last three weeks the Mayoress also has had a work-room which has now received a grant from the National Relief Fund. To-day another work-room is to be opened, so that the workers may be divided into two classes. Monday morning is to be left free, so that the workers will have an opportunity of looking for other work. The Mayoress herself and the investigator are always on the look-out for work for their workless dressmakers. As soon as an advertisement appears in the papers applicants are sent from the existing work-room. It is hoped that no woman will have to stay in the work-room more than a fortnight, or at the outside a month. It is to be used simply for emergency purposes. Fifty women will be started at work to-day, and the number will be increased up to one hundred. The clothes made are to be given to the distressed middle-class poor in the neighbourhood. Training schemes are not being contemplated in Paddington under the grant, for the obvious reason that the women mostly have their own trade. Further a training centre has already been started by Miss Katherine Bruce where girls are taught upholstery, toy-making, advance dress-cutting, and the use of a knitting machine.

6521/4

which the women and girls will be fitted for better work in the future.

Sick Room Helps.

The Women's Employment Sub-Committee of St. Pancras is adopting several of the schemes drawn up by the Central Committee. A Domestic Economy Training Centre is to be established, and a number of women are to be trained as sick room helps. The practical training will be carried out in the homes of the sick in the district under the supervision of trained nurses, and class teaching is to be given in cookery, laundry work, and the elements of hygiene and infant care.

Gifts of crockery and kitchen utensils are urgently needed by the Central Committee for the training kitchens. The receiving depot is at 12, Park-street, Park-lane.

A sorting department has had to be opened at the depot to deal with the enormous quantities of second-hand garments which have been sent in response to the appeal of the committee. One room is always piled high with unopened parcels, for they come in faster than it is possible to deal with them.

Finished Baby Garments.

The first consignment of finished baby garments has arrived from the relief workrooms containing thirty or forty complete baby sets. These will be distributed through the Local Representative Committees to poor mothers. Material which was supplied to the National Organisation of Girls' Clubs has also been made up and seven enormous bundles of clothing returned.

A second wagon-load of sample pieces has arrived from Sir George Pragnell. With the pieces are some large rolls of stockingette, which are very welcome for underclothing.

Some ladies are ordering pieces of material to be sent from shops. One such gift contains ten lengths of serge from one yard to four yards and a half, fourteen yards of cretonne, twelve lengths of flannel from one yard to six yards long.

Orders from the Queen's Gift Fund amounting to £8000 for belts have been placed through the Central Committee.

Flannel Belts for the French Army.

Forty orders ranging in value from 7s. 6d. to £50 for various articles of clothing have been received from private persons who wish the committee to distribute them where work is needed. Very small orders are not desired.

The order for 5000 flannel belts weekly for the French Army which has been placed through the Central Committee has been increased to 8000 or 10,000 per week.

In order to get work at the women's workrooms opened through the agency of the Central Committee, women should apply to their Local Representative Committee. Workers are never taken on at the workrooms.

Only women who are themselves thrown out of work by the war can be engaged. Distress caused by unemployment among men cannot be relieved by giving employment in special workrooms to wives who were not wage-earners before the war began.

Adaptation of Left-off Clothing.

A private exhibition of garments made in the Central Committee on Women's Employment's special training room for forewomen will be held at 12, Park-street, Park-lane, W., on Wednesday, October 28, between 10.30 a.m. and 4.30 p.m. Admission cards will be issued to a limited number of people interested in this special scheme on application to the Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, S.W.

Manchester Guardian,
October 26th. 1914.

WORKROOM FOR UNEMPLOYED WOMEN IN SALFORD.—The Mayoress of Salford writes:—Your readers are no doubt aware that we have a workroom at the Queen Street Institute, Salford, where, under the supervision of a committee of ladies, work is being provided for a number of otherwise unemployed women, owing to the war. The work upon which they are engaged consists very largely of sewing and machining, for which purpose second-hand garments which may be put into good order for use, or materials for making up clothing, are urgently required. The Committee will therefore feel greatly obliged for any gifts of the nature indicated, which may be forwarded to me at the Salford Town Hall, or to Mrs. Edith Hampson, hon. secretary, 81, Camp Street, Broughton.

North Middlesex Chronicle,
October 31st. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The need for help with the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund increases with each day, for the workrooms and schemes for unemployed women provided by the Central Committee on Women's employment are multiplying every week. If the wages of these women in distress through the war are to be paid, and a still greater number employed, a regular income is a necessity. The centres of work already opened are as follows:—

Besides their own experimental schemes for providing work for women, the Committee has considered and approved a large number of schemes submitted by Local Representative Committees. These have been forwarded to the Government Committee for consideration of the question whether a grant in aid of them should be recommended.

Other work for women which is to be started by the Central Committee this week includes domestic economy training at centres situated at Bethnal Green, Finsbury and Islington, and training for working women in market-gardening, fruit and flower-growing at Radlett, Hertfordshire.

Employment is also to be found as soon as possible for the trained clerical worker, and instruction with maintenance given to her partially trained sister.

should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner.

A PADDINGTON SCHEME.

What is being done for dressmakers in distress? In many districts, where schemes of work have been approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, the answer is ready. Paddington, a dressmaking district, is typical. Three hundred women are registered as unemployed, and of these the majority are skilled dressmakers and good tailoresses. Every case is investigated by the woman investigator for the district, and 50 per cent. are reported by her to be in urgent distress. "Only three of the people I have visited," she said on Friday, "have proved unsatisfactory. The reason people think that there is no distress among the better-class workers is that they keep their troubles to themselves. They are too proud to say they are hungry."

Several ladies in the district have individually turned their dining-rooms into work-rooms, and employed ten or so of these distressed dressmakers. For the last three weeks the Mayoress also has had a work-room which has now received a grant from the National Relief Fund. To-day another work-room is to be opened, so that the workers may be divided into two classes. Monday morning is to be left free, so that the workers will have an opportunity of looking for other work. The Mayoress herself and the investigator are always on the look-out for work for their workless dressmakers. As soon as an advertisement appears in the papers applicants are sent from the existing work-room. It is hoped that no woman will have to stay in the work-room more than a fortnight, or at the outside a month. It is to be used simply for emergency purposes. Fifty women will be started at work to-day, and the number will be increased up to one hundred. The clothes made are to be given to the distressed middle-class poor in the neighbourhood. Training schemes are not being contemplated in Paddington under the grant, for the obvious reason that the women mostly have their own trade. Further a training centre has already been started by Miss Katherine Bruce where girls are taught unholstery, toy-making, advance dress-cutting, and the use of a knitting machine.

652/4

Evening Standard
October 26th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

SKILLED TAILORESSES AND DRESSMAKERS IN DISTRESS.

WORK IN PADDINGTON.

Everyone knows that women are out of work, and everybody is asking the same question. In many districts, where schemes of work have been approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, the answer is ready. Paddington, almost entirely a dress-making district, is typical.

Three hundred women are registered as unemployed, and of these the majority are skilled dressmakers and good-class tailoresses. Every case is investigated by the Woman Investigator for the district, and 50 per cent. are reported by her to be in urgent distress.

"Only three of the people I have visited," she said yesterday, "have proved unsatisfactory. These are the kind of women I find:—

"A skilled dressmaker, regularly earning 18s. to 25s. per week, went for her holiday at the beginning of August. When she returned there was nothing for her to do. For about three years she has supported her brother, who has tuberculosis, and she has 7s. rent to pay per week. Of course, she has been selling things, and they have both been half-starved, but they never say anything about that. The reason people think that there is no distress among the better-class workers is that they keep their troubles to themselves. They are too proud to say they are hungry.

Sixpence for Twenty-Four Hours.

"There is a young dressmaker of seventeen who is practically the breadwinner of her family. Her mother is a widow, one sister is paralysed and cannot work at all, and the younger sister of fourteen is apprenticed, and is hoping to have 1s. a week pocket-money. The dressmaker used to earn 12s. 6d. a week, and with 7s. 6d. which the mother earned for three days' charing work every week, they managed very comfortably. Since the girl was thrown out of work, those four people have been existing on the 7s. 6d. the mother earns. That is not the worst.

"An old woman of sixty had to make 6d. last from Saturday noon till Tuesday noon, and that money a neighbour, who was nearly as badly off as herself, had given her for making a baby's frock. I shall not forget her face when I told her she could come to the Mayoress's work-room.

"Several ladies in the district have individually turned their dining-rooms into work-rooms, and employed ten or so of these distressed dressmakers. For the last three weeks the Mayoress also has had a work-room, which has now received a grant from the National Relief Fund. On Monday another work-room is to be opened, so that the workers may be divided into two classes.

"Monday morning is to be left free, so that the workers will have an opportunity of looking for other work. The Mayoress herself and the investigators are always on the look-out for work for their workless dressmakers. As soon as an advertisement appears in the papers, applicants are sent from the existing work-room."

Gifts for Middle-Class Poor.

It is hoped that no woman will have to stay in the work-room more than a fortnight, or at the outside a month. It is to be used simply for emergency purposes. Fifty women will be started at work on Monday, and the number will be increased up to one hundred.

They are all to be employed making blue serge children's dresses. Only one kind of material has been bought, so that it can be cut to the greatest advantage. The clothes made are to be given to the distressed middle-class

The Daily News & Leader,
October 26th. 1914.

652.

THE WAR AND THE NATION.

THE CASE OF WOMEN OUT OF WORK.

HOW A GREAT PROBLEM IS TACKLED.

Everything considered, the Central Committee on Women's Employment—the executive body charged with the administration of Queen Mary's Work-for-Women Fund—might with justice claim to be proving itself the most effective of the official organisations engaged in the different departments of the work of national relief.

Its members have a large problem before them—it is computed that there are about 40,000 women out of work in London alone—and they have approached it in a spirit which gives ground for hope that not merely will immediate necessities be relieved, but foundations laid on which a permanent amelioration of women's social and industrial conditions may be based.

Guarantee of Efficiency.

One of the best guarantees of the efficiency of the Central Committee is its personnel. With Lady Crewe as chairman, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant as treasurer, Miss Mary Macarthur as honorary secretary, and a membership which includes Miss Margaret Bondfield, Miss Susan Lawrence, Miss Violet Markham, and Dr. Marion Phillips, it is not surprising that the outcome of the committee's labours is constructive work of quite unquestioned value. To mention particular names is perhaps a little invidious, and it should in any case be added that in the actual executive work the co-operation of a singularly capable body of women workers for women has been secured.

On the whole the women's relief work throughout the country is well co-ordinated. There are many bodies doing useful work—among them the Women's Emergency Corps, the various suffrage societies, and, of course, the Central Unemployed Body in London, with the distress committees corresponding to it in the provinces. Between these little overlapping is at present manifest. The Central Unemployed Body, for example, is concerned with ordinary distress not directly occasioned by the war, whereas Lady Crewe's Committee, as part of the National Relief Fund organisation, has as its field what may be termed war-distress alone.

In the large department of women's unemployment it stands in the same relation to the 330 Local Representative Committees up and down the country as the Government Committee under Mr. Samuel does in the wider field of distress as a whole.

Hopeful Outlook.

It is clear that in either case the real effectiveness of the work done must depend on the local committees. What makes the outlook encouraging in the case of women is the initiative and resource of which the Central Committee is giving evidence. While some of its schemes either contemplated or in progress demand detailed attention, the immediate purpose of indicating the lines of action pursued may be served by summarising what has actually been achieved in three or four departments of the work. It should be understood that the function of the committee is not to carry out relief work itself, but rather to stimulate, check, or counsel local bodies in their execution of the task they have been created to discharge. Grants are made to a local committee for women's relief work only after their scheme has been approved by the central body.

A statement of what Lady Crewe's Committee is effecting may be arranged most conveniently under two heads, the Maintenance of Employment and the Relief of the Unemployed.

I. The Maintenance of Employment.

In spite of the obvious difficulties of attempting to direct the flow of industry, the committee has been able by foresight and organisation to maintain thousands of women in work who would otherwise be unemployed by securing the diversion to blouse-making, dressmaking firms and the like of orders for shirts, knitted belts, and similar articles—a diversion wholly legitimate at a time like the present, when the shirt and hosiery factories are quite unable, even with heavy overtime, to cope with the demand. Over a hundred firms in London alone (dressmakers, machinists, etc.) have been enabled in this way to retain employees whom otherwise they would have been compelled to discharge. An order just received for several thousand belts will be sufficient, it is calculated, to keep thirty almost workless firms going for at least two months.

The fostering of new or undeveloped trades—most of them by the nature of things experimental—is a line of activity with great possibilities. Among the schemes are included such activities as:

Making of artificial flowers.
Doll-making.
Fruit-pulping and vegetable-drying.
Training of women on the land.

A committee at present sitting is investigating the prospects of further progress along these lines.

II. The Relief of Unemployment.

In its work for the relief of unemployment the committee has kept consistently in view the importance of increasing the efficiency of the worker as well as of supplying her material necessities.

The most general form of relief work is the establishment of workrooms, with the essential proviso that the employment thus given shall not be competitive, in which case it would only result in the displacement of employed workers. The problem is being solved by producing garments which are given away under careful supervision to families so poor as to have practically no purchasing capacity, who, in other words, would not have bought clothes in any case, but would have gone in rags.

Trained instructresses are employed to give guidance to the inexpert worker, and the women themselves receive a minimum of 3d. an hour for a forty-hour week. The Health Insurance contribution is paid in addition.

A Practical Scheme.

As an alternative to actual manual work, or in combination with it, useful training courses are being instituted as a condition of the receipt of relief. Instruction in cookery and domestic economy and the training of sick-room helps are cases in point. A scheme is at present being matured by which it is hoped that the difficult problem of the unemployed women clerks and typists may be in a large measure solved, by training courses which will enable them to perfect their mastery of their own profession and at the same time increase their business efficiency, as, for instance, by the acquisition of some foreign language.

I have only briefly indicated the main principles of the work of the Central Committee, and of necessity have omitted many details and explanations, the inclusion of which might have forestalled possible criticism. One point, however, must be emphasised, that most of the actual work of Lady Crewe's Committee—it has, for example, a certain number of workrooms of its own—is simply intended as a model and a stimulus to the local committees. It is with them that the main responsibility for the executive work must rest.

H. W. H.

652/5

for for the district, and 50 per cent. are reported by her to be in urgent distress.

"Only three of the people I have visited," she said yesterday, "have proved unsatisfactory. These are the kind of women I find:—

"A skilled dressmaker, regularly earning 18s. to 25s. per week, went for her holiday at the beginning of August. When she returned there was nothing for her to do. For about three years she has supported her brother, who has tuberculosis, and she has 7s. rent to pay per week. Of course, she has been selling things, and they have both been half-starved, but they never say anything about that. The reason people think that there is no distress among the better-class workers is that they keep their troubles to themselves. They are too proud to say they are hungry.

Sixpence for Twenty-Four Hours.

"There is a young dressmaker of seventeen who is practically the breadwinner of her family. Her mother is a widow, one sister is paralysed and cannot work at all, and the younger sister of fourteen is apprenticed, and is hoping to have 1s. a week pocket-money. The dressmaker used to earn 12s. 6d. a week, and with 7s. 6d. which the mother earned for three days' charing work every week, they managed very comfortably. Since the girl was thrown out of work, those four people have been existing on the 7s. 6d. the mother earns. That is not the worst.

"An old woman of sixty had to make 6d. last from Saturday noon till Tuesday noon, and that money a neighbour, who was nearly as badly off as herself, had given her for making a baby's frock. I shall not forget her face when I told her she could come to the Mayoress's work-room.

"Several ladies in the district have individually turned their dining-rooms into work-rooms, and employed ten or so of these distressed dressmakers. For the last three weeks the Mayoress also has had a work-room, which has now received a grant from the National Relief Fund. On Monday another work-room is to be opened, so that the workers may be divided into two classes.

"Monday morning is to be left free, so that the workers will have an opportunity of looking for other work. The Mayoress herself and the investigators are always on the look-out for work for their workless dressmakers. As soon as an advertisement appears in the papers, applicants are sent from the existing work-room."

Gifts for Middle-Class Poor.

It is hoped that no woman will have to stay in the work-room more than a fortnight, or at the outside a month. It is to be used simply for emergency purposes. Fifty women will be started at work on Monday, and the number will be increased up to one hundred.

They are all to be employed making blue serge children's dresses. Only one kind of material has been bought, so that it can be cut to the greatest advantage. The clothes made are to be given to the distressed middle-class poor in the neighbourhood.

The Woman Investigator will be at the work-rooms, so that if a woman comes in real need she will be given a day's work at once and inquiries made afterwards.

"When a woman comes to me," said the Investigator, "and her white face twitches as she speaks, and her eyes fill with tears at a kind word, and when I say 'What have you had for breakfast?' and she whispers 'Nothing,' I know that she is in need of work at once."

Some of the women are so dazed with semi-starvation that for a few hours they can scarcely hold a needle. No one knows what the tea and bread and butter given in the afternoon mean to these women who starve and "say nothing."

Training schemes are not being contemplated in Paddington under the grant, for the obvious reason that the women mostly have their own trade. Further, a training centre has already been started by Miss Katherine Bruce where girls are taught upholstery, toy-making, advance dresscutting, and the use of a knitting machine.

don alone—and they have approached it in a spirit which gives ground for hope that not merely will immediate necessities be relieved, but foundations laid on which a permanent amelioration of women's social and industrial conditions may be based.

Guarantee of Efficiency.

One of the best guarantees of the efficiency of the Central Committee is its personnel. With Lady Crewe as chairman, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant as treasurer, Miss Mary Macarthur as honorary secretary, and a membership which includes Miss Margaret Bondfield, Miss Susan Lawrence, Miss Violet Markham, and Dr. Marion Phillips, it is not surprising that the outcome of the committee's labours is constructive work of quite unquestioned value. To mention particular names is perhaps a little invidious, and it should in any case be added that in the actual executive work the co-operation of a singularly capable body of women workers for women has been secured.

On the whole the women's relief work throughout the country is well co-ordinated. There are many bodies doing useful work—among them the Women's Emergency Corps, the various suffrage societies, and, of course, the Central Unemployed Body in London, with the distress committees corresponding to it in the provinces. Between these little overlapping is at present manifest. The Central Unemployed Body, for example, is concerned with ordinary distress not directly occasioned by the war, whereas Lady Crewe's Committee, as part of the National Relief Fund organisation, has as its field what may be termed war-distress alone.

In the large department of women's unemployment it stands in the same relation to the 330 Local Representative Committees up and down the country as the Government Committee under Mr. Samuel does in the wider field of distress as a whole.

Hopeful Outlook.

It is clear that in either case the real effectiveness of the work done must depend on the local committees. What makes the outlook encouraging in the case of women is the initiative and resource of which the Central Committee is giving evidence. While some of its schemes either contemplated or in progress demand detailed attention, the immediate purpose of indicating the lines of action pursued may be served by summarising what has actually been achieved in three or four departments of the work. It should be understood that the function of the committee is not to carry out relief work itself, but rather to stimulate, check,

The fostering of new or undeveloped trades—most of them by the nature of things experimental—is a line of activity with great possibilities. Among the schemes are included such activities as:

Making of artificial flowers.
Doll-making.
Fruit-pulping and vegetable-drying.
Training of women on the land.

A committee at present sitting is investigating the prospects of further progress along these lines.

II. The Relief of Unemployment.

In its work for the relief of unemployment the committee has kept consistently in view the importance of increasing the efficiency of the worker as well as of supplying her material necessities.

The most general form of relief work is the establishment of workrooms, with the essential proviso that the employment thus given shall not be competitive, in which case it would only result in the displacement of employed workers. The problem is being solved by producing garments which are given away under careful supervision to families so poor as to have practically no purchasing capacity, who, in other words, would not have bought clothes in any case, but would have gone in rags.

Trained instructresses are employed to give guidance to the inexpert worker, and the women themselves receive a minimum of 3d. an hour for a forty-hour week. The Health Insurance contribution is paid in addition.

A Practical Scheme.

As an alternative to actual manual work, or in combination with it, useful training courses are being instituted as a condition of the receipt of relief. Instruction in cookery and domestic economy and the training of sick-room helps are cases in point. A scheme is at present being matured by which it is hoped that the difficult problem of the unemployed women clerks and typists may be in a large measure solved, by training courses which will enable them to perfect their mastery of their own profession and at the same time increase their business efficiency, as, for instance, by the acquisition of some foreign language.

I have only briefly indicated the main principles of the work of the Central Committee, and of necessity have omitted many details and explanations, the inclusion of which might have forestalled possible criticism. One point, however, must be emphasised, that most of the actual work of Lady Crewe's Committee—it has, for example, a certain number of work-rooms of its own—is simply intended as a model and a stimulus to the local committees. It is with them that the main responsibility for the executive work must rest.

H. W. H.

652/5

Evening Standard & St. James' Gazette, Oct. 29th. 1914.

653. 2.

6526

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

WHAT LONDON HAS DONE FOR UNEMPLOYED WOMEN.

WIDESPREAD DISTRESS.

London is moving on behalf of her unemployed women.

Out of twenty-nine boroughs, seventeen have submitted schemes for providing work for women to the Central Committee on Women's Employment. In six very poor districts the Central Committee is itself establishing experimental schemes of work, and of the rest, Stoke Newington already has a work-room running successfully.

Marylebone has several private schemes, one of which may shortly be taken over by the local representative committee; Lambeth is preparing a scheme, and Kensington and Hampstead in all probability do not need relief work-rooms, the population being largely well-to-do.

Why Women are Suffering.

The latter present a striking contrast to other districts. Camberwell, the home of West End dressmakers, is naturally suffering on account of unemployment due to the war, so is Battersea, with its tailoring and dressmaking population. Bermondsey, one of the poorest districts in London, must provide for fluctuations in the biscuit and provision trades, and also for out-of-work dressmakers. Many Bethnal Green homes are in want because of the depression of the cabinet-making trade. Shoreditch has over a thousand women unemployed—French polishers, box makers, charwomen, and kitchen hands out of small eating-houses. Deptford has to deal with a great amount of poorly paid factory labour; Hoxton has an army of out-of-work cleaners.

In the Islington, Finsbury, and Holborn districts upholstery workers are suffering badly, the fur trade is at a standstill, French polishers, clerks, jewellers, book-cover and cardboard workers, book-folders, and milliners, waitresses, charwomen, and shop assistants are all out of work.

"A large number of the unemployed women have come to the end of their resources," wrote the chairman of the Women's Employment Sub-committee, "and it is feared that if relief is delayed many of them will sink and never rise again."

Chelsea has also its distress, with unemployed dressmakers, tailoresses, milliners, and artists, and the whole of South London is wondering what is to become of the hop-pickers, who are now returning. In every district the remark is the same: unemployment resulting from the war is much heavier among women than among men.

The City Worker.

The City of London has a special problem. It has very few inhabitants, but a daily population of workers. The question now to be settled is whether a scheme of work shall be devised by the City of London, or whether the workers shall be provided for in their local work-rooms. Westminster and Fulham have each applied for grants for two schemes, the distress being so great. The first work-rooms are already opened.

In almost every district in London help is being given willingly for the Work for Women schemes. In not a single instance has rent had to be paid, the accommodation for work-rooms, often with lighting and firing, being given free. Neighbouring tradesmen have lent or given chairs and tables, oddments of material have been sent as gifts, and when an appeal for second-hand clothing has been made the response has been generous.

The Queen's Visit.

The Queen, accompanied by Lady Katherine Coke and Mr. E. W. Wallington yesterday visited the work-rooms opened through the agency of the Central Committee on Women's Employment at Bethnal Green.

Her Majesty was received at St. Simon's Institute by representatives of the Central Committee, and by the Mayor and Mayoress of Bethnal Green, Sir Edwin Cornwall, M.P., L.C.C., Miss James, chairman of the women's sub-committee, and the Vicar of St. Simons.

At St. Andrew's Institute the Queen was received by Miss Young, hon. secretary of the women's sub-committee, and by the Rev. D. Rhys.

It was a very eventful day for the workers. The Queen talked with many individually. With the "Mother of the Work-room" at St. Simon's, an old woman of seventy-six, her Majesty had a long talk, asking about her eyesight, and commenting on the beautiful stitches made by the old worker.

To a forewoman, who has just lost her only brother at the front, the Queen showed all a woman's sympathy. It was a sad story to which her Majesty listened. This only brother had managed, as a result of a good deal of self-sacrifice on the part of four orphan sisters, to attain a medical degree, and now he is dead.

The forewoman is pluckily throwing her sorrow on one side, and putting all her heart into the activities of the work-room.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employmen must be addressed to the secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W.

Western Morning News Oct. 28th.

A Serious Side.

Unemployment among the women of London, however, is serious and widespread. The local committees are bestirring themselves, and many have submitted schemes for providing work in connection with the Queen's "Work for Women Fund." Camberwell, where live the dressmakers who depend on the prosperity of the West End establishments, is naturally suffering severely, and so is Battersea with its tailoring and dressmaking population.

Bermondsey, Bethnal Green (where the distress among cabinetmakers is acute), Shoreditch, Deptford, and Hoxton, in each of which there are armies of out-of-work charwomen, kitchen-hands, boxmakers, and poorly-paid factory workers, are in urgent need of assistance. The same story comes from Islington, Finsbury, Holborn, and Chelsea and in this time of distress among the women of the London industrial boroughs it is true indeed that he who gives quickly to the Queen's Fund for providing work gives twice. Every effort is being made to extend the schemes for providing it, but urgency is the keynote of all the appeals which are pouring in upon the Central Committee.

In the various districts the inhabitants are doing their share nobly, and the committee gratefully acknowledges the fact that in no single instance has rent had to be paid for work rooms, which in some cases have also been furnished through local generosity, and often with the help of those to whom such assistance has meant considerable sacrifice.

The Times 29 th. Oct.

RELIEF FOR PROFESSIONAL CLASSES.

At a meeting of the Professional Classes War Relief Council yesterday it was announced that the Women's Emergency Corps and the Relief Organization of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies have offered to be responsible for the temporary employment workrooms for women. The council will pay the minimum wage of 10s. a week for its nominees, who will be entirely women of the professional classes.

This offer relieves the council from the necessity of opening new workrooms, and has been gratefully accepted. The Women's Emergency Corps and the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies are represented on the council respectively by the Duchess of Marlborough and Mrs. Percy Boulnois, and Mrs. Henry Fawcett and Miss K. D. Courtney.

These temporary workrooms are to be used for women who require immediate aid, to bridge over the time necessary for finding them permanent employments.

6527

The Times, Oct. 29th.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

AN EXHIBITION OF INGENIOUS WORK.

The King has approved of the use of the Queen's initials and the Royal Crown on all garments distributed under schemes conducted or approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

An exhibition of garments made from second-hand clothes was held yesterday by the Central Committee on Women's Employment at 12, Park-street, Park-lane. The work was that of the forewomen who are being trained to teach unemployed women how to make old clothes new. A card was attached to each garment describing what it was made from, how long it took, and the cost, so that the work could be traced from beginning to end. Among the achievements of the forewomen was the making of 20 pairs of school slippers out of men's silk hats, tailor's patterns of habit cloth, felt, and old stockings. The Central Committee has been enabled to undertake this useful piece of training work through the generous response to their appeal for clothes. Trunks, boxes, sacks, and parcels of clothes arrive every day for the Committee, and all are welcomed. Among gifts are 124 blouses, 86 men's shirts, 69 dresses, 68 skirts, 33 coats and skirts, and 10 habits. Blankets are wanted urgently to cut for the cradles which are being made for the poor mothers.

The following subscriptions to the Queen's Fund were received yesterday :—

Collected by the Viscountess Clifden (including Viscount and Viscountess Clifden, £50; the Hon. A. Peckover, £10 10s.; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Newton, £10; Mrs. Harding, £10)	£107	1	7
Collected by the Mayoress of Shaftesbury (including house-to-house collection and jumble sale, £36 2s. 4d.; proceeds of a café chantant given by the girls of Grosvenor House High School, £13 10s.)	56	9	0
Collected by the Urban District Council of Middlewich	34	18	6½
Grant from the Walthamstow Representative Committee for the Relief of Distress, first monthly instalment, per W. G. Berry ..	30	0	0
Mrs. Pelly	20	0	0
Collected by Lady Newton	17	15	0
Messrs. Brown Bros. (Limited)	15	0	0
Collected by Lady Mackenzie Davidson (including Mrs. J. S. Hendrie, of Toronto, £10)	13	3	0
Mrs. Stanley Baldwin (per Mrs. Krause), purchase of flowers for Kidderminster Flower Day	12	10	0
Other subscriptions	76	14	7½
To-day's total	£383	11	9
Previously acknowledged ..	79,159	9	3
Total to date	£79,543	1	0

The Mayoress of Dudley's collection of £125 acknowledged on Tuesday last includes £40 10s. 7d. from Netherton.

Viscountess Clifden's collection includes another of the church offertories which are so greatly augmenting the Fund—viz., £3 13s. 7d. at Lanhydrock Church, per the Rev. Canon Bone.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, honorary treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

Manchester Guardian, Oct. 29th.

UNEMPLOYMENT AMONG WOMEN IN LONDON.

The number of applications received by the Central (Unemployed) Body for London from unemployed women for work, for the period from July 1 to October 24 was 8,310, whereas the number from July 1 to November 8, 1913, was only 507. The applications from men do not show any sharp contrast; nevertheless the number increased from 3,033 in 1913 to 4,784 this year for the same period mentioned in regard to women.

The Local Government Board has informed the Central Body that the Board is willing to make a payment of £1,000 from the Parliamentary grant as an instalment towards the cost of maintaining four additional special workrooms for women on the understanding that they are carried on strictly in accordance with the conditions as to employment and payment of wages, and the manufacture and disposal of articles, laid down by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. With regard to the employment of young women in the special workrooms, the Women's Work Committee recommend that in those instances where girls between the ages of sixteen and eighteen are employed and are in receipt of the maintenance allowance of 1s. a day, the Committee be authorised in cases of special hardship to provide dinners and teas gratuitously.

The Daily Telegraph, October 29th. 1914

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

His Majesty the King has been pleased to approve of the use of the Queen's initials and the Royal Crown on all garments which are distributed under schemes conducted or approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

An exhibition of garments made from second-hand clothes was held yesterday by the Central Committee at 12, Park-street, Park-lane. The work was that of the forewomen who are being trained to teach unemployed women how to make old clothes into new. Among the visitors were many local representatives from different parts of London who have opened workrooms for unemployed women, or who intend to do so. A card was attached to each garment describing what it was made from, how long it took, and the cost, so that the work could be traced from beginning to end.

The Central Committee has been enabled to undertake this useful piece of training work through the generous response to their appeal for clothes. Gifts have come not only from the wealthy, but from those who have little to give away. A bundle came for "the poor Belgums," and was sent on.

Trunks, boxes, sacks, and parcels of clothes arrive every day, and every scrap is welcomed. Among gifts are 124 blouses, eighty-six men's shirts, sixty-nine dresses, sixty-eight skirts, thirty-three coats and skirts, and ten habits. Individual acknowledgments will be sent as soon as it is possible to open all the parcels. Blankets are wanted urgently, to cut for the cradles which are being made for poor mothers.

Subscriptions received yesterday, including £107 collected by Viscountess Clifden, and £56 collected by the Mayoress of Shaftesbury, bring the total of the fund up to £79,543.

WORK-ROOMS FOR WOMEN.

A GOVERNMENT GRANT.

The Local Government Board has informed the Central (Unemployed) Body for London that the Board is willing to make a payment of £1,000 from the Parliamentary grant as an instalment towards the cost of maintaining four additional special workrooms for women, on the understanding that they are carried on strictly in accordance with the conditions as to employment and payment of wages, and the manufacture and disposal of articles laid down by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

The distress which prevails among unemployed women in London at the present time is shown in the remarkable increase in the number of applications received by the Central (Unemployed) Body for work. For the period from July 1 to Oct. 24, 8,310 applications were received, whereas the number from July 1 to Nov. 8, 1913, was only 507.

The applications from men do not show any sharp contrast; nevertheless the number increased from 3,033 in 1913 to 4,784 this year in the same period mentioned in regard to the women.

The Daily Telegraph, October 30th. 1914.

QUEEN'S FUND.

In their efforts to find new occupations for women, it has been impressed upon the Central Committee on Women's Employment that not only would more work be provided, but that British trade would be promoted, if more attention were paid to packing and display, particularly in the toy and fancy goods trades. In this connection an inquiry has been made into German methods, and a report drawn up with a view to bringing the importance of packing to the notice of British manufacturers.

If attention were paid to these and other details, it is pointed out, trade would undoubtedly be quickened, time and trouble would be saved in unpacking and repacking for exhibition, and goods would not become shabby through much handling. Boxmakers would also be benefited, for instead of being content with one big box, the manufacturers would give a dozen special orders. Incidentally more work would be found for women, who are chiefly the workers in this trade, which is one of those suffering most through the war.

Yesterday £702 was added to the Fund, which now amounts to £79,543.

The Daily News & Leader, October 31st. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

Scheme for Relief of Distress Due to the War.

From the Local Government Board there has just been issued an important memorandum prepared by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. It has been addressed to local representative committees, and deals with the subject of schemes of work for women temporarily unemployed owing to the war.

Any special schemes of employment, the memorandum points out, should be educational and socially beneficial, "and resort should not be had to the special type of workroom contemplated until every effort has been made to procure employment for the workers in a regular trade. As an example, it may sometimes happen that a local factory is at a standstill where it might be possible to produce some kind of garment or other article for which there exists an extraordinary demand resulting from the war. In such cases the Central Committee on Women's Employment may be consulted as to the possibility of orders being given for the locality in question."

"The question of what work should be carried on in a special workroom," the memorandum proceeds, "raises an important issue. The essential point is that while it should not compete in any way with ordinary industry, it should be of such a nature as to maintain or improve the efficiency of the unemployed women. Since the Central Committee are desirous of keeping trade as far as possible in its ordinary channels, they cannot approve any scheme of employment in which orders would be taken and paid for or the produce of which would be sold in any way. The employment provided in special workrooms opened in view of the distress due to the present exceptional circumstances, should consequently either take the form of educational or technical training or instruction, or of the production of articles which otherwise would not be produced or sold at all. Thus maternity outfits and all sorts of clothing to be distributed free amongst the very poorest classes, who have no purchasing power, are suitable articles to be made in workrooms of the kind in question."

As regards wages, which should be paid weekly, it should not be less, for women of 18 and over, than 3d. per hour, while the hours of work should not exceed 40 per week.

Southwark Recorder Oct. 31st.

WORKROOM FOR WOMEN.

The Mayor of Bermondsey will be very glad to receive loans of sewing machines in good working order, and also gifts of materials for the purpose of providing work for women thrown out of employment through the war. All garments made will only be distributed to those who are not able to purchase garments. Please address communications to F. Ryall, Hon. Secretary, Local Relief Committee, Town Hall, Bermondsey.

Daily Telegraph, October 31st. 1914

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

While large numbers of dressmakers have been thrown out of employment through the war, shirtmakers are working at high pressure, turning out shirts for the Army. Under the direction of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, many dressmakers, collar workers, and others are being taught shirtmaking, with highly satisfactory results. Young collar hands are already on a weekly wage of 16s, and one dressmaker, after three days' tuition, earned 18s in her first week. This opportunity, the committee state, means a great deal to the girls, who are all supporting someone else.

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

Yesterday's subscriptions, amounting to £230, bring the total of the fund up to £80,873.

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, October 30th. 1914.

652/8 652

THE QUEEN'S FUND

275 WORKERS REGISTERED AT LABOUR EXCHANGES.

TRAINING IN COOKERY

A workroom entirely for unemployed girls has been opened in West Ham, and a grant given from the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

Two hundred and seventy-five workers over eighteen years registered at the Labour Exchange this week, and 250 under eighteen. In a recent week 400 registered in the senior division. The unemployment is worst among girls, for the neighbourhood abounds in factories which mostly employ young workers. The older women who are out of work, if suitable, are being included in the sick room help training scheme started by the Central Committee on Women's Employment at Plaistow.

Lees Hall, Barking-road, which belongs to the settlement, is an ideal centre for the work. The large room where the girls work will hold 150, there is a comfortable dining-room, where the girls are given a free meal daily, a large kitchen, where they learn to cook, and a roof garden for recreation. At present 72 are at work.

The contrast between these young workers and some of the sad-faced women in the other workrooms is very great. Even the awful looking for work has not been able permanently to depress them. The atmosphere of the workroom is that of a large girls' school. Yet the workers are not allowed to settle down. A girl who was sent back to her factory to work "stood herself off" at the end of the week because she wanted to come back to the workroom. But she found the door closed; the workroom is only for those who are shut out of their own work.

In Search of Employment.

Other girls, on the contrary, go to look for work at five o'clock in the morning, only to find fifty or sixty at the factory gates when only three can be taken on. If the managers realised the distances these girls walk in their search for work, they would only engage through the Labour Exchanges. They tramp down to Millwall, and then perhaps to the upper end to Stepney, and down to Woolwich.

One girl persevered until eleven o'clock in the morning, when she came in despair to the workroom. She was told that if she went to the Labour Exchange at two or three minutes' distance, and got a card, she would be taken on at once. She went to the Labour Exchange, but did not return. She had had no breakfast, and had fainted.

The circumstances of the girl are known very well to the head of the workroom, who is a worker from the Women's Settlement. She has been into the homes where there is no food; she knows that the girl, whose father died on Friday, is left with her mother entirely without money, for the man was only insured for six weeks, and they are not entitled to anything. She knows the story of the music-hall performers, two sisters, who were in Germany when the war broke out. The husband of the one was detained as a prisoner of war, and the girls, of course, have not been able to get music-hall work.

She knows all about the family where the father, a dock labourer, had only one day's work last week. There are four in family, and they help the children of a married sister who is dead. One girl is working short time, and a boy of fourteen has just begun work. She knows the home where the girls are driven out by a drinking mother and were practically starving.

Dinners at the Workroom.

Dinner is given at the workroom, and training in cooking is given while the dinners are being cooked, the girls taking week about in the kitchen.

Another contingent takes a week about washing up and cleaning in the afternoon. On Wednesday a class for housewifery started, which is to be continued every morning. The teacher is supplied by the technical institute, and the girls are to have a week's course of practical work. A trained teacher, also, takes a class twice a week for cutting out, so that the girls may learn to make their own clothes entirely. Health talks are given twice a week, when there is a quick sale of penny toothbrushes, halfpennyworths of tooth powder bath gloves, and other necessities.

Upon two other days the girls are taught Swedish drill, and while the mothers' meetings are being held in another part of the institute, there is a call for volunteers to help under trained guidance to look after the babies in the crêche.

Scraps of Flannelette.

A variety of work was going on yesterday. One girl was making stays for a child out of scraps of flannelette, another was piecing together a patchwork quilt, one was making three pinafores out of an old-fashioned petticoat, and the best workers were grouped together, learning fine needlework, which they may take up as a training.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W.

Morning Post, October 31st. 1914.

WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment has issued a memorandum on schemes of work for women temporarily unemployed owing to the war. This memorandum supplements the report previously issued by the Committee. It is issued as a guide to Local Representative Committees contemplating the opening of workrooms for the employment of women unemployed as a consequence of the war. Any special schemes of employment should, it is pointed out, be educational and socially beneficial, and resort should not be had to the special type of workroom contemplated until every effort has been made to procure employment for the workers in a regular trade. As an example, it may sometimes happen that a local factory is at a standstill where it might be possible to produce some kind of garment or other article for which there exists an extraordinary demand resulting from the war. In such cases the Central Committee on Women's Employment may be consulted as to the possibility of orders being given for the locality in question.

Aberdeen Daily Journal, Nov. 2nd 1914

New Work for Fisher Girls.

Assistance to East Coast fisher girls is being given by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Some 5000 girls who have been working on the nets at Lowestoft have almost entirely been brought to a standstill by the loss of the herring trade with Germany. The Central Committee of the Fund is investigating the possibilities of another trade as a source of employment for a considerable number of the young women in the East Coast towns. This is the collection of seaweed, which when burnt yields a percentage of potash salts for manure purposes. Among the Lancashire cotton weavers unemployment is very extensive, and in one town alone it amounts to 5000 women, with the prospect of an additional 10,000 soon. In the schemes of work adopted in the provinces are included provision for training, particularly in cooking.

Daily Telegraph, October 31st. 1914

WORK-ROOMS FOR WOMEN.

WAGES AND HOURS.

A supplementary memorandum has been issued by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, dealing with schemes of work for women temporarily unemployed owing to the war. It is intended mainly as a guide to those local representative committees in whose areas the opening of a special work-room is desirable.

Any special schemes of employment should, it is pointed out, be educational and socially beneficial, and resort should not be had to a special work-room until every effort has been made to procure employment for the workers in a regular trade. For the purposes of an approved work-room, only women who are themselves thrown out of work by the war will be taken into consideration.

Women to be employed in the work-room should be selected from the register of applicants at the office of the Local Representative Committee. In all cases workers should be required to keep themselves registered at the Labour Exchange, so that they may return to ordinary employment at the first available opportunity. It is suggested that, as a general rule, a work-room should not be opened for less than forty workers.

Wages are to be paid weekly. In the case of women of 18 and over the rate should not be less than 3d an hour, and the hours of work should not exceed forty per week. Thus, where the rate of pay is fixed at 3d an hour, each worker employed for the full number of hours would receive 10s a week. The Central Committee on Women's Employment have recommended that this should be the maximum amount of relief given to women in the form of work. This rule does not prevent the local committee from supplementing the wages in particular cases by relief given in other forms.

Where a higher hourly rate is fixed, the number of hours of work per week should be reduced, so as to keep the total weekly earnings at 10s. On the other hand, in districts where the normal rate of pay is so low that a wage of 10s would have the undesirable effect of diverting women workers from their ordinary occupation to the relief work-room, the hours of work should be so adjusted as to regulate the wages to the required amount.

EMPLOYMENT OF GIRLS.

A special arrangement is proposed for the payment of girls between 16 and 18 years of age. Where these young people are already skilled workers in a recognised trade, and have previously earned more than 3d an hour, they may be treated as adults and employed at the rates described above. But in other cases they should be given a maintenance allowance at the rate of 1s a day of six hours. The employment given in these cases should take the form of instruction and training, so far as possible in co-operation with the local education authority. Girls under 16 should not be employed at all in work-rooms of the kind here under consideration. They should be dealt with separately in schools or training centres.

Employment provided in special work-rooms should either take the form of educational or technical training or instruction, or of the production of articles which otherwise would not be produced or sold at all. Maternity outfits and all sorts of clothing to be distributed free amongst the very poorest classes, who have no purchasing power, are suitable articles to be made. The work should be, as far as possible, such that the particular class of workers to be employed may be reasonably expected to perform it with a fair degree of efficiency. Where the women are entirely unskilled, they should be taught something which will be of permanent domestic and educational value to them.

It is suggested that care should be taken to avoid the selection of such materials as grey flannel and wool, for which there is a great demand for the making of articles required by the troops.

Lady's Pictorial
31-10-14

652.

652/9

WOMEN'S WORK IN TIME

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND. QUEEN INSPECTS WORK-ROOMS. CENTRAL COMMITTEE'S SPLENDID PROGRESS.

THE Queen's Work for Women Fund is helping women at many points. The girl who has put her name down at fifty different dress-making establishments is surprised when she receives a summons to go back to her old employer; the Central Committee which is administering the Fund has obtained a contract for soldiers' belts for that particular workshop.

The woman who had been "walking about" looking for work for weeks is suddenly told that she can begin on Monday: the Central Committee has opened a work-room in her district.

Factory girls who know that their particular trade was closed for some time to come took heart again when a large number of them were called to fruit pulping and vegetable drying.

Young women who have been used to supervising other women could scarcely believe it when they were told that they would be given training so that they could supervise new work.

How Women are Helped.

The Central Committee is working in several ways:—

By opening experimental workrooms, it is showing local representatives all over the country how work may be found for unemployed women without dislocating trade.

By securing contracts for more than ninety workshops which were closing down, it prevented further unemployment. These contracts could not be fulfilled in the ordinary way.

By investigating the possibilities of new trades for women, it is able to give advice and help to those in a position to start them.

In the six experimental workrooms, already opened, the women are receiving training in the domestic arts while they are doing useful work. Some are making cradles and baby clothes for the poor expectant mothers of the neighbourhood, and at the same time they are learning how to provide for their own children.

Making Model Mothers.

Some are preparing three-penny dinners for the women in the work-rooms, and they are receiving meanwhile practical lessons from the cookery teacher in charge. Some are being taught how to re-model second-hand clothes for the children in the schools who are ill-clad, with a view to learning how to cut down and mend for their own families. Other women are being definitely trained to be sick helps under the district nurses in the poor homes. Permanent work may thus be found for them.

The Queen and the Workers.

The Queen's interest in the work is keen. On one occasion she spent two hours going round the women's workrooms, she examined the various articles made and talked with the [illegible] the pockets of the children's dresses which had been made, each holding a handkerchief.

To see the Queen in the midst of the workers, some with tape measures round their necks, others busily knitting; to see her examining their work, and to hear her keen questioning, was to realise how much her Majesty has the interest of women at heart.

The Scotsman,
Oct. 31 st. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE'S REVISED RULES.

A supplementary memorandum was issued yesterday as a White Paper by the Central Committee on Women's Unemployment, dealing with the schemes of work for women temporarily unemployed owing to the war. In the introductory remarks it is stated that any special schemes of employment should be educational and socially beneficial, and resort should not be had to a special type of workroom until every effort has been made to procure employment for the workers in a regular trade.

Dealing with the composition of Women's Employment Sub-Committees, it is pointed out that they should contain a strong representation of working-class women's industrial organisations. For instance, some of the members should be drawn from local women's trade unions, co-operative societies, and other industrial or labour organisations.

For the purpose of an approved women's workroom, the report states, only women who are themselves thrown out of work by the war may be taken into consideration. Distress caused by unemployment amongst men should not be relieved by giving employment in special workrooms to wives who were not wage-earners before the war broke out. In all cases workers should be required to keep themselves registered at the Labour Exchanges, so that they may return to ordinary employment at the first available opportunity. They should be required to produce their Labour Exchange registration cards as a proof that they are duly registered.

MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF RELIEF.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment, the memorandum points out, has recommended that 3d. an hour, or 10s. a week, should be the maximum amount of relief given to women in the form of such work. This rule does not prevent the Local Representative Committee from supplementing the wages in particular cases—e.g., where the woman has children dependent upon her, by relief given in other forms, having regard to the scale in the district. Where a higher hourly rate is fixed, the number of hours of work per week should be reduced, so as to keep the total weekly earnings at 10s. On the other hand, in some cases it may be desired to keep the weekly wage below 10s. This may be necessary in districts where the normal rate of pay is so low that a wage of 10s. would have the undesirable effect of diverting women workers from their ordinary occupation to the relief workrooms. Such cases should not be met by reducing the hourly rate of pay below 3d. Instead, the hours of work should be so adjusted as to regulate the wages to the required amount.

PAYMENT OF GIRLS.

A special arrangement, it is remarked, should be made for the payment of girls between 16 and 18 years of age. Where these young people are already skilled workers in a recognised trade, and have previously earned more than 3d. an hour, they may be treated as adults, and employed at the rates described above. But in other cases they should be given a maintenance allowance, and not wages. This allowance should ordinarily be at the rate of 1s. a day of six hours. The employment given in these cases should take the form of instruction and training, so far as possible, in co-operation with the Local Education Authority. Girls under 16 should not be employed at all in workrooms of the kind here under consideration, and they should be dealt with separately in schools or training centres.

COST OF MEALS.

If it is felt to be desirable, the report continues, arrangements may be made to supply meals. These should not form part of the wages. The cost should be covered by making a small charge. In all cases the women should have the option of taking the meals or not as they prefer. Girls under 18 receiving maintenance allowances may be given part of the allowance in the form of meals. Where possible, training and instruction may be given to unemployed women in the preparation of these meals.

EMPLOYMENT IN SPECIAL WORKROOMS.

The question of what work should be carried on in a special workroom raises an important questions, says the memorandum. The essential point is that while it should not compete in any way with ordinary industry, it should be of such a nature as to maintain or improve the efficiency of the unemployed women. Since the Central Committee are desirous of keeping trade as far as possible in its ordinary channels, they cannot approve any scheme of employment in which orders would be taken and paid for, or the produce of which would be sold in any way. The employment provided in special workrooms should consequently either take the form of educational or technical training or instruction or of the production of articles which otherwise would not be produced or sold at all. Thus, maternity outfits and all sorts of clothing, to be distributed free amongst the very poorest classes, who have no purchasing power, are suitable articles to be made in workrooms of the kind in question. Where the women are entirely unskilled, they should be taught something which will be of permanent domestic and educational value to them, such as the making, mending, or altering of clothes, or the preparation of simple meals, or the simplest elements of domestic hygiene. It is obviously desirable, the report adds, that as large a sum as possible should be paid in wages, and this sum may be achieved by choosing work in which normally the proportion spent in wages is high, by

The Scotsman.
6 Nov. 2nd 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN IN THE PROVINCES.

All over the country now the schemes of work promoted by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are spreading. Seventeen provincial schemes have been approved, and a large number are in an advanced stage of preparation. Some towns also are running their own workrooms with money collected locally, and where the problem is to deal with sporadic cases of unemployment rather than with widespread distress it seems fitting that local enterprise should make itself equal to the emergency, contributing at the same time to the National Relief Fund whatever can be spared for the mitigation of the overwhelming distress in other localities.

But the Central Committee's schemes have in many instances been taken as models even for schemes supported by local funds, and members of local representative committees have come from all parts to see what is being done in London.

In a great many cases the need of the provinces for their unemployed women is greater even than that of London. In the mill districts there is nothing else for the women to do when the mills close; in London there are at least opportunities in other trades. In one Lancashire town nearly 5000 women are unemployed, and it is feared that an additional 10,000 women weavers may soon be thrown out of work through the closing down of the mills. In Nelson all looms were reported on short time at the end of September. Chatterton, Oldham, and Stockport all tell the same tale—mills closed and others on short time. Short time is rife also in the pottery district. It is a terror second only to unemployment, the money earned very often being much below the merest subsistence level.

Some of the ports and fishing towns on the East Coast have also their tale of woe. Southampton and Lowestoft are instances. The closing of Southampton as a commercial port was bound to cause suffering, while Lowestoft depends almost entirely on the herring trade. Owing to the condition of the German market and the impossibility of getting any other, the trade, it is feared, will practically come to a standstill. This will affect all subsidiary trades. Five hundred girls alone are working on the nets.

The Central Committee is, however, investigating the possibilities of another trade as a source of employment for a considerable number of young women in the towns of the East Coast. It is the collection of seawood which, when burnt, yields a percentage of potash salts.

The schemes of work adopted by the provinces include valuable provision for training, particularly in cooking. Birmingham is including the making of rag rugs in the scheme of work. High Wycombe, the chief centre for chair making, near London, has a scheme for teaching the art of chair-seat willowing, and Burnley, which already has a workroom, has been looking into the scheme of sick-room help training.

The special difficulties due to unemployment among child workers will, it is hoped, be evolved by local representative committees in close consultation with the local education authorities.

Unemployment is not, of course, prevalent in every district. Northampton, for instance, is very busy with the boot trade, and Leicester with boot and hosiery work. In some towns too, distress has been prevented by the billeting of troops. But those unemployed, it must be remembered, do not want charity; work must be provided for them. They are proud, independent people.

The words of the secretary of the Employment Committee of Nottingham apply to almost all the out of work women—"The work has been very distressing because of their terrible need and their difficulty in talking about it. There is hardly one that does not have tears of misery or relief in her eyes before the interview is over."

652/10

652

the Local Representative Committee from supplementing the wages in particular cases—e.g., where the woman has children dependent upon her, by relief given in other forms, having regard to the scale in the district. Where a higher hourly rate is fixed, the number of hours of work per week should be reduced, so as to keep the total weekly earnings at 10s. On the other hand, in some cases it may be desired to keep the weekly wage below 10s. This may be necessary in districts where the normal rate of pay is so low that a wage of 10s. would have the undesirable effect of diverting women workers from their ordinary occupation to the relief workrooms. Such cases should not be met by reducing the hourly rate of pay below 3d. Instead, the hours of work should be so adjusted as to regulate the wages to the required amount.

PAYMENT OF GIRLS.

A special arrangement, it is remarked, should be made for the payment of girls between 16 and 18 years of age. Where these young people are already skilled workers in a recognised trade, and have previously earned more than 3d. an hour, they may be treated as adults, and employed at the rates described above. But in other cases they should be given a maintenance allowance, and not wages. This allowance should ordinarily be at the rate of 1s. a day of six hours. The employment given in these cases should take the form of instruction and training, so far as possible, in co-operation with the Local Education Authority. Girls under 16 should not be employed at all in workrooms of the kind here under consideration, and they should be dealt with separately in schools or training centres.

COST OF MEALS.

If it is felt to be desirable, the report continues, arrangements may be made to supply meals. These should not form part of the wages. The cost should be covered by making a small charge. In all cases the women should have the option of taking the meals or not as they prefer. Girls under 18 receiving maintenance allowances may be given part of the allowance in the form of meals. Where possible, training and instruction may be given to unemployed women in the preparation of these meals.

EMPLOYMENT IN SPECIAL WORKROOMS.

The question of what work should be carried on in a special workroom raises an important questions, says the memorandum. The essential point is that while it should not compete in any way with ordinary industry, it should be of such a nature as to maintain or improve the efficiency of the unemployed women. Since the Central Committee are desirous of keeping trade as far as possible in its ordinary channels, they cannot approve any scheme of employment in which orders would be taken and paid for, or the produce of which would be sold in any way. The employment provided in special workrooms should consequently either take the form of educational or technical training or instruction or of the production of articles which otherwise would not be produced or sold at all. Thus, maternity outfits and all sorts of clothing, to be distributed free amongst the very poorest classes, who have no purchasing power, are suitable articles to be made in workrooms of the kind in question. Where the women are entirely unskilled, they should be taught something which will be of permanent domestic and educational value to them, such as the making, mending, or altering of clothes, or the preparation of simple meals, or the simplest elements of domestic hygiene. It is obviously desirable, the report adds, that as large a sum as possible should be paid in wages, and this aim may be achieved by choosing work in which normally the proportion spent in wages is high; by obtaining gifts of materials; and by promoting schemes for the altering, remaking, and mending of garments.

Workers in special workrooms must be insured under the health insurance provisions of the National Insurance Act, but it is suggested that no deduction should be made from the wages of workwomen engaged upon relief work, the whole contribution being paid by the local Committee.

tion of the German market and the impossibility of getting any other, the trade, it is feared, will practically come to a standstill. This will affect all subsidiary trades. Five hundred girls alone are working on the nets.

The Central Committee is, however, investigating the possibilities of another trade as a source of employment for a considerable number of young women in the towns of the East Coast. It is the collection of seawood which, when burnt, yields a percentage of potash salts.

The schemes of work adopted by the provinces include valuable provision for training, particularly in cooking. Birmingham is including the making of rag rugs in the scheme of work. High Wycombe, the chief centre for chair making, near London, has a scheme for teaching the art of chair-seat willowing, and Burnley, which already has a workroom, has been looking into the scheme of sick-room help training.

The special difficulties due to unemployment among child workers will, it is hoped, be evolved by local representative committees in close consultation with the local education authorities.

Unemployment is not, of course, prevalent in every district. Northampton, for instance, is very busy with the boot trade, and Leicester with boot and hosiery work. In some towns too, distress has been prevented by the billeting of troops. But those unemployed, it must be remembered, do not want charity; work must be provided for them. They are proud, independent people.

The words of the secretary of the Employment Committee of Nottingham apply to almost all the out of work women—"The work has been very distressing because of their terrible need and their difficulty in talking about it. There is hardly one that does not have tears of misery or relief in her eyes before the interview is over."

Evening Standard, Oct. 31 st. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

DISTRESSED DRESSMAKERS BECOME SHIRTMAKERS.

MACHINISTS WANTED.

The work of helping girls to change their trades, when one is almost done, and the other very brisk, has been commenced by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

The experiment is being made with young dressmakers and collar workers, who are now learning to be shirt makers. Outside a large shirt-makers in the City there is a notice which has been there for weeks:—

"Fifty experienced machinists wanted at once."

Almost every large shirtmaker is in the same position. They all want workers to help with the rush of work which has come with the demand for Army shirts. In London some shirtmakers have increased their workers by one-half since the war began. Here, then, in the opinion of the committee, is a chance for out-of-work dressmakers.

Busy Shirt-makers.

"The shirt-makers," said one London manager, "could absorb hundreds of unemployed dressmakers if they would change their trades."

A firm was found by the committee who were willing to take learners, and the girls began in company with millinery workers, blouse and robe makers, children's and ladies' underwear workers, corset makers, a boot-fitter, and a shop assistant, all of whom are changing their trades. They have only been at work since last Monday week, and they are all "on their own" already.

At first they were each put beside an experienced worker, who assisted them. Their proud record is that they "haven't spoilt anything." They are working away very happily to-day, each with a machine worked by power before her.

Expert in a Fortnight.

"It takes them a little while to get used to the power," said the manageress, "but in a week or a fortnight a girl who has been a dressmaker ought to be an expert shirt maker. Of course there is a great difference in the work. Girls think that because they have done dressmaking they can make shirts without any difficulty. Some make them up back to front, and they don't understand that the inside yoke must be on the straight and the outside on the cross. We tried sending out shirts to dressmakers, who were out of work when we were so busy, but they weren't successful. Everyone has got to learn the knack."

The young collar hands are already on a weekly wage of 16s., and one of the dressmakers, after three days' tuition, earned 18s. in her first week. One of the dressmakers said, "I wouldn't go back to the dressmaking; there's not the responsibility in this, and presently I think I shall be able to earn better money. I have heard that the girls here make up to 25s. in ordinary times. Just now, with overtime, some are making 30s."

This opportunity means a great deal to the girls sent by the Central Committee. They are all keeping someone else. A girl of twenty is supporting her mother and a little sister, who are both consumptive. Another had a father in an asylum and a sister with spinal complaint. Her mother, who does a little nursing, will soon be out of work.

It can be easily understood what it meant to them to be "walking about" (looking for work) for weeks, as they have been doing, before they were taken into the committee's workroom in Piccadilly, and then passed on to the shirt factory.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the town or county hall, or urban district offices, in the locality in which they reside.

The Times, Oct. 31 st. 1914

652/11

652.

TEACHING OF SHIRT MAKING.

WORK OF THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The work of helping girls to change their trades when one is almost done and the other very brisk has been begun by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The experiment is being made with young dressmakers and collar workers, who are now learning to be shirt makers, who are wanted to help with the demand for Army shirts.

A firm willing to take learners was found by the committee, and the girls began in company with millinery workers, blouse and robe makers, children's and ladies' underwear workers, corset makers, a boot fitter, and a shop assistant, all of whom are changing their trades. They have only been at work since last Monday week, but the young collar hands are already on a weekly wage of 16s., and one of the dressmakers, after three days' tuition, earned 18s. in her first week.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund, which is providing the money for these valuable experiments, received the following subscriptions yesterday:—

First instalment of profits of sale of Mr. Paul A. Ruben's song, "Your King and Country Want You," published by Messrs. Chappell and Co. (Ltd.), through the Daily Mail	£250	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Maidenhead (including Lady Desborough, £15)	108	13	1
Collected by the Urban District Council of Ashton-in-Makerfield, including Mary Lady Gerard, £10	62	1	6
Collected by the Mayoress of Blackburn, further instalment, including, collected by the Women Teachers of Blackburn, £45 1s. 1d.	54	4	4
Collected by the Mayoress of Conway	20	13	9
Collected by the Mayoress of Dover, including, collected in boxes in shops, first and second week, £19 7s.	19	18	0
Collected by the Mayoress of St. Helen's, further instalment	19	11	6
Catholic Women's Suffrage Society, being amount collected at lecture on "Belgium," at Kensington Town Hall on October 27	13	17	0
Collected by the Urban District Council of Aylesbury, further instalment	11	0	0
S. C. and A. C.	10	0	0
OTHER SUBSCRIPTIONS	60	17	6
TO-DAY'S TOTAL	630	16	2
PREVIOUSLY ACKNOWLEDGED	80,245	3	9
TOTAL TO DATE	£80,875	19	11

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed, "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

Daily Graphic, Nov. 2nd.

THE 'WORK FOR WOMEN' FUND

HELP FOR THE UNEMPLOYED IN THE PROVINCES.

All over the country now the schemes of work promoted by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are spreading. Seventeen provincial schemes have been approved, and a large number are in an advanced stage of preparation.

Some towns, also, are running their own work-rooms with money collected locally, and where the problem is to deal with sporadic cases of unemployment, rather than with widespread distress, it seems very fitting that local enterprise should make itself equal to the emergency, contributing at the same time to the National Relief Fund whatever can be spared for the mitigation of the overwhelming distress in other localities.

In a great many cases the need of the provinces for their unemployed women is greater even than that of London. In the mill districts there is nothing else for the women to do when the mills close; in London there are at least opportunities in other trades. In one Lancashire town nearly 5,000 women are unemployed, and it is feared that an additional 10,000 women weavers may soon be thrown out of work through the closing down of the mills. Some of the ports and fishing towns on the East Coast have also their tale of woe. Southampton and Lowestoft are instances.

The schemes of work adopted by the provinces include valuable provision for training, particularly in cooking. It would be too drastic a change of work to expect mill-workers to settle down to needlework all day; and having gone from school to the mill, training in the domestic arts is considered to be of more use to them.

The Morning Post. Nov. 2nd. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

By noon on Saturday the Queen's Work for Women Fund had reached the total of £80,989 14s. 5d., and the day's subscriptions included:

Lady Evelyn Mason	£25	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Oldham	20	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of New Romney (further instalment)	18	19	9
Lady Borthwick	10	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Eastbourne (further instalment)	10	0	0

All communications relating to the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN THE PROVINCES.

All over the country now the schemes of work promoted by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are spreading. Seventeen provincial schemes have been approved, and many are in an advanced stage of preparation.

Some towns also are running their own work-rooms with money collected locally, and where the problem is to deal with sporadic cases of unemployment rather than with widespread distress it seems very fitting that local enterprise should make itself equal to the emergency, contributing at the same time to the National Relief Fund whatever can be spared for the mitigation of the overwhelming distress in other localities.

But the Central Committee's schemes have in many instances been taken as models even for schemes supported by local funds and members of local representative committees have come from all parts to see what is being done in London.

In a great many cases the need of the provinces for their unemployed women is greater even than that of London. In the mill districts there is nothing else for the women to do when the mills close; in London there are at least opportunities in other trades. In one Lancashire town nearly 5,000 women are unemployed, and it is feared that an additional 10,000 women weavers may soon be thrown out of work through the closing of the mills. In Nelson, near Burnley, all looms were reported on short time at the end of September. Chatterton, Oldham, and Stockport all tell the same tale: mills closed, and others on short time. Short time is rife also in the Pottery district.

Some of the ports and fishing towns on the East Coast have also their tale of woe. Southampton and Lowestoft are instances. The closing of Southampton as a commercial port was bound to cause suffering, while Lowestoft depends almost entirely on the herring trade. Owing to the condition of the German market and the impossibility of getting any other the trade, it is feared, will practically come to a standstill. This will affect all subsidiary trades. Five hundred girls usually work on the nets. The Central Committee is, however, investigating the possibilities of another trade as a source of employment for a considerable number of young women in the towns of the East Coast. It is the collection of seaweed which, when burnt, yields a percentage of potash salts.

The Willesden War Committee are establishing a working women's café where meals will be provided at cost price, and women will be given a practical demonstration in relative food values.

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, November 2nd. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

INVESTIGATION OF SEA-WEED TRADE FOR FISHER-GIRLS.

All over the country the schemes of work promoted by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are now spreading. Seventeen provincial schemes have been approved, and a large number are in an advanced stage of preparation.

Some towns, also, are running their own workrooms with money collected locally, and where the problem is to deal with sporadic cases of unemployment, rather than with widespread distress, it seems very fitting that local enterprise should make itself equal to the emergency, contributing at the same time to the National Relief Fund whatever can be spared for the mitigation of overwhelming distress in other localities.

But the Central Committee's schemes have in many instances been taken as models even for schemes supported by local funds, and members of local representative committees have come from all parts to see what is being done in London.

Distress Among Women Weavers.

In a great many cases the need of the provinces for their unemployed women is greater than that of London.

In the mill districts there is nothing else for the women to do when the mills close; in London there are at least opportunities in other trades. In one Lancashire town nearly 5000 women are unemployed, and it is feared that an additional 10,000 women weavers may soon be thrown out of work through the closing down of the mills. In Nelson all looms were reported on short time at the end of September. Chatterton, Oldham, and Stockport all tell the same tale: mills closed, and others on short time. Short time is rife also in the Pottery district. It is a terror second only to unemployment, the money earned very often being much below the merest subsistence level.

Some of the ports and fishing towns on the East Coast have also their tale of woe. Southampton and Lowestoft are instances.

The closing of Southampton as a commercial port was bound to cause suffering, while Lowestoft depends almost entirely on the herring trade. Owing to the condition of the German market, and the impossibility of getting any other, the trade, it is feared, will practically come to a standstill. This will affect all subsidiary trades. Five hundred girls alone are working on the nets.

Cookery Training.

The Central Committee is, however, investigating the possibilities of another trade as a source of employment for a considerable number of young women in the towns of the East Coast. It is the collection of seaweed which, when burnt, yields a percentage of potash salts.

The schemes of work adopted by the provinces include valuable provision for training, particularly in cooking. It would be too drastic a change to expect mill-workers to settle down to needlework all day, and having gone from school to the mill, training in the domestic arts is considered to be of more use to them.

Rag Rugs and Chair-seat Willowing.

Birmingham is including the making of rag rugs in the scheme of work. High Wycombe, the chief centre for chair-making near London, has a scheme for teaching the art of chair-seat willowing, and Burnley, which already has a workroom, has been looking into the scheme of sick-room help training.

The special difficulties due to unemployment among child workers will, it is hoped, be solved by local representative committees in close consultation with the local education authorities.

Unemployment is not, of course, prevalent in every district. Northampton, for instance, is very busy with the boot trade, and Leicester with boot and hosiery work. In some towns, too, distress has been prevented by the billeting of troops. But those unemployed, it must be remembered, do not want charity; work must be provided for them. They are proud, independent people.

The words of the Secretary of the Employment Committee of Nottingham apply to almost all the out-of-work women.

"The work has been very distressing because of their terrible need and their difficulty in talking about it. There is hardly one that does not have tears of misery or relief in her eyes before the interview is over."

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

652.

The Daily Telegraph, Nov. 3rd. 1914.

QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN

LETTER TO MADAM CLARA BUTT

Madam Clara Butt has received the following letter from her Majesty the Queen:

Buckingham Palace, Oct. 29, 1914.

MY DEAR MRS. RUMFORD—I have handed to the Queen the cheque for £1,500 which you have sent to her Majesty as a result of a series of concerts so kindly given by you and Mr. Kennerley Rumford in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

Her Majesty is much touched by the generous thought which prompted you and your husband to give these concerts, and it is a great satisfaction to the Queen to know you have been able to arrange further concerts for the benefit of other war relief funds, at the same time giving employment to artists in the musical profession, who, through the war, have lost their sole means of livelihood.

Her Majesty is deeply grateful to you and Mr. Rumford for all the trouble you have taken to augment her fund, and the Queen is greatly interested to know what liberal support you receive from the people in connection with your concerts.

As I have already explained, her Majesty much regrets that she was prevented from attending your first concert at the Albert Hall on the 10th inst.—Yours sincerely,

(Signed) E. W. WALLINGTON,
Private Secretary.

Special trade instruction is to be given where possible to unemployed women and girls in the work-rooms opened through the agency of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. This is to meet the need of industrial workers who otherwise might lose their skill through want of practice, and to give training to others who seem likely to benefit by the opportunity. It is found, for instance, that in the experimental work-rooms in London there are girls belonging to the needlework trades who would profit considerably by further instruction.

The scheme is to be started almost immediately in the committee's own work-rooms, and will be extended as widely as possible in connection with London local representative committees. Training on the same lines is also to be recommended in connection with provincial schemes.

Yesterday's subscriptions to the fund amounted to £538, bringing the total up to £81,527.

652/12

Daily Telegraph,
Nov: 5th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Many painful cases of distress among workless women are being brought to the notice of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and the urgent need for the measures which the Queen's Fund supports becomes more and more apparent. This week a workroom is to be opened in Battersea, and already close on 300 women have applied to be admitted.

Those who have been thrown out of work by the war in this borough belong as a rule to the better class of workers—chiefly dressmakers who were employed in the West-end, and respectable charwomen. It is difficult, remark the committee, to realise from their neat appearance the straits they are in. A young mother who has been promised work had been in the employment of a West-end firm for seven years, but had had nothing to do since the second week in August. For two or three days she and her two young children had had only a little bread to eat. Practically everything had been sold to buy food. In such cases, which are only too numerous, the work provided by the committee comes as a relief from despair.

Subscriptions to the fund, which now totals £82,155, should be sent to 33, Portland-place, W.

Leeds Mercury.
Nov: 6th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

ACTIVITY OF LEEDS COMMITTEE OF THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Considerable interest has been shown in the various schemes of the Central Committee for the Employment of Women, which was formed to make provision for women who have lost their work owing to the present industrial disturbance consequent upon the war, and both workrooms and training schools have been started in London.

Leeds also has its problem of unemployed women to meet, and owing to the generosity of the members of the Leeds branch of the National Union of Women Suffrage Societies, who have collected over seventy pounds and handed it over to the Local Committee for the Employment of Women for administration, it has become possible to open a sewing room at once. Care will be taken not to interfere with the course of ordinary trade, and the work undertaken will consist of the making and mending of garments to be given away to those who are not able to purchase for themselves.

In order that as far as possible the money available may be spent in wages, the committee appeal for gifts of odd lengths of material, both woollen for warm garments and cotton for babies outfits, and also for old clothing which can be mended, adapted, and remodelled.

It is hoped that in the future a grant will be obtained from the Queen's Work for Women Fund to run the workroom, and donations are earnestly asked for, for the local branch of this fund. All contributions of goods or money should be sent to the Lady Mayoress's Office, 1, East-parade.

Evening Standard,
Nov: 6th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

SUCCESSFUL COOKERY CLASSES IN THE EAST END.

"POOR MAN'S TRIFLE."

INTERESTING LESSONS IN FOOD VALUES.

The Domestic Economy Training Centres for unemployed working women, established by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, are proving very popular.

The experiment is being appreciated in the homes of the women as well as by the pupils themselves. "Vegetable soup" bids fair to become famous in Stepney, for many of the women have tried the recipe given for their families with great success.

A Famous Soup.

"I never made soup before," one of the pupils explained, "and this is nice and cheap. You buy twopenn'orth of pot-herbs—that's three carrots, three turnips, and three or four onions—fry them in a bit of dripping, then pour on a quart of boiling water, and put in some rice or sago, and let it cook."

"I used up the cold potatoes from Sunday," said another; "smashed them up and stirred them round with a spoonful of dripping and a bit of onion, and then poured on a quart of boiling water. My mother says I'm learnin'!"

The hints gleaned at the cookery class are passed on also to neighbours; potato cakes made from cold potatoes being pronounced from outside as "just lovely."

Food Values Taught.

Home cookery lessons are given twice a week in the afternoon at the Stepney Centre, for in the morning the pupils are busy preparing dinner on a large scale for the women in the workrooms adjoining. This they are able to do now quite well under the supervision of the teacher. To-day's dinner, which was given to the women for threepence each, consisted of roast mutton, greens, and potatoes, and "poor man's trifle." A cup of tea and bread and butter later on is included in the charge.

It is to the afternoon class that the women look forward, for they are eager to learn something new. They are very much interested in food values, and they are taught how to make up simple, nourishing dinners. They can distinguish between what they call flesh-making, warming, and bone-making foods, and they know that pea soup, which contains no fat, should be followed by suet pudding. The value of fruit and vegetables is being brought home to some of them for the first time. They didn't "bother with them" before.

Every week some of the pupils change places with others from the mending and remodelling room. This is the second part of the domestic economy training, to be followed, if the classes can be arranged, by simple laundry lessons.

A Typist Pupil.

The girls are almost as pleased with the needlework as with the cooking. They are taught how to make down grown-up people's clothes for children, and how to mend and make the best of everything. In the dinner hour they can be seen studying the list of suggested alterations hung on the wall, and they bring newspapers with them to cut out patterns they want to take home.

The women chosen for the domestic economy

WESTMINSTER.

652/13 652.
Cambridge Independent Press,
Nov: 7th. 1914.

WOMEN'S WORK IN WAR TIME.

Schemes for Employment.

BRITISH TOY-MAKING.

A meeting to consider the subject of "Women's work in war time," arranged by the Cambridge Women's Suffrage Association, was held in the Guildhall on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Bethune Baker presided, and the speakers were Miss Marshall, Hon. Sec. of the Employment Schemes Sub-Committee of the Central Committee for Women's Employment, and Mrs. McCubbin, one of the founders of the toy-making industry of the Women's Emergency Corps. There was a large attendance of ladies. Although arranged by the C.W.S.A., the meeting was in no way a suffrage meeting.

OPPORTUNITIES OF SERVICE.

The Chairman said they had been fighting for a long time for opportunities of service, and circumstances had now brought them to hand. Women's special work must be to cherish, and where possible preserve life. The work of nurses was perhaps the most appealing form at the present moment, but work that also wanted doing was to help the poor mothers and young children, and if possible safeguard young girls and boys at times like that, and keep from starvation homes that depended on women's work where the work had gone owing to the war. That economic side of the work was one of the most difficult sides, and one that wanted knowledge as well as good hearts. They were really fighting against brute force and the domineering spirit. They were fighting on behalf of the right of even the smallest peoples to an independent mind and free spirit, and a right to develop on their own lines. They felt it was a righteous war, and one of its great consolations was that it was bringing home to everybody the importance of an independent mind and free spirit. Another of its consolations was the feeling of oneness they all had. They forgot party opinion, class, and sex. They were all heart and soul in the cause. She hoped and believed that when that war was over many more people would feel that although their duties as citizens were various, there was one standard of right and justice for them all.

IMAGINATION AND ADAPTABILITY.

Miss Marshall, Hon. Sec. of the Employment Sub-Committee of the Central Committee for Women's Employment, spoke of the various schemes and ways in which women were being helped to get work. They could not but notice the great difference in the attitude of the general public towards what they considered to be women's sphere in national life at that moment, and that difference was largely the outcome of the steady progress of the Women's Employment Committee during the past year. They had proved the value of the qualities of imagination and adaptability, imagination in looking ahead to what would be important in the future, and adaptability in turning their organisations to do that kind of work that needed doing there and then. She dealt in detail with the various branches of the work, and finally urged the duty of women to prepare for peace, a duty which especially fell upon those women who had worked in the women's movement. It seemed to her that all the work they were doing in relief was making up for harm done. They must also work for the prevention of the recurrence of the harm. If they used their imagination there were ways in which women could help, not only nationally, but internationally, in providing against the repetition of that fearful horror that had come upon the civilised world. They ought to do their share in building up the kind of public opinion that would make peace-making easy when the time came.

TOY-MAKING.

Mrs. McCubbin spoke on toy-making as a means of employment, which had been started by the Emergency Corps. They decided not to have any German models, but to use purely British designs for the toys. They were getting orders for toys as fast as they could send them out. They found that there was a great deal of undeveloped talent in the country in this direction, and that the quality of the work was daily improving. It was found that it was possible to make toys in England which largely competed very favourably with the toys received from Germany. They had not to their knowledge touched anything that anyone was previously making. It was essentially a thing which could be carried out by girls and women. It would be an advantage if only they could get hold of the trade and keep it after the war was over.

remark the committee, to realise from their neat appearance the straits they are in. A young mother who has been promised work had been in the employment of a West-end firm for seven years, but had had nothing to do since the second week in August. For two or three days she and her two young children had had only a little bread to eat. Practically everything had been sold to buy food. In such cases, which are only too numerous, the work provided by the committee comes as a relief from despair.

Subscriptions to the fund, which now totals £82,155, should be sent to 33, Portland-place, W.

Leeds Mercury.
Nov. 6th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

ACTIVITY OF LEEDS COMMITTEE OF THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Considerable interest has been shown in the various schemes of the Central Committee for the Employment of Women, which was formed to make provision for women who have lost their work owing to the present industrial disturbance consequent upon the war, and both workrooms and training schools have been started in London.

Leeds also has its problem of unemployed women to meet, and owing to the generosity of the members of the Leeds branch of the National Union of Women Suffrage Societies, who have collected over seventy pounds and handed it over to the Local Committee for the Employment of Women for administration, it has become possible to open a sewing room at once. Care will be taken not to interfere with the course of ordinary trade, and the work undertaken will consist of the making and mending of garments to be given away to those who are not able to purchase for themselves.

In order that as far as possible the money available may be spent in wages, the committee appeal for gifts of odd lengths of material, both woollen for warm garments and cotton for babies outfits, and also for old clothing which can be mended, adapted, and remodelled.

It is hoped that in the future a grant will be obtained from the Queen's Work for Women Fund to run the workroom, and donations are earnestly asked for, for the local branch of this fund. All contributions of goods or money should be sent to the Lady Mayoress's Office, 1, East-parade.

INTERESTING LESSONS IN FOOD VALUES.

The Domestic Economy Training Centres for unemployed working women, established by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, are proving very popular.

The experiment is being appreciated in the homes of the women as well as by the pupils themselves. "Vegetable soup" bids fair to become famous in Stepney, for many of the women have tried the recipe given for their families with great success.

A Famous Soup.

"I never made soup before," one of the pupils explained, "and this is nice and cheap. You buy twopenn'orth of pot-herbs—that's three carrots, three turnips, and three or four onions—fry them in a bit of dripping, then pour on a quart of boiling water, and put in some rice or sago, and let it cook."

"I used up the cold potatoes from Sunday," said another; "smashed them up and stirred them round with a spoonful of dripping and a bit of onion, and then poured on a quart of boiling water. My mother says I'm learnin'!"

The hints gleaned at the cookery class are passed on also to neighbours; potato cakes made from cold potatoes being pronounced from outside as "just lovely."

Food Values Taught.

Home cookery lessons are given twice a week in the afternoon at the Stepney Centre, for in the morning the pupils are busy preparing dinner on a large scale for the women in the workrooms adjoining. This they are able to do now quite well under the supervision of the teacher. To-day's dinner, which was given to the women for threepence each, consisted of roast mutton, greens, and potatoes, and "poor man's trifle." A cup of tea and bread and butter later on is included in the charge.

It is to the afternoon class that the women look forward, for they are eager to learn something new. They are very much interested in food values, and they are taught how to make up simple, nourishing dinners. They can distinguish between what they call flesh-making, warming, and bone-making foods, and they know that pea soup, which contains no fat, should be followed by suet pudding. The value of fruit and vegetables is being brought home to some of them for the first time. They didn't "bother with them" before.

Every week some of the pupils change places with others from the mending and remodelling room. This is the second part of the domestic economy training, to be followed, if the classes can be arranged, by simple laundry lessons.

A Typist Pupil.

The girls are almost as pleased with the needlework as with the cooking. They are taught how to make down grown-up people's clothes for children, and how to mend and make the best of everything. In the dinner hour they can be seen studying the list of suggested alterations hung on the wall, and they bring newspapers with them to cut out patterns they want to take home.

The women chosen for the domestic economy training are mostly young. A mother whose four children had no stockings or shoes when she came to the workroom is eagerly learning to sew. She has been employed in jam-making, and never had time before. Tailoresses, vest-makers, paper-bag makers, and a typist are all looking forward to their turn in the kitchen.

Committee for Women's Employment, and Mrs. McCubbin, one of the founders of the toy-making industry of the Women's Emergency Corps. There was a large attendance of ladies. Although arranged by the C.W.S.A., the meeting was in no way a suffrage meeting.

Opportunities of Service.

The Chairman said they had been fighting for a long time for opportunities of service, and circumstances had now brought them to hand. Women's special work must be to cherish, and where possible preserve life. The work of nurses was perhaps the most appealing form at the present moment, but work that also wanted doing was to help the poor mothers and young children, and if possible safeguard young girls and boys at times like that, and keep from starvation homes that depended on women's work where the work had gone owing to the war. That economic side of the work was one of the most difficult sides, and one that wanted knowledge as well as good hearts. They were really fighting against brute force and the domineering spirit. They were fighting on behalf of the right of even the smallest peoples to an independent mind and free spirit, and a right to develop on their own lines. They felt it was a righteous war, and one of its great consolations was that it was bringing home to everybody the importance of an independent mind and free spirit. Another of its consolations was the feeling of oneness they all had. They forgot party opinion, class, and sex. They were all heart and soul in the cause. She hoped and believed that when that war was over many more people would feel that although their duties as citizens were various, there was one standard of right and justice for them all.

Imagination and Adaptability.

Miss Marshall, Hon. Sec. of the Employment Sub-Committee of the Central Committee for Women's Employment, spoke of the various schemes and ways in which women were being helped to get work. They could not but notice the great difference in the attitude of the general public towards what they considered to be women's sphere in national life at that moment, and that difference was largely the outcome of the steady progress of the Women's Employment Committee during the past year. They had proved the value of the qualities of imagination and adaptability, imagination in looking ahead to what would be important in the future, and adaptability in turning their organisations to do that kind of work that needed doing there and then. She dealt in detail with the various branches of the work, and finally urged the duty of women to prepare for peace, a duty which especially fell upon those women who had worked in the women's movement. It seemed to her that all the work they were doing in relief was making up for harm done. They must also work for the prevention of the recurrence of the harm. If they used their imagination there were ways in which women could help, not only nationally, but internationally, in providing against the repetition of that fearful horror that had come upon the civilised world. They ought to do their share in building up the kind of public opinion that would make peace-making easy when the time came.

Toy-Making.

Mrs. McCubbin spoke on toy-making as a means of employment, which had been started by the Emergency Corps. They decided not to have any German models, but to use purely British designs for the toys. They were getting orders for toys as fast as they could send them out. They found that there was a great deal of undeveloped talent in the country in this direction, and that the quality of the work was daily improving. It was found that it was possible to make toys in England which largely competed very favourably with the toys received from Germany. They had not to their knowledge touched anything that anyone was previously making. It was essentially a thing which could be carried out by girls and women. It would be an advantage if only they could get hold of the trade and keep it after the war was over.

Evening Standard & James's Gazette, Nov. 5th 1914.

652/14 652.

Hearth Advertiser, Nov. 7th 1914.

WOMEN AND THE WAR.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

Pathetic Cases of Unemployment in Battersea.

THOSE WHO ARE "NOT USED TO ASKING."

The urgency of their work is brought daily home to the Central Committee on Women's Employment. A workroom is to be opened in Battersea this week, and close upon 300 women have applied to be admitted. A forewoman who was rejected because she was not sufficiently experienced begged with tears in her eyes to be allowed to come as an ordinary worker.

A young mother came to the Town Hall with her little boy of four, and was promised work. She did not say that she was starving, but it was stamped on her face. She had had nothing but bread to eat since Sunday, and very little of that. She had scraped the condensed-milk tin for sops for her baby and to spread on bread for the little boy.

Her husband deserted her fifteen months ago, but she has been skirt hand in a West-End firm for seven years, and until the war began was able to keep her children. Since the second week in August she has had nothing to do. Last week she made 1s. 6d. for altering a skirt. Yesterday she borrowed a penny to buy some coal.

Workmen's Gift.

Her little home was bare of anything that would sell, and a jar full of pawntickets represented the comforts that had been. Her little boy's boots had gone, and most of the bed clothes. Workmen in the street below have made a pet of the child, and the mother has been depending on the halfpennies they give him on Saturdays for a Sunday dinner. She thinks that nobody knows her troubles. She has told no one, and she is "not used to asking."

This reserve or pride is characteristic of the women who are thrown out of work through the war in Battersea. They belong to the better class of workers—dressmakers who were employed in the West End chiefly, and respectable charwomen. It is difficult to realise from their neat appearance the straits they are in.

Breadwinner of Fifteen Years.

A young girl of seventeen opened the door of a neat little house with a tidy garden. She was dressed in a pretty blouse and skirt. She had been employed in corset making at 10s. a week, but has lost her work since the war began. Her father, a baker, is ill in the infirmary, her mother cannot get any cleaning or needlework to do, and the family is living on the wage of a boy of fifteen and the father's insurance. The rent is 9s. 6d., and yesterday there was nothing left.

"We're not used to it," was all the girl said. She did not tell what they had to go without, she did not mention that there would be no dinner that day for anyone, but tears she could not keep back continually filled her eyes.

The single woman who lives alone is even worse off. Last Friday week one of these, a respectable woman of forty-nine, who had plenty of daily cleaning before the war, was sent for to a lady's house. She was told to come to work on the following Tuesday. The woman's face went a shade whiter. Then she whispered: "Could you let me have the shilling now, and I'll work it off on Tuesday?"

Not Even Tea.

That was all she made till the next Friday, when she got 6d. for cleaning. And every penny she can do without goes towards the rent, 9s. 6d. She had no light and no fire, and she had sold even the skirt she had for "mother's funeral."

A widow with a delicate little boy has managed to get a few hours daily work, but yesterday she had not even a penny for the gas to make herself a cup of tea. She went out to work at six o'clock in the morning without anything and every one of them is doing good work. Even in one of the most newly formed and least experienced of these societies, Mrs. Fawcett found, when she visited it recently, a tent had been started for the soldiers, and arrangements made for refreshments, reading-rooms, French conversation lessons, and baths for the soldiers. Since the last meeting of the N.U.W.S.S. at the Kingsway Hall £2400 has been collected for the Scottish Hospital Fund for field service abroad. As each hospital costs about £1000, the collection of funds for the third hospital is already progressing, although response is needed to the present urgent appeal for more funds to complete the work which the union is carrying out.

[illegible]

Suffering in Holland.

Miss Walshe, who has just returned from Holland, which she visited two or three times for the purpose of relieving the Belgian refugees, had some interesting experiences. To quote her own words at a recent meeting, she said she would never forget the sight of Bergen-op-Zoom the day of the bombardment of Antwerp.

Dense masses of people, carriages, carts, dogs, cows, animals of all sorts, men, women, and children, utterly exhausted, begrimed with the smoke of the town from which they had fled, passed in a solid and never-ending procession from the frontier. It had taken this one and a half millions of people twenty-four hours to do twelve miles. She saw some actually sleeping as they were standing up. One family had escaped from the neighbourhood of one of the forts of Antwerp, and had had to crawl for four days to escape the shells which were falling.

Orphaned Babies.

At Rosendaal she saw trainloads of refugees deposited, and amongst them eight hundred lunatics and five thousand criminals who had been rescued. Miss Walshe saw at Bergen op Zoom fifteen newly born babies whose mothers had died. Dr. Aletta Yacobs, the leading Suffragist in Holland, and one of the most energetic relief workers, told her there were 25,000 children in her country who had lost their parents. Families are separated everywhere, and there is the greatest difficulty in retracing those who disappeared. The awful helplessness of the people is appalling. They have no money, food is scarce, and they are advised by their leaders not to return to their own country. If starvation is to be staved off, help from other countries is essential.

All contributions for the relief work of the National Union should be sent to the hon. treasurer, N.U.W.S.S., Parliament-chambers, 14, Great Smith-street, Westminster, S.W.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund.

One of the most interesting experiments, which owes its origin to the war, is that of taking girls, factory girls and others, from the dismal, overcrowded conditions of life in industrial centres, to the fresh air and vigorous life of the country. In the far West of England a factory is being erected, in which the working women of surrounding districts find a new employment in all forms of fruit pulping, in drying vegetables, in bottling new unsweetened fruit preserves. By means of this work hundreds of tons of fruit, which would otherwise have been wasted, have been dealt with; supplies for the Army and other public sources provided, and a trade hitherto centred in Germany, developed in this country. It is hoped that within a short time this industry will be established on a paying basis, and probably 100 girls will be enjoying the healthy life of the country.

Closer at hand, at Radlett, East London girls will soon be hard at work developing a good acreage of land with fruit and vegetables and flowers. Here the girls will be under the direction of two lady gardeners, who will train them in this work with a view to establishing them as skilled market gardeners and fruit growers in the future. The Central Committee for Women's Employment is, for a limited time, paying the wages of the workers, until they shall be ready for good employment elsewhere, and their work shall give them a livelihood without further assistance. The care of the committee does not end with the payment of wages, but they keep careful supervision as to the comfort and well-being of these young women, many of them between 18 and 20, who are necessarily away from their homes. The Central Committee is also devising schemes for the employment of clerical workers, and also for giving training, together with maintenance, to those who are partially trained. Among the first to suffer from the general cutting down of business were the clerical workers, many of whom found themselves thrown out of employment, with a week's salary in their pockets, and no prospect whatever of earning a livelihood. Mrs. Hester, whose work in improving the pay and status of clerical workers is well known to some people, has sent a letter to members of the Chamber of Commerce and the heads of a great number of firms in an endeavour to find suitable openings for educated women, thoroughly trained as clerks, foreign correspondents, or secretaries. It will thus be seen that the Central Committee for Women's Employment is doing good work on sound lines, and it is hoped that the response to the Queen's work for Women Fund will be such that the committee may be able to develop and extend schemes in such a way that the thousands of unemployed women may find work—and that quickly.

In St. Albans collecting cards have been issued, and we have to acknowledge help to the amount of £20 1s. 9d. A cheque for the full amount has been sent, and individual subscribers will receive an official receipt from Buckingham Palace, wherever possible. In some cases, however, only initials have been put on the cards. A request has been received from Buckingham Palace that arrangements be made for a "Favour" day, in further aid of the Queen's Fund, and accordingly it has been decided that Wednesday, November 18th, shall be "Favour" day in St. Albans. The working is on very similar lines to Queen Alexandra's Rose day.

The Mayoress is President, and Mrs. Elworthy, "Windygates," Battlefield-road, is the hon. sec. locally, and the Hon. Treasurer is Miss Webster, 19, Granville-road, St. Albans. Envelopes should be marked "The Queen's Work for Women Fund" in the top left hand corner.

A young mother came to the Town Hall with her little boy of four, and was promised work. She did not say that she was starving, but it was stamped on her face. She had had nothing but bread to eat since Sunday, and very little of that. She had scraped the condensed-milk tin for sops for her baby and to spread on bread for the little boy.

Her husband deserted her fifteen months ago, but she has been skirt hand in a West-End firm for seven years, and until the war began was able to keep her children. Since the second week in August she has had nothing to do. Last week she made 1s. 6d. for altering a skirt. Yesterday she borrowed a penny to buy some coal.

Workmen's Gift.

Her little home was bare of anything that would sell, and a jar full of pawntickets represented the comforts that had been. Her little boy's boots had gone, and most of the bed clothes. Workmen in the street below have made a pet of the child, and the mother has been depending on the halfpennies they give him on Saturdays for a Sunday dinner. She thinks that nobody knows her troubles. She has told no one, and she is "not used to asking."

This reserve or pride is characteristic of the women who are thrown out of work through the war in Battersea. They belong to the better class of workers—dressmakers who were employed in the West End chiefly, and respectable charwomen. It is difficult to realise from their neat appearance the straits they are in.

Breadwinner of Fifteen Years.

A young girl of seventeen opened the door of a neat little house with a tidy garden. She was dressed in a pretty blouse and skirt. She had been employed in corset making at 10s. a week, but has lost her work since the war began. Her father, a baker, is ill in the infirmary, her mother cannot get any cleaning or needlework to do, and the family is living on the wage of a boy of fifteen and the father's insurance. The rent is 9s. 6d., and yesterday there was nothing left.

"We're not used to it," was all the girl said. She did not tell what they had to go without, she did not mention that there would be no dinner that day for anyone, but tears she could not keep back continually filled her eyes.

The single woman who lives alone is even worse off. Last Friday week one of these, a respectable woman of forty-nine, who had plenty of daily cleaning before the war, was sent for to a lady's house. She was told to come to work on the following Tuesday. The woman's face went a shade whiter. Then she whispered: "Could you let me have the shilling now, and I'll work it off on Tuesday?"

Not Even Tea.

That was all she made till the next Friday, when she got 6d. for cleaning. And every penny she can do without goes towards the rent, 2s. 6d. She had no light and no fire, and she had sold even the skirt she had for "mother's funeral."

A widow with a delicate little boy has managed to get a few hours daily work, but yesterday she had not even a penny for the gas to make herself a cup of tea. She went out to work at six o'clock in the morning without anything.

In cases such as these the work initiated by the committee comes as a relief from despair.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All Scottish subscriptions are to be sent to the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, Linlithgow.

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

WOMEN'S RELIEF WORK.

APPEAL FROM THE NATIONAL UNION OF WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE SOCIETIES.

A great effort is being made to extend the relief work undertaken throughout the country and abroad by the National Union of W.S.S.

Six hundred societies responded to the appeal of the Union on the outbreak of war, said she would never forget the sight of Bergen-op-Zoom the day of the bombardment of Antwerp.

Dense masses of people, carriages, carts, dogs, cows, animals of all sorts, men, women, and children, utterly exhausted, begrimed with the smoke of the town from which they had fled, passed in a solid and never-ending procession from the frontier. It had taken this one and a half millions of people twenty-four hours to do twelve miles. She saw some actually sleeping as they were standing up. One family had escaped from the neighbourhood of one of the forts of Antwerp, and had had to crawl for four days to escape the shells which were falling.

Orphaned Babies.

At Rosendaal she saw trainloads of refugees deposited, and amongst them eight hundred lunatics and five thousand criminals who had been rescued. Miss Walshe saw at Bergen op Zoom fifteen newly born babies whose mothers had died. Dr. Aletta Yacobs, the leading Suffragist in Holland, and one of the most energetic relief workers, told her there were 25,000 children in her country who had lost their parents. Families are separated everywhere, and there is the greatest difficulty in retracing those who disappeared. The awful helplessness of the people is appalling. They have no money, food is scarce, and they are advised by their leaders not to return to their own country. If starvation is to be staved off, help from other countries is essential.

All contributions for the relief work of the National Union should be sent to the hon. treasurer, N.U.W.S.S., Parliament-chambers, 14, Great Smith-street, Westminster, S.W.

The Central Committee for Women's Employment is, for a limited time, paying the wages of the workers, until they shall be ready for good employment elsewhere, and their work shall give them a livelihood without further assistance. The care of the committee does not end with the payment of wages, but they keep careful supervision as to the comfort and well-being of these young women, many of them between 18 and 20, who are necessarily away from their homes. The Central Committee is also devising schemes for the employment of clerical workers, and also for giving training, together with maintenance, to those who are partially trained. Among the first to suffer from the general cutting down of business were the clerical workers, many of whom found themselves thrown out of employment, with a week's salary in their pockets, and no prospect whatever of earning a livelihood. Mrs. Hester, whose work in improving the pay and status of clerical workers is well known to some people, has sent a letter to members of the Chamber of Commerce and the heads of a great number of firms in an endeavour to find suitable openings for educated women, thoroughly trained as clerks, foreign correspondents, or secretaries. It will thus be seen that the Central Committee for Women's Employment is doing good work on sound lines, and it is hoped that the response to the Queen's work for Women Fund will be such that the committee may be able to develop and extend schemes in such a way that the thousands of unemployed women may find work—and that quickly.

In St. Albans collecting cards have been issued, and we have to acknowledge help to the amount of £20 1s. 9d. A cheque for the full amount has been sent, and individual subscribers will receive an official receipt from Buckingham Palace, wherever possible. In some cases, however, only initials have been put on the cards. A request has been received from Buckingham Palace that arrangements be made for a "Favour" day, in further aid of the Queen's Fund, and accordingly it has been decided that Wednesday, November 18th, shall be "Favour" day in St. Albans. The working is on very similar lines to Queen Alexandra's Rose day.

The Mayoress is President, and Mrs. Elworthy, "Windygates," Battlefield-road, is the hon. sec. locally, and the Hon. Treasurer is Miss Webster, 19, Granville-road, St. Albans. Envelopes should be marked "The Queen's Work for Women Fund" in the top left hand corner.

The Morning Post, Nov: 9th. 1914.

OLD CLOTHING.

Mrs. H. (Leominster): The things in your list would not seem to be of much value in themselves, but they might well be remade into useful garments. This is undertaken by the Central Committee on Women's Employment (Hon. Sec., Miss McArthur, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner), which is working in conjunction with the Queen's Work for Women Fund. Write to Miss McArthur about the goods.

GOOD NEWS FOR NEEDLEWOMEN AND BOXMAKERS.

Work for about 1,000 dressmakers and others, which should last for many months, has just been placed with the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The order is for a fixed number of shirts to be delivered weekly. Large quantities of flannel will be received by the Committee for this order, and to make things easy for the many small establishments among whom the work is to be distributed, arrangements have been made to open a large central cutting-room. The shirts will thus be cut by experts before being sent out from the Committee to be made.

A plan which has been adopted by a wealthy Glasgow lady for helping distressed dressmakers may offer suggestions to others. She has given orders for garments for Belgian refugees, herself supplying the material, to a high class dressmaker who is suffering from lack of orders. The superintendence of the work and the workers is left entirely to the dressmaker, who is free to undertake any special orders she may receive from her own customers. Thus the workers are kept fully employed, for when they are not executing orders they are doing relief work. The lady is trying to stimulate others to keep various dressmaking employers similarly busy. Such a scheme, adopted in the West End of London, might be the means of saving many dressmakers from giving up business and throwing hundreds of girls out of work.

The Committee have been considering the condition of the paper-box makers in Kettering and Northampton districts who are employed almost solely in making boxes for the boots manufactured in the neighbouring factories. These factories are now given up to the supply of Army boots which do not need boxes, and the box manufacturers are unable to find employment for their workers. Learning that some hundreds of thousands of boxes were needed for the purpose of sending presents to the troops at the front, the Committee have made representations with a view to ensuring that at least a portion of these boxes shall be made up in the paper-box factories in question.

Manchester Guardian, Nov: 10th. 1914.

QUEEN MARY'S FUND.—The secretaries of the Women's Trades and Labour Council write from 5, John Dalton Street, Manchester:—May we call your attention to a resolution passed by the Women's Trades and Labour Council on the question of the insufficient rate of pay given in Queen's Fund workrooms? The resolution is as follows:—"That this Council protest against the wage of 3d. an hour, or 10s. a week, as a maximum wage for women working in workrooms in connection with Queen Mary's Fund. This wage is below the minimum fixed by the Trade Board in the clothing trade, and is not only far below the amount earned by a skilled operative in any trade whatsoever, but it is less than the market rate for the ordinary worker in the tailoring and shirt-making trades. They view the fixing of this very low maximum as an industrial disaster for women, as the money standard crystallised by the workshops under the National Fund is bound to have its effect on the rates given by private employers. Ten shillings a week cannot be considered a living wage, and the Council desire to point out that other societies engaged in relief work are paying better rates. For example, in one case 4d. an hour is being given, and in another 10s. has been made the minimum, the maximum in this case being £1. It seems disastrous that the wages under the National Fund should undercut, not only the ordinary rates of private employers, but the wages given by private committees engaged in the same kind of relief work."

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

RENOVATING & REMODELLING SECONDHAND GARMENTS.

MARKET GARDENERS.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK FOR HALF-A-CROWN.

London's poor should be better clothed this winter than they have been for some time.

Besides the renovation and remodelling of secondhand garments in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, the committee are arranging for the supply of materials for the purpose of making up maternity outfits and garments for women and children. This work will furnish occupation to large numbers of unemployed women workers, and the made-up garments will be given away to persons who cannot afford to buy them.

Outfits are being supplied by Queen Mary's Needlework Guild for the East London girls who have been sent by the Central Committee to be trained as market gardeners and fruit growers at Radlett, Herts. Coming straight from town to the fields, it is necessary that the girls should be warmly clad, and they are each to be provided with a jersey.

Seven Hundred Contributors.

Mrs. Ingram Keir sends a contribution of £34 from the women of Melksham, Wilts.

The popularity of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund in Melksham is marked by the fact that Mrs. Keir's collection was made by 700 contributors, and averaged about 1s. a head.

Portrait by Shannon.

A very important method of helping the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is to be found in the pages of "Princess Mary's Gift Book."

Quite apart from the object for which it is published, it is a book which appeals to all, for it represents probably the most wonderful value ever offered to the great public of book lovers. For the sum of half-a-crown you can obtain in one beautifully bound volume a unique collection of stories and poems by the most famous authors of the day. Nearly every page is decorated by a line drawing by a well-known black-and-white artist, and in addition the volume is embellished by a series of new paintings, specially contributed by the most famous painters of the day, beautifully reproduced in colour, each plate being separately mounted.

The frontispiece is a new portrait of Princess Mary by J. J. Shannon, R.A. Altogether "Princess Mary's Gift Book" is a volume which every household will treasure, one which for the years to come will serve as a worthy memento of what the Empire wrought for the women who suffered through the ravages of the great war.

Various Contributors.

J. M. Barrie is represented in "Princess Mary's Gift Book" by "A Holiday in Bed," which has never before been published in book form.

Mr. Napier Hemy, the famous Royal Academician, has contributed a painting illustrating "Charlie the Cox: A Life Poem by Hall Caine."

The Baroness Orczy has written a new tale of the "Scarlet Pimpernel," while Mr. Arthur Rackham contributes drawings and a painting illustrating "The Land of Let's Pretend," by Lady Sybil Grant.

Rudyard Kipling is represented in "Princess Mary's Gift Book" by his poem entitled "Big Steamers," for which Mr. Norman Wilkinson, R.I., has painted a remarkable illustration.

65215 6052.

The Daily Telegraph, Nov: 12th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

TRAINING FOR TYPISTS.

One hundred and fifty unemployed women and girl clerks are to be offered a great opportunity by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Instead of finding temporary work for the girls who have been displaced through the closing of offices or the reduction of staff, it has been thought desirable in some cases to give training with maintenance.

Fifty scholarships offered by Clark's College have therefore been accepted by the committee for women and girls between the ages of 16 and 25. These scholarships will provide free training for business or secretarial work. Other arrangements are being made by the committee to give education of a similar character to another fifty typists, and classes in special subjects to fifty skilled workers.

The pupils will be given 10s a week maintenance during training, and if necessary expenses up to 4s a week. Only those who have actually been employed as clerks will be eligible, the committee having no desire to increase the number of people in the clerical profession, but only to help those already in it. In making a selection, the committee will have regard to girls who would most benefit by the education, bearing in mind also the means of support available at the moment.

Last night the fund reached a total of £87,083, yesterday's subscriptions including a third donation of £100 from Sir Francis Trippel, and a similar amount representing the proceeds of a concert at the Grand Stand, Ascot, organised by Lady Keppel and Miss Hermione Kennedy.

Nottingham Guardian, Nov: 14th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

USEFULNESS OF QUEEN'S FUND.

A useful part continues to be played in the relief of distress in Nottingham by the Queen's Work for Women Fund. There is no interference with legitimate trade, for the garments made are not sold, a distributive sub-committee having been formed of representatives of the religious and larger philanthropic organisations in the city.

An appeal is made by Miss Hackett, 271, Woodborough-road, for any odd foreign coins readers may have in their homes. Francs, marks, roubles, kroners, and antique coins are being collected, classified, and exchanged, the proceeds being sent to the fund. The scheme has the approval of the Queen's committee.

Already acknowledged	£551	16	3
Lady Yorall	2	2	0
Mrs. W. R. Tyler (Bridge Drive)	5	5	0
Total	£559	3	3

We are asked to explain that the Queen's Distributive Committee in London, with Miss Mary MacArthur as its hon. secretary, is the distributive committee for the whole country for the Queen's Fund. The local Queen's Fund Committee, which has also been doing a great deal of executive work, must now come under the Prince of Wales's Fund Committee before it can get recommended for a grant. The Advisory Committee of the local branch being responsible for the wages for the workroom at 12, Short-hill, feel that they must immediately get into line and secure the grant. They have, therefore, accepted the invitation of the Relief Fund Committee to be a sub-committee of that fund.

A committee meeting yesterday was held to separate the two branches of the work. The War Fund Employment of Women Sub-Committee, with Mrs. Ball as treasurer, and Mrs. W. E. Dowson as hon. secretary, will go on with the work of finding employment for women thrown out of work through the war, and the Queen's Fund Committee, with Mrs. Arkey as hon. secretary, and Mrs. McCraith as treasurer, will carry on the work of collecting the Queen's Fund from the city and county of Nottingham.

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund. Gifts of material should be sent to 24, Stoneboat street, or to the workroom at 12, Short-hill.

The Times,
November 12th. 1914.

TRAINING OF GIRL CLERKS.

NEW DEPARTURE BY THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Training with maintenance is to be given by the Central Committee on Women's Employment to 150 unemployed women and girl clerks. Many of the girls have had very little training, and the time of enforced unemployment would be most profitably used by them in completing it. Others who are skilled in their profession could with advantage to themselves acquire some special branch of knowledge, such as commercial Spanish or Russian. Fifty scholarships offered by Clark's College have therefore been accepted by the Central Committee for women and girls between the ages of 16 and 25. Other arrangements are being made by the committee to give education of a similar character to another 50 typists, and classes in special subjects to 50 skilled workers.

The pupils will all be given 10s. a week maintenance during training, and, if necessary, expenses up to 4s. a week. Only those who have actually been employed as clerks will be eligible, the committee having no desire to increase the number of people in the clerical profession, but only to help those already in it.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund last night reached a total of £87,083 11s. 1d. The day's subscribers included :—

Proceeds of Concert at Grand Stand, Ascot, organized by Lady Keppel and Miss Hermione Kennedy	£100 0 0
Sir Francis Trippel (third donation)	100 0 0
Collected by Ex-Mayoress of Haverfordwest, further instalment, including :—Concert arranged by Mrs. W. J. Jones, £26 2s. 2d.; and Flower Day, arranged by Mrs. Wheatley and Mrs. Hugh Thomas, £12 11s. 1d... ..	39 18 9
£25 EACH.—Lord Fitzhardinge, Mr. Fred Whinney.
Contribution from the Students and Staff of Pitman's Schools	20 0 0
Mayoress of Islington's Branch, further instalment, collected by the Mayoress	19 4 11
Messrs. Coode, Matthews, Fitzmaurice, and Wilson	15 15 0
Collected by Urban District Council of Porthcawl	13 12 6
Collected by Mayoress of South Molton	10 18 2

£10 EACH.—Sir Horace Plunkett, Miss Herring, Staff of Messrs. L. Hammond and Co.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W.

The Daily Telegraph,
Nov: 14th 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

One of the most promising of the experiments initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment is the training of unemployed women as sick-room helps. Already seventeen are employed in the East-end under the direction of the Plaistow Maternity, Charity, and District Nurses' Home, and the number will shortly be increased to twenty-five. There is said to be a constant demand for the services of women able to undertake such work, and it is proposed to train many more in London and the provinces.

A total of £88,241 has now been collected for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

Madras Mail,
Nov: 14th. 1914.

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN.

Queen Mary has also started a Fund for giving employment to women, which already amounts to £46,000. It is admitted everywhere that the best way to help in the present crisis is by giving work rather than grants of money, and a scheme is under consideration by which much relief in these lines will be afforded. Lady Wimborne has lent her house in Arlington Street to the Central Committee of working-class women, and among those serving on it are Miss McArthur, of the Women's Trades Union Societies, Miss Clapham, of the Women's Branch of the Labour Exchanges, Miss Anderson, Principal Lady-Inspector of Factories, and Miss Durham, organiser of technical teaching for the London County Council. It is proposed at present to provide women with work which is to be paid for at the rate of 3*d* per hour, and for them to work 40 hours a week, the time to be arranged as to afford them opportunities for going in search of regular employment.

Daily Herald, 14th. November 1914.

THE Manchester, Salford, and District Women's Trade and Labour Council has protested against ten shillings a week as a maximum wage in the Queen Mary's workrooms. The Council is representative of women employed in the printing and bookbinding, machine and electric, tailoring, shirtmaking, weaving (two branches), cigar-making, clay pipe finishing, ring-spinning, patent cop winding, and bobbin winding trades.

Sussex Daily News,
Nov: 13th. 1914.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS AMONG WOMEN AND GIRLS.

Sir,—The Local Committee at Brighton for the Prevention and Relief of Distress have now opened a workroom in the Pavilion, for women and girls who have lost their employment owing to the war, and who have registered with the Local Relief Committee and are in urgent need. A thoroughly competent Superintendent has been engaged, who is capable, not only of supervising, but also of so teaching the best methods of cutting out, fixing and finishing the work that many will leave the workroom far better fitted to support themselves than they were before the room was opened.

The Central Committee on women's employment gives definite instructions both as to the payment of the workers, and also as to what work may or may not be done. The payment must be not less than 3d. an hour, and the hours may be as many as 40 per week. As the regulations provide that the workroom should not take business orders, nor make any goods for sale, it will be seen that the work done must be such that the output will consist chiefly of articles suitable to be given away. It is proposed to make garments for the necessitous poor of our town, and every care will be taken to see that these reach the right hands.

On behalf of the Managing Committee, we are writing to ask for help in the form of gifts of materials or of money for obtaining them. Dark serges or other woollen materials, natural-coloured flannels, shirtings (not flannelette), white nun's velling, and wools for knitting will be warmly welcomed. All parcels should be addressed to The Superintendent, Local Relief Committee's Workroom, Royal Pavilion, Brighton. Gifts of money should be sent to Mrs. Ryle, 11, Madeira-place, Brighton. On behalf of the Managing Sub-Committee, we are,

Yours, &c.,

CATHERINE RYLE.
MAY L. COLLINS.

Town Hall, Brighton, 12th November.

652/16 652.

Nottingham Express, November 19th. 1914

New Statesman 14-11-14

HELPING THE POOR.

Employment Found for 100 Girls in Nottingham.

PRAISEWORTHY MOVEMENT.

The workroom established at Short Hill for the assistance of Nottingham women and girls out of work through the war is now in full swing. The room, which is styled the Nottingham Emergency Workroom, has now no connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund. It is being administered by a sub-committee associated with the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund.

It will be recalled that the movement was inaugurated in the city by the Nottingham branch of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies Later, a committee thought they might manage the workroom with help from the Queen's Work for Women Fund. Miss Mary MacArthur, the secretary of the Queen's Fund distributive committee for the entire country, explained recently, however, that this could not be continued. The Queen's Fund committee might, if they thought fit, make a grant towards the management expenses, but in the meantime the workroom must be under the patronage of the Prince of Wales's Fund.

The change was accomplished at a meeting last week, the new managing authority being the Employment of Women Sub-committee of the War Relief Fund, It is hoped and expected that a grant may be secured from the Queen's Fund, but until then the Prince of Wales's Fund is financing the institution.

A visit to the workroom is sufficient evidence of the good results attending upon the praiseworthy movement. There, approximately a hundred girls who have fallen into whole or partial unemployment through the war, are busily engaged in making up garments to be distributed free to the poor of the neighbourhood or to the distressed Belgian refugees at present entertained in the town and vicinity. The principles of the fund aim at the prevention of distress rather than relief of destitution, and the responsible committee, in accomplishing these aims for Nottingham, are fulfilling an important and truly sympathetic function.

How Others Can Help.

Mrs. A Ball, the Deputy Mayoress, who was in charge of the workroom when the "Express" representative called, explained the sources of supply and output of material. As much fabric as possible is obtained from the general public. While new material is, of course, welcomed, old dresses and garments will be accepted gratefully. The girls will either repair them or take them to pieces to be converted into children's apparel The room is managed on the lines suggested by Miss Mary MacArthur's committee in London, and, in addition to the voluntary lady helpers, is in charge of two experienced overlookers, who superintend the cutting-out with the help of other girls who are sufficiently expert. The remaining hands, with the aid of between 30 and 40 sewing machines, which have been lent, complete the operation.

The finished articles reach the needy through the services of a distributive committee composed of representatives of all denominations and the principal philanthropic organisations, and application for them should be made through Mrs. Marshall, at 12, Short Hill. Up to the present the public have been generous in their supply of material, but there is need for more in order to obviate a call upon the Prince of Wales's Fund.

The necessity for the work is emphasised by the fact that last week the returns at the Nottingham Labour Exchange showed that the number of registered women over 17 years of age jumped up from 410 to 487, and, of course, large numbers are not registered.

A distressing feature of the present situation is the number of charwomen unemployed. A subcommittee is endeavouring to find them work, and it is to be hoped that households requiring help will give all assistance in their power to accomplish this end.

We congratulate the Central Committee on Women's Employment on having extorted from the Cabinet Committee a further application of the principle of "maintenance under training," as that to be adopted when genuinely productive employment cannot be found for the unemployed. Among the workers suffering most severely in London are the women clerks and typists of the humbler grades. Of these, 150 are now being sent for training in languages and special subjects, so that they may utilise their enforced leisure by acquiring greater proficiency in their normal occupation. Ten shillings a week is provided towards their maintenance, together with travelling expenses up to four shillings where requisite. It is greatly to be wished that Local Committees should promptly put in operation the similar policy for unemployed girls under 16, at length, as we understand, approved by the Cabinet Committee, but apparently not yet promulgated. These girls are now rightly excluded from the women's workrooms. They may be granted four shillings a week towards their maintenance to enable them to attend the day classes that the Local Education Authority should provide.

* * *

The provision of training for unemployed women clerks brings unmistakably to the front the policy which the Central Committee on Women's Employment has, with the aid of the Queen's Fund, throughout wisely adopted. Instead of attempting to "employ the unemployed," for whom no situations could be found in their own trades, in any commercial production, the Committee expressly declares its policy to be "one of education, training and maintenance." In the "workrooms" which it is trying to induce the Local Representative Committees to start, the women come, not to produce but to be taught—taught to sew, to cut out, to adapt, to mend, to cook, and even, where possible, to exercise new trades. What things they make, in the course of this training, are not allowed to be sold at all, but must, in so far as they are not retained by the workers themselves, be given away to those who could not have purchased them. Unhappily, it proves to be almost the most difficult thing in the world to make the members of the Local Representative Committees, and even the Government inspectors, understand this policy of training. They all want to set the women to produce, usually to make shirts or socks for the troops, or else to execute privately obtained dressmaking orders—thus merely robbing Jane of employment for the benefit of Julia!

* * *

A similar misunderstanding exists in other quarters about the rate of threepence per hour, with a maximum

New Statesman
14-11-14

052

£52/17

employed in their own occupations at anything that can be called wages, the Central Committee, as we are informed, rightly insists on the fullest Standard Rates being paid (such as fivepence per hour in London to the charwoman employed). It is an indispensable principle of all emergency provision for the unemployed—the only way of preventing the involuntarily unemployed from being crowded out by the rush of those who throw up their jobs —that not more shall be paid to those for whom "maintenance under training" is provided than is actually being earned by others as wages. Unfortunately, to our disgrace be it said, the wage earned by literally millions of women, for long days of severe and monotonous toil, under distasteful and sometimes brutalising conditions, is even less than ten shillings a week. Before we can safely offer more to women who come to be taught, we must extend the Trade Boards Act and raise the legal minimum wage for women actually employed in production.

* * *

There is a simple explanation, which is also quite adequate, of the result of the American congressional elections. They were fought everywhere upon the prosperity issue; and the bad trade of the year has brought with it the almost complete annihilation of the immense Democratic majority in the House of Representatives. Big business goes solid against President Wilson, and his opponents have been able to make crushing use of the old cry that whenever the Democrats are in power the prosperity of the country declines. The new tariff has necessarily meant disturbance. But the Administration has been successful in such matters as the currency scheme and, less conspicuously, Mexico. President Wilson, in what we should call his election address, claimed that his party's term had been rich in good laws, and asserted that a practical nation was not likely, in the midst of great tasks, to reject a team full of the spirit of public service in favour of a party upon which deep demoralisation had fallen. There was a widespread impression that the Democrats would be able to put all the blame of the bad times upon the war. This has not happened, and, curiously, the President said nothing about the war in his election letter. The extinction of the Progressives does not mean the end of Mr. Roosevelt. He will not be done with until he is dead. But his failure to create a new party is important. The Progressives had recruited many of the ablest and most earnest social reformers, and they had made a valiant effort to form the nucleus of a party organisation in every electoral district. All this went for nothing: the Republican machine has triumphed once again.

The New Statesman,
November 14th. 1914.

652/18 652.

...r the Socialist Party should support the ... in the prosecution of the war. It would however, be unwise to assume that this indicates any very extensive breach in the ...mity of the German people. We see, by the way, ...at Dr. Frank, whose death was referred to in these columns a few weeks ago as a serious misfortune for the German Social Democratic Party, is now reported—we know not how reliably—to be not killed, but only seriously wounded.

* * *

We congratulate the Central Committee on Women's Employment on having extorted from the Cabinet Committee a further application of the principle of "maintenance under training," as that to be adopted when genuinely productive employment cannot be found for the unemployed. Among the workers suffering most severely in London are the women clerks and typists of the humbler grades. Of these, 150 are now being sent for training in languages and special subjects, so that they may utilise their enforced leisure by acquiring greater proficiency in their normal occupation. Ten shillings a week is provided towards their maintenance, together with travelling expenses up to four shillings where requisite. It is greatly to be wished that Local Committees should promptly put in operation the similar policy for unemployed girls under 16, at length, as we understand, approved by the Cabinet Committee, but apparently not yet promulgated. These girls are now rightly excluded from the women's workrooms. They may be granted four shillings a week towards their maintenance to enable them to attend the day classes that the Local Education Authority should provide.

* * *

The provision of training for unemployed women clerks brings unmistakably to the front the policy which the Central Committee on Women's Employment has, with the aid of the Queen's Fund, throughout wisely adopted. Instead of attempting to "employ the unemployed," for whom no situations could be found in their own trades, in any commercial production, the Committee expressly declares its policy to be "one of education, training and maintenance." In the "workrooms" which it is trying to induce the Local Representative Committees to start, the women come, not to produce but to be taught—taught to sew, to cut out, to adapt, to mend, to cook, and even, where possible, to exercise new trades. What things they make, in the course of this training, are not allowed to be sold at all, but must, in so far as they are not retained by the workers themselves, be given away to those who could not have purchased them. Unhappily, it proves to be almost the most difficult thing in the world to make the members of the Local Representative Committees, and even the Government inspectors, understand this policy of training. They all want to set the women to produce, usually to make shirts or socks for the troops, or else to execute privately obtained dressmaking orders—thus merely robbing Jane of employment for the benefit of Julia!

* * *

A similar misunderstanding exists in other quarters about the rate of threepence per hour, with a maximum

P.T.O.

The Daily Telegraph,
November 18th. 1914.

The Hon. Mrs. A Lyttelton has been added by the President of the Local Government Board to the Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairman.

The Daily News & Leader,
Nov. 18th. 1914.

SCHOOLING WITH WAGES.

Practical Scheme for Girls Who Are Out of Work.

For the girl of sixteen and under who has been thrown out of employment by the war a scheme of education with maintenance has been devised by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and has received the approval of the National Relief Fund.

The essential feature is that these girls, while attending day classes for general and technical education, will be paid four shillings a week. Besides this, they are to have a mid-day meal on five days a week.

The scheme provides that, while the girls are attending school, partly to improve their general education, they shall also attend classes of the trades in which they have been employed, in order to increase their chance of good employment later.

These classes are in direct communication with the Labour Exchanges and the Junior Advisory Committees, and as soon as any vacant posts arise in the labour markets word is sent by telephone to the schools, and the pupils are allowed to leave the classes and to apply for the situation. Preference is, and will be, given to the young people attending these classes.

The Herald, Nov. 21st. 1914.

THE relief problem does not grow easier. In Poplar at Queen Mary's Workroom we are informed that young women under seventeen years of age are paid 1s. a day; this means 5s. a week. This is defended because they are being trained, and are not really earning a living. This does not make matters easier for the girls. If they are in lodgings or even at home with parents they can't pay their way by telling their friends of the excellency of their training. There is only one method by which this can be settled, and that is to close the workrooms to these young people, and all of us unite in an agitation to compel the London Education Authority to take the matter in hand.

We know quite well that many of the women engaged in administering the Queen's workrooms agree with our criticism, but unfortunately do not see what else they can do. We suggest to Misses Mary MacArthur and Susan Lawrence that a strike would be a very effective means by which to bring about a settlement. There is every justification for so drastic a step, for the very worst thing that could happen because of the war would be a lowering of the standard of life and morals amongst young women, and wretched incomes, such as 5s. a week for girls of seventeen, is bound to bring about a general lowering of standards and values.

The Draper's Record,
November 28th 1914.

Distress Among Dressmakers.

THE distress among London dressmakers on account of the war, it is stated, continues, in spite of the fact that the Central Committee on Women's Employment is allocating a contract for 10,000 shirts per week among 110 workshops. The work applied for by these shops exceeds 20,000 shirts per week. In addition, 13,000 belts per week for the French troops are given out to be made. It is found that nearly 1,000 workshops are in distress. It is the best kind of Court dressmakers who are feeling the effects of the war most keenly.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund has reached a total of £91,380 7s. 10d.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

Statesman, Nov 14th 19

of ten shillings a week, which is fixed as the allowance for the maintenance of each woman whilst attending for training. We have even received a formal complaint from the Manchester and Salford Women's Trades Council against the adoption of so low a standard of "wages." But it is not a case of wages at all. The women are not being employed, they are being trained; and, as we have said, if they do produce anything it is not allowed to be sold. Where a woman has children or other dependents, she is supposed to draw further allowances from the Local Committee. In those cases in which women are employed in their own occupations at anything that can be called wages, the Central Committee, as we are informed, rightly insists on the fullest Standard Rates being paid (such as fivepence per hour in London to the charwoman employed). It is an indispensable principle of all emergency provision for the unemployed—the only way of preventing the involuntarily unemployed from being crowded out by the rush of those who throw up their jobs —that not more shall be paid to those for whom "maintenance under training" is provided than is actually being earned by others as wages. Unfortunately, to our disgrace be it said, the wage earned by literally millions of women, for long days of severe and monotonous toil, under distasteful and sometimes brutalising conditions, is even less than ten shillings a week. Before we can safely offer more to women who come to be taught, we must extend the Trade Boards Act and raise the legal minimum wage for women actually employed in production.

* * *

There is a simple explanation, which is also quite adequate, of the result of the American congressional elections. They were fought everywhere upon the prosperity issue; and the bad trade of the year has brought with it the almost complete annihilation of the immense Democratic majority in the House of Representatives. Big business goes solid against President Wilson, and his opponents have been able to make crushing use of the old cry that whenever the Democrats are in power the prosperity of the country declines. The new tariff has necessarily meant disturbance. But the Administration has been successful in such matters as the currency scheme and, less conspicuously, Mexico. President Wilson, in what we should call his election address, claimed that his party's term had been rich in good laws, and asserted that a practical nation was not likely, in the midst of great tasks, to reject a team full of the spirit of public service in favour of a party upon which deep demoralisation had fallen. There was a widespread impression that the Democrats would be able to put all the blame of the bad times upon the war. This has not happened, and, curiously, the President said nothing about the war in his election letter. The extinction of the Progressives does not mean the end of Mr. Roosevelt. He will not be done with until he is dead. But his failure to create a new party is important. The Progressives had recruited many of the ablest and most earnest social reformers, and they had made a valiant effort to form the nucleus of a party organisation in every electoral district. All this went for nothing: the Republican machine has triumphed once again.

652

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, November 16th. 1914.

652/19

THE QUEEN'S FUND

TRAINING UNEMPLOYED WOMEN AS SICKROOM HELPS.

SUCCESS OF SCHEME.

The training of unemployed women as sickroom helps, initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, is now in full working order at Plaistow.

Already the scheme is described as a great success by the district nurses under whom the women are trained, by the patients, and by the sickroom helps themselves. Exactly why they think so is understood best by a visit to the homes where sickroom helps are at work.

They are in four districts—Plaistow, West Ham, East Ham, and the Docks—for the Plaistow Maternity, Charity and District Nurses' Home, under which the women are being trained, has branches in all these parts, and the helps have been sent where they are most needed.

Down by the docks are two old-age pensioners, living together. The old woman is ill, but not so ill that the old man cannot look after her with the aid of the visiting district nurse during the week. On Saturday, however, the sickroom help comes, and cleans and washes for the old pair.

On other days the help visits other homes which do not need a permanent sickroom help.

Mother of Six Ill.

In West Ham is a young mother paralysed in the head and back, with six children. She has been in the infirmary for months, but her husband wanted her home. She is able to sew, but that is all she can do for the family, and the eldest child is only twelve. Because she kept her at home from school the education authorities were worrying. Then the sickroom help arrived, and the child is back at school, the poor, helpless mother is cared for, and the husband is happy.

In an East Ham home the patient originally was the husband, who was suffering from pneumonia. The sickroom help was sent in to assist the wife because she could not give constant attention to the sick man and look after the children and the home also. The husband died, the wife fell ill, and the help is still fully engaged.

A poor woman suffering from gastritis and with her mind a little affected is one of the patients at Plaistow. The difficulty is to keep her in bed, and to see that she does not eat solid food. So long as the help is in the house she is content to lie still; formerly she would slip out into the yard, she would bake a cake and eat it, or start to turn out a room.

Duties of the Help.

The sickroom help is a kind little widow with a child of seven to keep, and she likes looking after sick people. Before the husband goes in the morning he leaves some money on the mantelpiece, and she buys what is wanted in the house, and leaves an account for him to see when he returns at night.

She keeps the house clean, and does the washing and cooks dinner for the boy who comes home from school. Exactly what they would do without her is difficult to imagine.

In every case the nurses are relieved to have this help, for they know that the patient will get regular food and medicine, the home will be kept clean, and the patient will not be in a constant state of worry.

The sickroom help does not stay longer than a fortnight in the same house, for as her training only lasts for three months, as much experience as possible is given her.

"Household Hints" Class.

Every Friday all the women in training attend a lecture at the Nurses' Home on what the matron calls "Household Hints." Advice is given on such matters as how to manage a family, how to lay out money, how to make food go farthest, on ventilating the house, keeping a sanitary dustbin, and simple hygiene generally.

The women are very eager to learn, and they bring their own difficulties to the teacher. "I've heard consumption is catching," said one who is help to a patient with phthisis. "What do I do to prevent it spreading?"

A card of simple instructions is to be drawn up which the women may carry with them. They are, of course, visited in their patients' homes by the superintendent, who directs the practical part of the training.

Jumble Sale Agency.

A Jumble Sale Agency has been opened with the object of helping the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It appeals for articles of every kind and variety—personal belongings, trinkets, household effects, clothing which has been discarded. Everything sent to the jumble sale will be sorted and classified before sold, and the best prices obtained.

The agency also appeals to wholesale and retail firms and manufacturers to send everything that can be spared out of old stock and samples.

All gifts, which will be most thankfully received, should be sent as soon as possible to the Hon. Secretary, the Jumble Sale Agency, 39a, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C., when a Royal acknowledgment will be sent from Buckingham Palace.

The Lady, November 19th. 1914.

652.

652/80

A VISIT TO ONE OF THE QUEEN'S WORKROOMS.

SINCE those momentous days in early August when the war-cloud burst so suddenly, "aid" societies have become almost as numerous as autumn leaves in Vallombrosa. Most of them were organised so rapidly that they seemed to anticipate—indeed, almost create—the need they were meant to alleviate. But the experienced social workers who were pulling the strings knew quite well what they were about. So many members of the community live on the narrow line that divides poverty from actual want that any increase of unemployment is necessarily viewed with alarm. Comparatively slight distress crystallises with appalling rapidity into a problem of Gargantuan proportions if not promptly tackled.

Luckily, the great national crisis found us furnished with great national reserves, not only of fighting men, but of home forces eager to help and serve. Skilled knowledge, organising ability, time, strength, devotion, and money are being poured out like water for the common weal.

And in no direction are these qualities being used to better purpose than by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Immediately after the outbreak of hostilities the question of unemployment amongst women became urgent, and Queen Mary, acting on the wise principle that work is better than charity, invited some of the best-known social workers and experienced women organisers in the country to help her to bring relief and succour to those in distress. No wonder the efforts of the Central Committee have been crowned with success! Lady Crewe (chairman), Miss Mary Macarthur (hon. sec.), Mrs. H. J. Tennant (hon. treasurer), Lady Askwith, Miss Margaret Bondfield, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, Miss Susan Lawrence, L.C.C., Miss Violet Markham, Miss Lily Montagu, and Dr. Marion Phillips are names to conjure with in matters of this kind.

It was a happy and appropriate thought on the part of the Committee to establish the first experimental relief workrooms in Stepney and Bethnal Green, for these two districts boast between them the biggest infant population in London, and the work that is being done in the workrooms circles round babies and their needs in the most wholehearted fashion.

"We have women of all trades here," said the courteous voluntary supervisor of the Stepney Relief Centre when I had the privilege of going over it the other day. "French polishers, box-makers, charwomen, kitchen hands. dressmakers, typists, factory hands, waitresses, and shop assistants are all represented among the two hundred odd workers we are employing. The war has made no distinction of persons, but unemployment seems to be more widespread amongst women than men so far. No one is eligible for employment under schemes approved by the Central Committee who has not been genuinely thrown out of work by the war, but from the large number who have already been helped both in London and in the provinces, you may gain some idea of the extent of the need for assistance. All those who are given relief work are required to register their names at the local Labour Exchanges every week, and accept any suitable employment that turns up. There are always numbers waiting to come in, and it would obviously be unfair to provide some with permanent work at the expense of those needing relief."

I asked a question about the rate of payment.

"We pay threepence an hour, a rate for relief work that has been approved by the National Federation of Women Workers, and the maximum time of employment is forty hours a week, so that a sum of ten shillings may be earned. Many of the women can, of course, earn considerably more than that when they are employed in their own trade. But we only set out to provide relief work, not to give settled employment."

I was shown rows of quiet workers sitting round the long tables. The premises in Cannon Street Road previously occupied by the Raines' Foundation School for Girls have been generously placed at the Central Committee's disposal for the Stepney Centre. They are cheerful, airy, well-lighted rooms, with fresh-looking green-washed walls. Two big fires spread a comforting warmth through the sewing-room. Women and girls of all ages from sixteen to seventy were there. Crooked, stiff fingers, bearing marks of years of hard toil, were slowly manipulating soft white wool and shining knitting-needles. Tired, worn faces bent over seams and hems of flannel and cambric.

In order not to interfere with established trades, none of the articles made in the Queen's Fund Workshops is sold. They are distributed through the local representative committees and other approved agencies, such as maternity charities, to women who have no purchasing power. Grants of maternity outfits and cradles are also made to lying-in hospitals, and children's garments are given to necessitous pupils of the elementary schools.

The maternity outfits that I saw being made were delightful. Little knitted belts, hoods, and jackets of a Spartan simplicity, flannels and monthly gowns cut on the most sensible and hygienic lines, fastening down the front so as to avoid all unnecessary movements when dressing the little helpless wearer, devoid of all superfluous length and fussiness, but perfectly comfortable and cosy. The sight of one of these outfits would be a valuable education to many young mothers of the well-to-do classes, for the fetish of superfluous ornamentation is still worshipped by some who should know better.

transformed into articles as far removed from their original form as are the poles from each other. Stocking-tops masqueraded as fascinating children's caps; old coats were turned into warm little corset bodices; discarded felt hats furnished slippers with substantial soles.

"Not an inch of material is wasted," boasted the person responsible for these amazing transformations as she showed me dozens of pairs of cosy cloth, flannel, and felt slippers of various sizes. They are to be distributed to the schools for the children to wear on wet days, a sensible and protective gift that will ward off hundreds of bad colds, and possibly worse ills. "All the pieces that are too small to be used as bodices or frocks or bonnets are utilised for these. The small sizes can be cut out of a few inches of material."

I could not help reflecting that it is an ill wind that blows nobody good. The children of the poor are certainly going to have comforts this winter that they have probably never had before. Perhaps the appalling waste of life across the Channel is sub-consciously impressing us to harvest our most precious—and, alas! often pitifully wasted—national asset.

The cradle-making department was the next to be visited, and proved the most fascinating of all. Women were vigorously pulling out nails from a number of banana crates, and then rubbing the rough laths with sandpaper to a satinlike smoothness. Other workers were busy sewing covers for the crates of unbleached calico, and finishing off with a border of fancy stitches in blue and red cotton. Mattresses filled with chopped chaff and pillows stuffed with the flannel cuttings from the sewing-rooms, two blankets fashioned from travellers' samples of thick "woollies," a couple of pillow-cases, and an outer cover of calico decorated with the coloured stitching completed the outfit of a cot as comfortable and pretty as it was simple and hygienic. The crates, I was told, were bought for a few pence from the docks, and the whole cradle could be made for eighteenpence or thereabouts. Fifteen hundred of them are in hand, and are to be given, when completed, to poor mothers in the neighbourhood who cannot afford to buy them. Perhaps I ought to mention that the wise precaution will be taken of stamping all these gifts so that they can be recognised everywhere as having been given through the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

A substantial and well-cooked dinner and tea are provided for the workers on the premises at the low price of threepence. The dining-room is a cheery one, and the tables, covered with white American cloth and decorated with flowers, looked clean and inviting. On the day of my visit the dinner consisted of fresh herrings, potatoes, bread, and cottage pudding. For tea a large slice of bread-and-butter or bread-and-jam is provided. Roast mutton or beef, with vegetables, and rice pudding or apple-tart are served twice a week, and soup or fish and pudding on the remaining days.

"We are taking full advantage of the opportunity these meals give us to train some of the workers in cooking and domestic economy," said my guide. "A skilled teacher of cookery is in charge of the kitchen, and gives simple talks once or twice a week on cooking and food values, with practical illustrations. Any of the women who wish can attend them. We are arranging, too, to let them do the marketing at the neighbouring shops and stalls. All the local people have given us generous gifts of crockery and furniture and cooking utensils, and we have also had invaluable help from the Toynbee Hall authorities."

The organisation of these workrooms by no means represents the whole of the measures set afoot by the Central Committee. Many schemes have been started which will have far-reaching and beneficial results, and in some cases open up new and lucrative trades for women. Sick-room and domestic helps are being trained by their agency in maternity and district nurses' homes to take charge of households and do simple nursing during the temporary indisposition of the housewife.

In the West of England a "back to the land" project is attracting considerable interest and support, and also giving employment to a number of displaced workers. A fruit-preserving and vegetable-drying centre has been formed, at which fruit is canned and bottled, and vegetables, such as potatoes, onions, carrots, and so on, dried and preserved. As the Navy, the Army, the merchant service, and many restaurants are considerable users of dried vegetables, there is every opportunity for building up a permanent industry.

The establishment of domestic economy training centres for working women is again one of the most useful schemes put into operation by the Queen's Fund. A twelve-weeks' course of lessons in cookery, washing, and needlework is to be given at the various centres by teachers supplied by the London County Council. Courses have already been started at the Bethnal Green, Islington, and Finsbury Centres, and out-of-work women are being trained at each. The cookery taught is such as will be suitable and possible to carry out in the pupils' own homes, and lessons in needlework are mostly confined to making over second-hand garments and cutting down clothes for children.

Naturally, all these schemes call for generous support of both service and money if they are to be carried through successfully. A good deal has been forthcoming, but the Central Committee has an Oliver Twist-like appetite for more. Over eighty thousand pounds has been subscribed, and premises in Park Street, Piccadilly, Grosvenor Place, and other convenient centres placed at the committee's disposal for depots and offices, and they hum all day with activity.

This passion for service is the silver lining to the been crowned with success! Lady Crewe (chairman), Miss Mary Macarthur (hon. sec.), Mrs. H. J. Tennant (hon. treasurer), Lady Askwith, Miss Margaret Bondfield, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, Miss Susan Lawrence, L.C.C., Miss Violet Markham, Miss Lily Montagu, and Dr. Marion Phillips are names to conjure with in matters of this kind.

It was a happy and appropriate thought on the part of the Committee to establish the first experimental relief workrooms in Stepney and Bethnal Green, for these two districts boast between them the biggest infant population in London, and the work that is being done in the workrooms circles round babies and their needs in the most wholehearted fashion.

"We have women of all trades here," said the courteous voluntary supervisor of the Stepney Relief Centre when I had the privilege of going over it the other day. "French polishers, box-makers, charwomen, kitchen hands, dressmakers, typists, factory hands, waitresses, and shop assistants are all represented among the two hundred odd workers we are employing. The war has made no distinction of persons, but unemployment seems to be more widespread amongst women than men so far. No one is eligible for employment under schemes approved by the Central Committee who has not been genuinely thrown out of work by the war, but from the large number who have already been helped both in London and in the provinces, you may gain some idea of the extent of the need for assistance. All those who are given relief work are required to register their names at the local Labour Exchanges every week, and accept any suitable employment that turns up. There are always numbers waiting to come in, and it would obviously be unfair to provide some with permanent work at the expense of those needing relief."

I asked a question about the rate of payment.

"We pay threepence an hour, a rate for relief work that has been approved by the National Federation of Women Workers, and the maximum time of employment is forty hours a week, so that a sum of ten shillings may be earned. Many of the women can, of course, earn considerably more than that when they are employed in their own trade. But we only set out to provide relief work, not to give settled employment."

I was shown rows of quiet workers sitting round the long tables. The premises in Cannon Street Road previously occupied by the Raines' Foundation School for Girls have been generously placed at the Central Committee's disposal for the Stepney Centre. They are cheerful, airy, well-lighted rooms, with fresh-looking green-washed walls. Two big fires spread a comforting warmth through the sewing-room. Women and girls of all ages from sixteen to seventy were there. Crooked, stiff fingers, bearing marks of years of hard toil, were slowly manipulating soft white wool and shining knitting-needles. Tired, worn faces bent over seams and hems of flannel and cambric.

In order not to interfere with established trades, none of the articles made in the Queen's Fund Workshops is sold. They are distributed through the local representative committees and other approved agencies, such as maternity charities, to women who have no purchasing power. Grants of maternity outfits and cradles are also made to lying-in hospitals, and children's garments are given to necessitous pupils of the elementary schools.

The maternity outfits that I saw being made were delightful. Little knitted belts, hoods, and jackets of a Spartan simplicity, flannels and monthly gowns cut on the most sensible and hygienic lines, fastening down the front so as to avoid all unnecessary movements when dressing the little helpless wearer, devoid of all superfluous length and fussiness, but perfectly comfortable and cosy. The sight of one of these outfits would be a valuable education to many young mothers of the well-to-do classes, for the fetish of superfluous ornamentation is still worshipped by some who should know better.

I thought of that ancient cry "new lamps for old" in the "second-hand" room, to which I went next. There old garments are not only turned into new, but, under the supervision of the ingenious forewoman, pillow-cases, and an outer cover of calico decorated with the coloured stitching completed the outfit of a cot as comfortable and pretty as it was simple and hygienic. The crates, I was told, were bought for a few pence from the docks, and the whole cradle could be made for eighteenpence or thereabouts. Fifteen hundred of them are in hand, and are to be given, when completed, to poor mothers in the neighbourhood who cannot afford to buy them. Perhaps I ought to mention that the wise precaution will be taken of stamping all these gifts so that they can be recognised everywhere as having been given through the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

A substantial and well-cooked dinner and tea are provided for the workers on the premises at the low price of threepence. The dining-room is a cheery one, and the tables, covered with white American cloth and decorated with flowers, looked clean and inviting. On the day of my visit the dinner consisted of fresh herrings, potatoes, bread, and cottage pudding. For tea a large slice of bread-and-butter or bread-and-jam is provided. Roast mutton or beef, with vegetables, and rice pudding or apple-tart are served twice a week, and soup or fish and pudding on the remaining days.

"We are taking full advantage of the opportunity these meals give us to train some of the workers in cooking and domestic economy," said my guide. "A skilled teacher of cookery is in charge of the kitchen, and gives simple talks once or twice a week on cooking and food values, with practical illustrations. Any of the women who wish can attend them. We are arranging, too, to let them do the marketing at the neighbouring shops and stalls. All the local people have given us generous gifts of crockery and furniture and cooking utensils, and we have also had invaluable help from the Toynbee Hall authorities."

The organisation of these workrooms by no means represents the whole of the measures set afoot by the Central Committee. Many schemes have been started which will have far-reaching and beneficial results, and in some cases open up new and lucrative trades for women. Sick-room and domestic helps are being trained by their agency in maternity and district nurses' homes to take charge of households and do simple nursing during the temporary indisposition of the housewife.

In the West of England a "back to the land" project is attracting considerable interest and support, and also giving employment to a number of displaced workers. A fruit-preserving and vegetable-drying centre has been formed, at which fruit is canned and bottled, and vegetables, such as potatoes, onions, carrots, and so on, dried and preserved. As the Navy, the Army, the merchant service, and many restaurants are considerable users of dried vegetables, there is every opportunity for building up a permanent industry.

The establishment of domestic economy training centres for working women is again one of the most useful schemes put into operation by the Queen's Fund. A twelve-weeks' course of lessons in cookery, washing, and needlework is to be given at the various centres by teachers supplied by the London County Council. Courses have already been started at the Bethnal Green, Islington, and Finsbury Centres, and out-of-work women are being trained at each. The cookery taught is such as will be suitable and possible to carry out in the pupils' own homes, and lessons in needlework are mostly confined to making over second-hand garments and cutting down clothes for children.

Naturally, all these schemes call for generous support of both service and money if they are to be carried through successfully. A good deal has been forthcoming, but the Central Committee has an Oliver Twist-like appetite for more. Over eighty thousand pounds has been subscribed, and premises in Park Street, Piccadilly, Grosvenor Place, and other convenient centres placed at the committee's disposal for depôts and offices, and they hum all day with activity.

This passion for service is the silver lining to the black cloud that overshadows us. It is shared alike by the rich and leisured woman and the sweated worker, the old-age pensioner and the millionaire. But a common sorrow is the real alchemist. It transmutes the base alloy of selfishness into the gold of sacrifice more surely and quickly than any scientific process devised by the wit of man.

MARION HOLMES.

Evening Standard, Nov: 19th. 1914.

Sheffield Daily Telegraph. Nov: 19th. 1914.

652/21 (052.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

Maintenance and Training for Unemployed Girls at Deptford.

COOKERY AND HOME NURSING.

An experimental scheme for training unemployed girls under seventeen years of age has been started at Deptford with the approval of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Large numbers of girls between fourteen and seventeen years usually employed in factories, in dressmaking, and in daily service at Deptford, have been thrown out of work through the war.

Keeping a Family.

In one instance, a girl of fifteen, who had worked in a biscuit factory, and a sister, who is a typist, have been keeping the family going, the father being out of work. In another, a girl is living with her grandmother, and the old age pension is all they had.

A maintenance allowance of 4s. a week for girls from fourteen to sixteen years, and 1s. a day for girls of sixteen is, therefore, to be given to those in training in addition to meals. Fifteen girls were at work yesterday in a large schoolroom, which has been lent by the Gifford-street Ragged School, and the numbers are gradually to be increased to sixty.

During the mornings they are taught to mend their own clothes, which they bring with them, to make underclothing, and rag dolls, a superintendent being provided to teach them. In the afternoons, on five days a week, teachers are supplied by the London County Council, and classes given in cookery, dress-cutting and making, home-nursing, singing, and drilling.

L.C.C. Classes.

The Council has given the use of its own cookery centre for the cookery lessons, and is lending the outfit for the home-nursing. In the English class the girls are to read "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and they are being provided with penny copies. Other suitable books with a sufficient number of copies would be welcome presents. The singing lessons are to be devoted to the old English songs.

At the first dress-cutting lesson, the girls drew to measure and cut patterns for their own blouses. The lessons are intended to be useful not only in their home life, but to those girls who are already in the dressmaking trade. Similarly, the girls, who are usually in service, are learning valuable lessons at the cookery class.

The girls are given dinner every day in addition to the weekly wage, a typical meal consisting of roast mutton, vegetables, and potatoes. Tea, which they make themselves, is also provided, with biscuits.

Employment.

Anxious that young girls of sixteen and under who have lost their employment in consequence of the war should be provided with suitable occupation and maintenance, the Central Committee on Women's Employment has prepared a scheme for dealing with this question, and which has received the approval of the National Relief Fund. The essential feature of the scheme is that the education authority shall provide special classes suitable for the girls, and that the local relief committees should send girls to school instead of giving them employment in workrooms. The London County Council has already opened classes at the Borough Polytechnic. Girls attending school will be paid 4s. a week each.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

[Photo. and block: Le

One of the workrooms for women at Abbeyfield Park, just opened to give employment to women out of work owing t war. See article in our ladies' column.

Sheffield Daily Telegraph, Nov: 19th. 1914.

FOR OUR LADY READERS.

WORK-ROOMS FOR WOMEN.

GOOD SCHEME FOR MEETING UNEMPLOYMENT.

By invitation of one of the members of the committee, we paid a visit yesterday to the work-rooms for women at Abbeyfield House. The Town Council have granted the house for the purpose and put it in order, and the Tramways voted £150 for wages, while all the other expenses come out of the Lord Mayor's Relief Fund. The arrangements are under the excellent management of a sub-committee appointed jointly by the Distress Committee and the Civic Aid Committee.

This sub-committee has arranged for a staff, including a manageress, an assistant manageress, and a lady who is giving voluntary services as housekeeper and is in charge of a cook. The cook is one of the women who applied for relief and is being trained in cookery.

Abbeyfield lends itself admirably for its present use. A couple of excellent rooms, with large windows, have been turned into work-rooms, while another equally well-lighted apartment is used for cutting-out and machining.

So far all the work done has been for the Civic Aid Committee, and includes the altering and renovating of garments, and the making of new clothes. A further development is to be the making of baby clothes for distribution by the Sanitary Inspectors and the Motherhood League.

Although the work-rooms have only been in existence a week, there are already 50 names on the books. All applications for work must be made through the Labour Exchange, and those applicants who are accepted are obliged to keep their names on the register at the Labour Exchange. The work-rooms open at nine and close at five. Some of the women go in at 8.30 to do the cleaning and sweeping. Among those employed are dressmakers, tailoresses, charwomen, office cleaners, and a number of laundry workers. Many, it is found, know practically nothing about mending, and require a good deal of teaching, for which the committee is dependent on lady visitors. One of the great advantages of this work-room scheme is the opportunity it affords of instructing the women in such household arts. Members of the Guild of Helpers have kindly promised to read aloud to the workers.

These workrooms have been started only for women who are out of work owing to the war, and it is intended that every case shall be carefully investigated. The committee will take orders for work, provided that these would not otherwise have gone through some ordinary commercial channel, and no work will be done under regulation prices.

An excellent part of the scheme is the twopenny dinner which is laid on two long tables in the big kitchen. We found a couple of big pancheons filled with the most savoury-looking haricot and onion stew, being kept hot in front of a red-hot fire, while the opening of the oven door revealed an array of beautifully-made ginger puddings.

"Some of the women," said the lady in charge, "look much better since they came. One poor soul said she had only had 6d. a week since the war began." Another woman had related how her husband, in delicate health, was a tailor, and had been getting practically no work, and her boy also was delicate. To such cases these workrooms will be a veritable boon.

Glasgow Herald, Nov: 18th. 1914.

EMPLOYMENT OF YOUNG GIRLS.

Anxious that young girls of 16 and under who have lost their employment in consequence of the war should be provided with suitable occupation and maintenance, the Central Committee on Women's Employment has prepared a scheme for dealing with this question which has received the approval of the National Relief Fund. The essential feature of the scheme is that the education authority shall provide special classes suitable for the girls, and that the local relief committees should send girls to school instead of giving them employment in workrooms. The London County Council has already opened classes at the Borough Polytechnic. Girls attending school will be paid 4s a week each.

652.

652/28

The New Statesman, November 21st. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORKROOMS

To the Editor of THE NEW STATESMAN.

SIR,—I am interested to read your statement that the money paid to women in the Queen's Workrooms is "not wages at all," but maintenance. I have never before heard of maintenance paid per hour—not of life but of work. I understand from a woman who works at one of these workrooms that they are being told not to regard the employment as permanent, but to look out for regular work. This is perfectly consistent with the "training" theory, but as they are not paid during the hours they would have to take off, in order to look for a permanent job, the "maintenance" theory rather falls through. I understand that 10s. per week is the maximum paid to any worker. I do not wish to enter into the vexed question as to whether this is adequate, but no one, as far as I am aware, has contended that it is an extravagant estimate for a woman's food, fuel, light, and rent. Yet the framers of this "training and maintenance" scheme apparently assume that a woman in receipt of 10s. a week can afford to be fined 3d. an hour (for that is what it comes to on the "10s. maintenance" assumption) for every hour she fails to put in at workrooms where she is bidden to "look for regular work." Anyone who supposes that a woman can "look for regular work" before 9 a.m. or after 5 p.m. is unacquainted with the conditions of the women's labour market.

The obvious argument for this maintenance-per-hour-worked is that it ensures attendance. But the same object could be secured by making the "maintenance" conditional upon the women availing themselves of the "training," so that it was automatically forfeited by any woman who missed more than, say, two hours in a week without adequate reason. Time could then be given, after the worker had reported herself at the workroom, to go after any definite prospective job.

Until some such arrangement exists it is hard to see how THE NEW STATESMAN can defend any system of payment per hour of work as one of "training and maintenance."

Personally, from the experience of the workrooms in East London, I should say that neither training nor maintenance is being afforded at present.—Yours, etc.,

Hampstead. G. D. S.

To the Editor of THE NEW STATESMAN.

SIR,—The provision of "maintenance under training" has got a step further than was indicated in your notes last week.

Miss E. Morton, the local secretary for Deptford of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, has obtained premises at Giffen Street, Deptford, and has started a workroom for unemployed girls under seventeen, with grants of four and five shillings weekly, according to age, and mid-day dinners and tea free.

The Higher Education Sub-Committee of the L.C.C. has agreed to provide teachers for fifteen hours' instruction in dressmaking, cookery, physical exercises, singing, home nursing, and English, and has made arrangements for the classes to start this week.

The cost of the instructors is to be defrayed by the Council, and the maintenance of the girls is, I believe, for the moment, defrayed out of funds provided by the City Corporation, but will later be defrayed in the ordinary way out of the Queen's Fund.—Yours, etc.,

R. C. PHILLIMORE.

Battler's Green, Herts.
November 17th.

Daily Telegraph, Nov. 21th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN

Distress among London dressmakers on account of the war still continues, in spite of the fact that the Central Committee on Women's Employment is allocating a contract for 10,000 shirts per week among 110 workshops. The work applied for by these shops exceeded 20,000 shirts per week. In addition, 13,000 belts per week for the French troops are given out to be made by the Contracts Department of the committee.

From information in possession of the committee it is found that close upon 1,000 workshops are in the deepest distress. It is the first-class hand workers—the best kind of Court dressmakers—who are feeling the effects of the war most keenly.

Milliners are suffering similarly, also some good-class furriers, and a number of people in small trades such as certain kinds of lace-making and lamp shade making.

The total of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is now £91,580.

Sunday School Chronicle, November 26th. 1914.

Paid to Learn.

One of the problems of the war is to provide suitable employment for young girls thrown out of work. The Central Committee on Women's Employment have boldly recognised the difficulty by inviting the L.C.C. to open continuation classes for these girls, and by offering the latter 4s. a week for attending them. The plan is not without ingenuity and humour, but it is clearly preferable to doles, when no work can be provided. We have long had in education the class that is paid to teach. This new war scheme has brought us in sight of the vaster class that, if education is to justify its promise, will have to be paid to learn.

The Daily Telegraph, Nov. 26th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

EMPLOYMENT SCHEMES.

It is reported by Miss Mary Macarthur, hon. secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, that, while unemployment amongst women is more serious than among men, it is in the present month less acute than it was in August and September. Unfortunately, there is little reason to doubt that unemployment will be much greater later on, and it is reassuring to know that machinery is now available to cope with the increasing distress.

Seven experimental work-rooms have been opened in London and four domestic economy experimental training schemes. These provide employment for about 786 women. Sixteen London boroughs are carrying out similar schemes, and have all received grants from the Queen's Fund. The total number of women estimated for in the applications for the grants amounts to about 1,500. In addition, about 1,000 women are being employed in the Central Unemployed Body's work-rooms on lines approved by the Central Committee.

Outside London grants have been made for work-rooms in seventeen towns, and schemes have been approved for those of another twelve. Plans are also in progress for giving employment in various other boroughs, urban districts, and counties. Much is being done by the committee in the way of steadying trade in its regular channels. About 130 firms, which would otherwise have been obliged to reduce their staffs or shut down altogether, have been supplied with contract work. At the present time 1,200 women are being employed by this means.

On Nov. 28 and Dec. 3 Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay will give special matinées of old songs and ballads at the Little Theatre in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

With yesterday's subscriptions, which included £81 collected by Lady Rothschild, the total of the Fund is now £92,208.

Common Cause, Nov. 27th. 1914.

PROFESSIONALS AND VOLUNTEERS.

We are informed by Mrs. Olive MacLehose that she has received a categorical denial from Lady Roxburgh and Miss Mary Macarthur to the charge brought against the Central Committee on Women's Employment of having dismissed paid workers for volunteers. We are glad to know that it is not true. The charge was made in a signed letter, published in a prominent position in The Times. As no contradiction was made to this very conspicuous assertion, we concluded, after waiting some days, that none was forthcoming. We cannot help feeling that it would have been wise to confute the charge where it was originally made.

Evening Standard & St James's Gazette, November 27th. 1914.

652.
Blackburn Weekly Telegraph
Nov. 28th. 1914

THE QUEEN'S FUND

OFFER WHICH AUSTRALIA HAS MADE TO HER MAJESTY.

GIRLS' CONFERENCE.

Australia has offered to help the Queen in finding work for her unemployed women.

Four States—New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and Western Australia—have promised to find employment as home helps and domestic servants, not only for girls trained in this work, but for typists, dressmakers, and other business girls. New South Wales also invites young widows with not more than two children.

To Australia for £1.

The girls will be taken to Australia for £1 down, the rest of the greatly reduced passage to be paid in monthly instalments after arrival. This would be £2 in the case of three States and £4 for those going to New South Wales. The only condition is that the girls remain in domestic work for one year.

The Queen has been greatly interested in this offer, herself appointing a sub-committee of the Queen Mary's Work for Women Collecting Committee to see what advantage could be taken of it.

The following conditions laid down by the Central Committee on Women's Employment will apply:—

That in no case should the refusal to emigrate affect the individual's right to receive relief of any other kind.

That for women and girls who agree to go to Australia, arrangements should be made in Australia at convenient centres for homes to which the girls might go when out of employment. This is of the utmost importance in order that the girls may not from lack of a home be forced to stay in any undesirable situation.

That all women and girls should be employed at not less than the rates of pay current in the district to which they go.

A Grant of £1100.

The Central Committee have obtained a grant of £1100 from the Queen's Fund, which will pay the registration fee of £1 for 550 girls, and give each one £1 in cash on landing. In addition, complete outfits are to be provided also for the emigrants. These are being made in the women's workrooms or given out to firms which need work for their women employees. They consist of:—

Four sets of underclothing, two print dresses, two overalls, four aprons, one coat and skirt, one afternoon dress, one shirt blouse, one ulster, three pairs stockings, six handkerchiefs, one pair boots, one pair house shoes, one rough towel, two face towels, brush and comb, tooth brush, and trunk, etc.

Since one advertisement for a typist in the City the other day brought 600 replies in twenty-four hours, the opportunity is a great one for clerical workers who are not yet very expert. Highly trained girls will naturally not wish to throw away the time already spent in education.

Whole parties of girls from offices might go together. Friends or sisters would be placed close to one another, and in six months' time the privilege of nominating relatives for assisted passages is given by Australia.

18s. to 20s. per Week.

The girls emigrating would be paid a minimum wage of 8s. to 10s. per week, with board and lodging, if untrained, and as much as 18s. to 20s. if a competent household worker. The chances in life are so much greater in Australia than they can be here. With only a population of five millions, in comparison to the seven millions of London alone, it is possible for every one to have a "place in the sun." The climate, too, and the temperament of the people make life infinitely brighter and happier.

Thirty girls have already made up their minds to go, and as soon as ships can be found to take them, they will sail. A parlour maid and two sisters are going together, two friends are off to Western Australia, where they have other friends, and a woman who has been in bookbinding for fourteen years has made application to be sent with a friend.

How to Apply.

Girls who want to go should apply to the British Women's Emigration Association (Imperial Institute), who, with the Central Unemployment Body, is making the selection. The age is fixed at eighteen to thirty-five by three States, and seventeen to thirty-five by Queensland. For girls who have not been in domestic service before, New South Wales makes an age limit of twenty-four and Victoria of twenty-one.

Two good references are required as to character, health, and capability for domestic service. A medical certificate is necessary, and the parents' consent if the girls are under twenty-one years.

Those emigrating are asked if they have any preference as to the State to which they should be sent, and all are accompanied by a matron, who takes care of them on the voyage.

On arrival, they are welcomed and given twenty-four hours' free board and lodging in order to be thoroughly rested. Then the prospective employers arrive. No definite commitments are made beforehand, so that the girl can choose her future home just as she does in England.

A tea party is being arranged by the council of the British Women's Emigration Association for typists, dressmakers, and other business girls at the Imperial Institute on Saturday, November 28, so that the offer to the Queen may be discussed.

All communications concerning the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Daily Citizen, Nov. 26th. 1914.

WOMEN'S WORK IN WAR-TIME.

"La Belle Alliance" is the title of a unique little enterprise, which has been launched by a few women workers—painters, writers, actresses, and the like, who have been "pushed by the war into Poverty Street," as their secretary explained to a representative of The Daily Citizen yesterday.

The idea is to design and make simple and picturesque negligées, gay little breakfast coats, evening wraps, and blouses in peasant fashion for work-a-day occasions.

The members of the alliance have been at work for six weeks, and the dainty display yesterday testified to their knowledge of how to produce pretty effects by simple means.

"La Belle Alliance," which is situated at 2, Boyle-street, Savile-row, claims that it does not compete with any of the established women's workrooms.

Sixty-three unemployed girl clerks who had been selected by the Central Committee on Women's Employment as candidates for fifty scholarships offered by Clark's College sat for an examination on Saturday. Competition was ruled out, it being understood that all the girls would be taken for training if their papers proved them to be teachable. Thousands of clever girls "plucked" at examinations have only failed because the test happened to be competitive. Not all girls, or boys either, for that matter, can do themselves justice in examinations of that character, and the abler student is frequently "left." "It's what I've longed for ever since I left school," one pale-faced girl of seventeen said. Another was to have been sent to L.C.C. classes by her brother, who reached his own position in this way. "But now," she said, "he's got to make up to Mother for the loss of my earnings."

The girls start work on Monday, November 30. They are to receive 10s maintenance allowance from the National Relief Fund, with up to 4s expenses if necessary. They came from all parts of London, but it has been arranged that they shall receive training at local branches of the college if they wish. The examination, says the "Evening Standard," consisted of dictation and arithmetic, but it was possible to tell from the preliminary forms the girls filled up the kind of education they had received. A girl of eighteen wrote nearly every word with capital letters, and another who could do 100 words a minute shorthand wrote like a child of seven. Spelling, too, seemed weak. To get over the difficulty of writing "marchioness" one girl abbreviated to "mar."

Miss Mary R. Macarthur, whom many Blackburn women know, is the hon. secretary of this committee, and her office is at 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. There are local representative committees in several provincial towns.

The Observer, November 29th.

HELPING THE DRESSMAKERS.

A meeting of the best-class dressmakers who have been worst hit by the war was held yesterday at the headquarters of the Central Committee on Women's Employment to discuss the possibility of taking up temporarily different work.

Mr. J. J. Mallon spoke of the difficulty of finding suitable employment for those who have been accustomed to doing fine handwork and have no machinery to undertake articles of clothing which can be turned out quickly in large quantities, and for which the only demand is, at present.

With regard to the making of socks, however, it is thought that something might be done. The War Office is understood to require large quantities beyond the ordinary resources of the hosiery trade, and the committee proposes to tender to supply these and to allocate the work of making them among firms short of employment who would be willing to undertake the work.

652/23

The Daily News & Leader,
November 28th. 1914.

652/24 652.

"Back to the Land." At Radlett, Herts, 28 factory girls are being trained in farm work. They are cultivating twenty acres of land under the direction of the Central Committee on Women's Unemployment, and instruction in market gardening is being given by two ladies. The girls are paid a wage of 12s. per week.

Diamond Fields Advertiser,
November 28th. 1914.

AND SOME OTHER LADIES.

But feminine activity, like feminine sorrow and suffering, is not confined to the Royal House. Among the many excellent schemes which have arisen from the war is one engendered by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. It is a "Back to the land" movement, for providing work for the numerous East London factory girls who have been thrown into unemployment, and consequent destitution, owing to the closing down of works during the war. But the scheme has an additional value besides the excellent one of staving off unemployment; it includes a very determined skirmish in the war against German trade. Upon the model farms that are being established, besides the normal employments of fruit, flower and vegetable growing, the industries of fruit pulping, vegetable drying, and bottling new unsweetened fruit preserves are being inculcated, all of them for the first time in this country, and all of them formerly centred in Germany.

This is indirect, but very real help. The most serious question here at home is unemployment at present, and especially in the case of women.

Upon women, too, so much of the state of mind of the nation depends, and the temper of the men who go out to keep the barbarian from the quiet English homes. In a letter recently issued by the wives of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishops of Rochester and Southwark, this is very fully and very beautifully remarked; it is addressed to the girls of England, and speaking of the soldiers and the effect upon them of the women's attitude, it says: "For the men and lads who are now leaving to take their part in it, it is a matter of life and death. For many of them it may mean death. Be very careful that, so far as you are concerned, no one of them shall carry away with him, as his last remembrance of the women and girls of England, anything but what is pure and gentle, and straight and true." Are not those last four adjectives unerringly chosen? They sum up all that has made the women of this country, maids, wives, or mothers, the keepers of the best ideals, and the most sacred beliefs of the British race.

Evening Standard, November 30th 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

NEW WORK TO ASSIST LONDON DRESSMAKERS.

KNITTING PLANT.

A meeting of the best-class dressmakers who have been most badly affected by the war was held yesterday at the headquarters of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. They came at the invitation of the committee to discuss the possibility of taking up temporarily a different class of work.

Mr. J. J. Mallon, on behalf of the committee, spoke of the difficulty of finding suitable employment for those who have been accustomed to doing fine hand-work, and have no machinery to undertake articles of clothing which can be turned out quickly in large quantities, and for which the only demand is at present.

The Making of Socks.

With regard to the making of socks, however, it is thought that something might be done. The War Office is understood to require large quantities beyond the ordinary resources of the hosiery trade, and the committee proposes to tender to supply these and to allocate the work of making them among firms short of employment who would be willing to undertake the work.

The difficulties of the dressmakers in going into a trade entirely strange to them were described by the speaker, who outlined a scheme by which, with the assistance of the committee, they might be overcome.

Thus, machines might be bought by the committee and hired to the firms undertaking the work.

For the training of the workers, a knitting firm has offered to lend two or three instructors, and the committee would engage a number in addition, who would go from workshop to workshop to give practical assistance to the employees.

The financial outcome of the undertaking would depend upon the price at which the contract could be obtained, but interesting figures were submitted to the meeting, and stood the strain of examination.

Important Details.

The meeting was undoubtedly interested. Questions flew at Mr. Mallon: "Would the committee purchase the raw material and sell it in smaller quantities?" "How much would the hire of the machines cost?" "Could someone try it first?" Finally the meeting spoke almost as one woman. "Tender by all means!"

The reason was clear. Said one speaker: "It's a matter of doing this or shutting down altogether for some of us." Said a second: "I've been losing £50 a month, and my workers have been with me for thirteen and fourteen years. If I could only pay their wages I should be satisfied."

"We've got to pay the rent, anyway," agreed another. "I have fifty workers, and I've been losing since June. If one got other work, it could be done at the same time. There wouldn't be much loss in letting machines stand idle at that price."

Further encouragement came to the enterprising dresmakers, for one of their number said that she had already tried the work, and calculated she could pay good wages to her staff and make a small profit. This, she said, was not affluence, but it would perhaps bridge the trying period until better days returned. The meeting heartily concurred.

Islington Gazette, Dec: 1st. 1914.

THE CANONBURY WORK ROOMS FOR WOMEN.

VISIT OF THE QUEEN

Her Majesty Commends the Effort.

Yesterday afternoon Her Majesty the Queen paid a private visit to the workrooms for women, established at the building once known as the Canonbury High School for Girls, Canonbury-place.

These workrooms have been established by the Unemployed Committee, which is a branch of the Executive Commitee entrusted with the administration of relief through the Queen's Work for Women Fund and the Prince of Wales' Fund in Islington.

Her Majesty saw in progress yesterday precisely the work which we have already described in detail, and expressed her great pleasure at the results achieved.

At half-past three o'clock, the Queen who was accompanied by Lady Bertha Dawkins, Mrs. Tennant, and Mr. Edward Wm. Wallington, C.V.O., C.M.G., was received at the entrance of the building by the Mayor and Mayoress of Islington (Mr. Geo. S. Elliott, J.P., and Mr. Elliott), Mrs. Abbott, chairman of the Ladies' Unemployment Committee; Mrs. Holman, secretary, and conducted to the committee-room.

The MAYOR then presented to Her Majesty the Mayoress, Ald. and Mrs. Saint, Ald. and Mrs. Manchester, Mrs. Councillor Fenny Marshall, Mrs. H. Trounce, Mr. G. C. E. Fletcher (Town Clerk) and Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Holman, Miss Michael, Mrs. McNair, Mrs. Jamieson, Mrs. Dolson, Miss Clarke, Miss Brown, and Miss Gill.

Her Majesty was then conducted through the building by the Mayor, Mayoress, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Holman, and other ladies of the committee.

All the workrooms were visited, Mrs. Abbott explaining that last week no fewer than 260 women and girls were engaged in executing needlework, in knitting, or in the training centre. This week there were 210 employed, and yesterday no fewer than 147 were provided with dinner on the premises. Dinner and tea are provided at a cost of threepence for the two meals, and, strange to relate, this branch of the work is self-supporting.

Her Majesty showed great interest in the workrooms and chatted freely with some of the girls and women employed. The Queen was particularly interested in the training scheme, fifty of the women now employed being included under this head.

The cookery, laundry, and needlework departments were also explained by Mrs. Abbott, who added that health lectures were being given to the women and girls.

Her Majesty commented favourably upon the garments, many of which were displayed for inspection in the several rooms. The Queen made many inquiries concerning the details of the work executed, and was particularly pleased with the comfortable looking cradles which, when unmasked, were found to be banana cases. The conversion of these apparently useless articles into useful furniture for the homes of the poor is not the least ingenious side of the Canonbury workrooms.

The Queen, seeing a number of quilts made by the women to fit the cots in 652 25 652.

Evening Standard, December 1st. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

HER MAJESTY VISITS THE WORK-ROOMS AND TALKS TO THE WORKERS.

QUILTS AND BANANA CRATES

The Queen's great interest in her "Work for Women" Fund was again made evident yesterday when her Majesty, attended by the Lady Bertha Dawkins and Mr. E. Wallington, visited three of the mayoral workrooms. These rooms are run on lines approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and with the aid of the Queen's Fund.

At St. Pancras Workrooms the Queen was received by Mrs. H. J. Tennant and Miss Mary R. MacArthur, on behalf of the committee, and by the Mayor and Town Clerk of the borough.

One hundred and fifty women were at work making clothes which will be given away to the very poor. Obviously, and as they confessed afterwards, they "found it very hard to go on with their work." But the Queen stopped every now and then to speak to a worker. Her Majesty told a girl who was embroidering a dress that it was good to train the eye, and a woman who was knitting was complimented on her speed.

Little Shoes Made from Silk Hats.

In the little shoes which had been made out of men's old silk hats the Queen took a particular interest, and she delighted everybody by signing her name in the visitors' book.

"It's like leaving us a bit of herself," remarked one worker to another.

At Islington, the domestic economy training scheme claimed the Queen's first attention. Her Majesty asked the young laundresses if they were washing flannels or linen, she inspected the kitchen, and watched a cutting-out lesson.

When the Queen saw the banana crate cradles, she inquired if the crates could still be obtained. "I remember that there was a danger of the supply running short, and that would have been a pity."

The knitted quilt seemed to her Majesty a splendid idea, "so light and warm." The Queen passed through eleven workrooms with Mrs. Abbott, the hon. manageress, seeing 207 workers busily engaged.

"They seem very keen," was her remark, "and the training is excellent."

Garments for Belgian Children.

At the Holborn workroom, her Majesty was shown piles of little garments made for the Belgian children. As in all the workrooms, the Queen turned first to the baby table. She inquired how many garments were included in the layette to be given away to the poor mothers, and she felt the garments to see if they were soft and warm.

The oldest woman in the workroom will never forget that the Queen inspected her work and asked her about her own trade. "To think that she should take an interest in us!" said the old woman.

If she had heard the Queen talking to the officials afterwards about the work, she would have been even more surprised. Her Majesty inquired about every detail and every class of worker. She remembered everything that had been done and was going to be done. The progress of the carpet factory which turned to spinning yarn when there was no longer employment for the women workers was discussed; inquiries were made as to what was being done for other factories, and her Majesty wanted to know precisely the kind of outfit which is to be made for the girls going to Australia, on the invitation sent to the Queen for them. Her Majesty said also that she had been watching the statistics of distress, and she was glad to see they were a little lower this month.

large quantities beyond the ordinary resources of the hosiery trade, and the committee proposes to tender to supply these and to allocate the work of making them among firms short of employment who would be willing to undertake the work.

The difficulties of the dressmakers in going into a trade entirely strange to them were described by the speaker, who outlined a scheme by which, with the assistance of the committee, they might be overcome.

Thus, machines might be bought by the committee and hired to the firms undertaking the work.

For the training of the workers, a knitting firm has offered to lend two or three instructors, and the committee would engage a number in addition, who would go from workshop to workshop to give practical assistance to the employees.

The financial outcome of the undertaking would depend upon the price at which the contract could be obtained, but interesting figures were submitted to the meeting, and stood the strain of examination.

Important Details.

The meeting was undoubtedly interested. Questions flew at Mr. Mallon: "Would the committee purchase the raw material and sell it in smaller quantities?" "How much would the hire of the machines cost?" "Could someone try it first?" Finally the meeting spoke almost as one woman. "Tender by all means!"

The reason was clear. Said one speaker: "It's a matter of doing this or shutting down altogether for some of us." Said a second: "I've been losing £50 a month, and my workers have been with me for thirteen and fourteen years. If I could only pay their wages I should be satisfied."

"We've got to pay the rent, anyway," agreed another. "I have fifty workers, and I've been losing since June. If one got other work, it could be done at the same time. There wouldn't be much loss in letting machines stand idle at that price."

Further encouragement came to the enterprising dresmakers, for one of their number said that she had already tried the work, and calculated she could pay good wages to her staff and make a small profit. This, she said, was not affluence, but it would perhaps bridge the trying period until better days returned. The meeting heartily concurred.

At half-past three o'clock, the Queen, who was accompanied by Lady Bertha Dawkins, Mrs. Tennant, and Mr. Edward Wm. Wallington, C.V.O., C.M.G., was received at the entrance of the building by the Mayor and Mayoress of Islington (Mr. Geo. S. Elliott, J.P., and Mrs. Elliott), Mrs. Abbott, chairman of the Ladies' Unemployment Committee; Mrs. Holman, secretary, and conducted to the committee-room.

The MAYOR then presented to Her Majesty the Mayoress, Ald. and Mrs. Saint, Ald. and Mrs. Manchester, Mrs. Councillor Fanny Marshall, Mrs. H. Trounce, Mr. G. C. E. Fletcher (Town Clerk) and Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Holman, Miss Michael, Mrs. McNair, Mrs. Jamieson, Mrs. Dobson, Miss Clarke, Miss Brown, and Miss Gill.

Her Majesty was then conducted through the building by the Mayor, Mayoress, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Holman, and other ladies of the committee.

All the workrooms were visited, Mrs. Abbott explaining that last week no fewer than 260 women and girls were engaged in executing needlework, in knitting, or in the training centre. This week there were 210 employed, and yesterday no fewer than 147 were provided with dinner on the premises. Dinner and tea are provided at a cost of threepence for the two meals, and, strange to relate, this branch of the work is self-supporting.

Her Majesty showed great interest in the workrooms and chatted freely with some of the girls and women employed. The Queen was particularly interested in the training scheme, fifty of the women now employed being included under this head.

The cookery, laundry, and needlework departments were also explained by Mrs. Abbott, who added that health lectures were being given to the women and girls.

Her Majesty commented favourably upon the garments, many of which were displayed for inspection in the several rooms. The Queen made many inquiries concerning the details of the work executed, and was particularly pleased with the comfortable-looking cradles which, when unmasked, were found to be banana cases. The conversion of these apparently useless articles into useful furniture for the homes of the poor is not the least ingenious side of the Canonbury workrooms.

The Queen, seeing a number of quilts made by the women to fit the cots, inspected them and was both surprised and pleased to learn that they had been woven from the selvedge of rolls of flannel.

It was pointed out to Her Majesty, in one of the rooms, that the plaster ceiling was worked in commemoration of the defeat of the Spanish Armada, and a hint was dropped that that was the last time any real attempt was made to invade England. "I hope it will never come to that," whispered the Queen.

In spite of the inclement weather, quite a considerable number of Canonbury folk, upon hearing the Queen was in the neighbourhood, flocked to the High School and cheered lustily when Her Majesty entered her motor-car and drove off.

Her Majesty, before leaving, instructed Lady Bertha Dawkins to inform the ladies that she was extremely pleased with all she had seen, and regarded the effort as highly successful.

making clothes which will be given away to the very poor. Obviously, and as they confessed afterwards, they "found it very hard to go on with their work." But the Queen stopped every now and then to speak to a worker. Her Majesty told a girl who was embroidering a dress that it was good to train the eye, and a woman who was knitting was complimented on her speed.

Little Shoes Made from Silk Hats.

In the little shoes which had been made out of men's old silk hats the Queen took a particular interest, and she delighted everybody by signing her name in the visitors' book.

"It's like leaving us a bit of herself," remarked one worker to another.

At Islington, the domestic economy training scheme claimed the Queen's first attention. Her Majesty asked the young laundresses if they were washing flannels or linen, she inspected the kitchen, and watched a cutting-out lesson.

When the Queen saw the banana crate cradles, she inquired if the crates could still be obtained. "I remember that there was a danger of the supply running short, and that would have been a pity."

The knitted quilt seemed to her Majesty a splendid idea, "so light and warm." The Queen passed through eleven workrooms with Mrs. Abbott, the hon. manageress, seeing 207 workers busily engaged.

"They seem very keen," was her remark, "and the training is excellent."

Garments for Belgian Children.

At the Holborn workroom, her Majesty was shown piles of little garments made for the Belgian children. As in all the workrooms, the Queen turned first to the baby table. She inquired how many garments were included in the layette to be given away to the poor mothers, and she felt the garments to see if they were soft and warm.

The oldest woman in the workroom will never forget that the Queen inspected her work and asked her about her own trade. "To think that she should take an interest in us!" said the old woman.

If she had heard the Queen talking to the officials afterwards about the work, she would have been even more surprised. Her Majesty inquired about every detail and every class of worker. She remembered everything that had been done and was going to be done. The progress of the carpet factory which turned to spinning yarn when there was no longer employment for the women workers was discussed; inquiries were made as to what was being done for other factories, and her Majesty wanted to know precisely the kind of outfit which is to be made for the girls going to Australia, on the invitation sent to the Queen for them. Her Majesty said also that she had been watching the statistics of distress, and she was glad to see they were a little lower this month.

Dublin Daily Express,
December 1st. 1914.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE, Monday.

Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein visited the Queen this morning.

Her Majesty, attended by the Lady Bertha Dawkins and Mr. E. W. Wallington, visited this afternoon the workrooms at the Prince of Wales' Baths, St. Pancras, Canonbury place, Islington, and Russell square, Bloomsbury, which are under the auspices of the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

VICEREGAL COURT.

On Saturday afternoon her Excellency the Countess of Aberdeen presided at a meeting of the Central Committee on Women's Employment for Leinster, Munster and Connaught, held at 63 Dawson street.

Later on her Excellency presided at a meeting of the Committee of Management of Peamount, held at Peamount.

Glasgow News,
Dec: 1st. 1914.

Dressmakers' Hard Case.

During the past week attention has been turned in London, as in Paris, to the hard case of dressmakers, who have been thrown out of employment through the war. Women who have been accustomed to fine handwork can find nothing to do, though machine-made clothing is required in large quantities on short notice. The Central Committee on Women's Employment is to tender to the War Office for the supply of socks, and is to allocate the work to firms willing to undertake it.

Glasgow Herald,
Dec: 7th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £94,927 11s 4d. How small workshop employers faced by troubles caused by the war can escape from them was explained to a meeting of traders convened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Mr J. J. Mallon, on behalf of the committee, pointed out that in a time of war large orders for supplies of clothing can only be expected from Government sources. The difficulty is that small firms who desire to apply for such orders are in doubt as to the suitability of their machines to do the War Office work, or their knowledge of the trade is not sufficient to warrant the authorities in placing contracts with them. The consequence is that the demands of the Army are being met less readily than would otherwise be the case, and at the same time large numbers of women and girls are wholly or partially unemployed. The committee proposes to tender for a large contract, and to share it among various small firms. It would be necessary to train the workers for the new work, and the Central Committee hope to arrange that the foremen or forewomen of the various firms should be taken into an up-to-date Army clothing factory for a week's experience. The meeting expressed a desire that the experiment should be tried, and the necessary arrangements with regard to the contracts are in progress.

The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, through which is administered the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund in Scotland, has received a communication from the Secretary for Scotland conveying royal permission to make use of the Queen's crown and initials upon articles made in the work-rooms under the committee's control. A similar permission had already been accorded to the English workrooms under the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and the extension of the privilege to the Scottish Committee is a gratifying proof of Her Majesty's unfailing interest in all that concerns the work of the Queen's Fund. The Scottish treasurer is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, to whom subscriptions should be addressed. All communications respecting the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette,
December 3rd. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

EMPLOYMENT IN EXPERIMENTAL WORKROOM.

FIRELESS COOKERS.

A new employment is proposed for unemployed women in an experimental workroom to be opened shortly by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

In conjunction with other domestic work it is suggested that the women shall be shown how to make fireless cookers and be given lessons on how to use them.

As the women employed in the workrooms have little time for cooking and less money for firing, it is thought that hot box cooking would be most useful to them. They would be able to prepare the dinner, bring it to the boil, put it in the box, and find it cooked on their return home.

Margarine or Butter Box.

A margarine or butter box would be used for the experiment. It is lined with felt paper, and three parts filled with straw or hay. The latter is then covered with a sheet of the felt paper, in which a hole large enough to admit a "Billy" can is made. The nest for the can is also lined with paper. A flannel cushion is used for a cover, and this is very loosely filled with oat-chaff, so that it fills up every possible air space.

In order that similar boxes can be made in small homes, the cheapest materials would be used in the making. The packing-case is procurable for a penny or twopence, the straw for packing would probably be given for nothing, and a sheet of mill board at about 2d. would answer the purpose of the felt paper.

Those actually made in the workrooms would be given to the women who make them, and they would be taught how to prepare dishes suitable for hot-box cooking. These include stews of all kinds, braised meat, and puddings.

Printed Instructions.

Printed instructions, also, on how to use the box would be nailed inside the lid. They include the following hints:—

The pot must be kept close shut.

It must really boil when it goes in.

It must be covered with a cushion and shut quickly.

Warning is also given that the time allowed for cooking must be twice as long as in the usual way.

All communications concerning the Queen's Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee, at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Daily Telegraph,
Dec: 4th. 1914.

652.

QUEEN & WOMEN WORKERS.

TOUR OF WORK-ROOMS.

Queen Mary, accompanied by Princess Alexander of Teck, and attended by Mr. E. W. Wallington, visited yesterday afternoon the mayoral work-rooms at Poplar, Greenwich, and Southwark, approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Since its inception her Majesty has taken a deep interest in the movement, supported by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, for providing employment for workless women and girls, and has now inspected ten of the dark centres in London.

At Poplar the Royal visitors were received by the Marchioness of Crewe, Lady Askwith, and Miss Mary R. Macarthur, on behalf of the committee, and by the Mayor and Mayoress of Poplar, the town clerk, and Mr. Yeo, M.P. The Queen and Princess Alexander made a close inspection of the work in hand, which included the cutting down of adult garments for children, and the making of infants' clothes, to be distributed among the poor of the district.

At Greenwich, where she graciously accepted a bouquet of pink and white carnations purchased by the workers, her Majesty was much interested in the manufacture of ottomans from packing-cases. These, together with mats knitted by the women, are to be sent to homes for Belgian refugees.

At the Southwark work-rooms the Queen was received by the Marchioness of Salisbury, the Mayor, Mr. J. A. Dawes, M.P., Mrs. Herbert Stead, and others. There her Majesty talked with two women at each table, and inspected a great variety of the garments turned out by the workers.

The Morning Advertiser,
December 4th. 1914

QUEEN VISITS WORKROOMS.

CHAT WITH A GIRL EMIGRANT.

The Queen, accompanied by Princess Alexander of Teck, and attended by Mr. E. W. Wallington, for the second time this week, paid visits yesterday afternoon to Mayoral workrooms approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The Queen was received at Poplar by the Marchioness of Crewe, Lady Askwith, and Miss M. R. Macarthur on behalf of the committee, and by the Mayor and Mayoress of Poplar, the town clerk, and Mr. Yeo, M.P.

Her Majesty was observed on several occasions to draw the attention of the Princess to specially interesting pieces of work. Of the mayor her Majesty inquired about the unemployment in Poplar, and then when she heard that one of the girls was going to Australia on the invitation sent for unemployed women to the Queen, Her Majesty sent for her. They stood alone together in a little empty room, and the Queen asked questions, showing keen interest in the delighted girl's welfare. Her Majesty inquired when the girl was going, and if she would like domestic work. "I hope you will do well," she said. As she turned to go, Her Majesty nodded to all the girls in the workroom, and said "Good bye." They were not allowed to cheer her in the workroom, but the girls put their heads out of the window and cheered her as she went.

At the Greenwich work-rooms mats which the women had knitted and lined for the Belgians pleased Her Majesty, and when she saw little basket cradles which had been made by the blind, and fitted up in the workroom, the Queen said, "I should like some of those. Will you send them to Friary Court?"

A deaf and dumb girl was made very happy because the Queen spoke to her, and the Borough Hall employees were equally delighted when Her Majesty carried away the bouquet of pink and white carnations which they had bought for her.

The Queen was received at the Southwark workrooms by Lady Salisbury, the Mayor, Mr. J. A. Dawes, M.P., Mrs. Herbert Stead, and others. The finish of a great variety of garments made pleased the Queen very much. Her Majesty talked with two women of every table. There was a mother of 16 children, and a clever lacemaker, and a woman who proudly relates that the Queen said "I can see you're a thorough good dressmaker." Outside in the street the Queen's car could scarcely pass along for the cheering children.

652/26

The Daily Telegraph, December 5th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

TRAINING FOR GIRLS.

How to employ girl wage-earners under 16 years of age who have been thrown out of work by the war has been under the consideration of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Thousands of these girls in London alone, who have been bread-winners in their families, are now displaced. It is not thought advisable that the girls should ordinarily be employed in the relief work-rooms, and the committee feel that a great opportunity offers to give them useful training.

It is proposed that the training should be undertaken wherever possible by the local education authority, and that a maintenance grant from the Queen's Fund should be given to girls who have been wage-earners through the local relief authority. The Board of Education are prepared to facilitate the formation of classes, and have offered to instruct their inspectors, including those who have expert knowledge of different trades and industries, to give any assistance in their power. They have suggested also that, in the present emergency, fees for such classes could be remitted. Girls receiving training may be given grants of 4s to 6s per week with a mid-day meal in addition.

The total of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is now £94,573.

Manchester Courier, Dec. 8th. 1914.

Unemployed and Insurance.

From the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund comes the information that the question of insurance for unemployed women who are being trained in domestic and other work in relief workrooms has been puzzling the local employment committees. It has now been decided that the women are insurable, even though they are spending some of their time in training. As a matter of fact, in most cases they are giving a return in work. At the cookery centres they are preparing dinner for the women doing needlework in remodelling garments; they are making clothes for children, and as sick room helps they are giving necessary assistance in the homes of the poor. Where the women are spending their whole time in training and are not producing articles of value while receiving maintenance grants their cases will be specially considered by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. It has already been suggested by the Central Committee that the workers' contribution for insurance should be paid by the local representative committees as well as that of the employer.

Daily Telegraph, December 9th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

One of the new trades suggested by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for giving work to women is the making of dolls' tea-sets. This work is now progressing favourably in the Potteries, particularly at Stoke-on-Trent. Before the war dolls' tea-sets were all made in Germany, and the demand for them, particularly at Christmas time, is large. Toy dinner, tea, dessert, and toilet sets are being made by a process which is easy for the girls to learn, and at which they can speedily earn good wages.

One employer reports that he is also copying German vases, for which there are good orders. Employment is thus being found for an additional number of women. The making of boxes for the sets will give further work to women, while the packing is another definite employment.

The total of the Queen's Fund is now £95,614. Yesterday's contributions included £200 from Sir Mark Sykes, M.P., and £50 from Mr. Henry Graves.

Nottingham Guardian, December 7th. 1914.

THE DEMAND FOR KHAKI CLOTHING

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £94,927 11s. 4d.

How small workshop employers faced by trouble caused by the war can escape from them, was explained to a meeting of traders convened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

Mr. J. J. Mallon, on behalf of the committee, pointed out that in a time of war, large orders for supplies of clothing can only be expected from Governmental sources. The difficulty is that small firms who desire to apply for such orders are in doubt as to the suitability of their machines to do the War Office work, or their knowledge of the trade is not sufficient to warrant the authorities in placing contracts with them. The consequence is that the demands of the army are being met less readily than would otherwise be the case, and at the same time large numbers of women and girls are wholly or partially unemployed. The committee proposes to tender for a large contract, and to share it among various small firms.

It would be necessary to train the workers for the new work, and the Central Committee hope to arrange that the foremen or forewomen of the various firms should be taken into an up-to-date army clothing factory for a week's experience.

The meeting expressed a desire that the experiment should be tried, and the necessary arrangements with regard to the contracts are in progress.

Evening Standard, December 8th. 1914.

FIRELESS COOKERS.

Much interest has been shown in the fireless cookers mentioned in our article of December 3. Although the "hot boxes" made in the work-rooms proposed by the Central Committee on Women's Employment would be given away and not sold, we understand that these cookers can be bought from Miss Clementina Black, 734, Holloway-road, N., who has been carrying out experiments there, on a commercial basis, since August.

Nottingham Guardian December 10th. 1914

WORK FOR WOMEN.

MISUNDERSTANDING AS TO OPERATION OF THE FUND.

The following statement is officially issued:—

"From many communications received there obviously exists considerable misunderstanding about the Work for Women Fund. Some weeks after the National Relief Fund was inaugurated by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales it became evident that the provision of work for women was an urgent necessity. For this reason her Majesty the Queen started a special fund to be devoted to providing employment for women unemployed through the war.

"The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairman and Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. secretary, was thereupon appointed by Mr. Herbert Samuel, with the approval of the Queen, to devise, initiate, and supervise the necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies final responsibility for the expenditure rests. All money collected in her Majesty's name by the Queen's Work for Women Fund (and its council), of which Lady Roxburgh is hon. secretary and Mrs. C. A. Pearson hon. treasurer, is handed to the National Relief Fund, and can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women.

"Her Majesty the Queen's co-operation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of money to finance the schemes. All suggestions, therefore, for employing or helping women should be sent to the hon. secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment at 8, Grosvenor-place, S.W., and not to Buckingham Palace, whilst contributions should, as announced, be sent to the hon. treasurer of the Queen's Work for Women Fund at 33, Portland-place, W.

"Applications for employment or help for individual women should be addressed to the secretary of the local representative committee at the Town Hall or Urban District Council offices in the locality in which the applicant resides. Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the secretary, Professional Classes Sub-Committee, Board of Education, Whitehall, S.W."

652/27

652.
Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, Dec. 9th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

PRACTICAL INSTRUCTION IN THE ART OF PATTERN-MAKING.

CLASS FOR WORKING WOMEN

"What is the use of teaching working women to make patterns? They can buy a pattern for a penny in a magazine."

So say the critics of the cutting-out class for unemployed women at the Islington Domestic Economy Training Centre, belonging to the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The girls answered for themselves.

"We haven't got no pennies for patterns."

Method of Instruction.

The work they have done has answered too. From one close-fitting blouse pattern they have cut out and put together a blouse with tucked front, a kimono blouse, a blouse with raglan sleeves, and blouses with all kinds of fancy yokes. The original pattern was cut to the measurements of one of their number, and made up and fitted before their eyes. Then they were shown several blouses, and asked which they would like to copy.

The work they are doing now would answer any criticism. They are learning to cut undergarments from that wonderful blouse pattern. The last lesson was on the nightdress.

Never Cut Out Before.

The critics would likewise get their answer by watching the girls at work. They all used their scissors the wrong way when they began, and even now they have to be told to take a long, clean cut; jagged edges were never of any account before.

The girls have been employed as packers, bookbinders, corset-makers, hair-preparers, one as a blouse-improver, another as a nursery governess, and scarcely any of them have ever cut out before. There is not a dressmaker in the class at present, although preference in the training is to be given to dressmakers who may be able to improve their skill.

Paper-Folding Patterns.

For the rest, it is hoped that they will become efficient needlewomen. They all want to make their own clothes, and presently they are to be allowed to bring material, if they have any, in order to cut their own clothes, or old garments they would like to recut. At present they are working on paper the same width as calico.

They are to be shown also how to adapt patterns found in magazines to suit themselves. For children's clothes they are to be taught more simple pattern-making by folding.

Twelve lessons of two hours each are to be given at first to those in the training scheme, but it is hoped that they may be increased.

Working Women Pupils and Insurance.

The question of insurance for unemployed women who are being trained in domestic and other work in relief workrooms has been puzzling the local employment committees.

It has now been decided that the women are insurable, even though they are spending some of their time in training. As a matter of fact, in most cases they are giving a return in work. At the cookery centres, they are preparing dinner for the women doing needlework; in remodelling garments, they are making clothes for children; and as sick room helps they are giving necessary assistance in the homes of the poor.

No Deduction for Workers.

Where the women are spending their whole time in training, and are not producing articles of value, while receiving maintenance grants, their cases will be specially considered by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

It has already been suggested by the Central Committee that the worker's contribution for insurance should be paid by the local representative committee, as well as that of the employer.

The dismay of unemployed women who have entered on a course of domestic economy at relief workrooms when places were found

From the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund comes the information that the question of insurance for unemployed women who are being trained in domestic and other work in relief workrooms has been puzzling the local employment committees. It has now been decided that the women are insurable, even though they are spending some of their time in training. As a matter of fact, in most cases they are giving a return in work. At the cookery centres they are preparing dinner for the women doing needlework in remodelling garments; they are making clothes for children, and as sick room helps they are giving necessary assistance in the homes of the poor. Where the women are spending their whole time in training and are not producing articles of value while receiving maintenance grants their cases will be specially considered by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. It has already been suggested by the Central Committee that the workers' contribution for insurance should be paid by the local representative committees as well as that of the employer.

Daily Telegraph,
December 9th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

One of the new trades suggested by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for giving work to women is the making of dolls' tea-sets. This work is now progressing favourably in the Potteries, particularly at Stoke-on-Trent. Before the war dolls' tea-sets were all made in Germany, and the demand for them, particularly at Christmas time, is large. Toy dinner, tea, dessert, and toilet sets are being made by a process which is easy for the girls to learn, and at which they can speedily earn good wages.

One employer reports that he is also copying German vases, for which there are good orders. Employment is thus being found for an additional number of women. The making of boxes for the sets will give further work to women, while the packing is another definite employment.

The total of the Queen's Fund is now £95,614. Yesterday's contributions included £200 from Sir Mark Sykes, M.P., and £50 from Mr. Henry Graves.

Committee on Women's Employment would be given away and not sold, we understand that these cookers can be bought from Miss Clementina Black, 734, Holloway-road, N., who has been carrying out experiments there, on a commercial basis, since August.

Nottingham Guardian
December 10th. 1914

WORK FOR WOMEN.

MISUNDERSTANDING AS TO OPERATION OF THE FUND.

The following statement is officially issued:—

"From many communications received there obviously exists considerable misunderstanding about the Work for Women Fund. Some weeks after the National Relief Fund was inaugurated by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales it became evident that the provision of work for women was an urgent necessity. For this reason her Majesty the Queen started a special fund to be devoted to providing employment for women unemployed through the war.

"The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairman and Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. secretary, was thereupon appointed by Mr. Herbert Samuel, with the approval of the Queen, to devise, initiate, and supervise the necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies final responsibility for the expenditure rests. All money collected in her Majesty's name by the Queen's Work for Women Fund (and its council), of which Lady Roxburgh is hon. secretary and Mrs. C. A. Pearson hon. treasurer, is handed to the National Relief Fund, and can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women.

"Her Majesty the Queen's co-operation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of money to finance the schemes. All suggestions, therefore, for employing or helping women should be sent to the hon. secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment at 8, Grosvenor-place, S.W., and not to Buckingham Palace, whilst contributions should, as announced, be sent to the hon. treasurer of the Queen's Work for Women Fund at 33, Portland-place, W.

"Applications for employment or help for individual women should be addressed to the secretary of the local representative committee at the Town Hall or Urban District Council offices in the locality in which the applicant resides. Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the secretary, Professional Classes Sub-Committee, Board of Education, Whitehall, S.W."

652/27

fancy yokes. The original pattern was cut to the measurements of one of their number, and made up and fitted before their eyes. Then they were shown several blouses, and asked which they would like to copy.

The work they are doing now would answer any criticism. They are learning to cut undergarments from that wonderful blouse pattern. The last lesson was on the nightdress.

Never Cut Out Before.

The critics would likewise get their answer by watching the girls at work. They all used their scissors the wrong way when they began, and even now they have to be told to take a long, clean cut; jagged edges were never of any account before.

The girls have been employed as packers, bookbinders, corset-makers, hair-preparers, one as a blouse-improver, another as a nursery governess, and scarcely any of them have ever cut out before. There is not a dressmaker in the class at present, although preference in the training is to be given to dressmakers who may be able to improve their skill.

Paper-Folding Patterns.

For the rest, it is hoped that they will become efficient needlewomen. They all want to make their own clothes, and presently they are to be allowed to bring material, if they have any, in order to cut their own clothes, or old garments they would like to recut. At present they are working on paper the same width as calico.

They are to be shown also how to adapt patterns found in magazines to suit themselves. For children's clothes they are to be taught more simple pattern-making by folding.

Twelve lessons of two hours each are to be given at first to those in the training scheme, but it is hoped that they may be increased.

Working Women Pupils and Insurance.

The question of insurance for unemployed women who are being trained in domestic and other work in relief workrooms has been puzzling the local employment committees.

It has now been decided that the women are insurable, even though they are spending some of their time in training. As a matter of fact, in most cases they are giving a return in work. At the cookery centres, they are preparing dinner for the women doing needlework; in remodelling garments, they are making clothes for children; and as sick room helps they are giving necessary assistance in the homes of the poor.

No Deduction for Workers.

Where the women are spending their whole time in training, and are not producing articles of value, while receiving maintenance grants, their cases will be specially considered by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

It has already been suggested by the Central Committee that the worker's contribution for insurance should be paid by the local representative committee, as well as that of the employer.

The dismay of unemployed women who have entered on a course of domestic economy at relief workrooms when places were found for them by the Labour Exchanges has led the Central Committee to make another decision.

In coming to it, not only had the disappointment of the girls to be considered, but the fact that the training could not be expected to benefit, if it were not continuous.

Training Not to be Interrupted.

Women and girls in the workrooms are required to register at the local Labour Exchange, but in future, those who join a course of instruction will not be asked to re-register weekly until the training is nearly complete. Those in the workrooms who are not taking a course of lessons will now have first chance of the posts notified by the Labour Exchanges. The cookery classes for these working women proved so popular at one centre that numerous applications were received from women who were not unemployed, asking if they might join them. The committee, however, has laid down a rule that only women unemployed as a consequence of the war may be admitted to the centres. The training is merely being given in place of employment.

Only women who are considered suitable and who are willing to pass through the whole course are accepted. They are specially selected from the workrooms or from among applicants for relief.

Daily Citizen, December 9th. 1914.

WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

The plight of the unemployed woman at any time is very terrible, and at the present time, with prices going up, with the chances of obtaining work restricted, with many thousands of women struggling against each other in the Labour market, the prospect is sufficiently black to bring unemployed wage-earners to the brink of despair. The whole question bristles with difficulties and requires the handling of those who see the waste and futility of mere charitable relief, and who, despite adverse criticism, are strong enough to resist showy, untenable schemes that could only end in economic disaster.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment—which is the administrative side of the Queen's Work for Women Fund—wisely decided from the start to tackle its big problem with some regard to economic consequence, bringing to the task the qualities alike of head and heart. Hence the Committee has been more anxious to develop a sound policy in the interests of working women than to obtain tinsel advertisement. The line that has been followed will be amply justified in the light of knowledge. The Central Committee has been criticised on various grounds. It has been criticised, for example, because it does not sell the products of its workrooms, but gives them free to people without purchasing power. This criticism is, of course, short-sighted and ill-informed, for if the Committee dumped its goods on the ordinary competitive market it would obviously be creating as much unemployment as it cured, throwing Elizabeth out of a job in order to find work for Jane. The Committee has been criticised because in its workrooms it does not make shirts, socks, and comforters for the soldiers, and certain well-meaning women appear to jump to the conclusion that this betokens some lack of sympathy for the soldiers. Nothing could be further from the truth. It would be the height of folly, in order to gratify a sentiment, to fling out of employment the women who are doing this work efficiently in factories.

Entire misunderstanding of these facts is largely responsible for many criticisms concerning rates of pay. In one self-supporting workroom run by the Committee piece-work rates are paid which yield the workers from 20s. to 30s. a week. For charwomen employed in connection with relief workrooms, a rate of 5d. per hour is paid, that being the Trade Union rate recognised by the London County Council. In regard to all contract work placed by the Committee the Fair Wages Clause is insisted upon, and in helping to establish new trades the Committee has recognised throughout that a high standard of wages should be paid. By far the best and biggest part of the Central Committee's work is done outside the workrooms altogether. Through its Contracts Department about 130 firms engaged in dressmaking, blouse-making, and the like, that would otherwise have been compelled to close down, have been kept going, and in the West of England schemes of fruit-pulping and vegetable drying are going forward.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment has done and is doing much excellent work in circumstances of great difficulty, and the Queen's Work for Women Fund is deserving of support from all who agree with the dictum laid down by the Queen herself that the best remedy for distress is to prevent it.

The Daily Chronicle Dec: 10th. 1914. 652/28

WAR AND WOMEN.

DEVISING SCHEMES OF EMPLOYMENT.

TRAINING CENTRES.

One of the most interesting, valuable, and far-reaching pieces of work being done in this country at the present time is that of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Formed to create and perfect machinery to deal with the problem of women who are out of employment owing to the war, it is initiating a movement for training and educating them, which cannot fail to have results out of all proportion to the immediate need. Indeed, it is not easy to imagine a sowing presaging more or finer harvests to women than that which is now going on.

Briefly, the committee responsible is a Government Committee appointed by the President of the Local Government Board. Its members are the Marchioness of Crewe, Mrs. H. J. Tennant (treasurer), Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, Lady Midleton, Lady Askwith, Miss Margaret Bondfield, Miss Violet Markham, Miss Susan Lawrence, Dr. Marion Phillips, Mrs. Gasson, Miss R. E. Lawrence, of the Central Unemployed Body, and Miss Mary Macarthur, hon. secretary.

The committee has no powers of spending; its task is to devise and examine schemes of employment for women in England and Wales, and to submit them to the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress. If the Government Committee approves of the scheme it makes a grant in aid out of the National Relief Fund. In this connection the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is co-operating with admirable skill, but the funds it raises are not handed to the Women's Employment Committee but to the National Fund.

During the three months the Employment Committee has been in existence its chief work has been not only to organise machinery for unemployment, but to lay down the principles upon which women may be occupied and maintained without interfering with the ordinary trade of the country, or in any way accentuating its present dislocation.

IMPROVED EFFICIENCY.

Much time has also been spent in securing that in any such occupation the efficiency of the women may not in any way be impaired, but may be maintained and as far as possible improved. This is no easy task, and the committee is, indeed, fortunate to have secured the services of Miss Mary Macarthur, for no one living possesses greater knowledge or experience of women's work or is so justly trusted by the workers themselves.

Unemployment among women, whilst more serious than amongst men, is at the present time less acute than it was in August and September. There is, however, reason to believe that it will be much greater shortly, but by that time machinery will be available to cope with the distress, although much still remains to be done to perfect it, notably as regards the registration of applicants for work.

The experimental schemes organised by the Central Committee are intended mainly as examples and illustrations to local representative committees upon whom, or upon whose women's employment sub-committees, lies the duty of providing occupation for unemployed women on lines approved by the Central Committee.

These local representative committees for the prevention and relief of distress due to the war in counties, boroughs, and urban districts with a population of over 20,000, are generally responsible for dealing with men and women, but in the case of women they work through a women's employment sub-committee appointed by, and responsible to, the local representative committee. It rests with the local representative committee to show that unemployment is abnormal and is due to the war, and to satisfy the Government Committee that there is genuine and special need for a special workroom in the district in question.

THE WORKROOMS.

The workers to be employed in these workrooms are selected from a register of applicants at the office of the local representative committee.

The object of these workrooms is to train and teach girls and women, the scope of the work including:—(1) Training workers in trades in which new openings are now offered for British trade; (2) training in skilled trades in which there is normally a shortage of labour, such as machinists, hand ironers, &c.; (3) training in domestic economy, especially cooking; (4) production of useful articles, such as all kinds of garments; (5) altering, making and mending of workers' own garments.

In selecting articles of production nothing may be undertaken which would, but for the scheme, be produced and purchased in the ordinary way of business; nor may articles produced be offered for sale, but must be given, through the local representative committee or other approved sources, to those who have no means of buying.

Outside London grants have been made for these workrooms, at West Ham, Southampton, Barking, Leyton, Ilford, Walthamstow, Birmingham, Burnley, Tottenham, Middleton, Chipping Wycombe, Reading, Bacup, Exeter, Edmonton, Tynemouth, Eccles, Cardiff, and Willesden.

There is accommodation for over 1,400 workers in these workrooms. The minimum rate of pay in the workrooms is 3d. per hour net, and the maximum number of hours worked by any woman per week is 40.

Domestic Economy experimental training schemes have also been started in Bethnal-green, Stepney, St. Pancras, and Islington, and experimental workrooms in Bethnal-green, Stepney, Hackney, St. Pancras, Camberwell, and Shoreditch. In addition, 22 London boroughs are carrying out similar schemes, all of which have received grants from the Queen's Fund.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund is part of the National Relief Fund, but is specially earmarked for schemes of employment for women. In some London boroughs the grants may cover two workrooms, and in Deptford, for instance, a very interesting scheme for juveniles has been approved, in addition to a workroom.

No return has yet been received of the exact number of women employed in these mayoral workrooms and training centres, but the total number estimated for in the applications for the grants amounts to over 1,600. In the committee's London experimental schemes over 900 women and girls are employed in addition, and there is accommodation for over 1,000. About 1,000 women are also employed in the Central Unemployed Body workrooms on lines approved by the Central Committee.

Schoolmistress 10.12.14.

Women's Work.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Miss Mary Macarthur, honorary secretary of the Central Committee for Women's Employment, reported last month that unemployment amongst women was less acute now than it had been in August and September. To meet the need for employment seven experimental workrooms have been opened in London and four domestic economy experimental training schemes set on foot. These provide employment for about 796 women. Sixteen London boroughs are carrying out similar schemes and have all received grants from the Queen's Fund. The total number of women estimated for in the applications for the grants amounts to about 1,500. In addition, about 1,000 women are being employed in the Central Unemployed Body's workrooms on lines approved by the Central Committee. Outside London grants have been made for workrooms in seventeen towns and schemes have been approved for those of another twelve. Plans are also in progress for giving employment in various other boroughs, urban districts, and counties. Much is also being done by the committee in the way of steadying trade in its regular channels. About 130 firms, which would otherwise have been obliged to reduce their staffs or shut down altogether, have been supplied with contract work. At the present time, 1,200 women are being employed by this means.

A jumble sale agency has been opened at 26a, Charing Cross road, W.C., where gifts of discarded clothing, personal belongings, trinkets, household effects, old stock, samples, and any other articles are received and disposed of for the benefit of the fund. The fund is now approaching a total of £100,000.

WOMEN WORKERS' SHOP.

A shop for the sale of the work turned out under the auspices of the Women's Emp[illegible] short-sighted and ill-informed, for if the Committee dumped its goods on the ordinary competitive market it would obviously be creating as much unemployment as it cured, throwing Elizabeth out of a job in order to find work for Jane. The Committee has been criticised because in its workrooms it does not make shirts, socks, and comforters for the soldiers, and certain well-meaning women appear to jump to the conclusion that this betokens some lack of sympathy for the soldiers. Nothing could be further from the truth. It would be the height of folly, in order to gratify a sentiment, to fling out of employment the women who are doing this work efficiently in factories.

Entire misunderstanding of these facts is largely responsible for many criticisms concerning rates of pay. In one self-supporting workroom run by the Committee piece-work rates are paid which yield the workers from 20s. to 30s. a week. For charwomen employed in connection with relief workrooms, a rate of 5d. per hour is paid, that being the Trade Union rate recognised by the London County Council. In regard to all contract work placed by the Committee the Fair Wages Clause is insisted upon, and in helping to establish new trades the Committee has recognised throughout that a high standard of wages should be paid. By far the best and biggest part of the Central Committee's work is done outside the workrooms altogether. Through its Contracts Department about 130 firms engaged in dressmaking, blouse-making, and the like, that would otherwise have been compelled to close down, have been kept going, and in the West of England schemes of fruit-pulping and vegetable drying are going forward.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment has done and is doing much excellent work in circumstances of great difficulty, and the Queen's Work for Women Fund is deserving of support from all who agree with the dictum laid down by the Queen herself that the best remedy for distress is to prevent it.

[illegible] is to devise and examine schemes of employment for women in England and Wales, and to submit them to the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress. If the Government Committee approves of the scheme it makes a grant in aid out of the National Relief Fund. In this connection the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is co-operating with admirable skill, but the funds it raises are not handed to the Women's Employment Committee but to the National Fund.

During the three months the Employment Committee has been in existence its chief work has been not only to organise machinery for unemployment, but to lay down the principles upon which women may be occupied and maintained without interfering with the ordinary trade of the country, or in any way accentuating its present dislocation.

IMPROVED EFFICIENCY.

Much time has also been spent in securing that in any such occupation the efficiency of the women may not in any way be impaired, but may be maintained and as far as possible improved. This is no easy task, and the committee is, indeed, fortunate to have secured the services of Miss Mary Macarthur, for no one living possesses greater knowledge or experience of women's work or is so justly trusted by the workers themselves.

Unemployment among women, whilst more serious than amongst men, is at the present time less acute than it was in August and September. There is, however, reason to believe that it will be much greater shortly, but by that time machinery will be available to cope with the distress, although much still remains to be done to perfect it, notably as regards the registration of applicants for work.

The experimental schemes organised by the Central Committee are intended mainly as examples and illustrations to local representative committees upon whom, or upon whose women's employment sub-committees, lies the duty of providing occupation for unemployed women on lines approved by the Central Committee.

These local representative committees for the prevention and relief of distress due to the war in counties, boroughs, and urban districts with a population of over 20,000, are generally responsible for dealing with men and women, but in the case of women they work through a women's employment sub-committee appointed by, and responsible to, the local representative committee. It rests with the local representative committee to show that unemployment is abnormal and is due to the war, and to satisfy the Government Committee that there is genuine and special need for a special workroom in the district in question.

[illegible] have also been started in Bethnal-green, Stepney, St. Pancras, and Islington, and experimental workrooms in Bethnal-green, Stepney, Hackney, St. Pancras, Camberwell, and Shoreditch. In addition, 22 London boroughs are carrying out similar schemes, all of which have received grants from the Queen's Fund.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund is part of the National Relief Fund, but is specially earmarked for schemes of employment for women. In some London boroughs the grants may cover two workrooms, and in Deptford, for instance, a very interesting scheme for juveniles has been approved, in addition to a workroom.

No return has yet been received of the exact number of women employed in these mayoral workrooms and training centres, but the total number estimated for in the applications for the grants amounts to over 1,600. In the committee's London experimental schemes over 900 women and girls are employed in addition, and there is accommodation for over 1,000. About 1,000 women are also employed in the Central Unemployed Body workrooms on lines approved by the Central Committee.

Schoolmistress 10.12.14.

Women's Work.

The Queen's Fund.

Miss Mary Macarthur, honorary secretary of the Central Committee for Women's Employment, reported last month that unemployment amongst women was less acute now than it had been in August and September. To meet the need for employment seven experimental workrooms have been opened in London and four domestic economy experimental training schemes set on foot. These provide employment for about 786 women. Sixteen London boroughs are carrying out similar schemes and have all received grants from the Queen's Fund. The total number of women estimated for in the applications for the grants amounts to about 1,500. In addition, about 1,000 women are being employed in the Central Unemployed Body's workrooms on lines approved by the Central Committee. Outside London grants have been made for workrooms in seventeen towns and schemes have been approved for those of another twelve. Plans are also in progress for giving employment in various other boroughs, urban districts, and counties. Much is also being done by the committee in the way of steadying trade in its regular channels. About 130 firms, which would otherwise have been obliged to reduce their staffs or shut down altogether, have been supplied with contract work. At the present time, 1,200 women are being employed by this means.

A jumble sale agency has been opened at 39a, Charing Cross-road, W.C., where gifts of discarded clothing, personal belongings, trinkets, household effects, old stock, samples, and any other articles are received and disposed of for the benefit of the fund. The fund is now approaching a total of £100,000.

Women Workers' Shop.

A shop for the sale of the work turned out under the auspices of the Women's Emergency Corps has been opened in Oxford-street, London, and will be run on the same business lines as have proved so successful in promoting Irish industries. Toymaking now engages between eighty and a hundred girls, and some clever models of animals, Tailor dolls' houses, and quaint figures are offered at reasonable prices. Space is also given to the work of the Three Arts Club and to that of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society. The corps has a department for mending garments and household linen, and is also employing several women in making Christmas puddings to be sold at a shilling a pound. At the opening ceremony it was pointed out by Viscountess Castlereagh that the committee hoped that the shop would be of long duration, as the toymaking industry, at least, was likely to become a settled one. Parcels of warm clothing for soldiers in the field and layettes for their babies at home could be made up at moderate prices. At the back of the shop there is a dainty tea-room. All profits are to be used for extending employment among other unemployed girls.

The Standard, Dec: 10th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

DUTIES OF COMMITTEES.

THE INCEPTION OF THE SCHEME.

It is obvious from communications received by the officials that considerable misunderstanding exists about the "Work for Women" Fund.

Some weeks after the National Relief Fund was inaugurated by the Prince of Wales, it became evident that the provision of work for women was an urgent necessity. For this reason the Queen started a special fund to be devoted to providing employment for women unemployed through the war. The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairman and Miss Mary R. Macarthur honorary secretary, was thereupon appointed by Mr. Herbert Samuel, with the approval of the Queen, to devise, initiate, and supervise the necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the Committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies the final responsibility for the expenditure rests.

All the money collected in the Queen's name by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund (and its council), of which Lady Roxburgh is the honorary secretary and Mrs. C. A. Pearson the honorary treasurer, is handed to the National Relief Fund, and can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women.

THE QUEEN'S CO-OPERATION.

The Queen's co-operation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of the money to finance the schemes. All suggestions, therefore, for employing or helping women should be sent to the honorary secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, at 8, Grosvenor-place, and not to Buckingham Palace, while contributions should, as announced, be sent to the honorary treasurer of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund at 33, Portland-place.

Applications for employment or help for individual women should be addressed to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the town hall or urban district offices in the locality in which the applicant resides.

Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the secretary, Professional Classes Sub-Committee, Board of Education, Whitehall.

WORK BEFORE CHARITY.

There has been a magnificent response to the special appeal for shillings by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary.

Every shilling subscribed is devoted not to charitable doles, but to providing employment for some woman or girl thrown out of work by the war. It was the Queen, when she inaugurated the fund, who laid down the principle that the "prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity." The problem which the fund had at first to face was an appalling one. In London alone 40,000 women were thrown out of work. Acute distress immediately arose in the ranks of women workers throughout the country.

By an effective method of labour exchange, however, thousands have been provided with work which does not displace other women; and where they cannot be found employment on a strictly commercial basis, the products of their labour, such as cradles, layettes, and children's clothing, are distributed in homes where such necessaries could not possibly be obtained.

HELP FOR HOMES.

There are already 300 branches of the fund established in the country, and these have been

Yorkshire Post, December 10th. 1914.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment, who, under the auspices of the Queen's Fund, have been instrumental in providing many new avenues for female labour, have induced the Staffordshire potteries to take up the making of dolls' tea sets. Hitherto this has been an industry almost monopolised by Germany, and one result of its adoption by our own potters is that the unemployment of women and girls in the pottery towns, which at the commencement of the war was considerable, has been very materially reduced. The British-made article has commanded a ready sale, and the Christmas-tide demand has kept manufacturers working at high pressure. By a process which it is easy for the youngest employee to learn, toy dinner, tea, dessert, and toilet sets, and other articles of pottery ware indispensable to the complete doll's house, are being turned out in large quantities.

Daily Citizen, Dec: 10th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

HOW HELP CAN BE OBTAINED.

The "Work for Women" Fund exists for the provision of work for women whose occupations have been affected by the war, and the hon. secretary is Miss Mary R. Macarthur, of the National Federation of Women Workers.

Money collected for the fund can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women, and suggestions for employing, or helping women should be sent to the honorary secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, S.W., while contributions should be sent to the honorary treasurer, 33, Portland-place, W.

Applications for employment or help should be addressed to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town hall in the locality in which the applicant resides. Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the secretary, professional classes sub-committee, Board of Education, Whitehall, S.W.

The Star, Dec: 11th. 1914.

The women in the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are to be paid for the Christmas holidays.

652.

The Standard, Dec: 11th. 1914.

WORKLESS WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WAR SUFFERERS.

MORE HELP NEEDED.

So quietly and unostentatiously has the Queen's Fund for Work for Women set about its labours that the general public probably does not realise at present the amount of work which it has already done in the way of finding employment for women and girls who have lost their occupations through the war.

Some idea of what it has accomplished and what it hopes to achieve may be gathered from the fact that the Central Committee has already sanctioned 50 schemes which will involve an annual expenditure of £250,000. This may appear a colossal sum, but it is not very large when one considers the proportion of hardship and misery which the war has brought into scores of thousands of homes supported by women workers throughout the country. Matters indeed would be a great deal worse if sound economic principles had not governed all the activities of the fund.

TRAINING WORKERS.

By a judicious employment of labour exchange methods it has not only succeeded in keeping open hundreds of workshops which would otherwise be closed, but has already started a great number of new workshops where women are either found employment or are trained for posts which are immediately open to them.

In all cases the work given to the women is not competitive; that is to say the work they do does not deprive any woman worker elsewhere. In circumstances, too, where it is impossible to run the work on strictly commercial lines the articles manufactured, such as clothing, etc., are distributed in homes where they are sadly needed but cannot possibly be bought.

Fresh funds, however, are urgently needed to cope with the distress which will unfortunately be only too prevalent in the homes of women workers this Christmas. That is the reason for the special appeal which is being made this week by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary, to other women throughout the country who have a shilling to spare.

There must be millions of shillings which might easily find their way to the fund without inconvenience to the donors, and on receipt of these shillings depends the very smallest modicum of food and comfort in thousands of homes this Christmas time.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, W.

652/29

necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the Committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies the final responsibility for the expenditure rests.

All the money collected in the Queen's name by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund (and its council), of which Lady Roxburgh is the honorary sec ary and Mrs. C. A. Pearson the honorar, easurer, is handed to the National Relief Fund, and can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women.

THE QUEEN'S CO-OPERATION.

The Queen's co-operation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of the money to finance the schemes. All suggestions, therefore, for employing or helping women should be sent to the honorary secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, at 8, Grosvenor-place, and not to Buckingham Palace, while contributions should, as announced, be sent to the honorary treasurer of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund at 33, Portland-place.

Applications for employment or help for individual women should be addressed to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the town hall or urban district offices in the locality in which the applicant resides.

Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the secretary, Professional Classes Sub-Committee, Board of Education, Whitehall.

WORK BEFORE CHARITY.

There has been a magnificent response to the special appeal for shillings by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary.

Every shilling subscribed is devoted not to charitable doles, but to providing employment for some woman or girl thrown out of work by the war. It was the Queen, when she inaugurated the fund, who laid down the principle that the "prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity." The problem which the fund had at first to face was an appalling one. In London alone 40,000 women were thrown out of work. Acute distress immediately arose in the ranks of women workers throughout the country.

By an effective method of labour exchange, however, thousands have been provided with work which does not displace other women; and where they cannot be found employment on a strictly commercial basis, the products of their labour, such as cradles, layettes, and children's clothing, are distributed in homes where such necessaries could not possibly be obtained.

HELP FOR HOMES.

There are already 300 branches of the fund established in the country, and these have been the means of keeping together thousands of homes supported by women which would otherwise have been penniless. The distress this Christmas, however, will be none the less acute. Funds are urgently needed, inasmuch as there are already schemes in progress which entail an expenditure of a quarter of a million of money.

This special appeal closes on Sunday next, December 13. Mrs. Pearson expresses the hope that all subscriptions may be sent in not later than December 10, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

provision of work for women whose occupations have been affected by the war, and the hon. secretary is Miss Mary R. Macarthur, of the National Federation of Women Workers.

Money collected for the fund can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women, and suggestions for employing, or helping women should be sent to the honorary secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, S.W., while contributions should be sent to the honorary treasurer, 33, Portland-place, W.

Applications for employment or help should be addressed to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town hall in the locality in which the applicant resides. Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the secretary, professional classes sub-committee, Board of Education, Whitehall, S.W.

The Star, Dec: 11th. 1914.

The women in the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are to be paid for the Christmas holidays.

TRAINING WORKERS.

By a judicious employment of labour exchange methods it has not only succeeded in keeping open hundreds of workshops which would otherwise be closed, but has already started a great number of new workshops where women are either found employment or are trained for posts which are immediately open to them.

In all cases the work given to the women is not competitive; that is to say the work they do does not deprive any woman worker elsewhere. In circumstances, too, where it is impossible to run the work on strictly commercial lines the articles manufactured, such as clothing, etc., are distributed in homes where they are sadly needed but cannot possibly be bought.

Fresh funds, however, are urgently needed to cope with the distress which will unfortunately be only too prevalent in the homes of women workers this Christmas. That is the reason for the special appeal which is being made this week by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary, to other women throughout the country who have a shilling to spare.

There must be millions of shillings which might easily find their way to the fund without inconvenience to the donors, and on receipt of these shillings depends the very smallest modicum of food and comfort in thousands of homes this Christmas time.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, W.

652/29

The Times,
Dec: 12th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORKROOMS REVISITED.

HELP FOR THE MOTHERS.

In the poor districts of London the Central Committee on Women's Employment in connexion with the Queen's Fund have started model workrooms, which are relieving local distress where it is most bitter. These workrooms do not in any way interfere with existing employment, as the work done is in all cases given away to necessitous women and children.

The Bethnal-green workrooms in Warby-road and Viaduct-street were among the first to be started, and in the institute in Viaduct-street, where the work of making cradles for the maternity outfits for poor mothers is in progress, a representative of The Times was given some idea of the dire poverty with which the fund is coping, and also of the great courage of the poor women who come to the labour exchanges and the distress committees, not with the plea that they are hungry and want relief, but with an urgent demand for work. Seeing them in their little groups at tables in the long room that holds about 75, working away in the main silently, one realizes what the sudden stoppage of work means to many of them. In Stepney alone there are 1,500 expectant mothers who are out of work themselves or have husbands unemployed. The trades of these women had been trouser-making, boot sewing, paper folding, feather curling, or French polishing.

From one table in that room one may select a few typical cases. There was Mrs. P——, a clean-looking old woman of 64, painfully thin. She was the doyenne of the room and the best worker in it, though the work was new to her. A trouser-maker by trade, she had lost her work on the Saturday before Bank Holiday—that was the black date in the calendar of most in that room—and for eight weeks, until the Queen's workrooms opened, she had been out of work. At the best of times she had not been well off. She used to make 5s. 6d. or 6s. a week finishing trousers at 2¼d. a pair, a farthing of which was stopped for sewing on the buttons by machinery. Her husband was a cabinetmaker, but he was too old for work, so he was told, and her earnings kept the meagre home together. When they ceased she had been pawning and selling until the home was almost gone.

A PATHETIC CASE.

Next to her was Mrs. D——, a young-old woman looking wretchedly ill, speaking with difficulty because of an abscess in her mouth, but clean and tidy and strangely patient. She had been a house-worker, and her husband was in the infirmary with a wasting disease. But she was intensely proud of him, and was most desirous to have it known how anxious he was to go to the front. He had been a sergeant in the Surrey Regiment, and after serving his time had become a tea-packer. "His poor legs are getting fatter," she said, "and he says he'll soon be able to be up and fight for the old flag again. He's that restless to be up."

On the other side of her, a strange contrast, was a very pretty girl of 17, the eldest of a family of eight, whose father, a comparatively young man of 39, was a permanent invalid in the infirmary. She had been a French polisher, but explained that, though cabinet-making was not quite stopped, French polishing was, because the furniture was only polished when it was going to be sold, but not if it had to be stored. She had been out of work since August Bank Holiday. A young sister had got some work making "patriotic buttons," but that was now at an end. There was a young married woman near her, who got married on the Bank Holiday, the great wedding day of the East-end, and she and her husband had both found themselves out of work ever since. The room was full of such stories.

At 138, Piccadilly, there is a workroom of another kind, where contract work which will not interfere with the workrooms is undertaken with the intention of making it self-supporting. Here the workers are those who have lost their work owing to the closing of West-end workrooms, and most of them belong to the special class of skilled tailoresses and dressmakers who are suffering from the vaunted economy in buying new clothes of their richer sisters. In all the workrooms arrangements for cheap meals have been made.

652/30

Glasgow Herald,
Dec: 10th. 1914.

"WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

From many communications received there obviously exists considerable misunderstanding about the "Work for Women" Fund. Some weeks after the National Relief Fund was inaugurated by the Prince of Wales it became evident that provision of work for women was an urgent necessity. For this reason the Queen started a special fund to be devoted to providing employment for women unemployed through the war. A Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairwoman and Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. secretary, was thereupon appointed by Mr Herbert Samuel, with the approval of the Queen, to devise, initiate, and supervise necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the Committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies final responsibility for the expenditure rests. All money collected in Her Majesty's name by the Queen's "Work for Women" Committee (and its council), of which Lady Roxburgh is hon. secretary and Mrs C. A. Pearson hon. treasurer, is handed to the National Relief Fund and can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women. The Queen's co-operation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of money to finance the schemes. All suggestions therefore for employing or helping women should be sent to the hon. secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment at 8 Grosvenor Place, London, S.W., and not to Buckingham Palace, whilst contributions should, as announced, be sent to the hon. treasurer of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund at 33 Portland Place, London, W. Applications for employment or help for individual women should be addressed to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town hall or urban district offices in the locality in which the applicant resides. Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the secretary, Professional Classes' Sub-Committee, Board of Education, Whitehall, London, S.W.

The North Mail,
Dec: 11th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund was explained by Mrs H. J. Tennant, wife of the Under-Secretary for War, and treasurer of the Central Committee on Women's Unemployment, in an interesting speech at the opening of a sale of work at Paxton House, near Berwick, yesterday.

The fund, the annual expenditure of which was £200,000, was, she said, supplying 10,000 shirts per week to the Army. It kept steadily in view the prospects at the end of the war, and so not only steadied employment and relieved unemployment, but aimed at training centres to improve the industrial value of women workers.

In their workrooms the difficulty with the girls which they had to meet was that the impetus of competition was lacking. But they encouraged a pride and interest in the work by giving to good machinists the chance of employment in busy trades at 20s to 30s per week, instead of the rather carefully measured wage.

They were also trying to foster new trades, which have up to now been monopolised by Germany, such as the dried vegetable trade, the making of dolls' tea-sets, and the making of dolls' heads. The last two were of considerable importance in reducing unemployment in the Potteries.

[redacted]. M.P.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

IMPROVING THE INDUSTRIAL VALUE OF WOMEN WORKERS.

Mrs H. J. Tennant, treasurer of the Central Committee on women's unemployment, gave some particulars regarding the Queen's Work for Women Fund in opening a sale of work at Paxton House, Berwickshire, yesterday. The fund, she said, was supplying ten thousand shirts weekly to the Army, but kept always in view the prospects at the end of the war, and so not only steadied employment and relieved unemployment but aimed, through training centres, to improve permanently the industrial value of the woman worker. They had the difficulty with girls in the Fund's workrooms that the impetus of competition was removed, but they encouraged pride in the work by giving good machinists, instead of the rather carefully measured wage from the Fund, the chance of employment in busy trades at twenty to thirty shillings a week. The Fund also helped to foster new trades formerly German, and Mrs Tennant instanced specially the dried vegetable trade, the making of dolls' tea sets and the making of dolls' heads, both the latter being of considerable importance in reducing unemployment in the Potteries.

Lady Marjoribanks, the Honourable Mrs Askew Robertson, Miss Swinton of Swinton, and Mrs Milne Home of Paxton were among those present.

Evening Standard,
Dec: 11th. 1914.
652

THE QUEEN'S FUN

TRAINING FOR UNEMPLOY CITY CHARWOMEN.

INFANT-CARE CLASSE

The Polytechnic for Unemployed Ci Women Workers at Bridewell House, E.C., proved by the Central Committee on Women Employment and financed by the Queen Fund, will be opened next Wednesday.

Mr. Brinsley Harper, chairman of th Women's Sub-Committee for the City of Lo don, said recently that already 690 une ployed women clerks have registered at th Typists' Registry at St. Bride Institute. O ninety-eight, who have others dependent upo them, fifty have been chosen for free commer cial training at Bridewell House.

Fares Paid.

They will be given a maintenance grant o 10s. per week, and their fares will be paid up to 2s. 6d. per week. Only workers who were employed in the City before the war are eligible for the training.

Unemployed City charwomen are also to be given a course of domestic economy, and twenty of their number are to be trained as home helps to give assistance in the homes of the sick poor.

Bridewell House has been lent by the City Corporation for the purpose, with a resident caretaker. They have also made a gift of £100 to make the place suitable, and provided the tables and chairs. A dozen typewriters have been lent and a gas-cooking stove given.

A trained teacher of domestic economy has been engaged, and under her direction the industrial workers will keep the house clean and cook dinner for the women clerks, who will be charged a nominal sum for the food. There is a washhouse attached, where laundry classes will be held.

L.C.C. Teachers.

London County Council teachers are to give lessons in shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping and French to the young typists, and a certificated dressmaker is to teach the girls how to cut their own patterns and to make their own clothes. They are also to have a course of gymnastics.

The girls chosen for the training are mostly young and with very little experience, and it is hoped to make them into competent commercial clerks.

Infant Care Classes.

The home helps, who are to be women of about forty years, will have preliminary training at Bridewell-place in cleaning, washing, cookery, infant care, and hygiene. Afterwards it will be continued in the homes of the sick in Bethnal Green in conjunction with the London Hospital district.

Further cookery lessons will be given at Bridewell-place twice weekly, and lessons on infant care. Infant consultations will also be held twice every week.

Christmas in the Queen's Workrooms.

The women in the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are to be paid for the Christmas holidays.

The workrooms will be closed on December 25 and 26, and re-opened on the Monday morning, and the women returning to work will be paid for the two days missed. The workrooms will also be closed if possible at midday on December 24, the workers being paid for the whole day.

A very welcome Christmas gift of 500 thimbles has been sent by Sir George Pragnell to be distributed among the women and girls working under the auspices of th Queen's Fund.

Irish Times,
Dec: 11th. 1914.

Dolls' china tea services and household requisites have hitherto been monopolised by the German manufacturers, and it is, therefore, good news that the Central Committee of Women's Employment have been instrumental in inducing the Staffordshire potteries to take up the making of these toys. Many years ago beautiful toy sets used to be made in England, and to this day are preserved in cabinets as works of art. The revival of this work has aided greatly in the reduction of unemployed women and girls

The Sedanner.
Dec: 12th. 1914.

TRADE AFFAIRS.

MANCHESTER'S DEMAND FOR WOMEN MACHINISTS.

AN EXPERIMENT IN TRADE TRANSFERENCE.

The demand for women power machinists in Manchester to complete the large Army clothing contracts has made possible an important experiment in trade transference. The endeavour of the Central Committee on Women's Employment is to prevent unemployment as well as to reduce it, and it is felt that the present time of unemployment is an opportunity for showing what can be done by taking one class of worker into another trade when the occasion demands it. In Manchester 31,169 women are employed in the dressmaking trades, which suffer most seriously from seasonal slackness. A scheme has therefore been devised whereby skilled treadle machinists who are thrown out of employment by the war will be trained as power machinists. Promises have been made by several firms to employ the women, when trained, at a weekly wage of not less than 16s. The cost of training will be very little, for the workroom has been lent free, and the owner of the premises will pay for the electric power. A firm of machinists are lending and fitting up the power machines, and the Manchester Corporation is lending the motor.

Illustrated Chronicle,
Dec: 12th. 1914.

CHRISTMAS IN THE QUEEN'S WORKROOMS.

There are about 900 women employed in the work-rooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Unemployment in connection with Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund. Arrangements have been made for giving the whole of these two days' holiday at Christmas, with full pay for the time lost. The workrooms are, in fact, to be closed from midday on the 24th, and will not be re-opened until Monday morning, when those returning to work are to receive payment for the two days missed. This is welcomed by the women who did not look forward with pleasure to Christmas holidays accompanied, as many feared, by short pay.

Northern Daily Telegraph,
Dec. 12th. 1914.

DOLLY AND THE TEA-SET.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment, who, under the auspices of the Queen's Fund, have been instrumental in providing many new avenues for female labour, have induced the Staffordshire potteries to take up the making of dolls' tea sets. Hitherto this has been an industry almost monopolised by Germany, and one result of its adoption by our own potters is that the unemployment of women and girls in the Pottery towns, which at the commencement of the war was considerable, has been very materially reduced. The British-made article has commanded a ready sale, and the Christmas-tide demand has kept manufacturers working at high pressure.

The Outlook, Dec: 12th. 1914.

652.
652/31

A VERY interesting industrial experiment is now being conducted at Radlett in connection with the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Twenty-eight girls from East London, mostly factory hands, are being trained as market gardeners and fruit-growers in the fields of Radlett, whither they have been sent by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Poultry-rearing is also to be taught, and we may hope that in this small beginning will be found the nucleus from which will derive a real revival of countryside industry and a population ready to take up the small-holdings which the Unionist Party has promised us. So far, it seems, the girls have taken eagerly to country life, and when it is remembered how large a part the French woman has played in the development of the land in France, we have every reason to hope that the scheme adopted here to meet an unemployment emergency will grow into a national movement to ease the congestion of our great towns and to increase our native food-supply.

The Daily Chronicle, December 12th 1914.

WOMEN AND WAR.

MAKING 80,000 BELTS FOR THE FRENCH.

WORK OF THE WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT COMMITTEE.

One of the most interesting sections of the Women's Employment Committee is the Contracts Department. The dislocation of trade by the war threw upon many firms the option either of shutting down altogether or of severely reducing their staff. For example, many of the large drapery firms which under ordinary circumstances would be busy preparing spring goods have come to a full stop owing to the dearth of orders. The Contracts Department has come to their aid, and about 130 firms—dress makers, blouse makers, &c.—have been kept going; at the present time 1,200 women are being employed on contract work given out by this committee, which acts as a bridge between the War Office and the individual firms.

The committee's contracts included 80,000 belts for the French Army and 10,000 shirts per week for the Government's clothing store at Pimlico. They are now tendering to supply socks and large quantities of khaki clothing.

Why, it may be asked, cannot the firms deal direct with the War Office? For several reasons, the main one being that individual firms cannot turn out enough work for the War Office to deal direct with them. Further take the supply of khaki clothing; drapery, dress, and blouse making firms have no knowledge of this trade, and their employees are not accustomed to its technique. The Central Committee will, therefore, select the trades on the evidence of the unemployment and short time returns. If khaki clothing is to be made, the two essentials are that the firms have the assistance of power machinery and that their employees have been engaged in manufacturing some kind of clothing.

The committee will then arrange for a limited number of foremen or forewomen of the firms to spend a week at a well-equipped clothing factory in order that they may learn the best way to meet the War Office requirements and the various details of manufacture.

Next the committee will enlist the aid of a number of machinists and others skilled in making military clothing and loan them for limited periods to the factories undertaking work in order that they may act as instructors in the making of khaki. Certain operations, however, such as the cutting and distribution of the material among the firms that make it up, and buttonholing, the committee will retain in its own hands.

During the first month the workers will be paid a standing wage which conforms with the requirements of the Tailoring Trade Board. At the end of the month the workers will be paid on a piece rate, subject to the understanding that they will receive a wage of not less than that received during the preliminary four weeks.

It should be clearly understood that none of this contract work is aided by a single farthing from the National Relief Fund. It is wholly self-maintaining, nor does the committee enter any contract field until it is proved that the trade, which ordinarily would produce the goods, cannot, under the present circumstances, do so. A small part of the committee's contract work is being done at their own contract workshop, where 40 women are employed. These women are paid piecework rates and can earn good wages; some of the more skilled workers have earned as much as 30s., and, indeed, in certain instances, over 30s.

Hand dressmakers have been hit hard by the war, and the Women's Employment Committee has come to their aid. The committee, which has tendered for 2,000,000 pairs of socks, hopes to offer orders to these dressmakers, letting them have the necessary machines on hire, as well as the aid of an experienced instructress. The committee is also distributing amongst a number of dressmakers and other firms in London and the provinces the supplying of outfits for the 550 women who are being assisted to emigrate to Australia under the special terms offered by the Queen.

It will be remembered that four States of the Commonwealth offered to convey unemployed women and girls to Australia for £1, on condition they entered domestic service for one year. This means their going free of cost, for the Central Committee has recommended that £1 shall be paid from the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and another £1 be given to them on landing.

Another class of women who have suffered owing to the war are the lower-grade clerks and typists. Schemes to deal with these are well in hand, and arrangements have been made to provide training in the higher branches of the clerical profession, such as accountancy, languages, verbatim shorthand and typewriting. A maintenance grant of 10s. a week is paid during training, with an additional grant for expenses not exceeding 4s. a week. Places have also been found for a large number of such workers.

HORTICULTURE FOR WOMEN.

For another class of unemployed women schemes of fruit-pulping and vegetable drying in the West of England are being successfully developed, whilst a back-to-the-land experiment is being made at Radlett for unemployed women in the East-end of London, who are being trained in fruit-growing and horticulture.

The committee have given much care and attention to the establishment of a central depôt, from which all materials will as far as practicable be supplied to mayoral workrooms throughout the country. In this connection the committee have received generous contributions of material from many wholesale firms. It is anticipated that by controlling the expenditure on materials at one centre great economies will be possible. This will ensure a larger proportion still of the Relief Fund going in wages. How high the proportion going in wages already is may be gathered from the fact that in a single month's work at the experimental workrooms in London the cost of material amounted to only 12½ per cent., other disbursements 1 per cent., while the remaining 86½ per cent. was paid in wages.

In contemplating the work of the committee it must always be remembered that the object of the relief work-rooms is not production for profit.

652.

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette,
December 16th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

DOLLS' TEA-SETS MADE AT BRITISH FACTORIES.

PROBLEM OF GIRLS UNDER SIXTEEN.

One of the new trades suggested by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for giving work to women is the making of dolls' tea-sets.

This work is now progressing favourably in the Potteries, particularly at Stoke-on-Trent. One firm reports that they are able to employ more women than they have been able to do for a very long time by reason of the new industry.

The work is very suitable to the girls, who have clever hands, and whose usual employment is in pottery ware. In Stoke-on-Trent alone 23,000 women and girls are normally employed in this work. Since the war began the unemployment has been considerable, and there is practically no other trade in Stoke to which the women can turn.

Miniature Dinner and Dessert Sets in China.

Before the war the dolls' tea-sets were all made in Germany, and the demand for them, particularly at Christmas-time, is large. The shopkeepers at Stoke have themselves urged the manufacturers to take up this class of work. Since it has been commenced there has been a quick sale for the British-made article. Toy dinner, tea, dessert, and toilet sets are being made by a process which is easy for the girls to learn, and at which they can speedily earn good wages.

One employer reports to the Committee that he is also copying German vases of good shape and pattern, for which there are good orders. Employment is thus being found for an additional number of women.

Box-making Another Industry.

The trade is circulated through the ordinary channels, and is conducted on commercial lines. It is considered to be very important that this should be the course pursued in every case, in order to make the work of a permanent character.

The making of boxes for the tea-sets will give further work to women, while the packing is another definite employment. If the suggestions of the Committee are followed, the latter will be developed into an art, as it is in Germany.

Girl Wage Earners.

How to employ girl wage-earners under sixteen years of age who have been thrown out of work by the war has also been under the consideration of the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

Thousands of these girls in London alone, who have been breadwinners in their families, are now displaced. In the West End dressmakers' assistants and apprentices are thrown out of work, in West Ham and other districts factories have closed, and in the outlying districts of London generally, bottle-washers and other unskilled workers in pickle-making and jam-making are unemployed. The provinces, too, have their distress. In Lancashire it is very urgent. Wherever a mill has closed down, or reduced its workers, young girls are out of work.

Child Rent Payers.

The first advice to them was to go back to school, and this, where practical, is undoubtedly the best plan. Unfortunately the girls cannot do it. Their parents cannot afford that they should do so. Even the 4s. or 5s. per week which a child earns at "matching," because the mother is too poor to apprentice her, very often pays the rent.

Socially and industrially these girls are at the most critical age. It is feared that they will become practically useless if they are not given occupation, released as they are from school discipline. Some would attend the trade schools, but the difficulty is that they do not earn any money, and their mothers would rather they stayed at home to help them. It is not thought advisable that the girls should ordinarily be employed in the relief workrooms, and the Committee feels that a great opportunity offers to use this time of enforced unemployment in giving the girls useful training. The local representatives have been asked to co-operate with the local education authorities in looking after these juveniles. It is proposed that the training should be undertaken wherever possible by the local education authority, and a maintenance grant coming from the Queen's Fund be given to girls who have been wage-earners through the local relief authority.

Useful Subjects.

The committee suggests that the programme of education provided might usefully include any of the following subjects:—

For those who have been engaged in a skilled trade, instruction in the higher branches of that trade where practicable. Schemes of this kind would depend on the local occupations, and must largely be left to those acquainted with the locality. Generally speaking, it should be desirable to provide further trade instruction for all previously occupied in clothing trades such as tailoresses, shirt-makers, blouse-makers, milliners, etc., while classes in shorthand, bookkeeping, commercial arithmetic, and office routine might be provided for typists.

Instruction in cookery, laundry work, making and mending clothes, household management, or elementary housewifery for the unskilled.

English, physical exercises, hygiene, singing, etc., might also profitably form a part of such courses.

Maintenance and Meals.

The Board of Education are prepared to facilitate the formation of such classes, and they have offered to instruct their inspectors, including those who have expert knowledge of different trades and industries, to give any assistance in their power. They have suggested also that, in the present emergency, fees for such classes could be remitted.

Girls receiving such training may be given grants of 4s. to 6s. per week, with a midday meal in addition.

All communications with regard to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and gifts for sale, should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

652/32

652.

Daily Graphic,
Dec: 16th. 1914.

THE QUEEN & WORK FOR WOMEN.

HOW AND WHERE TO APPLY TO HER MAJESTY'S FUND.

From many communications received there obviously exists a considerable misunderstanding about the "Work for Women's Fund."

Some weeks after the National Relief Fund was inaugurated by the Prince of Wales it became evident that the provision of work for women was an urgent necessity. For this reason the Queen started a special fund with this object. The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairman and Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. secretary, was thereupon appointed by Mr. Herbert Samuel, with the approval of the Queen, to initiate and supervise the necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the Committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies the final responsibility for the expenditure rests.

All the money collected in Her Majesty's name by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund (and its council), of which Lady Roxburgh is the hon. secretary, and Mrs. C. A. Pearson, the hon. treasurer, is handed to the National Relief Fund, and can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women.

The Queen's co-operation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of the money to finance the schemes. All suggestions, therefore, for employing or helping women should be sent to the hon. secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, 8, Grosvenor Place, S.W., and not to Buckingham Palace, while contributions should be sent to the hon. treasurer of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland Place, W.

Applications for employment or for help for individual women should be addressed to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the local town hall or urban district office, and communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the secretary, Professional Classes Sub-Committee, Board of Education, Whitehall, S.W.

Manchester Courier,
Dec: 18th. 1914.

Girls for Australia.

I am informed that Australia's invitation to unemployed business girls has already had a response from 104 young workers. They include typists, dressmakers, accountants, shop girls, and factory workers. By a scheme approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, the Queen's Work for Women Fund is paying the registration fee of £1, which is all the passage money required before sailing, and £1 is to be given to each girl on landing. She will also be provided with an outfit made in the Queen's workrooms, and a situation will be found for her by the Government of Australia. The rest of the assisted passage, which amounts to £2 in most cases, is to be repaid in instalments from the monthly wages. Most of the girls who are going out are unemployed in consequence of the war, and they are looking forward with eagerness to the time when they will know "want" no more.

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, December 17th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

TYPISTS AND SHOP GIRLS FOR AUSTRALIA.

YOUNG EMIGRANTS.

Australia's invitation to the Queen for unemployed business girls has already had a delighted response from 104 young workers.

They include typists, dressmakers, accountants, shop-girls, and factory workers.

"What more do you want?" said one of the shop-girls. "Why! We're almost paid to go!"

By a scheme approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, the Queen's Work for Women Fund is paying the registration fee of £1, which is all the passage-money required before sailing, and £1 is to be given to each girl on landing. She will also be provided with an outfit made in the Queen's workrooms, and a situation will be found for her by the Government of Australia. The rest of the assisted passage, which amounts to £2 in most cases, is to be repaid in instalments from the monthly wages.

Cannot Save in a Shop.

"I've always wanted to emigrate," the girl continued, "but I never thought I should be able to. You can't save in a shop. You have to spend all your money on food if you want to keep healthy."

This girl is going with her friend, and they are both nice-looking, healthy, refined girls, just the kind from which an Empire should be built. Far from despising the housework to which they are going, these shop-girls are looking forward to it.

"I'm sick to death of business," one girl said, "and I know all about housework. I'm the eldest girl of eleven, and I was always a kind of 'mother' to the others. But I'd rather go into service there than here. You're looked down upon here, but they say Australian ladies would be ashamed not to be able to scrub a floor."

The girls took very little time to make up their minds. They "took a fancy" to Melbourne, limelight pictures of which were shown to them at a tea-party given by the British Women's Emigration Association. Now they think they know more about Australia than the Association itself. They have every pamphlet which has been written on the country, and they have traced their voyage out on the map.

"I don't think anything on earth would stop us from going now," said one friend, and the other nodded a vigorous assent.

From Typewriting to Service.

Two sisters, shorthand-typists, are going together. One is a quiet, steady-looking girl, who will take care of her pretty young sister. They are children of a sensible, respectable father, and they think they will stay in domestic service in Australia. They know all about the new country, too, and the eldest one thinks there will be more opportunity for them both, as there are nine brothers and sisters at home.

"Father doesn't mind, and we have a stepmother, and she wouldn't say anything."

A little factory girl is just longing to go, but she is barely seventeen, the minimum age fixed by Australia. She is the eldest of eleven, and 'father is so cruel, that's why mother wants us to go away."

She would make a splendid little emigrant, strong, energetic, and determined, with healthy, rosy cheeks, and bright dark eyes.

Even the fact that her cousin, who was going with her, is "doubting it" now does not put her off

"I don't mind how long I wait," she said, "if I can go in the end. There's too many of us at home Father gives mother money and I give her my 8s. or 9s., but you couldn't call us comfortable. There's so many boys, and they eat such a lot, and kick out their boots in no time"

She is to be "put off" work at Christmas, for she is employed in the confectionery trade and it will be the slack season. Until she is old enough to go to Australia the British Women's Emigration Association have offered to put her into a domestic training home.

Narrow-minded Relatives.

"Do you think you can get us off by January 6?" was the eager query of a young glove-maker who is going to Australia with her friend, a cashier.

"I've been out of work for three weeks, and now I've got a temporary job for a fortnight, which finishes on Christmas Eve. I can't save anything of my money, for you have to keep up an appearance or else you get the sack. And it's not that we spend it on amusements, for we never have any. My friend has been helping me when I've been out of work, but she can't do it any longer."

She is a bright-faced, nice-looking girl, whose father has been out of work for two years, and whose mother has been the bread-winner. She wouldn't like her relations to know she is going to service in Australia, for they are "narrow-minded," and might "look down on father and mother for not putting me into business."

She would not mind housework herself. "I don't think English girls do mind work," she said, "only they don't like being spoken to anyhow. I'd work my fingers to the bone for anyone who treated me properly. And I've always wanted to travel. I've been to the Museum, and learned all about Australia and the products and everything."

Her friend is equally eager to be off at the beginning of January, for she "doesn't know what Louie is to do," and she herself will be out of work. She is not afraid of being homesick, for her home is in the country, and she is only able to see her people about once a year Her father wouldn't stand in her light, and she has a step-mother.

Three Shillings to Pay the Rent.

A young dressmaker lives alone with a younger sister who is "going to be engaged at Christmas," so she wouldn't mind her going to Australia. She was a bodice assistant, and she was given a fortnight's holiday at the beginning of August, and then told not to come back till she was sent for.

Seven weeks ago she was taken into one of the Queen's workrooms. She does not want to face unemployment again, for she remembers the day she got work at the workroom. She was in despair, for she had spent all her little savings, and had only 3s. left to pay the rent.

"It's best for me to go," she said, "for they say dressmaking won't be any good for a long time to come."

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

652.

Evening Standard, Dec. 18th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

WORK FOR WOMEN IN CLOTH-MAKING FACTORIES.

IMPORTANT CONTRACTS.

Not the least valuable part of the activities of the Central Committee on Women's Employment has been its efforts to obtain orders for firms which would otherwise be at a standstill.

Thus, during the last few days an order for khaki clothing sufficient to maintain a considerable number of women in employment for several months has been obtained for a large firm at Liverpool, where distress existed among the employees.

Contract for Overcoats.

In the same way, a mantle factory in London on the advice of the committee, tendered to the War Office for a contract for 8000 great-coats.

The committee has also interested itself in the increase of the supply of khaki clothing, and certain carpet-weaving factories have been led to arrange to manufacture this cloth on a great scale. These firms have now tendered to the War Office and to the Allied Governments for orders which, if given, will lead to the re-employment of some thousands of girls and women weavers reduced by the stoppage of the carpet trade to idleness.

Thousands of Belts in Five Days.

It is creditable to the committee and to Mr. J. J. Mallon, who supervises this side of its work, that the organisation created is capable at short notice of adjusting itself to fresh demands. A fortnight ago an order to make 7000 flannel belts was suddenly offered on condition that the belts were finished within five days. The order was taken and satisfactorily executed in the specified time. Again, three days ago, an order for 8000 belts was undertaken in the same way, and will be delivered by the end of the week.

The work of the contracts department, it should be noted, is entirely self-supporting, and does not involve expenditure from the National Relief Funds.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the town or county hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

652/33

652.

The Medical Times
Dec 19/1914.

652/34

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

THE women in the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are to be paid for the Christmas holidays.

The workrooms will be closed on December 25th and 26th, and re-opened on the Monday morning, and the women returning to work will be paid for the two days missed. The workrooms will also be closed if possible at mid-day on December 24th, the workers being paid for the whole day. One of the new trades suggested by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for giving work to women is the making of doll's tea-sets. This work is now progressing favourably in the Potteries. One firm reports that they are able to employ more women than they have been able to do for a very long time by reason of the new industry. The work is very suitable to the girls, whose usual employment is in pottery ware. In Stoke-on-Trent alone, 23,000 women and girls are normally employed in this work. Since the war began the unemployment has been considerable, and there is practically no other trade in Stoke to which the women can turn. Before the war the doll's tea-sets were all made in Germany, and the demand for them, particularly at Christmas-time, is large. The shopkeepers at Stoke have themselves urged the manufacturers to 'take up this class of work Since it has been commenced there has been a quick sale for the British-made article. Toy dinner, tea, dessert and toilet sets are being made by a process which is easy for the girls to learn, and at which they can speedily earn good wages. One employer reports to the Committee that he is also copying German vases of good shape and pattern for which there are good orders.

Daily Citizen,
Dec: 19th. 1914.

3-COURSE LUNCH FOR 3D.

MODEL MENUS OF THE QUEEN'S COOKS.

Cooks and housekeepers are being trained by the Central Committee on Women's Employment at the restaurant just opened at the headquarters in Grosvenor-place. The unemployed women who are learning to cook while they are preparing meals for the staff have been quick to grasp their present opportunity.

Practically two luncheons are prepared every day, for the staff and for the workers of the committee's neighbouring workrooms. Typical menus are as follows:—

SEVENPENNY LUNCHEON	THREEPENNY LUNCHEON
Stewed steak, potatoes, and boiled rice.	Cottage Pie or Haricot bean soup.
Trifle.	Treacle pudding.
	Cup of tea.

The cooks are being trained as part of the work of the Queen's work for Women's Fund. Most of them have had no experience of a kitchen before, but the instructors find them the most willing of learners. All sorts of plain and fancy cooking are taught.

Labour News,
Dec: 19th. 1914.

Work for Women.—The "Work for Women" Fund exists for the provision of work for women whose occupations have been affected by the war, and the hon. secretary is Miss Mary R. Macarthur, of the National Federation of Women Workers. Money collected for the fund can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women, and suggestions for employing or helping women should be sent to the hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor Place, S.W., while contributions should be sent to the hon. treasurer, 33, Portland Place, W. Applications for employment or help should be addressed to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town hall in the locality in which the applicant resides. Communications in respect of professional women should be sent to the secretary, professional classes sub-committee, Board of Education, Whitehall, S.W.

Morning Post, Dec: 21st.

WORK FOR WOMEN AND GIRLS.

The Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress have forwarded to local authorities copies of memoranda prepared by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for the guidance of local committees in whose areas considerable distress exists among women and girls as a result of the war, and in which it is desirable to give facilities for instruction and training either in connection with or apart from a work-room scheme. The Central Committee point out that the object of combining relief with schemes of work is not merely to avoid the dangers which attend relief through doles but to afford an opportunity of maintaining or increasing the efficiency of the girls and women concerned.

Nottingham Guardian,
Dec: 21st. 1914.

WOMEN'S WORKROOMS.

SCHEMING TO KEEP UNEMPLOYED DURING THE WAR.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment have issued a memorandum on training and instruction in connection with schemes of work for women and girls temporarily unemployed owing to the war. It is stated that the object of combining relief with schemes of work is not merely to avoid the dangers which attend relief through doles, but also to afford an opportunity of maintaining or definitely increasing the efficiency of the girls and women concerned. It is hoped that the Local Representative Committee will make every effort to see that the character of the work and training provided and the management and discipline of the workrooms will be such as to leave results of real and permanent benefit.

In some case it may be evident that some of the applicants for assistance, being young and teachable would benefit especially by the training and discipline of a workroom or by the educational facilities associated with it. On the other hand it may be preferable in giving assistance to a married woman who has children to attend to, not to give her work, or, at any rate, full-time work in a workroom. It should be clearly understood that in selecting the workers for employment in a workroom no inquiries of an inquisitorial nature should be made into the character of the women and girls who apply. Inquiries from a worker's previous employer should be avoided unless there is positive reason to doubt the accuracy of an applicant's statement as regards the fact of previous employment and loss of work Where it is necessary to communicate with the employer, the inquiry should extend only to the question of whether the woman was dismissed as a result of the war, and should not touch on any question of character or competence.

It is not intended that a girl who has normally maintained herself should be disentitled to a full 40 hours' work in a workroom on the ground that she is living with her family, or that the hours should be reduced unless the girl has some other source of personal income. When deciding on the admission of applicants to the workroom the family income must be taken into account, and the work allotted with due regard to the necessities of the different cases It is not, however, contemplated that the amount of relief to which the applicant's family may be entitled should determine the admission of the applicant to the workroom or the number of hours which she should be employed.

The Daily Telegraph,
Dec: 21st. 1914

WOMEN'S WORK-ROOMS.

The Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress has issued two memoranda which have been prepared by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. One deals with certain points connected with women's work-rooms, and the other has been framed for the guidance of those local representative committees in whose areas considerable distress due to the war may exist among women and girls, and where it may be desirable to provide facilities for instruction and training, either in connection with or apart from, a work-room scheme.

It is stated that the object of combining relief with schemes of work is not merely to avoid the dangers which attend relief through doles, but also to afford an opportunity of maintaining or definitely increasing the efficiency of the girls and women concerned. It is hoped that the local representative committees will make every effort to see that the character of the work and training provided and the management and discipline of the work-rooms will be such as to leave results of real and permanent benefit.

As regards the different kinds of work that may be suitably undertaken in work-rooms, the committee emphasise the importance of making the work, so far as possible, educational in character. Work, for instance, which will tend to develop ingenuity and a certain amount of taste is preferable to a merely mechanical production of stock articles; and, especially with the work of teachable women, it is worth while to be content with a smaller number of finished articles if the women can be induced to take a pride in their work

652/35

652.

The Observer,
December 20th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S CROWN.

HOW IT IS MAKING WORK FOR UNEMPLOYED WOMEN.

Additional work has come to unemployed women through the plan of embroidering the Royal monogram on every garment made in the relief workrooms of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. A small staff of unemployed embroideresses are now engaged at the committee's depôt on this final work.

These skilled workers are very glad of the employment, for their trade is one of those which have suffered most during the war. Elaborate dress embroidery in which they have all been employed is a luxury, and as such is being dispensed with at present. The forewoman herself supplied 150 firms before the war, but not one can give an order at present.

The garments which are now being made are stamped and embroidered before they leave the workrooms. At first the embroidery presented what seemed an insuperable difficulty to the workers, many of whom could not sew at all when they came to the workrooms. A skilled embroideress visits them in turn, however, spending two days in each workroom in order to teach the women.

The Daily Chronicle,
Dec: 21st. 1914.

NO INQUISITORIAL INQUIRIES.

Two memoranda, prepared by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, have been issued by the Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress. They are supplementary to memoranda previously published, and deal with certain points connected with women's workrooms and with cases of distress, due to the war, that may exist among women and girls and in which it may be desirable to provide facilities for instruction and training either in connection with or apart from a workroom scheme.

One of the new regulations forbids inquiries of an inquisitorial nature into the character of the women and girls who apply for work, and inquiries at a previous employer are to be avoided unless there is positive reason to doubt the accuracy of an applicant's statement.

Rebbited Indicator,
December 26th. 1914.

EMPLOYMENT AMONG WOMEN.

THE Central Committee on Women's Employment have issued a memorandum on training and instruction in connection with schemes of work for women and girls temporarily unemployed owing to the war. It is stated that the object of combining relief with schemes of work is not merely to avoid the dangers which attend relief through doles, but also to afford an opportunity of maintaining or definitely increasing the efficiency of the girls and women concerned. It is hoped local representative committees will make every effort to see that the character of the work and training provided, and the management and discipline of the workrooms will be such as to leave results of real and permanent benefit. In some cases it may be evidence that some of the applicants for assistance, being young and teachable, would benefit especially by the training and discipline of a workroom or by the educational facilities associated with it. On the other hand, it may be preferable in giving assistance to a married woman who has children to attend to, not to give her work, or at any rate full-time in a workroom. It should be clearly understood that in selecting the workers for employment in a workroom no enquiries of an inquisitorial nature should be made into the character of the women and girls who apply. Where it is necessary to communicate with the employer the enquiry should extend only to the question of whether the woman was dismissed as a result of the war and should not touch on any question of character or competence. As regards the different kinds of work that may be suitably undertaken in workrooms, the committee emphasise the importance of making the work so far as possible educational in character. Work, for instance, which will tend to develop ingenuity and a certain amount of taste such as prettily-cut children's dresses, etc., is preferable to a merely mechanical production of stock articles; and, especially with the work of teachable women, it is worth while to be content with a smaller number of finished articles if the women can be induced to take a pride in their work. The committee recommend the setting up of a scheme of cooking and domestic economy in conjunction with the workroom, and state the course should include instruction in needlework, simple home cookery, home laundry work, and lectures on infant care and hygiene. A certain number of openings for other women can be found by training them as [illegible]

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette,
December 22nd. 1914.

652/36
Islington Gazette,
Dec: 24th. 1914.
652.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

UNEMPLOYED WOMEN'S WORK PRESENTED TO HER MAJESTY.

BEAUTIFUL EMBROIDERY.

Eight sets of clothing which have been made in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, with eight cradles made out of banana crates, have been sent to the Queen.

The clothing consists of complete outfits for babies, clothes for mothers, and for school-children. They have not been specially made, but have been taken from several workrooms, so that they represent very good samples of the women's work. On one nightdress is the following note:—

"Made by a woman who could not sew at all when she came here a fortnight ago. She spent two days learning the various stitches, and has since made a set of garments for a mother."

The gown is even featherstitched, and the whole work is as fine and neat as could be. The worker was previously a cleaner in a public-house.

Scope for Individual Talent.

The decoration of the garments has evidently given the women keen pleasure. It is open to them to use any stitch they like in beautifying the garments, and a great deal of original work is the result.

On the corner of one baby's head flannel a shamrock is embroidered, with "Darling" written below, and the wavy-feather-stitching round the edges is intercepted with French knots. The women have also used their own patterns in making crochet edging for the neck and sleeves of the baby-gowns.

The monogram on each garment—a crown with M.R. beneath—is a decoration in itself, and the workers have made the most of it. On the baby's gown it is placed as a tiny medal might be, and on the mother's it is in the centre of the front box-pleat.

Additional work has come to unemployed women through the plan of embroidering the royal monogram on every garment made in the Relief Workrooms.

Many hundred garments were made before this distinction was conferred on the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and a small staff of unemployed embroidresses are now engaged at the committee's depot on this final work.

Elaborate Hand-work.

These skilled workers are very glad of the employment, for their trade is one of those which have suffered most during the war. Elaborate dress embroidery, in which they have all been employed, is a luxury, and as such is being dispensed with at present. The forewoman herself supplied 150 firms before the war, but not one can give an order at present.

The garments which are now being made are stamped and embroidered before they leave the workrooms. At first the embroidery presented what seemed an insuperable difficulty to the workers, many of whom could not sew at all when they came to the workrooms. A skilled embroidress visits them in turn, however, spending two days in each workroom in order to teach the women.

The best needleworkers are picked out for the lessons, but even the roughest worker wants to try. Her pride in finishing her own work entirely is reinforced by the desire to learn something new. The spirit of the workrooms was well expressed by one woman: "I never done it before," she said, "but it's nice to be larned."

Feather-stitching in Colours.

Individual taste has been shown also in the colours used.

A dainty blue-green bed jacket is feather-stitched in green, and a child's dress is a study in red, white, and blue. It is of navy serge, with buttons down the centre, on which are embroidered stars in red. The turn-down collar and cuffs are of blue and white check cambric, featherstitched in red.

Home-made Buttons.

The set of children's clothes represents the ideal in comfort and economy. For a girl there are flannel combinations, knickers on a bodice, with knitted suspenders attached, and a frock; for a small boy, flannel combinations, knickers on a bodice and a flannel blouse, or a knitted jersey for an older boy.

All the clothes are made to fasten down the front, so that the child can quickly learn to help himself, and the buttons in every case are home made. Washing collars and cuffs are on nearly every little girl's frock, and these are detachable. They have been made in every case from small sample pieces presented to the committee by manufacturers.

All communications regarding the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Mary Ball,
Dec: 26th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

WORK FOR DRESSMAKERS.

How small workshop employers, faced by troubles caused by the war, can escape from them, was explained to a meeting of traders convened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

Mr. J. J. Mallon, on behalf of the Committee, pointed out that in a time of war large orders for supplies of clothing can only be expected from Governmental sources. The difficulty is that small firms who desire to apply for such orders are in doubt as to the suitability of their machines to do the War Office work, or their knowledge of the trade is not sufficient to warrant the authorities in placing contracts with them.

The consequence is that the demands of the Army are being met less readily than would otherwise be the case, and at the same time large numbers of women and girls are wholly or partially unemployed.

Upon this unsatisfactory position the Central Committee enters with a scheme for the removal of the causes that hinder the spreading of War Office employment.

The Committee proposes to tender for a large contract and to share it among various small firms. The Committee would take the responsibility of buying the cloth and trimmings, and arrangements would be made for the cutting, if the firms felt that they could not do it economically themselves. Large central premises would be taken, and the necessary appliances installed.

In other ways help might be given. For instance, small factories might not have a button-holing machine, but one could be bought for the central workroom, and the button-holing be done there.

It would be necessary to train the workers for the new work, and the Central Committee hoped to arrange that the foremen or forewomen of the various firms should be taken into an up-to-date Army Clothing Factory for a week's experience. They would thus obtain a knowledge of the best methods of War Office requirements. The address of the Hon. Sec. Central Committee for Women's Employment is Wimborne House, Arlington Street, London, S.W.

THE ISLINGTON TRAINING CENTRE

THE ART OF PATTERN MAKING.

CLASS FOR WORKING WOMEN.

A recent issue of the "Evening Standard" contained an interesting and valuable article which dealt with the Islington Workrooms for Women which have been started in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

We have already devoted much space to the movement, but the "Standard" describes the classes from a new standpoint, and we have pleasure in bringing the article to the notice of our Islington readers:—

What is the use of teaching working women to make patterns? They can buy a pattern for a penny in a magazine."

So say the critics of the cutting-out class for unemployed women at the Islington Domestic Economy Training Centre, belonging to the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The girls answered for themselves.

"We haven't got no pennies for patterns."

The work they have done has answered, too. From one close-fitting blouse pattern they have cut out and put together a blouse with tucked front, a kimono blouse, a blouse with raglan sleeves, and blouses with all kinds of fancy yokes. The original pattern was cut to the measurements of one of their number, and made up and fitted before their eyes. Then they were shown several blouses, and asked which they would like to copy.

The work they are doing now would answer any criticism. They are learning to cut undergarments from that wonderful blouse pattern. The last lesson was on the nightdress.

The critics would likewise get their answer by watching the girls at work. They all used their scissors the wrong way when they began, and even now they have to be told to take a long, clean cut; jagged edges were never of any account before.

The girls have been employed as packers, bookbinders, corset-makers, hair-preparers, one as a blouse-improver, another as a nursery governess, and scarcely any of them have ever cut out before. There is not a dressmaker in the class at present, although preference in the training is to be given to dressmakers who may be able to improve their skill.

For the rest, it is hoped that they will become efficient needlewomen. They all want to make their own clothes, and presently they are to be allowed to bring material, if they have any, in order to cut their own clothes, or old garments they would like to recut. At present they are working on paper the same width as calico.

They are to be shown also how to adapt patterns found in magazines to suit themselves.

Twelve lessons of two hours each are to be given at first to those in the training scheme, but it is hoped that they may be increased.

The question of insurance for unemployed women who are being trained in domestic and other work in relief workrooms has been puzzling the local employment committees.

It has now been decided that the women are insurable, even though they are spending some of their time in training. As a matter of fact, in most cases they are giving a return in work. At the cookery centres they are preparing dinner for the women doing needlework; in re-modelling garments, they are making clothes for children; and as sick-room helps they are giving necessary assistance in the homes of the poor.

Where the women are spending their whole time in training, and are not producing articles of value, while receiving maintenance grants, their cases will be specially considered by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

It has already been suggested by the Central Committee that the worker's contribution for insurance should be paid by the local representative committee, as well as that of the employer.

The dismay of unemployed women who have entered on a course of domestic economy at relief workrooms when places were found for them by the Labour Exchanges has led the Central Committee to make another decision.

Treacle pudding.

Cup of tea.

The cooks are being trained as part of the work of the Queen's work for Women's Fund. Most of them have had no experience of a kitchen before, but the instructors find them the most willing of learners. All sorts of plain and fancy cooking are taught.

Nottingham Guardian,
Dec. 21 st. 1914.

WOMEN'S WORKROOMS.

SCHEMING TO KEEP UNEMPLOYED DURING THE WAR.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment have issued a memorandum on training and instruction in connection with schemes of work for women and girls temporarily unemployed owing to the war. It is stated that the object of combining relief with schemes of work is not merely to avoid the dangers which attend relief through doles, but also to afford an opportunity of maintaining or definitely increasing the efficiency of the girls and women concerned. It is hoped that the Local Representative Committee will make every effort to see that the character of the work and training provided and the management and discipline of the workrooms will be such as to leave results of real and permanent benefit.

In some case it may be evident that some of the applicants for assistance, being young and teachable would benefit especially by the training and discipline of a workroom or by the educational facilities associated with it. On the other hand it may be preferable in giving assistance to a married woman who has children to attend to, not to give her work, or, at any rate, full-time work in a workroom. It should be clearly understood that in selecting the workers for employment in a workroom no inquiries of an inquisitorial nature should be made into the character of the women and girls who apply. Inquiries from a worker's previous employer should be avoided unless there is positive reason to doubt the accuracy of an applicant's statement as regards the fact of previous employment and loss of work. Where it is necessary to communicate with the employer, the inquiry should extend only to the question of whether the woman was dismissed as a result of the war, and should not touch on any question of character or competence.

It is not intended that a girl who has normally maintained herself should be disentitled to a full 40 hours' work in a workroom on the ground that she is living with her family, or that the hours should be reduced unless the girl has some other source of personal income. When deciding on the admission of applicants to the workroom the family income must be taken into account, and the work allotted with due regard to the necessities of the different cases. It is not, however, contemplated that the amount of relief to which the applicant's family may be entitled should determine the admission of the applicant to the workroom or the number of hours which she should be employed.

local committees in whose areas considerable distress exists among women and girls as a result of the war, and in which it is desirable to give facilities for instruction and training either in connection with or apart from a work-room scheme. The Central Committee point out that the object of combining relief with schemes of work is not merely to avoid the dangers which attend relief through doles but to afford an opportunity of maintaining or increasing the efficiency of the girls and women concerned.

The Daily Telegraph,
Dec: 21st. 1914

WOMEN'S WORK-ROOMS.

The Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress has issued two memoranda which have been prepared by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. One deals with certain points connected with women's work-rooms, and the other has been framed for the guidance of those local representative committees in whose areas considerable distress due to the war may exist among women and girls, and where it may be desirable to provide facilities for instruction and training, either in connection with or apart from, a work-room scheme.

It is stated that the object of combining relief with schemes of work is not merely to avoid the dangers which attend relief through doles, but also to afford an opportunity of maintaining or definitely increasing the efficiency of the girls and women concerned. It is hoped that the local representative committees will make every effort to see that the character of the work and training provided and the management and discipline of the work-rooms will be such as to leave results of real and permanent benefit.

As regards the different kinds of work that may be suitably undertaken in work-rooms, the committee emphasise the importance of making the work, so far as possible, educational in character. Work, for instance, which will tend to develop ingenuity and a certain amount of taste is preferable to a merely mechanical production of stock articles; and, especi ally with the work of teachable women, it is worth while to be content with a smaller number of finished articles if the women can be induced to take a pride in their work at all when they came to the workrooms. A skilled embroideress visits them in turn, however, spending two days in each workroom in order to teach the women.

652/35

The Daily Chronicle,
Dec. 21 st. 1914.

NO INQUISITORIAL INQUIRIES.

Two memoranda, prepared by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, have been issued by the Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress. They are supplementary to memoranda previously published, and deal with certain points connected with women's workrooms and with cases of distress, due to the war, that may exist among women and girls and in which it may be desirable to provide facilities for instruction and training either in connection with or apart from a workroom scheme.

One of the new regulations forbids inquiries of an inquisitorial nature into the character of the women and girls who apply for work, and inquiries at a previous employer are to be avoided unless there is positive reason to doubt the accuracy of an applicant's statement.

Rebbited Inquirer,
December 26th. 1914

EMPLOYMENT AMONG WOMEN.

THE Central Committee on Women's Employment have issued a memorandum on training and instruction in connection with schemes of work for women and girls temporarily unemployed owing to the war. It is stated that the object of combining relief with schemes of work is not merely to avoid the dangers which attend relief through doles, but also to afford an opportunity of maintaining or definitely increasing the efficiency of the girls and women concerned. It is hoped local representative committees will make every effort to see that the character of the work and training provided, and the management and discipline of the workrooms will be such as to leave results of real and permanent benefit. In some cases it may be evidence that some of the applicants for assistance, being young and teachable, would benefit especially by the training and discipline of a workroom or by the educationa facilities associated with it. On the other hand, it may be preferable in giving assistance to a married woman who has children to attend to, not to give her work, or at any rate full-time in a workroom. It should be clearly understood that in selecting the workers for employment in a workroom no enquiries of an inquisitorial nature should be made into the character of the women and girls who apply. Where it is necessary to communicate with the employer the enquiry should extend only to the question of whether the woman was dismissed as a result of the war and should not touch on any question of character or competence. As regards the different kinds of work that may be suitably undertaken in workrooms, the committee emphasise the importance of making the work so far as possible educational in character. Work, for instance, which will tend to develop ingenuity and a certain amount of taste such as prettily-cut children's dresses, etc., is preferable to a merely mechanical production of stock articles; and, especially with the work of teachable women, it is worth while to be content with a smaller number of finished articles if the women can be induced to take a pride in their work. The committee recommend the setting up of a scheme of cooking and domestic economy in conjunction with the workroom, and state the course should include instruction in needlework, simple home cookery, home laundry work, and lectures on infant care and hygiene. A certain number of openings for older women can be found by training them as sickroom helps. A maintenance allowance of 4s. with meals to girls receiving instruction is recommended, but in special cases the amount may be varied according to the financial circumstances of her family.

so that they represent very good samples of the women's work. On one nightdress is the following note:—

"Made by a woman who could not sew at all when she came here a fortnight ago. She spent two days learning the various stitches, and has since made a set of garments for a mother."

The gown is even featherstitched, and the whole work is as fine and neat as could be. The worker was previously a cleaner in a public-house.

Scope for Individual Talent.

The decoration of the garments has evidently given the women keen pleasure. It is open to them to use any stitch they like in beautifying the garments, and a great deal of original work is the result.

On the corner of one baby's head flannel a shamrock is embroidered, with "Darling" written below, and the wavy-feather-stitching round the edges is intercepted with French knots. The women have also used their own patterns in making crochet edging for the neck and sleeves of the baby-gowns.

The monogram on each garment—a crown with M.R. beneath—is a decoration in itself, and the workers have made the most of it. On the baby's gown it is placed as a tiny medal might be, and on the mother's it is in the centre of the front box-pleat.

Additional work has come to unemployed women through the plan of embroidering the royal monogram on every garment made in the Relief Workrooms.

Many hundred garments were made before this distinction was conferred on the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and a small staff of unemployed embroidresses are now engaged at the committee's depot on this final work.

Elaborate Hand-work.

These skilled workers are very glad of the employment, for their trade is one of those which have suffered most during the war. Elaborate dress embroidery, in which they have all been employed, is a luxury, and as such is being dispensed with at present. The forewoman herself supplied 150 firms before the war, but not one can give an order at present.

The garments which are now being made are stamped and embroidered before they leave the workrooms. At first the embroidery presented what seemed an insuperable difficulty to the workers, many of whom could not sew at all when they came to the workrooms. A skilled embroidress visits them in turn, however, spending two days in each workroom in order to teach the women.

The best needleworkers are picked out for the lessons, but even the roughest worker wants to try. Her pride in finishing her own work entirely is reinforced by the desire to learn something new. The spirit of the workrooms was well expressed by one woman: "I never done it before," she said, "but it's nice to be larned."

Feather-stitching in Colours.

Individual taste has been shown also in the colours used.

A dainty blue-green bed jacket is featherstitched in green, and a child's dress is a study in red, white, and blue. It is of navy serge, with buttons down the centre, on which are embroidered stars in red. The turn-down col-be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Mary Bull,
Dec. 26th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Work for Dressmakers.

How small workshop employers, faced by troubles caused by the war, can escape from them, was explained to a meeting of traders convened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

Mr. J. J. Mallon, on behalf of the Committee, pointed out that in a time of war large orders for supplies of clothing can only be expected from Governmental sources. The difficulty is that small firms who desire to apply for such orders are in doubt as to the suitability of their machines to do the War Office work, or their knowledge of the trade is not sufficient to warrant the authorities in placing contracts with them.

The consequence is that the demands of the Army are being met less readily than would otherwise be the case, and at the same time large numbers of women and girls are wholly or partially unemployed.

Upon this unsatisfactory position the Central Committee enters with a scheme for the removal of the causes that hinder the spreading of War Office employment.

The Committee proposes to tender for a large contract and to share it among various small firms. The Committee would take the responsibility of buying the cloth and trimmings, and arrangements would be made for the cutting, if the firms felt that they could not do it economically themselves. Large central premises would be taken, and the necessary appliances installed.

In other ways help might be given. For instance, small factories might not have a button-holing machine, but one could be bought for the central workroom, and the button-holing be done there.

It would be necessary to train the workers for the new work, and the Central Committee hoped to arrange that the foremen or forewomen of the various firms should be taken into an up-to-date Army Clothing Factory for a week's experience. They would thus obtain a knowledge of the best methods of War Office requirements. The address of the Hon. Sec. Central Committee for Women's Employment is Wimborne House, Arlington Street, London, S.W.

article to the notice of our Islington readers:—

What is the use of teaching working women to make patterns? They can buy a pattern for a penny in a magazine."

So say the critics of the cutting-out class for unemployed women at the Islington Domestic Economy Training Centre, belonging to the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The girls answered for themselves.

"We haven't got no pennies for patterns."

The work they have done has answered, too. From one close-fitting blouse pattern they have cut out and put together a blouse with tucked front, a kimono blouse, a blouse with raglan sleeves, and blouses with all kinds of fancy yokes. The original pattern was cut to the measurements of one of their number, and made up and fitted before their eyes. Then they were shown several blouses, and asked which they would like to copy.

The work they are doing now would answer any criticism. They are learning to cut undergarments from that wonderful blouse pattern. The last lesson was on the nightdress.

The critics would likewise get their answer by watching the girls at work. They all used their scissors the wrong way when they began, and even now they have to be told to take a long, clean cut; jagged edges were never of any account before.

The girls have been employed as packers, bookbinders, corset-makers, hair-preparers, one as a blouse-improver, another as a nursery governess, and scarcely any of them have ever cut out before. There is not a dressmaker in the class at present, although preference in the training is to be given to dressmakers who may be able to improve their skill.

For the rest, it is hoped that they will become efficient needlewomen. They all want to make their own clothes, and presently they are to be allowed to bring material, if they have any, in order to cut their own clothes, or old garments they would like to recut. At present they are working on paper the same width as calico.

They are to be shown also how to adapt patterns found in magazines to suit themselves.

Twelve lessons of two hours each are to be given at first to those in the training scheme, but it is hoped that they may be increased.

The question of insurance for unemployed women who are being trained in domestic and other work in relief workrooms has been puzzling the local employment committees.

It has now been decided that the women are insurable, even though they are spending some of their time in training. As a matter of fact, in most cases they are giving a return in work. At the cookery centres they are preparing dinner for the women doing needlework; in re-modelling garments, they are making clothes for children; and as sick-room helps they are giving necessary assistance in the homes of the poor.

Where the women are spending their whole time in training, and are not producing articles of value, while receiving maintenance grants, their cases will be specially considered by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

It has already been suggested by the Central Committee that the worker's contribution for insurance should be paid by the local representative committee, as well as that of the employer.

The dismay of unemployed women who have entered on a course of domestic economy at relief workrooms when places were found for them by the Labour Exchanges has led the Central Committee to make another decision.

In coming to it, not only had the disappointment of the girls to be considered, but the fact that the training could not be expected to benefit if it were not continuous.

Women and girls in the workrooms are required to register at the local Labour Exchange, but in future those who join a course of instruction will not be asked to re-register weekly until the training is nearly complete. Those in the workrooms who are not taking a course of lessons will now have first chance of the posts notified by the Labour Exchanges. The cookery classes for these working women proved so popular at one centre that numerous applications were received from women who were not unemployed, asking if they might join them. The committee, however, has laid down a rule that only women unemployed as a consequence of the war may be admitted to the centres. The training is merely being given in place of employment.

Only women who are considered suitable and who are willing to pass through the whole course are accepted. They are specially selected from the workrooms or from among applicants for relief.

652

652/37

Mary Bull,
December 26th. 1914.

A NEW CAPTURE.

HOW WE HAVE WON AN INDUSTRY WHICH WILL KEEP US ALL.

The war has enabled many quick, sensible women to find new outlets for their talents and energies, and it is surprising how well they are doing under new conditions. I could point to a score of ways in which women have served their country as no one but women could. But not the least interesting is a step of which few of you can have heard.

By a quick and practical attention to the needs of the moment the Central Committee on Women's Employment, thanks largely to Mrs. H. J. Tennant and Lady Crewe, has set going an industry which is not only doing immediate good but which will certainly outlast the war, giving decent employment to a large body of women workers and benefiting the purse of every housewife in the land.

The industry is the canning of fruit and the drying of vegetables. Soon after the war broke out, you may remember, there were grave fears about the nation's food. On top of that, in certain parts of the country great crops of fruit were going bad in the fields for want of labour to bring them in; and alongside of the wastage one saw more than the usual number of workless women.

Evidently the remedy was quite simple, but simple remedies are not always seized upon amongst us, even when Parliament has no other business on hand. And at that time Parliament, busily engaged in canning Germans, very naturally had more to do than turn to the problem of canning fruit.

It was here that the Central Women's Committee stepped smartly in and did a bit of work for the Parliament of men. They prepared a scheme, coaxed the Development Commission into helping them to finance it, and thereupon presented it to the Board of Agriculture. They recommended the neighbourhood of Studley Agricultural College, on the borders of Warwickshire and Worcestershire, as a suitable spot to begin the experiment. Not only that, they appointed a Committee to control the undertaking and sent along an expert to give it advice.

In a little more than one month from the time that the idea was first suggested the canning factory had opened its doors, and at Dunnington Heath, near by, another establishment for drying vegetables had also been set going.

Is not that a triumph for the practicality of women folk in the things which concern us?

This vegetable drying business is a knock-down blow for one more German industry. During our last war Germany just coined money sending dried vegetables to our men in South Africa, and it is agreeable to think that now we are so neatly getting our own back.

We are not only busy drying vegetables for Thomas Atkins to keep him cheery on "the long, long way to Tipperary"; we are at the same time lifting trade from the enemy.

The fruit canning is not so new an industry with us, but the present application of it is altogether new and altogether excellent. Not only will it benefit the women to whom it gives work—they can rise to £2 a week as forewomen. It is proposed to set up these factories close to small holdings throughout the country. Thus the small-holder will benefit by selling his produce at his own back door, so saving the heavy freightage rates of forwarding fruit elsewhere.

And consequently every housewife will ultimately benefit, too, because the can of fruit must go down in price the moment more of these factories go up.

May they open soon! And my congratulations to the Central Committee on Women's Employment!

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette,
Dcember 28th. 1914.

652/38

652

Evening Standard,
December 29th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

WORKERS RECEIVE WAGES THROUGHOUT THE HOLIDAYS.

SOCIAL EVENINGS.

FITTING OUT GIRLS FOR DOMESTIC SERVICE.

The Queen has sent a present of several hundred dressed dolls and fancy handkerchiefs to the Central Committee on Women's Employment for distribution among the children of unemployed women.

Christmas has been celebrated in many ways in the workrooms. At Stepney, Christmas puddings were presented by two ladies interested for the women's Christmas Eve dinner, and cake for tea. Another friend is providing the Shoreditch workroom with a party in the workroom, and the girls being trained in cooking are to make the cakes.

A series of social evenings is to be held for the workers in the Islington workrooms, the first to take place on January 2. The workers are to be invited to take part in the concerts, and the women themselves will act as stewards. The piano will be lent, and tea and coffee are to be supplied at cost price.

The Christmas holidays arranged for the women in the workrooms from midday, December 24, have been extended until to-morrow, Tuesday. The women returning to work to-morrow will be paid for the intervening days.

A New Departure.

Something is being done towards making it easy for young girls to go to domestic service by the Queen's Fund.

The difficulty is often one of clothes. "She can't go to service, she ain't got no clothes," said a respectable mother only yesterday, and there the matter ends so far as she is concerned. Daily work is to be found for the girl—if possible in a factory.

"Working for Nothing."

The Metropolitan Association for Befriending Young Servants will find clothes for the girl if she agrees to pay for them after she is in service, but very often the mother needs the girl's money, and cannot afford to let her pay for an outfit.

"It's like her working for nothing for a year," this particular mother said, "and I want her wages at home."

Another mother, who has twelve children, and only two girls in service earning anything, complained: "They begin by spending their wages all on themselves and their clothes, and they forget we want anything at home. My eldest girl never offers me anything."

This woman is not one to wish to take everything from the girl. She has brought all her children up, as she proudly says, without relief from anyone.

Central Committee's Welcome Gift.

The Association itself feels that paying back for an outfit, which costs from 35s. to £2 or £3, is a drag on a girl who is just starting, particularly when she only earns about 2s. 6d. per week. The secretaries of the different branches are therefore very glad of a gift of clothing which has been made from the workrooms of the Central Committee.

It includes warm underclothing, serge dresses, overalls and aprons, all very neatly made. From this store the girls who cannot afford everything they need will be assisted. At present they can only get the bare necessities, and these are often worn out almost before they are paid for. A girl who went to a good situation lately was bound to have a good stock of clothing and to run up a long bill, but even then she had not enough, for she had nothing to help to make a start. Now she is to be sent a gift of underclothing.

Factory Girls Want Places.

Doubly precious is this gift just now, for many girls who have been employed in factories and are out of work through the war are turning towards service. It would be useless to expect them to spend half their wages in paying for an outfit, and yet without clothes they cannot get domestic work.

The Islington branch has a young laundry-worker going into a situation. She had no father or mother, and she had been living with a step-sister. Between them they are keeping six small brothers and sisters. Before the clothes came from the workrooms, the secretary had been wishing that she could give her something. The number of local girls wanting places from this branch has almost doubled since the war began.

Opportunities for Daily Work.

There is a great demand also for daily girls, many people now considering that they cannot afford a resident domestic. The neat blue and white overalls made in the workrooms are therefore to be lent or given to girls who are not tidy enough to go to daily service without them.

A girl now in the workhouse is to be given a new start with some of these clothes. She had been living in lodgings and going out to daily work. She lost her work, pawned her clothes for the rent, and then, when there was nothing left, went into the workhouse.

At present she is wearing the white cap, print dress, and little shawl that seem to belong to the old woman whose active life is past, and since a situation was offered to her she has been worrying about clothes. "I've a decent coat and skirt," she said, "and one other garment, but that's all."

When she found that the Queen's Fund was to help her with an outfit, a gleam of interest came into the dead-looking face. The girl, who has no father or mother, and no one to care what becomes of her, quite evidently felt that the earth was a warm, human place once more.

Girls in Training Homes.

Some of the clothes are to be kept for the girls who come into M.A.B.Y.S. Training Homes.

These girls are sent by care committees and others, and coming from very poor homes, they rarely have enough clothes, even if they are fit to wear. Nightdresses are almost unknown. In some branches the girls have to be washed and dressed before they can even appear before the prospective mistresses.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

FROM TYPEWRITING TO DOMESTIC SERVICE IN AUSTRALIA.

ANXIOUS TO TRAVEL.

Many unemployed women have already responded to Australia's invitation through the Queen to them.

For £1, which the Queen's Fund will pay, the girls are to be taken to Australia, and work in domestic service found for them. £1 is also to be given to them on arrival, and complete outfits for each girl are being made in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

Widows Eager to Go.

So eager are widows to go—for the invitation is extended to them—that it is necessary to ask for birth certificates from women over thirty. The age limit is thirty-five years. Marriage certificates have also been found necessary, for deserted wives are apt to think they are widows. A great many business girls are going very willingly to take up domestic service. Among them are typists, dressmakers, cashiers, shopgirls, and factory workers.

The girl in whose career the Queen took such an interest on her visit to the Poplar workroom hopes to get a place as children's nurse in Australia. She has been called "Her Majesty" by the other girls since the Queen talked to her.

"I've always wanted to go away," said the young emigrant, "but I knew if you emigrate it costs a lot of money. That's why I said I'd go whenever I heard the Queen was going to pay for us."

"There is no one to keep the girl in this country. Her father and mother are both dead, and her aunt with whom she lives wouldn't stand in her light."

"There's no one else to take any notice," the girl said, "and I shan't be homesick. I haven't got any friends, only acquaintances, and I shall save up, and perhaps come home in about five years. They say there won't be much work here after the war, and I was ten weeks out before they took me into the workroom. My work's packing at a confectioners', but I'm fond of children. Everyone gets on in Australia, don't they?

All communications regarding the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and gifts for sale, should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Englishwoman .12/1914. 411
652/39

PROBLEMS OF THE DAY

The Difficulties of Small Industries

At the beginning of the war, every one, even the optimists, thought that we were faced with a prolonged and unexampled period of trade depression and unemployment, and that at the end of four or five months an appreciable proportion of our population would be out of work and dependent upon relief funds for subsistence. The course of events has been very different, and December finds us still anxious, but at present very little hurt. The first shock has been withstood, the early panic has been lived down, and even the industries and professions which felt the impact of the state of war most severely have now begun to recover. The Manchester Guardian reported on November 6th that unemployment in the Manchester district was then less than usual, and this in spite of the fact that the cotton mills were working short time even before the war. The Bethnal Green cabinet-makers were very hard hit in the early weeks of autumn, and are still far from prosperous, but the distribution among them of Government work for the huts for the new army and for prisoners' camps has much relieved the situation.

All trades connected with material of war, shipping, army clothing, boots, and certain kinds of provisions, aré of course extremely prosperous, working full time or overtime and employing more than their usual complement of nands. Some distress there is, no doubt, among unorganized women workers, especially those engaged in the production of luxuries; but at present the number of unemployed persons in the industrial classes is few, and the persons most affected are members of the professional classes, clerical workers, small employers of all kinds, and persons living on very small fixed incomes.

652/40

This being so, the very large relief funds raised by private generosity remain almost undiminished. Nor has the Government been obliged to have recourse to any far-reaching and elaborate plan of relief works. The money is in hand, the exceptional distress is not yet upon us, and consequently both public and private effort can be devoted rather to the prevention of destitution than to its relief by immediate doles. And naturally enough there is a kind of pause in the proceedings of the Government and the relief committees. They are marking time because they have amassed huge sums to meet a situation which has not arisen, and they are undecided as to whether they shall proceed on the theory that the sudden and terrible wave of unemployment is merely postponed, or whether they shall address themselves to the amelioration of conditions now existing, and likely to continue, whatever the course of the war.

*

For it must be remembered that though we have waged war now for four months with a wise lavishness of expenditure, we have not as yet paid for it. Either the bill has not come in, or it has not been paid, or it has been paid with borrowed money. The dislocation of industry which might have resulted from a war so widespread has been avoided or recovered from, the freedom of the seas to our merchant ships has saved us from any extreme disaster; but no measures can entirely neutralise the depression which must accompany heavy taxation and high cost of living. We shall have not the expected great wave of distress, but a slow tide which must take time to rise and to recede. When it recedes we may find our industrial world altered, but it will not be transformed. Even if we have 'captured' much German trade, we must be prepared for most of it to escape or to die in captivity. It is better to keep our own industries alive than to capture any number of foreign trades, or to bolster up any number of 'relief' works, because in the case of our own industries we are able, if we make the effort, to keep up what is the real essential. When the time comes for the revival of any trade, it will respond if there is still an adequate number of skilled workers whose hands have not lost their cunning. Capital can be borrowed, machinery can be bought with borrowed money, but the skilled worker cannot be improvised. If we allow his training to be interrupted, both the worker and the community will suffer. The worker already trained is fortunately hardly in question; he or she may have to work short time or at reduced wages, but can at all events work rather than rust, since it is trade depression, not trade dislocation, we shall meet. It is the learner, the apprentice, the partially skilled and the beginner who is the present difficulty and future hope of a depressed industry, and it is the learner who can reasonably claim to be helped by the Government or by some public agencies of assistance. He cannot yet 'earn his keep,' but if we let him go away and waste the training he has already had, he will be a charge on the State or the relief funds, and the industry to which he belongs will fail to 'revive' satisfactorily after the war, when we shall be depending on our industries and trades for money to meet our liabilities, and when we must find room for a very large number of ex-soldiers to return to civil life, and consequently must allow for expansion in industry.

652/41

*

The administrators of relief funds recognise in principle that money spent in education and training is well spent. The new scheme of Army and Navy Pensions extends the pensions of soldiers' sons from the age of fourteen to sixteen if the boys remain at a State-aided school. The Queen's Fund for Women gives a maintenance grant of 10*s.* weekly to a certain number of women, thrown out of their usual employment, while they are learning a new trade or occupation; many relief funds teach women to sew and knit, as well as providing sewing and knitting for those already skilled. All this is good, but while it is going on there are many little industries on the verge of ruin for want of financial help. If they are closed all their learners and apprentices will be thrown out of employment, half-trained—and, it must be remembered, half-trained in a skilled trade which in times of peace affords a fair wage and good working and living conditions. The skilled worker in these handicrafts—weaving, spinning, cabinet-making, and many others—is in a very different position to the factory-worker at one small process. He may not command so high a wage, but he is adaptable; his labour is therefore what the political economists call more 'mobile' than that of most workers with power-machinery, he has much of the agricultural labourer's skill in turning his hand to anything. His training, then, is of the kind that should count as education, the discipline that our Trade Schools have demonstrated is so excellent. If it can only be safeguarded by assisting the small industries to which he is actually or nominally apprenticed, then the small industries have this added strong claim to assistance.

652/42

*

Consider, for example, an industry which employs a considerable number of boys and men in a sea-side town otherwise without manufactures, where the boys are tempted on leaving school to crowd into the 'blind alley' occupation of golf-caddy. The boys trained here are paid 5*s.* a week from the first, and though they are not formally apprenticed, their position is really that of an apprentice who receives board and lodging less in respect of his present than of his future worth to his employer. If the Government, through the Education Office, were to pay the 5*s.*, they would be paying for the boy's education just as much as though he were at school; they would be doing a very little, but still something towards lessening the current expenses of the industry, and they would be making ready for a future expansion of trade, and all the time the boy would be lodged and fed. We believe that much more than this could be done to tide small and well-conducted industries over a hard time without infringing the laws of the strict political economist, but this minimum could and should be done.

652/43

The London Trade Schools are admirable, but they actually do nothing to meet the difficulties of the country districts, and it is precisely in country districts that handicraft industries, with their thorough training amid surroundings favourable to mental and physical development, can do very much the same work that the Trade Schools do in London. The War has shown us that we must still depend largely upon the agricultural districts for our best fighting material, and that it is therefore common prudence to maintain employment for men, women, and particularly for young persons in villages and small country towns.

*

The case will not be met by a Government grant for apprentices strictly so-called, because few learners in handicraft are actually bound by indentures. A very usual plan is that followed by a South-country weaving industry which employs both men, women, and girls. The learners are nominally paid no wages, but at the end of three months they are given 1*s.* a week pocket-money; at the end of four months, 1*s.* 6*d.*; after six months, 2*s.* or 2*s.* 6*d.*; and after twelve months, 5*s.* This bonus or pocket-money wage is to a certain extent dependent on the worker's progress. It is clear that in cases like this the learner's work is not valuable to the industry, which is here concerned in training future craftswomen rather than in employing labour. Here something in the nature of school fees should be paid on behalf of the learner to the industry which is providing instruction. These fees might very fairly be paid out of relief money or by the Education Authority.

*

The case of industries employing cripples and disabled persons has also a very great claim upon relief funds. It is, of course, extremely difficult to make workers of this kind self-supporting. They stand very little chance in the ordinary labour-market, and only considerable powers of organization on the part of the managers of such industries can save them from working at a loss. These managers are often unpaid, or if paid do not receive remuneration in proportion to their abilities and to the time spent. If they are not helped, at any rate to some small extent, in the coming winter, the work must inevitably be stopped altogether, and if once stopped the industry will not easily be revived. If cripples who have been laboriously trained to be self-supporting are thus thrown out of employment, they will not be able to re-enter other fields of labour, and it will cost the community quite as much to maintain the workers in dreary idleness as to keep them at work.

652/44

*

Of course, the matter is not without its special difficulties, the chief of which is that enterprises which have never held their own in times of peace, and others which do not give their workers an adequate or sufficiently prolonged training, might apply for grants towards training their apprentices or paying their crippled workers. Investigation must naturally be made, but investigation is necessary even in the distribution of relief funds to the unemployed. When a distributing authority shall once have satisfied itself as to the value of the training given by any industry, there will be no need to repeat the inquiries when the industry takes on a new learner. Investigators would, of course, satisfy themselves as to the qualifications of the instructors, and would require evidence that the industry had been well-established previously to the War, that the working conditions were good, the hours of labour not excessive, and the output of a good standard as to workmanship. We do not think that the circumstances should baffle a trained investigator.

652/45

It may be that the administrators of the relief funds are without the services of trained investigators, and, indeed, they almost boast that this is the case when they announce that the work of distribution is voluntary. This is hardly a subject to touch upon in the course of an article on a much smaller point, but we must put on record the widespread misgivings aroused by the spectacle of sums amounting to nearly 4,000,000*l.* being dealt with by amateurs. It is because we cannot believe that four millions, or even half that sum, could be given away in doles without doing an immense amount of harm as well as good, that we are emboldened to ask that some few hundreds or thousands should be devoted to the prevention of distress, to a really productive expenditure, and to a form of relief which will touch the rural districts, and check that disastrous emigration to the towns which so usually takes place in times of national upheaval. The principle of paying allowances to learners in any industrial process, as also that of paying 'school fees' to the industry on account of learners, might with advantage be extended to other than handicraft industries; but the difficulties in the larger field would be greater and the advantages to the learner not so many, on account of the longer hours and greater physical strain of factory life. These payments for training of learners should in our opinion be made by the Government, and any payments for maintenance to learners should be made from public relief funds. Over and above these amounts, we may appeal to local authorities and private persons to come to the aid of their own particular local industries by giving orders, and by contributing financially during the period when sales must necessarily be reduced below their usual level. It is much pleasanter and much easier to help the industries of one's own county than those of one's neighbour, but in these days charity sometimes begins with the Prince of Wales' Fund and does not hold out to reach home.

*

There is one industry, that of toy-making, which is on a rather different footing from those already mentioned. Before the outbreak of war it shared the advantages and disadvantages of other handicrafts. Hand-made toys were a good deal more expensive than machine-made of either English or foreign origin, but they were more original, more durable, and as a rule, of better design. They also competed against foreign toys, partly or wholly hand-made, which were cheaper and perhaps almost as good as those produced by British craft-workers. This is now all changed: the supply of foreign-made toys has stopped, and the demand for toys is but little reduced; the British toy industries are therefore capable of large expansion. But expansion entails expenditure upon workrooms, tools, and materials, and also upon advertisement, and very few industries have command of more capital than will provide for very small and gradual extension of the trade. The organizers of several of these toy-industries have contributed very much artistic skill and talent in design, and have received for this no remuneration. If a small amount of capital could be advanced by one of the relief funds, these industries might be placed on a really commercial basis, and be able even after the war to compete successfully with toys of foreign manufacture. Money so advanced would not be so speculatively employed as in establishing an entirely new industry, it would have the advantage of skilled workers and approved designs. The fact that any industry had received a Government grant would also necessitate a formal audit of its accounts, and that would be of the greatest advantage to many enterprises whose weak point is the lack of varied business experience on the part of their managers.

652/46

652/47 652

Morning Post, January 1st. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

RECORD OF ACTIVITIES.

In a review of the operations of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund during the four months of its existence it is pointed out that the Collecting Committee has obtained a total sum of £119,289 for the Fund, and that the Central Committee on Women's Employment has set up machinery for providing work for women wherever it is needed.

As part of its prevention policy, and with a view to steadying trade in its usual channels, 30 workshops in the West End of London which would otherwise have closed down were at once re-started, the Central Committee having obtained a large contract for Army shirts. The same prospect was held out to other workrooms in a similar position. In order to obtain a more organised distribution of work ordinarily done by women, big orders were diverted by the committee into the most needy directions. A contract for making 40,000 flannel belts for the French Army was obtained, and orders were placed through the committee for belts for the Queen's Gift to soldiers at the front. The placing of a large Army clothing contract through the committee brought the hope that in a few weeks' time tailoring establishments throughout the country would be fully employed. Through the advice of the committee, carpet weaving firms whose business was at a standstill adapted their machinery for the production of yarn for knitted garments, and orders were obtained for them.

Alleviating Distress.

To meet the distress of the women and girls already unemployed provision for work-rooms had to be made in every district where the need was great. The work done was not to interfere with ordinary trade, but the garments made were to be given to those who have no purchasing power. Plans for training and instructing semi-skilled and unskilled workers were also laid. Throughout the country the Mayors, in areas where there was considerable unemployment among women, were invited to form a sub-committee of the local representative committee having a strong representation of women from working-class industrial organisations, and to submit schemes of work on the lines indicated to the Central Committee. It took a long time for the out-of-work women to realise that work would come through the machinery being devised. Several work-rooms were opened immediately in co-operation with the local representative committees, and within the month 60 to 70 local representative committees were in correspondence with the Central Committee over schemes of work. A new industry of fruit pulping was started in the West of England, and unemployed factory girls set to work.

The schemes of work promoted and approved by the Central Committee by December involved an annual expenditure of nearly a quarter of a million. A grant had been approved to send 550 unemployed girls to Australia, for whom the Central Committee is providing outfits, one hundred paid women clerks had been offered to give assistance to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association, and maintenance was arranged for 50 girls who had been offered training scholarships. The Committee's experimental workrooms had been increased to 13, apart from the Domestic Economy centres. Twenty-one London Boroughs had opened work-rooms, some having training schemes in addition, and 35 outside London. In addition the committee had helped to organise a number of the workrooms which are at present being financed from local funds. December saw the first juvenile training scheme for unemployed girl wage-earners in working at Deptford, and a plan for further helping unemployed dressmakers by lending them knitting machines and obtaining a contract for socks to divide among them was devised.

Princess Mary's Gift Book was the feature of the Fund in December, when the amount rose to £100,000; 500,000 copies of the book have been sold, and cabled orders are still coming in from India, Canada, and other far-off parts of the King's Dominions.

The Queen's Interest.

The Queen showed her interest in every step taken by paying ten separate visits to centres of the work. Not only has the committee given employment to thousands of women who would otherwise have been in deepest distress, but it has steadied trade in its regular channels by continuing to obtain important contracts and giving them out to firms in low water. It has prevented unemployment by encouraging and aiding the transference of workers in a trade at a low ebb to one at full tide. And it is raising the standard of woman's work throughout the country. The schemes of training for juveniles carried out in co-operation with the educational authorities are making the young clerical workers efficient, the workers in skilled trades capable, and the unskilled workers good home-makers. The Domestic Economy Training Centres for the older women are teaching women who could not sew, or cut out, or cook before. The training for sick room helps is providing a new and permanent and congenial occupation for working women, while the investigations into new trades give hope that a better way for women may be found than, as hitherto, in some of the sweated trades. The machinery is ready now to provide more and more work.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

SUCCESS OF THE "SHILLING" APPEAL.

Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the Hon. Treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the Hon. Secretary, of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, announce that their special Christmas time appeal for shillings to provide women with work has produced the splendid total of 167,446 shillings, equivalent to £8,372 6s. Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh desire to thank all those who have so generously responded to the appeal. They regard the total realised as exceedingly gratifying, not only as evidence of the confidence of the public in the practical nature of the measures of help which are being carried out, but also as a guarantee of the popularity and prosperity of the Fund in the future.

Common Cause, Jan: 1st. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Trade Transference.

The Central Committee is endeavouring to prevent unemployment as well as to reduce it. In Manchester, for example, 31,169 women who are employed in the dressmaking trade always suffer through seasonal slackness. Many of these are treadle machinists, and during the war will be trained as power machinists, for whom there is a large demand at present, in order to cope with the army clothing contracts. The training is completed in four weeks, during which time the women will be paid 10s. a week, while, when trained, they will be able to earn a weekly wage of not less than 16s.

Training for City Typists.

A Polytechnic for training unemployed City women-workers has been opened at Bridewell House, E.C., and already fifty have been chosen for a free commercial training, during which time they will receive a maintenance grant of 10s. a week, and their fares will be paid up to 2s. 6d. per week. Only workers who were employed in the City before the war are eligible for the training.

Evening Standard, Jan: 1st 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

SPLENDID WORK FOR VICTIMS OF THE WAR.

The Queen's own words, "Employment is better than charity," have been the inspiration of the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

In the strength of their appeal, two committees have done strenuous work. On the one hand, the collecting committee has achieved a total of £119,289 for the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and on the other, the Central Committee on Women's Employment has set in motion the machinery for providing work for women wherever it is needed.

Side by side, the two committees have worked, and as the money has been subscribed the schemes of work have multiplied. On September 4 the Queen made her appeal, and in the first month £67,218 was contributed.

The committee intended to work in two directions: in preventing unemployment and in dealing with that already prevailing.

Steadying Trade.

As part of its prevention policy, and with a view to steadying trade in its usual channels, thirty workshops in the West End of London which would otherwise have closed down were at once re-started, the committee having obtained a large contract for Army shirts. The same prospect was held out to other workrooms in a similar position.

In order to obtain a more organised distribution of work ordinarily done by women, big orders were diverted by the committee into the most needy directions. A contract for making 40,000 flannel belts for the French Army was obtained, and orders were placed through the committee for belts for the Queen's gift for soldiers at the front.

The placing of a large Army clothing contract through the committee brought the hope that in a few weeks' time tailoring establishments throughout the country would be fully employed. Through the advice of the committee, carpet weaving firms whose business was at a standstill adapted their machinery for the production of yarn for knitted garments, and orders were obtained for them.

Meeting Distress.

To meet the distress of the women and girls already unemployed, provision for workrooms was to be made in every district where the need was great. The work done was not to interfere with ordinary trade, but the garments made were to be given to those who had no purchasing power. Plans for training and instruction to semi-skilled and unskilled workers were also laid.

Many other activities were started, and an interesting back-to-the-land experiment was also put into operation.

Last month saw the first juvenile training scheme for unemployed girl wage-earners in working at Deptford, and a plan for further helping unemployed dressmakers by lending them knitting machines and obtaining contracts for socks to divide among them, was devised.

Princess Mary's Gift Book was the feature of the fund in December, when the amount rose to £100,000. Five hundred thousand copies of the book have been sold, and cabled orders are still coming in from India, Canada, and other far-off parts of the King's Dominions. "Shilling Week" was also immensely popular, £8312 6s. being realised from this source alone. The collection totalled 167,146 shillings.

The Queen's Activity.

The Queen showed her interest in every step taken by paying [illegible] visits to centres of the work.

Not only has the committee given employment to thousands of women who would otherwise have been in deepest distress, but it has dealt a blow in its regular channels by [illegible] to obtain supplies [illegible] giving them [illegible]

The Gentlewomen, Jan: 2nd. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

BEGINNING OF IMPORTANT MOVEMENT.

The demand for women power machinists in Manchester to complete the large Army clothing contracts has made possible an important experiment in trade transference. The endeavour of the Central Committee on Women's Employment is to prevent unemployment as well as to reduce it, and as, even in normal times, one trade contracts while another expands, it is felt that the present time of unemployment is an opportunity of showing what can be done by taking one class of worker into another trade when the occasion demands it.

The benefit to the worker of giving her another trade when her own is liable to seasonal depression can easily be imagined. The usual obstacles—training and the means of subsistence while in training—to such a course can now be overcome with the aid of the Queen's Fund. In Manchester 31,169 women are employed in the dressmaking trades, which suffer most seriously from seasonal slackness. A scheme has therefore been devised whereby skilled treadle machinists who are thrown out of employment through the War will be trained as power machinists. Promises have been made by several firms to employ the women when trained at a weekly wage of not less than 16s.

During the training—which extends over a period of four weeks—they will receive instruction from a skilled forewoman, and will be paid 10s. a week. Girls and women from eighteen to thirty years are eligible for this trade transference. The cost of training will be very little, for the workroom has been lent free, and the owner of the premises will pay for the electric power. A firm of machinists are lending and fitting up the power machines, and the Corporation is lending the motor. The materials for the girls to experiment with will be supplied by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, favourable results being given to refugees or other needy persons.

On the completion of the first £100,000 Her Majesty telegraphed congratulations to Lady Roxburgh, expressing her hearty appreciation of the excellent work the Committee had done.

Blackburn Weekly Telegraph January 2nd. 1915.

Many unemployed women have already responded to Australia's invitation sent to them through the Queen. For £1, which the Queen's Fund will pay, the girls are to be taken to Australia, and work in domestic service found for them. £1 is also to be given to them on arrival, and complete outfits for each girl are being made in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The age limit is 35 years. Marriage certificates have also been found necessary, for deserted wives are apt to think they are widows. A great many business girls are going very willingly to take up domestic service. Among them are typists, dressmakers, cashiers, shopgirls, and factory workers. The girl in whose career the Queen took such an interest on her visit to the Poplar workroom hopes to get a place as children's nurse in Australia. She has been called "Her Majesty" by the other girls since the Queen talked to her.

MADGE.

Eight sets of clothing made in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, with eight cradles made out of banana crates, have been sent to the Queen. The clothing consists of complete outfits for babies, clothes for mothers, and for school-children. They have not been specially made, but have been taken from several workrooms, so that they represent very good samples of the women's work. On one nightdress is the following note: "Made by a woman who could not sew at all when she came here a fortnight ago. She spent two days learning the various stitches, and has since made a set of garments for a mother." The gown is even feather-stitched, and the whole work is as fine and neat as could be. The worker was previously a cleaner in a public-house.

652/48 652.

The Star, Jan. 5th. 1915.

"WORK FOR WOMEN."

Official Reply to Criticisms in "The Star."

Miss Mary Macarthur, hon. secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, sends us the letter printed below in reply to our article of Saturday.

What We Asked.

We there suggested, in view of criticisms that had reached us, that instead of the review in general terms of its four months' achievements which the "Work for Women" Fund had just issued, definite figures should have been given of the numbers of women who had been found employment, and of the rate of payment. We also quoted a specimen of the complaints that had reached us.

The Reply.

Miss Macarthur now supplies the figures asked for. They are very creditable to the fund's work. From other inquiries made, we believe the specific complaint we quoted arose from one of those unauthorised actions which are difficult to prevent in the working of a complicated organisation; and that the under-payment criticised by some correspondents may have occurred in isolated instances in which the Fair Wages Clause insisted upon by the fund when it gives out contracts to small shops has been violated.

A Clear Statement.

Miss Macarthur's letter is, we believe, the clearest and most informative statement on the fund's work that has yet been made. She writes:—

"The writer of the article 'Work for Women' in your issue of the 2nd inst. is under some misapprehension as to the policy and the scope of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Annual Cost of £250,000.

"Schemes promoted and approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and endorsed by the Government Committee, include the provision of employment or training, with maintenance, for over 5,000 women weekly. In addition, 13 workrooms, under the auspices of local representative committees, with accommodation for some 650 workers, have been recommended, and are eligible for grants, but are at present being financed by local funds.

"Schemes for an additional 14 mayoral workrooms, with accommodation for 800 women, are at present under consideration.

The Central Unemployed Body in London are also employing about 1,000 women on lines approved by the Central Committee.

"The schemes promoted and approved by the Central Committee already involve an annual expenditure of £250,000.

"No woman employed under any scheme approved by the Central Committee can be paid a lower rate of remuneration or maintenance than 3d. an hour, although a higher hourly rate may be, and is, paid according to circumstances. Piece work is not permitted.

The Wages Paid.

"Forewomen are paid 25s., 28s., and 32s. per week, according to capacity, experience, and responsibility; while their assistants receive from 18s. to 22s. per week. All necessary labour engaged in connection with schemes of employment is paid at the recognised standard rate of wages.

Not Offered for Sale.

"In no case are the products of any of these workrooms offered for sale. They are given to people without purchasing power. In this way ordinary trade is safeguarded, and no unemployed woman is given employment at the expense of her employed sister.

"The Contracts Branch of the Committee's work is entirely self-supporting, receiving no financial aid from any fund. Through it employment has been provided for over 1,000 women weekly, and each of the 130 firms who are sharing in the distribution of this work is required by the committee to pay a fair rate of wages. Complaints as to the infringement of this requirement are carefully investigated.

Where to Apply for Help.

"In conclusion, it should be clearly understood that applicants for assistance should apply to the local authority in in the first month £67,218 was contributed.

The committee intended to work in two directions: in preventing unemployment and in dealing with that already prevailing.

Steadying Trade.

As part of its prevention policy, and with a view to steadying trade in its usual channels, thirty workshops in the West End of London which would otherwise have closed down were at once re-started, the committee having obtained a large contract for Army shirts. The same prospect was held out to other workrooms in a similar position.

In order to obtain a more organised distribution of work ordinarily done by women, big orders were diverted by the committee into the most needy directions. A contract for making 40,000 flannel belts for the French Army was obtained, and orders were placed through the committee for belts for the Queen's gift for soldiers at the front.

The placing of a large Army clothing contract through the committee brought the hope that in a few weeks' time tailoring establishments throughout the country would be fully employed. Through the advice of the committee, carpet weaving firms whose business was at a standstill adapted their machinery for the production of yarn for knitted garments, and orders were obtained for them.

Meeting Distress.

To meet the distress of the women and girls already unemployed, provision for workrooms was to be made in every district where the need was great. The work done was not to interfere with ordinary trade, but the garments made were to be given to those who had no purchasing power. Plans for training and instruction to semi-skilled and unskilled workers were also laid.

Many other activities were started, and an interesting back-to-the-land experiment was also put into operation.

Last month saw the first juvenile training scheme for unemployed girl wage-earners in working at Deptford, and a plan for further helping unemployed dressmakers by lending them knitting machines and obtaining contracts for socks to divide among them, was devised.

Princess Mary's Gift Book was the feature of the fund in December, when the amount rose to £100,000. Five hundred thousand copies of the book have been sold, and cabled orders are still coming in from India, Canada, and other far-off parts of the King's Dominions. "Shilling Week" was also immensely popular, £8372 6s. being realised from this source alone. The collection totalled 167,446 shillings.

The Queen's Activity.

The Queen showed her interest in every step taken by paying ten separate visits to centres of the work.

Not only has the committee given employment to thousands of women who would otherwise have been in deepest distress. It has steadied trade in its regular channels by continuing to obtain important contracts, and giving them out to firms in low water. It has prevented unemployment by encouraging and aiding the transference of workers in a trade at a low ebb to one at full tide. And it is raising the standard of woman's work throughout the country.

The schemes of training for juveniles carried out in co-operation with the educational authorities are making the young clerical workers efficient, the workers in skilled trades capable, and the unskilled workers good home-makers.

The domestic economy training centres for the older women are teaching women who could not sew, or cut out, or cook before. The training for sick-room helps is providing a new and permanent and congenial occupation for working women, while the investigations into new trades gives hope that a better way for women may be found than, as hitherto, in some of the sweated trades. The machinery is ready now to provide more and more work.

[illegible] shilling forewoman, and will be paid 10s. a week. Girls and women from eighteen to thirty years are eligible for this trade transference. The cost of training will be very little, for the workroom has been lent free, and the owner of the premises will pay for the electric power. A firm of machinists are lending and fitting up the power machines, and the Corporation is lending the motor. The materials for the girls to experiment with will be supplied by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, favourable results being given to refugees or other needy persons.

On the completion of the first £100,000 Her Majesty telegraphed congratulations to Lady Roxburgh, expressing her hearty appreciation of the excellent work the Committee had done.

Blackburn Weekly Telegraph
January 2nd. 1915.

Many unemployed women have already responded to Australia's invitation sent to them through the Queen. For £1, which the Queen's Fund will pay, the girls are to be taken to Australia, and work in domestic service found for them. £1 is also to be given to them on arrival, and complete outfits for each girl are being made in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The age limit is 35 years. Marriage certificates have also been found necessary, for deserted wives are apt to think they are widows. A great many business girls are going very willingly to take up domestic service. Among them are typists, dressmakers, cashiers, shopgirls, and factory workers. The girl in whose career the Queen took such an interest on her visit to the Poplar workroom hopes to get a place as children's nurse in Australia. She has been called "Her Majesty" by the other girls since the Queen talked to her.

MADGE.

Eight sets of clothing made in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, with eight cradles made out of banana crates, have been sent to the Queen. The clothing consists of complete outfits for babies, clothes for mothers, and for school-children. They have not been specially made, but have been taken from several workrooms, so that they represent very good samples of the women's work. On one nightdress is the following note: "Made by a woman who could not sew at all when she came here a fortnight ago. She spent two days learning the various stitches, and has since made a set of garments for a mother." The gown is even feather-stitched, and the whole work is as fine and neat as could be. The worker was previously a cleaner in a public-house.

Miss Macarthur now supplies the figures asked for. They are very creditable to the fund's work. From other inquiries made, we believe the specific complaint we quoted arose from one of those unauthorised actions which are difficult to prevent in the working of a complicated organisation; and that the under-payment criticised by some correspondents may have occurred in isolated instances in which the Fair Wages Clause insisted upon by the fund when it gives out contracts to small shops has been violated.

A Clear Statement.

Miss Macarthur's letter is, we believe, the clearest and most informative statement on the fund's work that has yet been made. She writes:—

"The writer of the article 'Work for Women' in your issue of the 2nd inst. is under some misapprehension as to the policy and the scope of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Annual Cost of £250,000.

"Schemes promoted and approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and endorsed by the Government Committee, include the provision of employment or training, with maintenance, for over 5,000 women weekly. In addition, 13 workrooms, under the auspices of local representative committees, with accommodation for some 650 workers, have been recommended, and are eligible for grants, but are at present being financed by local funds.

"Schemes for an additional 14 mayoral workrooms, with accommodation for 800 women, are at present under consideration.

The Central Unemployed Body in London are also employing about 1,000 women on lines approved by the Central Committee.

"The schemes promoted and approved by the Central Committee already involve an annual expenditure of £250,000.

"No woman employed under any scheme approved by the Central Committee can be paid a lower rate of remuneration or maintenance than 3d. an hour, although a higher hourly rate may be, and is, paid according to circumstances. Piece work is not permitted.

The Wages Paid.

"Forewomen are paid 25s., 28s., and 32s. per week, according to capacity, experience, and responsibility; while their assistants receive from 18s. to 22s. per week. All necessary labour engaged in connection with schemes of employment is paid at the recognised standard rate of wages.

Not Offered for Sale.

"In no case are the products of any of these workrooms offered for sale. They are given to people without purchasing power. In this way ordinary trade is safeguarded, and no unemployed woman is given employment at the expense of her employed sister.

"The Contracts Branch of the Committee's work is entirely self-supporting, receiving no financial aid from any fund. Through it employment has been provided for over 1,000 women weekly, and each of the 130 firms who are sharing in the distribution of this work is required by the committee to pay a fair rate of wages. Complaints as to the infringement of this requirement are carefully investigated.

Where to Apply for Help.

"In conclusion, it should be clearly understood that applicants for assistance should apply to the Local Authority in Borough or Urban District in which they reside, on whom rests the responsibility for admission to work[illegible]

652.

The Observer. 3/1/15

652/49

SHOPPING LESSONS.

HOW TO SPEND TEN SHILLINGS IN BETHNAL GREEN.

Marketing has been added to the curriculum at the Domestic Economy Training Centre for Unemployed Girls at Bethnal Green, opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

Under the charge of an older woman, experienced in what she calls "baiting" (bargaining) about six girls go out each morning to buy food for a dinner for forty women. The latter come to the dining centre from the neighbouring workrooms.

The shopping party has 10s. to spend, but it is their pride to bring back change. They go to the shops or stalls at which they are accustomed to shop themselves, giving them all a turn, because, in the sympathetic thought of these girls who know what unemployment means, "They've all got to live." "Them as buried a mother" are given special consideration at a vegetable stall.

The girls are taught to pick out fresh-looking vegetables and sound fruit, and they are careful to shun "bad boilers" among potatoes. The different pieces of meat for various ways of cooking are pointed out to them, and they were taught to distinguish between English and frozen meat.

They only buy the quantity required for the day, so that they shall know for themselves exactly what is needed. Afterwards they cook what they have bought, being open to criticism of the dinner customers. The girls who once bought hard meat have never forgotten it.

The World, Jan. 5th. 1915.

"WORK FOR WOMEN."

Brief Review of a Very Noble Campaign.

MRS. C. ARTHUR PEARSON, the Hon. Treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the Hon. Secretary, of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, announce that their special Christmas-time appeal for shillings to provide women with work has produced the splendid total of one hundred and sixty-seven thousand, four hundred and forty-six shillings, equivalent to £8,372 6s. Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh desire to thank all those who have so generously responded to the appeal.

They regard the total realised as exceedingly gratifying, not only as evidence of the confidence of the public in the practical nature of the measures of help which are being carried out, but also as a guarantee of the popularity and prosperity of the Fund in the future.

Four months have passed since this banner was unfurled. Since then the Queen's own words, "Employment is better than charity," have been adopted as the war cry for women throughout the country. The well-to-do woman has whispered it as she sent off her cheque to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, the woman in employment has repeated it as she deducted a share of her salary for her unemployed sister, the out-of-work woman has kept hope alive on the words, and they have been the inspiration of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. In the strength of their appeal, two Committees have done strenuous work. On the one hand the Collecting Committee has achieved a total of £119, 289, and on the other the Central Committee on Employment has set in motion the machinery for providing work for women wherever it has been needed. Side by side the two Committees have worked, and as the money has been subscribed the scheme of work has multiplied.

As part of its prevention policy, and with a view to steadying trade in its usual channels, 30 workshops in the West-end of London which would otherwise have closed down were at once re-started, the Committee having obtained a large contract for Army shirts. The same prospect was held out to other workrooms in a similar position. In order to obtain a more organised distribution of work ordinarily done by women, big orders were diverted by the Committee into the most needy directions. A contract for making 40,000 flannel belts for the French Army was obtained, and orders were placed through the Committee for belts for the Queen's gift for soldiers at the front.

To meet the distress of the women and girls already unemployed provision for workrooms had to be made in every district where the need was great. The work done was not to interfere with ordinary trade, but the garments made were to be given to those who had no purchasing power. Plans for training and instruction to semi-skilled and unskilled workers were also laid. Throughout the country the mayors, in areas where there was considerable unemployment among women, were invited to form a sub-Committee of the Local Representative Committee having a strong representation of women from working-class industrial organisations, and to submit schemes of work on the lines indicated to the Central Committee.

The schemes of work promoted and approved by the Central Committee already involve an annual expenditure of nearly a quarter of a million. A grant has been approved to send 550 unemployed girls to Australia, for whom the Central Committee is providing outfits, one hundred paid women clerks had been offered to give assistance to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association, and maintenance was arranged for 50 girls, offered training scholarships.

The Queen has shown her personal interest in every step taken by paying ten separate visits to centres of the work. Princess Mary's Gift Book was the feature of the Fund in December when the amount rose to £100,000. 500,000 copies of the book have been sold, and cabled orders are still coming in from India, Canada, etc.

The Domestic Economy Training Centres for the older women are teaching women who could not sew, or cut out, or cook before. The training for sick-room helps is providing a new permanent and congenial occupation for working women, while the investigations into new trades give hope that a better way for women may be found than, as hitherto, in some of the sweated trades. The machinery is ready now to provide more and more employment.

Birmingham Gazette, Jan: 5th. 1915.

652.

652/50

HEAR ALL SIDES.

Cradley Women Workers.

[TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BIRMINGHAM GAZETTE."]

Sir,—The Rowley Regis and District Women's Employment Joint Sub-committee, established under the authority of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, have opened experimental workrooms at the Workers' Institute, Cradley Heath, to find employment, as far as possible, for women who have been thrown out of work in consequence of the war. The areas covered by the sub-committee are Dudley, Cradley, Quarry Bank, Lye, and Rowley Regis.

Included in the scheme of work will be the making up of garments and the mending and altering of cast-off clothing, and the sub-committee make an urgent appeal to all residents in the above areas for gifts of travellers' samples, remnants, and cast-off clothing. The finished garments will be distributed free amongst the very poorest classes.

We understand from the Central Committee in London that in other districts where experimental workrooms have been opened an appeal of this kind has been most liberally responded to, and the sub-committee feel sure that the residents in this locality will not be lacking in equally generous support of so worthy an object.

All gifts of this kind should be sent to the joint hon. secretaries at the Workers' Institute, Cradley Heath.—Yours, etc.,

W. LASHFORD GRIFFIN,
Chairman.

AMY HUNTER,
CHARLES H. SITCH,
Joint Hon. Secretaries.

Workers' Institute, Cradley Heath,
4 January, 1915.

The Times, Jan. 6th. 1915.

THE NEW BRIDEWELL.

CONTRAST WITH OLD CRUELTIES.

An interesting attempt to cope with one of the incidental evils of the war is the polytechnic, or training centre, for women formerly employed in clerical occupations in the City who have lost their situations through the war, which has been established at Bridewell House in Bridewell-place, E.C.

Bridewell House seems to be doomed to vicissitude, but at no period could it have been put to a more worthy purpose. One of its earliest uses was in strange contrast to that for which it is now occupied. Once known as a manor house, it was presented to the City of London by Edward VI., upon the prayer of Bishop Ridley, that it might be made a house of correction for "the idle person, for the rioter that consumeth ale, and for the vagabond that will abide in no place."

About this time it became notorious in the old dramas for the flogging both of men and women by "rogues in blue coats." Of later years Bridewell was a "house of correction for persons of either sex sentenced by the City magistrates to imprisonment for terms not exceeding three months."

The scheme now in operation has been approved by the Central Committee on Women's Unemployment, and it is financed by the Queen's Fund. The City Corporation has given the use of Bridewell House, with the service of a resident caretaker, as well as a sum of money for putting the place in order and buying furniture and so forth. A number of well-known firms and individuals have also made contributions to the support of the scheme.

The need of such a movement is shown by the fact that, though as yet little publicity has been given to it, there are some 50 applications a day for admission, and it is evident that the amount of distress which has been caused in this particular class of workers is considerable. At present the house has 53 pupils, or inmates, or whatever the correct term for them should be. It hopes soon to be accommodating 200, with a possibility of increase much beyond that number. Applicants are selected from those recommended by the Typists' Registry established by the Prince of Wales's Fund in the City or by local representative committees of the borough councils, and those accepted are expected to undergo 40 hours of training a week for which they are paid 10s. They can receive a further small allowance for travelling expenses and are supplied with dinner and tea at the house for a charge of 2d. a day. Instruction is given, by L.C.C. teachers and others, in shorthand, typewriting, book-keeping, French, dressmaking, and domestic economy, with the care and hygiene of infants, and so forth. The institution is under the charge of the Women's Unemployment Sub-Committee for the City, Miss E. E. Morton, organising secretary, and F. Brinsley Harper, Esq., J.P., chairman.

The Daily News & Leader. January 6th. 1915. 652/5

WAR-TIME WORK FOR WOMEN.

Factory Girls at the Plough.

SCHEMES THAT AVERT DISTRESS.

While unemployment in men's trades continues abnormally low the numbers of women displaced from their industries shows little diminution, and the Central Committee on Women's Employment is finding its capacity fully taxed in meeting the needs that the slightest investigation reveals.

The greatest distress is probably among the higher-class dressmakers and ladies' tailors, whose work has been very seriously affected by the economies of customers compelled by financial pressure to retrench. The efforts of the Women's Committee to avert unemployment (as opposed to relieving it) among girls and women of this class have been strikingly successful. For some months the Committee has been executing a contract of 10,000 soldiers' shirts a week for the War Office and distributing the work among more than a hundred dressmaking firms which otherwise would quite certainly have been compelled to discharge the majority of their employees.

A WELCOME SCHEME.

This number of shirts, it is true, is not sufficient to meet the need. At least three times as large an order is required to sustain employment, but so far as it goes the scheme has much to recommend it. There is no question of competing with existing industries, which in this particular line are hopelessly overtaxed, and to keep girls employed with their own firms is far better than drafting them into relief workrooms.

The cutting out is all centralised in a convenient house in Piccadilly, where experienced cutters (men) prepare the flannel to be sent out to the different firms and also to the one workroom which the Committee maintains for this work. Here girls receive a training in shirt-making, which has enabled many of them already to obtain good employment in the trade, while of those who remain in the workroom the majority are earning (on piece) over £1 a week. The contract was, of course, accepted at the regular War Office rate, and it is satisfactory to learn that the result of three months' working is a balance to the credit of the Committee. In addition to the shirts, an order for 100,000 belts has been executed, and it is hoped that a contract for two million socks may shortly be obtained.

Meanwhile relief workrooms established by Local Representative Committees with the approval of the Women's Committee have in all large towns been providing employment, combined with training, in dressmaking, sewing, and various domestic arts. In this connection an important economy has been effected by the centralising of the buying of material (flannel, wool, etc.) for the workrooms all over the country. The services of an experienced buyer from one of the Government departments have been obtained, and a system introduced which forms a marked improvement on the wasteful methods involved in independent purchase by Local Committees. It is an example which the Territorial Force Associations might well take to heart.

THE GIRL FARMER.

Meanwhile certain isolated schemes with an interest of their own are making satisfactory progress. The handful of factory girls who have gone on the land in Hertfordshire are sticking to their ploughing and trenching and planting undaunted by the weather conditions and the physical demands the work entails. It is an experiment that will have much to teach if permanently successful.

At Cradley Heath the women chainmakers (old friends of the readers of "The Daily News"), work being slack in the extreme, have been enlisted, with a maintenance grant, in classes just opened at the local workmen's institute. Here the women, many of them for the first time in their lives, are receiving competent instruction in sewing and home management and cooking and infant hygiene. Their unemployment is thus a misfortune that should prove a profit to the coming generation.

The case of the typist is being dealt with in various local schemes, of which that initiated only a day or two ago by the City of London Committee is a good example. The training centre established by this committee is situated at Bridewell House, which up to a few weeks ago was one of the City police-stations. Here accommodation has been provided for some two hundred unemployed clerks and typists. The City Corporation has granted the use of the premises and £100 to adapt them for the requirements of their new inmates.

EDUCATIONAL LECTURES.

The principle on which the scheme is based is the utilisation of this period of unemployment to increase the proficiency of the ladies affected in their own profession. Accordingly a number of lectures have been arranged in French, shorthand and typewriting, bookkeeping and commercial subjects, while instruction equally, though less directly, profitable is given also in dressmaking and gymnastics. The usual maintenance grant of 10s. for a week of forty hours is paid, with travelling expenses up to 4s. a week, and dinner and tea can be obtained on the premises (thanks to the generosity of one or two catering firms) at a cost of 2d. a day.

The only discouraging feature of the scheme is the demonstration it has provided of the existence of numbers of clerks and typists who have crowded into the lower ranks of the profession with neither the capacity nor the equipment to justify the hope of their ever earning a respectable salary. From every point of view it would be better for them to turn aside, while they are still young, to some more hopeful vocation, even to domestic service. But to the wisdom of such counsel they are by general testimony determined to be blind.

Evening Standard, Jan: 8th. 1915 652.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

HOLIDAY TASKS CARRIED ON IN WOMEN'S WORKROOMS.

PATCHWORK WEEK.

A memorable week has just closed in the experimental workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

Anxious that the women who have suffered so much through unemployment should have something to mark the gift season, the committee sent a large bundle of oddments and sample pieces to each workroom with the invitation to the women to make what they liked for themselves. A whole week was given up to present making.

School of Ideas.

The committee had a second object, which has been as successful as the first; it desired to encourage initiative in these women who have until now had little chance of being anything but machines. The results have been as good as an examination in the lessons given in the workrooms during the war weeks.

At the Bethnal Green Training Room some pieces were given to each woman, and she was allowed a quarter of an hour in which to think what she would do with them. A former flower-seller matched four mantle-border samples and joined them together with a lattice-work of green ribbon for a cushion cover, a cardboard worker made a blouse for the first time out of some pieces of pink sateen, a jam maker turned pieces of velvet into well-shaped collars and cuffs for a blouse, and a printer some more oddments into a little girl's Dutch bonnet.

The young mother of two boys made knickerbockers for them, and several girls remade large old-fashioned hats into small up-to-date shapes. Some had as many as four presents to take home with them at the end of the week.

Fancy for Royal Monogram.

Every stitch the women have learned was used in beautifying their work. Out of scraps of calico they have made babies' bibs at Stepney, and each one is beautifully embroidered. Five pieces of curtain muslin have been joined together by hemstitch and have made a dainty curtain. Feather-stitch, French knots, and buttonhole-stitch have been used in making needle-cases out of scraps of tapestry, and one woman proudly embroidered each of her presents with the Royal monogram, which was given for use in the workroom.

Nothing has been wasted from the precious rag-bag. Tiny scraps of material were cut up to stuff the pincushions, and to make cord for decoration strands of embroidery silk were twisted together.

A Gift for Everyone.

In the second workroom at Stepney the chef d'œuvre is a nightdress case, which the women have made out of scraps of calico. Small circles have been cut and gathered into what the women call tam o'shanters and then joined all altogether, and placed over a lining of pink silk.

For every woman who has a little girl another woman has made a dainty bonnet, and every woman has made a ribbon bow for her own hat and another for her neck. Each worker also has a needle-case, an iron-holder, and a Dorothy bag. Half a dozen pairs of slippers have been made to keep in the workroom for the use of workers who come in bad boots in wet weather.

Ready-made patches were most popular in a third work-room. The women had cut them to shape for re-seating a boy's trousers and prepared them ready for sewing on. In another workroom children's feeders and iron-holders were in greatest demand. Many of the workers had never made them before, and some expressed the opinion that the week had been a great "enlightenment."

Forty Garments Mended.

The cradle makers at Bethnal Green have used part of the time in patching and mending their own clothes. A mother of eight has tidied up her family with the help of other workers, mending in all nearly forty garments. A woman brought her husband's shirt and ripped it with the rest, being supplied with strikingly successful. For some months the Committee has been executing a contract of 10,000 soldiers' shirts a week for the War Office and distributing the work among more than a hundred dressmaking firms which otherwise would quite certainly have been compelled to discharge the majority of their employees.

A WELCOME SCHEME.

This number of shirts, it is true, is not sufficient to meet the need. At least three times as large an order is required to sustain employment, but so far as it goes the scheme has much to recommend it. There is no question of competing with existing industries, which in this particular line are hopelessly overtaxed, and to keep girls employed with their own firms is far better than drafting them into relief workrooms.

The cutting out is all centralised in a convenient house in Piccadilly, where experienced cutters (men) prepare the flannel to be sent out to the different firms and also to the one workroom which the Committee maintains for this work. Here girls receive a training in shirt-making, which has enabled many of them already to obtain good employment in the trade, while of those who remain in the workroom the majority are earning (on piece) over £1 a week. The contract was, of course, accepted at the regular War Office rate, and it is satisfactory to learn that the result of three months' working is a balance to the credit of the Committee. In addition to the shirts, an order for 100,000 belts has been executed, and it is hoped that a contract for two million socks may shortly be obtained.

Meanwhile relief workrooms established by Local Representative Committees with the approval of the Women's Committee have in all large towns been providing employment, combined with training, in dressmaking, sewing, and various domestic arts. In this connection an important economy has been effected by the centralising of the buying of material (flannel, wool, etc.) for the workrooms all over the country. The services of an experienced buyer from one of the Government departments have been obtained, and a system introduced which forms a marked improvement on the wasteful methods involved in independent purchase by Local Committees. It is an example which the Territorial Force Associations might well take to heart.

stations. Here accommodation has been provided for some two hundred unemployed clerks and typists. The City Corporation has granted the use of the premises and £100 to adapt them for the requirements of their new inmates.

EDUCATIONAL LECTURES.

The principle on which the scheme is based is the utilisation of this period of unemployment to increase the proficiency of the ladies affected in their own profession. Accordingly a number of lectures have been arranged in French, shorthand and typewriting, bookkeeping and commercial subjects, while instruction equally, though less directly, profitable is given also in dressmaking and gymnastics. The usual maintenance grant of 10s. for a week of forty hours is paid, with travelling expenses up to 4s. a week, and dinner and tea can be obtained on the premises (thanks to the generosity of one or two catering firms) at a cost of 2d. a day.

The only discouraging feature of the scheme is the demonstration it has provided of the existence of numbers of clerks and typists who have crowded into the lower ranks of the profession with neither the capacity nor the equipment to justify the hope of their ever earning a respectable salary. From every point of view it would be better for them to turn aside, while they are still young, to some more hopeful vocation, even to domestic service. But to the wisdom of such counsel they are by general testimony determined to be blind.

pieces were given to each woman, and she was allowed a quarter of an hour in which to think what she would do with them. A former flower-seller matched four mantle-border samples and joined them together with a lattice-work of green ribbon for a cushion cover, a cardboard worker made a blouse for the first time out of some pieces of pink sateen, a jam maker turned pieces of velvet into well-shaped collars and cuffs for a blouse, and a printer some more oddments into a little girl's Dutch bonnet.

The young mother of two boys made knickerbockers for them, and several girls remade large old-fashioned hats into small up-to-date shapes. Some had as many as four presents to take home with them at the end of the week.

Fancy for Royal Monogram.

Every stitch the women have learned was used in beautifying their work. Out of scraps of calico they have made babies' bibs at Stepney, and each one is beautifully embroidered. Five pieces of curtain muslin have been joined together by hemstitch and have made a dainty curtain. Feather-stitch, French knots, and buttonhole-stitch have been used in making needle-cases out of scraps of tapestry, and one woman proudly embroidered each of her presents with the Royal monogram, which was given for use in the workroom.

Nothing has been wasted from the precious rag-bag. Tiny scraps of material were cut up to stuff the pincushions, and to make cord for decoration strands of embroidery silk were twisted together.

A Gift for Everyone.

In the second workroom at Stepney the chef d'œuvre is a nightdress case, which the women have made out of scraps of calico. Small circles have been cut and gathered into what the women call tam o'shanters and then joined all altogether, and placed over a lining of pink silk.

For every woman who has a little girl another woman has made a dainty bonnet, and every woman has made a ribbon bow for her own hat and another for her neck. Each worker also has a needle-case, an iron-holder, and a Dorothy bag. Half a dozen pairs of slippers have been made to keep in the workroom for the use of workers who come in bad boots in wet weather.

Ready-made patches were most popular in a third work-room. The women had cut them to shape for re-seating a boy's trousers and prepared them ready for sewing on. In another workroom children's feeders and iron-holders were in greatest demand. Many of the workers had never made them before, and some expressed the opinion that the week had been a great "enlightenment."

Forty Garments Mended.

The cradle makers at Bethnal Green have used part of the time in patching and mending their own clothes. A mother of eight has tidied up her family with the help of other workers, mending in all nearly forty garments. A woman brought her husband's shirt and patched it with the tail, being supplied with a new tail from a rag bag.

Some of the women took off the skirts they wore in order to renovate the bottom, for they had no other, and one woman who brought her husband's undervest to mend had to take it back at night, finished or unfinished (for fear of "ructions").

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

654(a)

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, January 7th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY TRAINING FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

MARKETING AND COOKING.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund has made possible the work the London County Council hoped to do for the girls of St. Pancras between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years.

These children were thrown out of work through the war, and the L.C.C. decided to fill up their time by giving them domestic economy training. The basement of Bainbridge House, a residential home for working girls off Tottenham Court-road, was fitted up therefore, in September, as a centre, and teachers supplied.

The girls, however, did not come. After having earned wages, they could not settle to work without them, and their parents could not do without their money. The centre had to close for want of pupils. Thus it was that the Central Committee on Women's Employment, which had the same idea as the L.C.C. with regard to the training of the girls, found the machinery ready for their own scheme.

A grant was given from the Queen's Fund, and the girls offered 4s. per week maintenance and a daily meal.

Those now attending the classes come from a diversity of trades. There is a shell-box factory worker, a toy maker, a feather cleaner, a girl from a penny bazaar, a cap maker, a carpet sewer, a picture frame mounter, a boot finisher, a circular folder, a wig maker, and an errand girl.

Lady's Maid of Fourteen.

There are several who have been in dressmaking, tailoring, and millinery. One who has been in a rug store, and one child fourteen with a wisp of yellow hair tied with a bow at the back of her neck calmly announced that she had been a lady's maid.

"I did her work in the morning," she said, "and then I sat with her and did needlework in the afternoon."

All the girls look no older than school-children, and they revel in the privilege of being able to "talk as you like."

In the morning they attend the Passmore Edwards Settlement where a L.C.C. teacher of dressmaking and tailoring supervises their needlework. Meanwhile, four of their number cook dinner for the rest at Bainbridge House, under the direction of the Council's Organiser for the Higher Education of Women in St. Pancras.

The little cooks do the marketing before they begin to cook. One day they bought neck of mutton and prepared a stew with vegetables, and a boiled suet pudding with jam.

Four Helpings of Meat.

By one o'clock they were quite ready, with the table laid, for the girls who walked over from the workroom. Then is seen the necessity for the grant from the Queen's Fund. One little girl had four helpings of meat and three of pudding. She is one of a family of eleven. The father is an invalid, one sister earns 8s., a brother in the Army sends his mother 7s. 6d., and this child earns 4s. "Mother manages to make the money do fairly well," said the child, who was obviously half starved.

The lady's maid is the only earner in her family, and she is the eldest of six. Her father has been ill, and her wages "buy the food." There is the child of a widow, too, who depends on lodgers, who have all gone but two through the war. The child's 4s. is the only other income.

Another has a father who "can't never work any more, 'cos he's got heart disease, dropsy, yellow jaundice, and bronchial catarrh." Her mother earns a little charing, and with the girl's money they "have to make it do."

Bread and Jam Dinners.

No wonder that they "like all the meals." In arranging the dinners they were asked at first what they have at home. "Bread and dripping," was the answer, or "Bread and jam." A piece of fried fish and potatoes is looked upon as a rare luxury.

After dinner the little cooks go for a walk, and the other girls are taught how to wash up in a methodical manner. Then, at two o'clock, they all attend the L.C.C. classes. The course is as follows:—

Monday.—Making patterns and dressmaking.
Tuesday.—Cookery.
Wednesday.—English reading, writing, dictation, and arithmetic.
Thursday.—Laundry, drill.
Friday.—Hygiene, singing, and drill.

In the cookery classes they plan the meals for the week, and dinner is prepared for the next day. The girls are learning the kind of dishes to put together to make a proper meal, and they are taught also how to cater for a family.

At the laundry classes they bring their own clothes to wash, "and boil, and blue, and iron," as a child explained.

In the cutting-out class they take each other's measurements and cut out patterns for themselves. Presently they are to bring their own material and make blouses.

The hygiene class is conducted by a lady doctor, and consists of lessons on personal health, home-nursing, and infant care.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Miss Taylor, the instructress.

A Poplar girl working on the land.

Miss Taylor has undertaken to train London girls out of work owing to the war in cultivation of the soil in Hertfordshire, under the auspices of the Committee for Women's Employment.

Manchester Courier, January 9th. 1915. 652.

MENDING FOR MOTHERS.

WHAT THE QUEEN'S FUND HAS DONE FOR WOMEN.

A week's time has been given to the women in the experimental workrooms, opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, in which to mend and renovate their own or their families' clothes, and to make presents for themselves out of oddments of material.

The results show the value of the lessons in making old clothes new, which have been given during the past few weeks. Many of the workers could not sew at all when they came to the workrooms, yet one woman during "patching week" brought her married daughter's skirt and made what looked like a new skirt out of it for her youngest girl; a mother brought her husband's old trousers and cut them down to a neat pair of knickerbockers for her boy; a wife mended her husband's flannel shirt with the tail, and added a new tail of a different material; a sheet for a cot was made out of a nightshirt, and dozens of pairs of stockings were refooted.

To a mother with eight children the week has been the best of her married life. A single woman sitting next to her had soon finished her own mending, and she helped with that of the family. Others did likewise, and between them they tidied close upon forty garments for the mother.

Every morning the women brought a bundle of clothes with them "not worth mending" some of them thought, but every night they took one home full of neatly renovated garments. Some did not possess a change, and they simply took off the skirts they wore and renovated them. A woman who brought her husband's undervest to mend took it home at night before she had finished it, for, she said, if it happened to be mislaid there would be ructions. Altogether, 100 new garments were made out of old in one workroom during this week, and 360 were patched and darned. The women also took home many ready-made patches cut to shape and prepared for reseating boys' trousers.

The rule of the workroom is to be "no pins" in future, and any worker coming with her clothes pinned together will be invited into a private room where she can mend her apparel.

Every stitch the women have learned in the workrooms was used to beautify the work. One woman even embroidered her presents with the Royal monogram, which is given for the use of the workrooms. Every scrap was made use of; the tiny, useless bits were cut up to stuff cushions, strands of embroidery silk were twisted together to make cord, and rings were crocheted for the stocking bag. In one workroom each woman made as many as four presents for herself.

Kensington News, Jan. 9th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

RESTAURANT FOR TRAINING COOKS.

A restaurant run by unemployed women under the supervision of the Central Committee on Women's Employment has been opened at the headquarters of the committee. Luncheons for 3d. and 7d. are served every day, and a number of dishes a la carte. The menu to-day was as follows :

Sevenpence.	Threepence.
Roast beef, Carrots, turnips, potatoes.	Irish stew, — Jam tart.
Stewed fruit & junket.	Cup of tea.

An average 100 customers are served every day, these being confined to the staff of the Central Committee and the workers from the adjacent contract workrooms and central depot.

The need for such a restaurant has been felt since the work of the committee began, both on account of the distance of the workrooms from restaurants, and the expense to working women engaged in a West-end district. Since very suitable premises were available in the basement of the large house lent to the committee for offices, it was resolved to combine a restaurant with a cookery training centre for some of the unemployed women of Westminster.

GOVERNESS AND DRESSMAKER COOKS.

Dining rooms have been simply furnished, and the kitchen is of good size, and convenient. There are ten women at present under the instruction of a cook instructress from the National Training School of Cookery. They have all been thrown out of work through the war, and to the majority cookery is a new art.

The governess who says that she knows four languages has "always been waited on hand and foot before," but she cannot get her own work and she thinks she may fit herself to be a housekeeper. The dressmaker who has had her own business moves rather slowly about the kitchen, but she is keenly interested in the work, and the young blouse assistant means to make cooking her career if she likes it, for she wisely thinks that there are not so many cooks as dressmakers.

There is a book-keeper from an hotel who wants to qualify for looking after residential flats, and a girl who was twelve years in the Penny Bank. A little woman who has done some cooking has come to learn "the fancy," for she has been promised a situation if she can improve herself.

WEIGHING BY CUP AND SPOON.

There is ample opportunity of teaching in the variety which the different meals afford, and in the afternoons special lessons are given with the practical purpose of preparing for next day's luncheon. For instance, yesterday, stock for to-morrow's pea soup was made and a boiled fruit pudding.

The women are taught how to measure with a spoon or a cup, so that they may not be at a loss in their own homes without a weighing machine, and they are shown how to clarify dripping, and to use every piece. After the lesson they write down the recipes and rules in their own note-books.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Sunday Times, Jan. 10th. 1915.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

AID FROM THE L.C.C.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £123,710.

A large number of dressmakers and tailoresses thrown out of work from West End business houses owing to the warfare now employed in the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, in connection with the fund. The training in needlework, which is part of the domestic economy course for unemployed girls at the St. Pancras workroom, is specialised in two directions : dressmaking and tailoring. A skilled forewoman is in charge of both workrooms and the girls spend a month in each.

The London County Council has agreed to give further instruction in needlework and home dressmaking classes. Lectures on health are also to be given and a course of physical drill.

It is hoped that the girls will spend three months of the time of unemployment in this domestic economy training, which includes a course of cooking. For this reason vacancies notified by the Labour Exchanges are filled from the workrooms rather than the training centres.

Southampton Times, Jan: 16th. 1915.

Women's Employment.

Steady Work of the Mayor's Sub-Committee.

The work of the Mayor's Sub-Committee on Women's Employment (Chairman, Miss Green) goes steadily on, so quietly, in fact, that outsiders know but little of what has been and is being accomplished.

The Sub-Committee receive women and girls who have been thrown out of employment by the war and draft them, whenever possible, into work-rooms and business places. During the past four months they have themselves employed an average of from eighty to ninety workers per week, first at the Drill Hall, St. Mary's Road and latterly at 22, Carlton Crescent, which is now the headquarters of the committee. Though the minimun wage of 3d. an hour is paid, care is taken to meet local employers by reducing the number of working-hours in certain cases so that the girls do not earn more than when in ordinary employment. In order not to compete with existing trades no paid work is undertaken by this committee, the garments made in the workroom being given away to people whose cases have been pronounced eligible after thorough investigation. Materials sent by the Red Cross Society, the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association, and similar organisations are made up free of charge. A request is made to the puplic for disused clothes, evening dresses, opera wraps, and dress suits being specially suggested ; these are re-made for Belgian refugees and others. Unskilled workers are taken over by the Sub-Committee, which is also about to undertake the training of girls between the ages of fourteen and sixteen, this branch of the work being in connection with the Education Committee and Juvenile Advisory Committee. This scheme is a large and important one, and we understand that the Local Goverment Board is anxious that it should be carried out efficiently. Lectures upon various subjects will be given, and domestic economy and other classes are to be held.

It is interesting to note that the war-relief workroom in Carlton Crescent, managed by the Mayor's Sub-Committee on Women's Employment, is really the outcome of the employment bureau, which was opened at the Art Gallery, Above Bar, in the early days of the war, the difference being that the members of the Sub-Committee may now describe themselves with truth as "unpaid Government officials." Some confusion appears to have arisen between their work and that of the Women's Emergency Corps, which is also accomplishing so much that is good, and the very name of which suggests its excellent qualities, and brings it perhaps more directly under the public eye. The members of the Emergency Corps are free agents, working with, but not under, the Mayor's Committee and the Local Government Board. The Sub-Committee express gratitude to the Mayor for supplies of bread, flour, potatoes, cheese, etc., which have been of great assistance in the provision of the penny dinners and half-penny teas which are much appreciated by the workers. At Christmas time a successful social evening was held at St. John's Mission Hall.

At a recent meeting of the Chamber of Commerce a letter was read from Mr. H. Wilding, J.P., a passage in which ran as follows :—"I am glad to say that the Ladies' Committee have tackled the question of employment for women much more adequately than the men have attacked their share of the difficulty." Mr. Wilding also referred to the great need then existing of finding employment for girls. This matter, also, as we have intimated, the Sub-Committee mean to "tackle."

Christian Commonwealth 652
Jan. 13th. 1915.

Women's Work in War.

Since the outbreak of war unemployment in women's trades has proved to be much more considerable than in men's trades. The Central Committee on Women's Employment, whose activities are supervised by half-a-dozen of the leaders of the working women's organisations, has gradually got the situation in hand, and progress is being reported in the direction of reducing the volume of unemployment amongst various classes of women workers. Not only among dressmakers and tailoresses, where lack of employment was most severely felt at the beginning of the war, but among other grades of workers, from factory girls to clerks and typists, the pressure is being relaxed through the efforts of the Committee. Relief work-rooms have been started in all the large towns, War Office contracts have been distributed to firms, who are thus enabled to keep their work-people employed, and a number of interesting experiments in the training of girls and women to new forms of work have been organised by the Committee. Perhaps the most remarkable of these is the experiment of setting a number of factory girls to work on the land in Hertfordshire, where they are learning ploughing, digging, planting, and other agricultural work under skilled supervision and instruction. Among the Cradley Heath women chain-makers, where work is slack, a maintenance grant has been given, classes have been started in which the women, perhaps for the first time in their lives, are being taught sewing, home management, hygiene, cooking, and other domestic virtues. In the City a training centre has been opened at Bridewell House, once a City police-station, where some 200 unemployed girl clerks and typists are being taught French, shorthand, typewriting, book-keeping, and commercial subjects, with the view of making them more efficient in their profession. The girls get a maintenance grant, with travelling expenses, which enables them to live while out of work, and they are provided with dinner and tea on the premises at a cost of only 2d. a day. By these and other methods, thoroughly worked out by the competent women who run the Central Committee, the great evil of unemployment is reduced, and those who are compulsorily idle owing to the dislocation of industry and business through the war are kept from deterioration and made fit for better positions in the future.

Glasgow Herald, January 18th. 1915.

TRAINING FOR LAUNDRY WORK.

The task of finding trades for unskilled women workers who are thrown out of work through the war is one of those to which the Central Committee on Women's Employment has set its hand. Laundry work has been found to offer good openings both in London and in the country, and the Central Committee has made arrangements with the Borough Polytechnic to take 16 girls from the committee's workrooms as pupils in their trade laundry schools. After the training the Polytechnic has no doubt that places can be found for the girls. There is always a shortage of skilled hand-ironers in London, while in some country districts laundries cannot get on for want of workers. Careful selection of suitable women has been made by the lady principal of the Polytechnic from workrooms in three boroughs—Bermondsey, Southwark, and Lambeth. The committee will pay travelling expenses, and the women will receive a wage of 10s a week, the time not spent in the laundry being occupied in their own workrooms. Only those who were engaged in unskilled trades before the war have been chosen, and only those who are really anxious to learn the trade.

652/53

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, January 15th 1915.

652/54 652

Sunday Times, Jan: 17th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

COOKERY AND LAUNDRY CLASSES FOR UNEMPLOYED CHILDREN.

FOUR SHILLINGS WEEKLY.

Over forty unemployed little wage-earners of St. Pancras, between the ages of fourteen and sixteen, joined the L.C.C. classes for Business Training and Domestic Economy when the centre at Bainbridge House, Tottenham Court-road, reopened after the Christmas Holidays.

The majority of the children are receiving a grant of 4s. per week and a midday meal from the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund under a scheme approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The parents could not afford to let the children come to the classes otherwise. They have all been serious wage-earners before, having been employed in Court dressmaking, tailoring, surgical instrument making, Christmas card folding, printers' folding, and packing of various kinds.

Brown Overalls.

Nearly all the children wanted to go first to the cookery class, but only those who had aprons were allowed to do so.

In future they are to be provided with n overalls so that t..e pathetic difference .e children's dress shall no longer be cent. To-day a child neatly clad in a blue dress sat beside one who obviously had a old blouse of her mother's. Pinafores adly torn also, or aprons many sizes too ok their places.

ost Onion.

were there more eager, interested pils. The cookery class sat round a le watching a demonstration lesson in stewing steak. So attentive were the children that one little girl even put the teacher right. "You haven't got no onion," she said, for she remembered the list of ingredients which had been given. After the demonstration they each prepared their own stew, and a lesson on sausage rolls followed.

In the scullery a laundry class was engaged washing flannels, and at a table in the corner three unemployed girl clerks were busy practising on a typewriter.

Every inch of space has to be used, for the classes have all to be held in the kitchens and dining-room which have been lent by the Girls' Residential Hostel.

The rest of the girls were having a dressmaking lesson upstairs. Each one measured her neighbour and then drew and cut a blouse pattern. Next lesson they will work on the material.

"They need arithmetic lessons so badly," the teacher said, "some girls cannot tell the half of sixteen."

The L.C.C. course includes English lessons, and also hygiene, drill, and singing. The girls are divided into three classes, so that those who know a good deal shall not be kept back by the others. Those in the first cookery class are simply taught to make certain dishes. The second grade girls make up dinners for families, and the third learn cooking which is intended to fit them as cooks if that is their wish.

House-cleaning Classes.

It is hoped to start a domestic economy training course immediately, when the matron of the Girls' Home will lend dormitories for house-cleaning lessons, and twelve girls will spend a certain number of weeks in the kitchen. At present four of the girls cook dinner for the others under the guidance of the council's lady organiser for St. Pancras. The menu for the day was sausage pudding, cabbage, and potatoes, followed by boiled rice and syrup.

Business classes are held in the morning for unemployed shorthand typists. Some of the girls attending have actually lost the chance of work through their speed being reduced by want of practice. Many have made up their minds to stay at the classes until they have reached at least a speed of 100. Others are only waiting until they find places.

They are all registered at the Labour Exchange, and when there is a vacancy a message is sent to the teacher. The girls are also learning book-keeping and business routine. Instruction in drill and country dancing is given twice a week.

All communications regarding the Queen's Work for Women Fund and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Daily Graphic, January 16th. 1915.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

LAUNDRY TRAINING.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £125,915 5s. 1d., including a sum of £144 12s. 8d. collected by the Countess of Waldegrave.

The task of finding trades for unskilled women workers who are thrown out of work through the war is one of those to which the Central Committee on Women's Employment has set its hand. Laundry work has been found to offer good openings, both in London and in the country, and the Central Committee has made arrangements with the Borough Polytechnic to take sixteen girls from the Committee's workrooms as pupils in their trade laundry schools. After the training, the Polytechnic has no doubt that places can be found for the girls.

Messrs. Perry, Ltd., London, have presented to the Fund 20,000 boxes of a new pen which has received the approval of the Queen, and Her Majesty has allowed it to be called the "Queen Mary" pen.

Northern Daily Telegraph Jan: 20th. 1915.

SOCKS FOR THE ARMY.

A contract for two million pairs of Army socks has come as a windfall to the Central Committee on Women's Employment, which is working under the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It will provide work for over a thousand women weekly until August. The Committee offers to buy and lend the machines, and, where necessary, to supply teachers to instruct the girls. The yarn will be obtained from a carpet yarn firm, which, from lack of usual orders, was about to close down. A sub-contract will be made with a hosiery finishing firm in Leicester for the finishing of the socks—a more difficult process than the knitting. It is noteworthy that the whole contract will be carried through without the slightest interference with ordinary trade. Indeed, the action of the Central Committee is welcomed by the trade, which cannot supply more than half of the War Office requirements.

SOLVING THE PROBLEM OF WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT IN HERTFORDSHIRE.

From the East End of London to the country: Town-bred women start out for their day's work on the land. This picture comes from the new cultivation area opened in Hertfordshire by the Central Committee on Women's Employment as one step towards the solution of the problem which is the reason for the committee's existence. The women all come from the district of Poplar, and look as though the healthy outdoor life on the farm thoroughly agrees with them. At all events, it is better than factory work. (Photographed by Clarke and Hyde.)

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, January 16th. 1915

652/55 652

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

TRAINING FOR UNEMPLOYED GIRL CLERKS AND TYPISTS.

OFFER OF SCHOLARSHIPS.

A meeting of unemployed girl clerks was held recently by the London County Council at the Regent-street Polytechnic.

The girls had been selected by the Central Committee on Women's Employment as candidates for commercial training, for whom they have approved a maintenance grant from the Queen's Fund of 10s. per week, with up to 4s. for expenses.

Improving General Education.

The committee is desirous during this time of widespread unemployment among women clerks to encourage them to improve their qualifications, rather than to find temporary occupation for them. A very large number of those unemployed are only partially trained for business, and there is much need for improvement in general education.

The meeting was held with a view to finding out the attainments of the girls and deciding the classes suitable for them. Representatives of both the Central Committee on Women's Employment and the London County Council were present, also the Director of Education of the Regent-street Polytechnic and the Principal of the City of London College.

Photographer's Daughter.

Fifty-two unemployed girl clerks attended, representing a good class of business girl. There was a photographer's daughter who had typed for her father before the war broke out. Then the business broke up from lack of orders. A girl whose father had never been accustomed to work himself, but who had lost all his money, was very anxious to get training. She had only been in one or two temporary places, and had very little experience. "I feel so different when I've got work," she said.

Another was the eldest of ten, and only one sister in the family has work; her father keeps a stationery shop. A plucky girl of sixteen has been trying to get employment for three months. "I thought I'd like to try myself," she said, "before I asked anyone for help."

Little Experience and Few Qualifications.

Twenty-two of the girls present had been less than six months in business, twenty-seven were shorthand typists, six were bookkeepers, and only three had knowledge of a foreign language.

They were quickly divided off into three grades—those who could do a speed of over sixty words a minute shorthand, those who could only manage up to forty, and those who had no speed at all.

Three of the higher grade girls will be sent at once to the City of London College, where they will have a first-class business education. For nineteen with a lower speed, classes at Balderton-street, W., are suggested, and for the remaining thirty-four it is hoped to arrange a special course at the Langham-place Polytechnic.

L.C.C. Action.

The Council's intentions with regard to the girls were explained to them.

They would be expected to attend the whole course of classes, not merely the lessons which interested them, or which they found easiest. They would be regarded as ordinary students of the centres to which they were sent, and would be expected to attend regularly and conform to the regulations.

The course of instruction would include general education and probably commercial geography, commercial arithmetic, and the principles of economics.

It was pointed out to them that with such opportunities they would be able to get better posts when they returned to employment again.

Competition for Studentships.

Four of the six free studentships offered by the City of London College have been taken by girls unemployed through the war, and recommended by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

The studentships extend over at least a year, and the classes include instruction in the following subjects: English, French, Spanish, descriptive economics, office procedure, commercial correspondence, book-keeping, shorthand, typewriting, physical exercises, general arithmetic.

The girls, who won the places by examination, are all over sixteen years, and include the daughters of a warehouseman, a commercial traveller, and a sculptor.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed, "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee, at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Liverpool Courier, Jan. 21st. 1915.

LESSON IN LAUNDRY WORK.

The "Queen's Workroom" at Islington has this week become a centre for L.C.C. classes. Fifty-four unemployed women who are being trained under the domestic economy scheme of the Central Committee on Women's Employment are attending practical lessons in cookery, laundry, health, and physical exercises. The London County Council probably never had a stranger class than that which met for laundry work yesterday. There was a quiet-faced, superior-looking teashop manageress in black dress and neat white apron; a sad-looking little private dressmaker, who can get nothing to do; a young lampshade maker, who had been at the same work since she was 14; a waitress from a fish and oyster bar in the City; several young factory girls, and one or two daily domestic workers.

Few of them had ever done any washing before. The manageress and one or two others had kept servants of their own before the war. Everyone, however, saw the benefit of the training, and very intelligent questions were put to the Council's teacher. The women had been asked to bring their own flannels to wash, but when the moment of producing them came their shyness was apparent. One woman, however, bolder than the rest, had brought the family washing, which she distributed among her friends. There was no make-believe about the washing; they were really dirty clothes. One shirt belonged to a girl's uncle who was an engineer, and the fact was evident. The use of a demonstration was seen at once. "'Ere, you monitors," said one girl; "I ain't got no soap." "You don't need soap for flannels," was the crushing reply from a sister washerwoman.

The Daily Telegraph, Jan. 20th 1915.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

A contract for 2,000,000 pairs of Army socks has been secured by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. This will provide work for well over 1,000 women weekly. The knitting alone will absorb about 800 unemployed women until August, and will be distributed among workers in hand dressmaking.

Yesterday the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund reached a total of £126,364. The day's contributions included:

Balance of fund from Distressed Needlewomen's Institution, now closed, per Archdeacon Lawrence and Mr. John Palmer, £80; collected by the Urban District Council of Padiham, £53; the Ladies of Valparaiso Vina del Mar and District (per Mrs. Fenn), £49 10s; collected by the Mayoress of Battersea, £39 12s 6d; Bangkok British Women's Needlework Guild, £25; collected by the Mayoress of Gloucester (further instalment), £11 12s 3d; collected by the Urban District Council of Wadebridge, £10 15s 2d; Mrs. Perkins, £10; collected by the Urban District Council of Teddington, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

Christian Globe, Jan. 21st 1915.

The Queen's "Work for Women."

Training for Laundry Women.

Laundry work has been found to offer good openings both in London and in the country for unskilled women workers and the Central Committee, Women's Employment, has made arrangements with the Borough Polytechnic to take 16 girls from the Committee's Workrooms as pupils in their trade laundry school.

After the training, the Polytechnic has no doubt that places can be found for the girls. There is always a shortage of skilled hand-ironers in London, while in some country districts laundries cannot get on for want of workers.

Competent "finery" ironers can command a good wage, as can also Head Sorters and Packers. There are also regular chances of rising. As soon as the girls who have just started training at the Polytechnic are able to earn as much in laundry work as they can do in the Relief Workrooms, they will be sent out to laundries where they can quickly rise if they have ability.

The course of lessons arranged, should only take about two months, but the girls will be kept until they are fit to earn a living. They are given 16 hours teaching every week, coming every evening to the Polytechnic and on Saturday mornings.

Complete Trade Plant.

The teachers have both been manageresses of laundries having worked their way up, and the plan is for each woman to go through every department of the work, making up her mind as she goes along in which she would prefer to find employment. Then if she cannot get work in one way, she will always be able to do so in another.

A demonstration on sorting was given first of all, and on marking, and "throwing off." The value of learning the expressions used in the trade was impressed upon the women in order that they should enter it with confidence.

Customers Weaknesses.

"Noting" caused some amusement. "When you find something very torn," said the teacher, "you know your customers, and if they are the kind to blame the laundry whatever happens, you must take it to the office and report it. Some customers you can rely upon to take your word, then you simply tack lightly round the place with red cotton to mark it."

The teacher had a pile of clothes of every description beside her, and she showed the women the right place to put the laundry mark. Collars were opened up, doubled and dipped in water and squeezed dry before being marked, and the women were warned not to decorate the end of an evening tie.

The girls will learn in the ensuing weeks preparation, starching, folding, the various processes of ironing, examining, "tacking up"—in different packages for various customers—and a certain amount of booking up. This general and thorough knowledge will prepare them for becoming forewomen later on, if they have the ability.

652

The Daily News & Leader,
January 20th. 1915.

652

652/56

EYE-WITNESSING

AT THE FRONT IN LONDON.

By ARNOLD BENNETT.

Although they fear no censor, and run no risk of doing good to the enemy, the authorities of the National Relief Fund, after nearly six months, have still not made up their minds to report their work to the public. And if you ask them why they are still hesitating, they will overwhelm you with battalions of reasons. Such is the effect of officialism upon even the enlightened. However, it cannot be said that these men and women carry secretiveness to excess. Some weeks ago they permitted me to transmit information to the public, and last week I was offered the opportunity to see some of the actual fighting operations in the war of the Fund against unemployment and distress among women in London. Although no war correspondent, I took the chance.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund is now absorbed into the administration of the National Fund, and the Central Committee on Women's Employment is the equivalent of the General Staff in the aforesaid war, while Miss Mary Macarthur, its honorary secretary, may be called the Chief of the General Staff. The leading points of the Committee's campaign, as I have briefly explained in a previous article, are (1) a minimum pay of 3d. per hour, (2) a short week, so as to give the women opportunity to find other work, (3) training of workers in domestic economy and for new trades or short-handed trades, (4) production of useful articles, such articles not to be sold, but to be given away through the Local Representative Committees of the Fund, (5) mending and altering of workers' own garments.

What is Being Done.

I went first to the Depot, housed free of charge in a vast untenanted residence close to Park Lane, on which the rates alone would probably keep an attaché in comfort. Here all the material is collected and sent out to be made up, and the resulting garments are then gathered in and distributed. I saw a report dealing with 15,020 articles, ranging from long-flannels to blouses. I also saw a garment stitched by a woman who had never used a needle before the war. In peace time she is a public-house cleaner. When told that she must learn to sew, she wept, pined for a whole fortnight, and then rapidly picked up. The garment I inspected was her second attempt. As the Editor of a ladies' paper for a number of years I may pose as an authority on needlework, and I assert that the garment was marvellous. The chief characteristics of the infinity of apparel which I beheld here were brightness, gaiety, and originality. Some people had said that the poor would not know themselves in such attire, and that it would make them dissatisfied with their lot, etc., etc. I hope it will, and the more dissatisfied the better. A considerable assortment of colonial outfits for emigrating girls compelled attention, and will certainly compel attention when worn even in the most advanced colonies, doubtless with beneficial results on the marriage-rate.

But the chief pride of the Depot was the visible consequences of what was called "Patchwork Week," being the last seven days of 1914, devoted to the fabrication of a gift for each woman employed, and to the renovation of the workers' own garments. In the matter of mending, this week, with its pathetic episodes, must have been an education not merely to the taught, but to the teachers. It was a week of definite social progress. The inventive exercise of fabricating gifts out of nothing had also high moral value. I was shown an exquisite pair of house-shoes which had once been an old tweed hat and a bit of ribbon. Waste was inconceivable. A rag heartbrug glowed like a ruby. Recollect that all articles are given away to those who need them. Nothing is sold, except the very rags of rags, which are secretly disposed of to a rag merchant. The cheerfulness, systematised order, unobtrusive efficiency, helpfulness, and humanity displayed in that house in Hanover were notable. And in somebody twenty-five hours a week, and receive four shillings a week (as against perhaps five shillings for at least fifty hours in ordinary employment), and a good dinner daily, and tea on drill nights. Some were pretty; others plain; and a few downright ugly; but all were conspicuously neat. One's first thought was that there must be something wrong with a civilisation in which girls so young have to earn their living, and one's second that they would assuredly be far more valuable to themselves, their families, and their future families at the conclusion of peace than they were at the outbreak of war.

In North London.

From Bainbridge House to a great swimming-bath in St. Pancras, boarded over and turned into a work-room. Here were older girls and women of all ages, under the eye of an expert who before the war was a highly-paid fitter at a court-dressmakers. I saw a hundred and ninety-nine sempstresses—previously waitresses, clerks, tailoresses, bookfolders, charwomen, etc.—who do a short week of forty hours of highly miscellaneous sewing for ten shillings. The workers seemed very contented; but I should have enjoyed this resort quite as much if the hum of small-talk had been about ten times as loud. (Perhaps the supervisors would have enjoyed it less.) It was at this place that women had to sit in their petticoats in order to mend their skirts during Patchwork Week, possessing one skirt only. Here also was the public-house cleaner who had never held a needle; and other strange cases. There was a coster-girl who had an absolute need to get up and walk about. One day this girl arrived with a full black eye which she attributed to her "bloke." In consequence of certain remarks she came next day with a written document in which her "bloke" certified under his hand that he loved her and would love her till hell was frozen over! The tragic thing about this paradise was that a hundred candidates were unable to get into it, the Fund allowances not sufficing for an enlargement.

A fourth establishment was the creation of the Borough of Islington, housed in a girls' school, and partly financed by the Fund. It was a large affair, with several department, sewing being as usual the basis of it. Sewing, knitting, cookery, laundry-work, etc., were taught. The wages were as at the previous place. The labours of the kitchen were utilised to supply meals to the inmates at the cost of the raw materials. A dinner costs threepence, and tea is included in the price. When I called the entire population—once false-teeth makers, wax-modellers, dressmakers, and God knows what!—was at tea in an agreeably titivated hall which on Saturday nights is used for concerts arranged and managed by the workers, who also supply the vocal and other talent. Here I saw one of the banana-crate cradles so celebrated in certain strata of society. Made on the spot, it was a very complete and sightly cradle, with a full selection of linen, including a coverlet knitted out of flannel selvedge. The bodily condition of the workers was disquieting, but it was on the upgrade. Low vitality, defective vision, etc., were rife. At the start fainting from lack of food was so common an occurrence that somebody had to give a bedstead and bedding on which the sufferers could recover. Local employers had found out the virtues of the establishment and were filling situations from it.

Sick-room Helps.

Finally I must mention the War Relief Committee Room in St. Pancras, where I met an assemblage of "Sick-room Helps" who had gathered together for tea and their wages (ten shillings a week of forty hours). These women, motherly and with the gentle glance of much experience in their eyes, receive instruction in hygiene, cookery, etc., and in the remainder of their time they go out to houses where the housekeeper is incapacitated or gone in conceivable. A rag hearthrug glowed like a ruby. Recollect that all articles are given away to those who need them. Nothing is sold, except the very rags of rags, which are secretly disposed of to a rag-merchant. The cheerfulness, systematised order, unofficialism, efficiency, hopefulness, and humanity displayed in that house in Mayfair were notable. And in consideration of what I saw I forgave the National Fund for some of its sins of callousness and contumacy in other departments of activity.

Work for Unemployed Girls.

That house may be counted as a base. Thence I went to Bainbridge House, Cleveland-street (north of Oxford-street), which was within at most fifty yards of the enemy trenches. Bainbridge House is a County Council centre, lent for the purposes of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. When I saw the place it was full of young girls—errand-girls and factory-girls, thrown out of their situations by the war. In one large room I saw at least fifty of them seated round a very large table and listening to the clear, comprehensible wisdom of a lady doctor on the subject of infectious diseases. The sinister word "diphtheria" was written on a blackboard, but the doctoress was talking about scarlet fever. "Now when you notice the discharge," asked the doctoress, "what do you do?" "You move her away from all the other people," piped a voice. "Yes," said the doctoress, "of course you move her away from all the other people, but what do you do next?" And so on. Personally I learnt something new about scarlet fever, although I have had it.

In another large room a similar party of similar girls were going through breathing exercises under another instructress. Then they sang—well and in tune, but their frail, thin voices almost intolerably touched the heart. Down below still another party were acquiring the craft of the laundry. I saw them up to their elbows in the suds. Best of all was the warm and odorous kitchen, where a fourth party were learning to cook. They were then in aprons, some of which had certainly been made for their elders, and fell below the skirt hem, preparing stock for next week's soup. Before cooking the food they go out and buy it themselves at street-stalls. They are taught how to choose and to buy, and when they choose too badly they have to go out again and negotiate exchanges. I suppose I saw between one and two hundred girls—of an average age of perhaps fifteen. They work not an assemblage of "Sick-room Helps" who had gathered together for tea and their wages (ten shillings a week of forty hours). These women, motherly and with the gentle glance of much experience in their eyes, receive instruction in hygiene, cookery, etc., and in the remainder of their time they go out to houses where the housekeeper is incapacitated or partly incapacitated, and they keep the home in its self-respect of tidiness and cleanliness. In maternity cases, for example, they make daily visits for a fortnight, dress the children and start them for school, etc. When a mother is recovering from an operation they go once a week to do the washing (and they do it scientifically). Trained nurses love them—for good reason. Newly-made widowers with many young children regard them as archangels. I daresay this idea and this assemblage appealed to me even more than the others. That is why I put them last.

I was driving about North London all the afternoon until dark. I did not waste a moment, but I managed to see only five places. There were others—perhaps many others, and different varieties. I am sure, however, that there were not enough. The immensity of the metropolis and the fewness of these tiny cases made a contrast almost theatrical. £130,000 has been collected for the Queen's Work for Women Fund. If the National Fund out of its millions multiplied this sum by ten, it would show sagacity. Five thousand women are now in employment, thanks to the schemes of the Central Committee. Fifty thousand would be better. Spending its money on these lines, devised with commonsense, with imagination, and with knowledge of conditions, the National Fund cannot go wrong. Value, and very full value, is obtained for all expenditure. The race itself is being ameliorated. Cheerfulness and hope are being increased. I know that the work is carried out in the teeth of certain famous poor-law experts; but forty thousand famous poor-law experts would not convince me that it is not a thoroughly good work, destined to admirable results. Women are doing it all. Women invent it, scheme it, plan it, supervise it, and execute it in every detail. Not one solitary male did I encounter in any of the five establishments.

COPYRIGHT, 1915, by Arnold Bennett.

[The above notice is printed solely in order to comply with the American Copyright Law. Neither "The Daily News" nor the writer of the article has any desire to prevent full quotation from the article in Great Britain.]

652/57

i.e. Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette 21st Jan. 1916.

THE QUEEN'S FUND

A GOOD TRADE FOR WOMEN IN HAND-IRONING.

The task of finding trades for unskilled women workers who are thrown out of work through the war is one of those to which the Central Committee on Women's Employment has set its hand.

Laundry work has been found to offer good openings both in London and in the country, and the Central Committee has made arrangements with the Borough Polytechnic to take sixteen girls from the committee's workrooms as pupils in their trade laundry school.

Places to be Found.

After the training, the Polytechnic has no doubt that places can be found for the girls. There is always a shortage of skilled handironers in London, while in some country districts laundries cannot get on for want of workers. Being less of a luxury trade, laundry work has not been so greatly affected by the war as other trades, and as work for women, hand ironing compares very favourably with other less skilled occupations.

Competent "finery" ironers can command good wage, as can also head sorters and packers. There are also regular chances of learning. As soon as the girls who have just started training at the Polytechnic are able to earn as much in laundry work as they can do in the relief workrooms, they will be sent out to laundries, where they can quickly rise if they have ability. In regular work it is thought that they will get on even faster than in training, and they will make way for other learners.

The course of lessons arranged should only take about two months, but the girls will be kept until they are fit to earn a living. They are given sixteen hours' teaching every week, coming every evening to the Polytechnic and on Saturday mornings.

Paid to Learn.

Careful selection of suitable women has been made by the lady principal of the Polytechnic from workrooms in three boroughs—Bermondsey, Southwark, and Lambeth. The committee will pay travelling expenses, and the women will receive a wage of 10s. a week, the time not spent in the laundry being occupied in their own workrooms.

Only those who were engaged in unskilled trades before the war have been chosen, and only those who are really anxious to learn the trade.

"I could have got work many a time in a laundry," said a young widow, who has four children, "if I'd known a little more. I know a lot of things, but not enough of anything. I never had the chance of getting into a trade, and if they're willing to learn us, it'll make me independent."

A plucky middle-aged woman said, "I'll master it! I'm a waitress, and good at my trade, too; but I'm getting too old—that's what they think—though I'm better at it than some of the young ones. But in laundry it don't matter if I'm fat or thin." There are many women over forty years at the first class.

White and Tiled Ironing-Room.

The Borough Polytechnic has a complete plant for trade laundry work, including a washing machine worked by power, a shirt and collar machine, and thirty-five gas irons. The large ironing room—36ft. by 31ft.—is white tiled, and with its long tables with laundry trays for receiving clothes underneath, and clothes-hangers above, it has the appearance of a real laundry.

The work conducted in it is exactly similar. The teachers have both been manageresses of laundries, having worked their way up, and the plan is for each woman to go through every department of the work, making up her mind as she goes along in which she would prefer to find employment. Then, if she cannot get work in one way, she will always be able to do it in another.

One of the pupils said that she had been a collar curler—a skilled worker—but now that machines were so largely used she couldn't get enough to do. Another woman said that she could "back" the shirts nine years ago, before she was married, but she wouldn't "take it on" now; she didn't know enough.

A demonstration on sorting was given first of all, and on marking, and "throwing off." The value of learning the expressions used in the trade was impressed upon the women in order that they should enter it with confidence.

Customers' Weaknesses.

"Noting" caused some amusement. "When you find something very torn," said the teacher, "you know your customers, and if they are the kind to blame the laundry whatever happens, you must take it to the office and report it. Some customers you can rely upon to take your word, then you simply tack lightly round the place with red cotton to mark it."

The teacher had a pile of clothes of every description beside her, and she showed the women the right place to put the laundry mark. Collars were opened up, doubled, and dipped in water, and squeezed dry before being marked, and the women were warned not to decorate the end of an evening tie.

The advantage of trying to satisfy customers was pointed out, and therefore they were enjoined to take out ribbons and mark them, so that they could be returned to garments before packing. A little practice was given in marking various letters, the women finding out for themselves the proper place to put the mark.

"Throwing off" consisted in dividing the garments into various qualities, fine and coarse, soiled and very dirty, ready for the washers. The girls were warned to shake the garments out, or otherwise an odd stocking might be washed with something else with disastrous results.

The girls will learn in the ensuing weeks preparing, starching, folding, the various processes of ironing, examining, "racking up"—in different packages for various customers—and a certain amount of booking up. This general and thorough knowledge will prepare them for becoming forewomen later on, if they have the ability.

Daily Chronicle, Jan 25th.

CITY WOMEN VICTIMS OF THE WAR.

OLD BRIDEWELL BECOMES A TRAINING CENTRE.

Much useful and necessary work is being done by the Women's Employment subcommittee for the City of London in giving relief and training for women and girls, formerly employed in clerical work in the City, but now idle on account of the war.

The scheme, which has the approval of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and is financed by the Queen's Work for Women Fund, is also supported by the City Corporation, which has given the services of a resident caretaker and a donation of £100 to convert the room of the old Bridewell Police Station, New Bridge-street—now known as Bridewell House—into comfortable headquarters.

Many occupations are represented among the clients of the City sub-committee. Typists and shorthand writers, however, comprise the majority, but all have this in common, that either they were self-supporting or were the support of their parents, and are now entirely without means beyond that supplied by the City sub-committee.

Teachers, provided by the City Corporation, give lessons where they are needed, in shorthand, bookkeeping, French, English, commercial arithmetic, commercial geography, and personal hygiene, while dressmaking lessons are part of the curriculum, and opportunities for practice in typewriting are given, so that typists may not lose their nimbleness of finger.

A number of "industrial" women—so called to distinguish them from those who have been engaged in clerical work—are on the lists of the committee.

Miss Morton, organising secretary, sees callers at Bridewell House between the hours of 2 and 3 in the afternoon.

Evening Standard, 652.
22nd Jan. 1916.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

NEW WORK-ROOM CLASSES IN DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

The "Queen's Workroom" at Islington has this week become a centre for L.C.C. classes.

Fifty-four unemployed women who are being trained under the domestic economy scheme of the Central Committee on Women's Employment are attending practical lessons in cookery, laundry, health, and physical exercises.

The London County Council probably never had a stranger class than that which met for laundry work yesterday.

There was a quiet-faced superior-looking tea-shop manageress in black dress and neat white apron, a sad-looking little private dressmaker who could get nothing to do, a young lampshade maker who had been at the same work since she was fourteen, a waitress from a fish and oyster bar in the City, several young factory girls, and one or two daily domestic workers.

Washerwomen who Kept Maids.

Few of them had ever done any washing before. The manageress and one or two others had kept servants of their own before the war. Everyone, however, saw the benefit of the training, and very intelligent questions were put to the Council's teacher: "Could you use soda to soften the water for flannels?" and "Did it hurt the fibre of flannel to put it through the mangle?" Some of the girls were surprised that the flannels were not to be boiled with the white clothes.

A demonstration by the teacher came first on washing flannels and ironing handkerchiefs. Afterwards the women wrote down what they had learned before putting it into practice. One of the notebooks read as follows:—

"Avoid steeping, rubbing, hard water, great heat, extreme cold, keeping wet long."

"Small scraps of soap with boiling water added can be used to make the water soapy when soap must not be used."

"Shake occasionally when drying."

The Family Laundry.

The women had been asked to bring their own flannels to wash, but when the moment of producing them came, their shyness in bringing thin, worn clothes was apparent. One woman, however, bolder than the rest, had brought the family washing, which she distributed among her friends. There was no make-believe about the washing; they were really dirty clothes. One shirt belonged to a girl's uncle who was an engineer, and the fact was evident. The use of the demonstration was seen at once. "'Ere! you monitors," said one girl, "I ain't got no soap."

"You don't need soap for flannels," was the crushing reply from a sister washerwoman.

Washing in Class.

The girls found the new methods a little strange at first. "I'm used to a rubbing board," said the girl who was washing her uncle's shirt. "These cuffs won't come clean with no squeezin'. We'd have to do a bit different with our washin' at home, else we shouldn't never get done. It's eleven o'clock when I'm finished as it is."

The girl has no mother, and has to do the family washing when she goes home from her work at night.

As the clothes came out of the water, bright and clean, the women began to see the benefit of getting their own washing done in the lesson, and one or two took their handkerchiefs out of their pockets and washed and ironed them straight away.

Public opinion kept them all up to the mark. "Who left this bath dirty?" was a quick remark. "She'd make a fine housemaid!"

The laundry-room has been fitted up with a boiler, mangles, and all ironing stove, but the women wash as they would do at home, on small baths on the table.

Future lessons are to cover the means of ork has not been so greatly affected by the ar as other trades, and as work for women, nd ironing compares very favourably with ner less skilled occupations.

Competent "finery" ironers can command good wage, as can also head sorters and kers. There are also regular chances of ing. As soon as the girls who have just rted training at the Polytechnic are able to n as much in laundry work as they can do the relief workrooms, they will be sent out laundries, where they can quickly rise if y have ability. In regular work it is ought that they will get on even faster than training, and they will make way for other rners.

The course of lessons arranged should only e about two months, but the girls will be pt until they are fit to earn a living. They e given sixteen hours' teaching every week, ming every evening to the Polytechnic and Saturday mornings.

id to Learn.

Careful selection of suitable women has been de by the lady principal of the Polytechnic m workrooms in three boroughs—Bermondy, Southwark, and Lambeth. The committee ll pay travelling expenses, and the women ll receive a wage of 10s. a week, the time t spent in the laundry being occupied in ir own workrooms.

Only those who were engaged in unskilled des before the war have been chosen, and y those who are really anxious to learn the le.

"I could have got work many a time in a ndry," said a young widow, who has four ldren, "if I'd known a little more. I know ot of things, but not enough of anything. I ver had the chance of getting into a trade, if they're willing to learn us, it'll make me dependent."

A plucky middle-aged woman said, "I'll aster it! I'm a waitress, and good at my ade, too; but I'm getting too old—that's hat they think—though I'm better at it than me of the young ones. But in laundry it on't matter if I'm fat or thin." There are any women over forty years at the first lass.

hite and Tiled Ironing-Room.

The Borough Polytechnic has a complete ant for trade laundry work, including a ishing machine worked by power, a shirt and ar machine, and thirty-five gas irons. The ge ironing room—36ft. by 31ft.—is white ed, and with its long tables with laundry ys for receiving clothes underneath, and ouse-hangers above, it has the appearance a real laundry.

The work conducted in it is exactly similar. e teachers have both been manageresses of ndries, having worked their way up, and plan is for each woman to go through every partment of the work, making up her mind she goes along in which she would prefer to d employment. Then, if she cannot get rk in one way, she will always be able to do in another.

being marked, and the women were warned not to decorate the end of an evening tie.

The advantage of trying to satisfy customers was pointed out, and therefore they were enjoined to take out ribbons and mark them, so that they could be returned to garments before packing. A little practice was given in marking various letters, the women finding out for themselves the proper place to put the mark.

"Throwing off" consisted in dividing the garments into various qualities, fine and coarse, soiled and very dirty, ready for the washers. The girls were warned to shake the garments out, or otherwise an odd stocking might be washed with something else with disastrous results.

The girls will learn in the ensuing weeks preparing, starching, folding, the various processes of ironing, examining, "racking up"—in different packages for various customers—and a certain amount of booking up. This general and thorough knowledge will prepare them for becoming forewomen later on, if they have the ability.

Daily Chronicle, Jan 25th.

CITY WOMEN VICTIMS OF THE WAR.

OLD BRIDEWELL BECOMES A TRAINING CENTRE.

Much useful and necessary work is being done by the Women's Employment subcommittee for the City of London in giving relief and training for women and girls, formerly employed in clerical work in the City, but now idle on account of the war.

The scheme, which has the approval of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and is financed by the Queen's Work for Women Fund, is also supported by the City Corporation, which has given the services of a resident caretaker and a donation of £100 to convert the room of the old Bridewell Police Station, New Bridge-street—now known as Bridewell House—into comfortable headquarters.

Many occupations are represented among the clients of the City sub-committee. Typists and shorthand writers, however, comprise the majority, but all have this in common, that either they were self-supporting or were the support of their parents, and are now entirely without means beyond that supplied by the City sub-committee.

Teachers, provided by the City Corporation, give lessons where they are needed, in shorthand, bookkeeping, French, English, commercial arithmetic, commercial geography, and personal hygiene, while dressmaking lessons are part of the curriculum, and opportunities for practice in typewriting are given, so that typists may not lose their nimbleness of finger.

A number of "industrial" women—so called to distinguish them from those who have been engaged in clerical work—are on the lists of the committee.

Miss Morton, organising secretary, sees callers at Bridewell House between the hours of 2 and 3 in the afternoon.

shade maker who had been at the same work since she was fourteen, a waitress from a fish and oyster bar in the City, several young factory girls, and one or two daily domestic workers.

Washerwomen who Kept Maids.

Few of them had ever done any washing before. The manageress and one or two others had kept servants of their own before the war. Everyone, however, saw the benefit of the training, and very intelligent questions were put to the Council's teacher: "Could you use soda to soften the water for flannels?" and "Did it hurt the fibre of flannel to put it through the mangle?" Some of the girls were surprised that the flannels were not to be boiled with the white clothes.

A demonstration by the teacher came first on washing flannels and ironing handkerchiefs. Afterwards the women wrote down what they had learned before putting it into practice. One of the notebooks read as follows:—

"Avoid steeping, rubbing, hard water, great heat, extreme cold, keeping wet long."

"Small scraps of soap with boiling water added can be used to make the water soapy when soap must not be used."

"Shake occasionally when drying."

The Family Laundry.

The women had been asked to bring their own flannels to wash, but when the moment of producing them came, their shyness in bringing thin, worn clothes was apparent. One woman, however, bolder than the rest, had brought the family washing, which she distributed among her friends. There was no make-believe about the washing; they were really dirty clothes. One shirt belonged to a girl's uncle who was an engineer, and the fact was evident. The use of the demonstration was seen at once. "'Ere! you monitors," said one girl, "I ain't got no soap."

"You don't need soap for flannels," was the crushing reply from a sister washerwoman.

Washing in Class.

The girls found the new methods a little strange at first. "I'm used to a rubbing board," said the girl who was washing her uncle's shirt. "These cuffs won't come clean with no squeezin'. We'd have to do a bit different with our washin' at home, else we shouldn't never get done. It's eleven o'clock when I'm finished as it is."

The girl has no mother, and has to do the family washing when she goes home from her work at night.

As the clothes came out of the water, bright and clean, the women began to see the benefit of getting their own washing done in the lesson, and one or two took their handkerchiefs out of their pockets and washed and ironed them straight away.

Public opinion kept them all up to the mark. "Who left this bath dirty?" was a quick remark. "She'd make a fine housemaid!"

The laundry-room has been fitted up with a boiler, mangles, and an ironing stove, but the women wash as they would do at home, on small baths on the table.

Future lessons are to cover the means of softening water, the removal of stains, print and coloured cotton washing, starching—giving the use of starch—damping down, folding and ironing, washing lace and fine articles, and paraffin washing or bran washing.

All communications regarding the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and gifts for sale, should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee, at the town or county hall, or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

652/58

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette
January 23rd. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

HOW UNEMPLOYED WOMEN LEARN NEW TRADES AT SCHOOL.

There are women who have come to bless the day when they were thrown out of employment through the war.

They are those who have been given the opportunity by the Central Committee on Women's Employment of learning a trade, or of further training in that to which they belong. A new future is opening up before them in which interest in individual work and better wages loom large.

The Hammersmith Trade School is one of the L.C.C. centres where trade lessons are now being given free to women sent from the committee's neighbouring workrooms. Girls who have been in upholstery, tailoring, dressmaking, or millinery, and in one or two cases girls who want to come into a trade, are given expert teaching during the evening.

All the women attend also a class in designing and embroidery where individual teaching is given, having reference to the trade the pupil is learning. Arrangements are made in the relief workrooms from which the girls come, whereby the time they spend at class in the evening is taken off the day work, or a whole day's holiday in the week is given. One young dressmaker, however, who is taking ladies' tailoring classes, asked her supervisor if she might spend her free day in the workroom, so that she might have more practice.

Dressmakers Learn Tailoring.

Every woman has been interviewed by the lady principal of the trade school, who takes a keen individual interest in each, and advises her as to her future work. The dressmakers generally see the advantage of going into the tailoring class, even with only the view of being able to make good coats and tailored skirts. A lady's maid is among them who is anxious to learn both dressmaking and tailoring. A dressmaker who is not very good at her trade has been advised to take up simple upholstery, since she is lame and has not very good sight.

The women, as a whole, recognise the fact that they will find it much easier to get places when they can say that they have learned their trade. "If I could just say I'd been taught by a man!" said a girl who is determined to learn tailoring thoroughly.

The lessons are so arranged that if the girls have an opportunity of taking a place in the trade after only a short time at school, they would yet have learned something to their advantage.

Sprats' Heads and Buttonholes.

In tailoring, all the details are taught first, so that the girls may be fitted quickly to become assistants to tailors. They are now practising buttonholes and learning stitchery. "Sprats' heads" for ornamenting coats are their first endeavour in the latter work. Braiding will come later, when they will be able to make use of their lessons on design.

Other work to be done includes strapping, tailor felling, all kinds of pockets, proper machining, seaming together, and neatening.

If the girls continue their evening classes, even after they have gone back to work, they will be able to learn to make the different items which comprise a coat, such as collars, cuffs, and sleeves, and then they will come to the drafting and cutting of the coat itself.

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette
January 30th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

SCHOOL OF KNITTING FOR LONDON DRESSMAKERS.

BEGINNER'S SIX SOCKS DAILY.

A school for sock-making has been opened for London dressmakers by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, at 138, Piccadilly.

It is for the benefit of dressmakers who want to share in the contract for making 2,000,000 pairs of Army socks, obtained by the committee.

The difficulties of the dressmakers in undertaking this work has been overcome by the offer of the committee to loan hand-knitting machines where necessary, and to teach the employees to use them.

Dressmakers at Class.

Fourteen new machines have been installed for the lessons, and three instructresses are busily engaged teaching the dressmakers themselves, their forewomen, or their workgirls.

In most cases, two representatives from every firm are attending the lessons. Some are giving all their time to it, and others come in when they can best be spared. It is expected that the pupils will become proficient in a week or ten days' time, and be able to teach their firms' other employees.

The best pupil at present is a girl of sixteen, who, after a week's practice, made six socks yesterday. She is now hoping to make ten in a day. An efficient worker can, of course, make at least twelve pairs in a day.

The sock-making class forms a very interesting part of the work of the Central Committee, representing, as it does, one of the sections of women's work most distressed through the war, and the most satisfactory solution of the dressmakers' difficulties yet found. The sock contract, including knitting and yarn spinning, will give employment to well over 1200 women per week until July.

Proprietress Pupil.

Among the pupils is a proprietress, who, with her sister, is responsible for thirty workgirls.

"Anything to keep them employed," she said. She has come to learn herself, because she "never likes to give people work to do that she cannot do herself."

The forewoman of a firm of embroiderers has brought one of her girls with her. Her employer, she said, has paid the girls' wages since August, but he has had no work to give them; they have been occupied in doing charity work, or in working for themselves.

"We all want to learn this knitting," the forewoman said, "so that it will pay the girls' wages, and relieve our employer a little."

A young dressmaker has much the same tale to tell. "Madame has kept all the girls on. Before we got shirts to make, we were on short time and had to manage. It isn't easy when your father's on short time too, like mine, or you've got your mother to keep, like some of the girls. But no one couldn't have acted fairer by us than Madame, and we all want to learn the knitting to give her a little return. They'll all be round me to-night when I go back, to see how I got on."

Good Memories Wanted.

All the pupils are delighted with the work. "It's very interesting," said an unemployed hand shirt maker, "and not monotonous like making shirts. Besides, anyone can make shirts, and you feel you're doing something all on your own in this."

A dressmaker was a little disappointed that she could not become proficient in one lesson, while another thought she had nothing to do but turn a handle. Those who know better bewail their past memories.

"If you could only remember that you've got to change the needles for the top of the sock, and again for the leg, and put the ribber out of action for the heel!"

One woman is carefully writing it all down, although she knows that practice is the great essential. The beginners' finished socks are something of a curiosity. Instead of only splicing the heel and toe with a darker wool, one girl forgot, and made the whole of the foot variegated. And this in spite of the fact that the counter on her machine tells her how many rows she has done.

Yards of Socks.

Other socks look as if a mouse had found them dainty morsels, in consequence of the number of dropped stitches. The socks which are no use at all are unwound again by means of a hand-winder, so that there is practically no waste in the learning process.

The girls who have become proficient are reeling off yards and yards of socks, at first greatly to their own astonishment.

The Central Committee is appealing for gifts, or the loan of machines, so that every dressmaker who applies may be lent machines at once, and her employees set to work. When the committee purchases machines, instructresses will probably be sent by the manufacturers to the dressmakers to whom they are lent.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. MacArthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee, at the town or county hall or urban district office in the locality in which they reside.

Croydon Advertiser. 30.1.15.

WAR WORK FOR WOMEN.

To the Editor of the Croydon Advertiser.

DEAR SIR,—On February 1st a workroom will be opened at the Branch Polytechnic in Selhurst-road for the employment of women who have lost their work on account of the war. The Central Committee on Women's Unemployment has made a grant for the payment of wages and will supply materials on which to begin work. When making these grants the Central Committee urges the Local Committee to make an appeal to the public for materials of various kinds on which our women can work.

Renovation and remodelling of garments is a great feature of the work done in these war-workrooms, and we should be much obliged if people who have garments of good material, which are old-fashioned or partly worn, would send them to us. Discarded frock coats can be made into suits for small boys, and old dress suits will make coats for little girls. Many wonderful resurrections can be brought about by the wise expenditure of skill and energy.

Upholsterers' patterns of cretonnes, serges, etc., and bits of galoon trimming, odd lengths of ribbon, oddments of silk and velvet can all be utilized in some way.

Our garments depend on stitchery of various kinds for their embellishment, so that gifts of embroidery, cottons and silks will be very greatly appreciated.

Slippers can be made of thick serge and felt; these are very useful in the schools to lend to the children on wet days and for use in hospitals.

Nothing made at this workroom can be sold, so that we do not interfere in any way with ordinary trade. Our things are all given to people who are so unfortunate as to have "no power to purchase." Therefore gifts to our workrooms confer a double benefit, first to the workers, and then to the recipients of the things made.

In conclusion, may we beg that parcels may be sent carriage paid, as all available money is needed to pay the small wages allowed to the women employed in the workroom? Parcels should be addressed to "The Forewoman, War Workroom, The Branch Polytechnic, Selhurst-road, South Norwood."

Yours faithfully,
MARY BRIGHTON
GRACE CAMERON SWAN
ISABEL MARSHALL
ROSE GOODWIN
CHARLOTTE INWOOD
Members of the Workroom Committee.
Town Hall, Croydon, 29th January, 1915.

Blackburn Weekly Telegraph. 28-1-15.

An order for 15,000 double flannel body belts for the French Army has been received by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The belts, which will be completed within ten days, are of the same pattern as the 100,000 made for our own War Office through the same agency last year. Work for seventy or eighty girls whose firm was on the point of dismissing them because of lack of orders has also been found by the Central Committee in the making of gaiters for the girls who are emigrating in response to Australia's invitation to the Queen.

A further contract for 2,000,000 pairs of Army socks has been secured. This will provide work for well over 1,000 women weekly. The knitting alone will absorb about 800 unemployed women until August, and will be distributed among workers in hand dress-making. The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has reached a total of £127,000.

Liverpool Post 13-3-15

BOOT MAKING FOR WOMEN.

WOKKERS TO BE TRAINED TO MEET DEMAND.

Training in boot upper fitting and leather machining generally, for unemployed women, is the latest enterprise of the Central Committee on Women's Employment in co-operation with the London County Council.

On Monday, 25 women will begin a course o training at the Cordwainers' College, Bethna Green. The use of the premises and the com plete set of up-to-date power machines require have been offered by the college, the Principa of which has promised to overlook the work o the students. Trade teachers have been supplie by the London County Council. The idea is t provide for women thrown out of work by the war and for whom there is not likely to be employ ment for some time to come. At present there i said to be a strong demand for good leather ma chinists, owing to the activity in the boot trade

Women from 18-25 years of age have been chose out of the applicants, and they include workers i branches of leather or bootwork; corset machinists workers in stationery, printing, french-polishin and other branches of the furniture trade; an also quick workers who have been hand-finishers i tailoring. These are considered by the Londo County Council, who have made the choice in co operation with the Principal of the college, to b suitable pupils for the new work.

They are drawn mostly from Bethnal Green and Shoreditch, but the training is open to workers in neighbouring districts. The free course at the Cordwainers' College is to extend over twelve weeks, the women working five days a week. They will be paid during this time, through the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 3d. an hour in a 40-hour week.

The training is to be both practical and theoretical, and the course covered is so wide that the women will be really well qualified at the end. It is expected that at the end of their training they will be able to earn good wages, ranging in normal times from 16s. to 20s. a week. In emergency accoutrement work they will probably earn at a still higher rate.

The women appear to be very anxious to learn, and those selected will work for a week on trial, so that the Principal may ascertain if they are really promising workers for the trade.

B. O. T. Labour Gazette. Feb./15. 652

652/59

WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT BUREAUX IN JANUARY.

[NOTE.—These are not connected with the Board of Trade Labour Exchanges.]

THE number of applications registered in January, 1915, showed an increase of 12 per cent. compared with January, 1914, and the number of situations offered decreased by 16 per cent. The decrease in the demand as compared with a year ago, is almost entirely in the domestic servant branch, although the supply of cooks and parlourmaids is still not nearly equal to the demand:—

	Applications by Workpeople during		Situations offered by Employers during		Number of Workpeople engaged by Employers. Permanently.		Temporarily.
	Jan., 1915.	Jan., 1914.	Jan., 1915.	Jan., 1914.	Jan., 1915.	Jan., 1914.	Jan., 1915.	Jan., 1914.
SUMMARY BY BUREAUX.
Central Bureau:—5, Princes Street, Cavendish Square, W. ..	139	125	101	109	23	31	10	16
Y.W.C.A.:—26, George Street, Hanover Sq., W. (1)..	00	340	467	643	53	50	18	29
(2)..	177	110	48	61	19	25	15	4
Girls' Friendly Society, 39, Victoria Street, S.W...	277	207	309	311	61	42	3	1
Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Leeds, Glasgow and Dublin Bureaux	299	282	177	188	70	66	3	8
TOTAL of 10 Bureaux ..	1,192	1,064	1,102	1,312	226	214	49	58
SUMMARY BY OCCUPATIONS.
Superintendents, Forewomen, &c.	87	77	27	39	11	9	2	1
Shop Assistants	11	10	4	3	2	—	—	1
Dressmakers, Milliners, &c.	111	42	22	25	10	15	10	4
Secretaries, Clerks, Typists	153	149	58	53	19	25	14	15
Apprentices and Learners	14	14	20	30	17	15	—	—
Domestic Servants ..	633	592	862	1,061	135	125	18	32
Miscellaneous	183	180	109	101	32	25	4	5
TOTAL of 10 Bureaux ..	1,192	1,064	1,102	1,312	226	314	49	58

Dublin Express - 10-3-15.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND

Intensive Poultry Farming

How middle-class women may be trained in intensive poultry farming has been occupying the attention of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The cost of expert teaching prevents for the moment the starting of a large scheme, and the Committee is contenting itself with making an experiment. Girls of the clerk type have been offered free training by a successful woman poultry farmer at Boreham Wood, Herts, for three months; and, if they are satisfactory, for six months. In order to enable them to take advantage of this offer, the Central Committee has recommended a maintenance grant for them of 3d an hour in a sixty-hour week. Very good prospects are now before these girls who were thrown out of work through the war. The Manageress of the Poultry Farm is confident that they will easily find employment after their training, as applications for fully-trained poultry managers of the intensive system are numerous. She has herself received half-a-dozen applications within a fortnight.

The opening for intensive poultry farming in this country is good, for much of the produce has hitherto come from abroad. As for the system itself, the returns of the Chicago market show that intensive farming supplies them with all the eggs needed; and the same may be said of all the large cities throughout the United States. The Committee feels that in training women for this work, they are not only giving present relief, but employment which will be of permanent value. It is particularly suitable for women, because skill, rather than physical strength, is the qualification most needed. The girls, who are to be chosen by the Manageress of the Poultry Farm, will be selected for their intelligence and their evident capacity of taking responsibility.

Lodgings have been found for them in the village at Boreham Wood, and they will start their training immediately. The syllabus suggested by their instructress is as follows:

Practical work in the poultry houses, consisting of routine work such as cleaning, feeding, watering, etc.

Instruction in feeding methods comprising the necessary knowledge of food values, given either by lectures or individual tuition, or by both means.

Instruction by demonstration in hatching both with hens and incubators.

Instruction by demonstration in rearing methods from shell to maturity.

Instruction by demonstration of killing and plucking and trussing.

In order to keep the girls fully employed

Evening Post 13-3-15

BOOT MAKING FOR WOMEN.

WOKKERS TO BE TRAINED TO MEET DEMAND.

Training in boot upper fitting and leather machining generally, for unemployed women, is the latest enterprise of the Central Committee on Women's Employment in co-operation with the London County Council.

On Monday, 25 women will begin a course o training at the Cordwainers' College, Bethna Green. The use of the premises and the com plete set of up-to-date power machines require have been offered by the college, the Principa of which has promised to overlook the work o the students. Trade teachers have been supplie by the London County Council. The idea is t provide for women thrown out of work by the war and for whom there is not likely to be employ ment for some time to come. At present there i said to be a strong demand for good leather ma chinists, owing to the activity in the boot trade

Women from 18-25 years of age have been chose out of the applicants, and they include workers i branches of leather or bootwork; corset machinists workers in stationery, printing, french-polishin and other branches of the furniture trade; an also quick workers who have been hand-finishers i tailoring. These are considered by the Londo County Council, who have made the choice in co operation with the Principal of the college, to b suitable pupils for the new work.

They are drawn mostly from Bethnal Green and Shoreditch, but the training is open to workers in neighbouring districts. The free course at the Cordwainers' College is to extend over twelve weeks, the women working five days a week. They will be paid during this time, through the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 3d. an hour in a 40-hour week.

The training is to be both practical and theoretical, and the course covered is so wide that the women will be really well qualified at the end. It is expected that at the end of their training they will be able to earn good wages, ranging in normal times from 16s. to 20s. a week. In emergency accoutrement work they will probably earn at a still higher rate.

The women appear to be very anxious to learn, and those selected will work for a week on trial, so that the Principal may ascertain if they are really promising workers for the trade.

dish Square, W. ..	139	125	101	109	23	31	10	16
Y.W.C.A.:—
26, George Street, (1)..	00	340	467	643	53	50	18	29
Hanover Sq., W. (2)..	177	110	48	61	19	25	15	4
Girls' Friendly Society, 39, Victoria Street, S.W...	277	207	309	311	61	42	3	1
Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Leeds, Glasgow and Dublin Bureaux	299	282	177	188	70	66	3	8
TOTAL of 10 Bureaux ..	1,192	1,064	1,102	1,312	226	214	49	58
	SUMMARY BY OCCUPATIONS.
Superintendents, Forewomen, &c.	87	77	27	39	11	9	2	1
Shop Assistants	11	10	4	3	2	—	—	1
Dressmakers, Milliners, &c.	111	42	22	25	10	15	10	4
Secretaries, Clerks, Typists	153	149	58	53	19	25	14	15
Apprentices and Learners	14	14	20	30	17	15	—	—
Domestic Servants ..	633	592	862	1,061	135	125	18	32
Miscellaneous	183	180	109	101	32	25	4	5
TOTAL of 10 Bureaux ..	1,192	1,064	1,102	1,312	226	214	49	58

Dublin Express - 6-3-15.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND

Intensive Poultry Farming

How middle-class women may be trained in intensive poultry farming has been occupying the attention of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The cost of expert teaching prevents for the moment the starting of a large scheme, and the Committee is contenting itself with making an experiment. Girls of the clerk type have been offered free training by a successful woman poultry farmer at Boreham Wood, Herts, for three months; and, if they are satisfactory, for six months. In order to enable them to take advantage of this offer, the Central Committee has recommended a maintenance grant for them of 3d an hour in a sixty-hour week. Very good prospects are now before these girls who were thrown out of work through the war. The Manageress of the Poultry Farm is confident that they will easily find employment after their training, as applications for fully-trained poultry managers of the intensive system are numerous. She has herself received half-a-dozen applications within a fortnight.

The opening for intensive poultry farming in this country is good, for much of the produce has hitherto come from abroad. As for the system itself, the returns of the Chicago market show that intensive farming supplies them with all the eggs needed; and the same may be said of all the large cities throughout the United States. The Committee feels that in training women for this work, they are not only giving present relief, but employment which will be of permanent value. It is particularly suitable for women, because skill, rather than physical strength, is the qualification most needed. The girls, who are to be chosen by the Manageress of the Poultry Farm, will be selected for their intelligence and their evident capacity of taking responsibility.

Lodgings have been found for them in the village at Boreham Wood, and they will start their training immediately. The syllabus suggested by their instructress is as follows:

Practical work in the poultry houses, consisting of routine work such as cleaning, feeding, watering, etc.

Instruction in feeding methods comprising the necessary knowledge of food values, given either by lectures or individual tuition, or by both means.

Instruction by demonstration in hatching both with hens and incubators.

Instruction by demonstration in rearing methods from shell to maturity.

Instruction by demonstration of killing and plucking and trussing.

In order to keep the girls fully employed, carpentry may be added to the curriculum as there is not a great deal to do in Intensive Poultry farming. The girls will thus learn how to make their own coops and will prepare themselves by learning how to provide their own plant for the most economical methods of farming.

The Instructress believes very strongly in practical training. As a proof of her success, it may be said that she has been able to sell eggs all the winter at 2s. 6d. and 2s. 9d. per dozen.

Croydon Times, Jan: 30th. 1915

WAR WORK ROOM FOR WOMEN

At Selhurst Road Polytechnic.

To the Editor of the "Croydon Times."

Sir,—On February 1st a Workroom will be opened at the Branch Polytechnic in Selhurst-road for the employment of women who have lost their work on account of the war. The Central Committee on Women's Unemployment has made a grant for the payment of wages, and will supply materials on which to begin work. When making these grants, the Central Committee urges the Local Committee to make an appeal to the public for materials of various kind on which our women can work.

Renovation and remodelling of garments is a great feature of the work done in these war-workrooms, and we should be much obliged if people who have garments of good material, which are old-fashioned or partly worn, would send them to us. Discarded frock coats can be made into suits for small boys, and old dress suits will make coats for little girls. Many wonderful resurrections can be brought about by the wise expenditure of skill and energy.

Upholsterers' patterns of cretonnes, serges, etc., and bits of galoon trimming, odd lengths of ribbon, oddments of silk and velvet, can all be utilised in some way. Our garments depend on stitchery of various kinds for their embellishment, so that gifts of embroidery, cottons and silks will be very greatly appreciated. Slippers can be made of thick serge and felt—these are very useful in the schools to lend to the children on wet days, and for use in hospitals.

Nothing made at this workroom can be sold, so that we do not interfere in any way with ordinary trade. Our things are all given to people who are so unfortunate as to have "no power to purchase"; therefore, gifts to our workrooms confer a double benefit, first to the workers, and then to the recipients of the things made.

In conclusion, may we beg that parcels may be sent carriage paid, as all available money is needed to pay the small wages allowed to the women employed in the workroom. Parcels should be addressed to "The Forewoman," War Workroom, the Branch Polytechnic, Selhurst-road, South Norwood.

Yours, etc.,
(Signed) MARY HEIGHTON,
GRACE CAMERON SWAN,
ISABEL MARSHALL,
ROSE GOODWIN,
CHARLOTTE INWOOD,
Members of the Workroom Committee.

Daily Telegraph 29.3.15

WOMEN'S WORKROOMS.

WAGES RAISED TO MEET HIGHER COST OF LIVING.

Owing to the increased cost of living, the Central Committee on Women's Employment have decided that the minimum rates of pay of 3d. per hour, with a maximum weekly wage of 10s., in the women's workrooms may be raised by not more than 10 per cent.

The maximum number of hours to be worked has been increased from 40 to 46.

In the case of girls between 16 and 18 years of age, who receive a maintenance allowance of 1s. per day, a corresponding increase may be made by raising the rate to 1s. 3d. per day; and the allowance of 4s. a week paid to girls between 14 and 16 years may be increased to 5s.

The question of making a corresponding increase in the number of hours of work or instruction still remains in the discretion of the local committee.

Evening Standard, February 4th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

SECOND EXPERIMENTAL WORK-ROOM FOR ST. PANCRAS.

The fact that a workroom for unemployed women has not been opened in her district need no longer fill a woman in distress through the war with despair.

Where unemployment is not great enough to warrant opening a workroom in a particular district, the Central Committee on Women's Employment has approved that arrangements shall be made by which workers in one district can obtain admission to the workroom in the other.

Generous Gifts.

In order that the expenses of the workrooms shall be kept as low as possible, local representatives are urged by the committee to make every effort to obtain material for the work of the workrooms locally without cost. In a great many cases this has been done, large and generous gifts having been made by local tradesmen and others. Where gifts are not forthcoming, the committee supplies the material, which is bought more economically in bulk.

When a worker is insufficiently clad, clothes can be made for her in the workrooms and sent to her as a gift through the local representative committee.

Owing to the fact that 100 unemployed women are on the waiting list for the St. Pancras workroom, the Central Committee has decided to open a second experimental workroom in St. Pancras.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District offices in the locality in which they reside.

652/60 652.

Dundee Advertiser 13.9.15

WAR ITEMS.

Training in boot upper fitting and leather machining generally, for unemployed women, is the latest enterprise of the Central Committee on Women's Employment in co-operation with the London County Council.

The Daily Telegraph,
No date given.

QUEEN AND WORKERS.

A GIFT OF DAFFODILS.

The Queen paid a visit to the Central Hal Tooting-broadway, yesterday afternoon, ar inspected the work-room for unemploye women initiated by the Central Committee o Women's Employment. Her Majesty havin been presented with a bouquet of carnatior and asparagus fern by the Mayoress of Wand worth, a little old woman approached he shyly. She offered the Queen a bunch of daffo dils, a gift from her fellow-workers. "Than you very much," said her Majesty, "and le me shake your hand."

The Queen handed the bouquet of carnatior to Lady Isobel Gathorne-Hardy, who, wit Mr. E. W. Wallington, was in attendance, bu she carried the daffodils throughout her visi The women's pleasure and pride were un bounded.

Her Majesty was received by the Mayor an Mayoress (Alderman and Mrs. Dawnay), Mr Nicol (the town clerk), Mrs. Glanville, an Miss Hill, and by Lady Midleton, Mrs Tennant, and Miss Mary Macarthur, repre senting the committee.

Her Majesty is very well acquainted with th work carried on in the rooms, and when sh saw the women making outfits, she inquired i they were for the girls going to Australia. Th Queen paused at every table, and spoke to a least one of the workers at it. The widow of man who had served on the Victoria and Albert in King Edward's reign, was presented to he Majesty, who made close inquiries as to th welfare of her children. Before leaving, th Queen visited the kitchen, and watched th making of rock-cakes by the girls whose turn i was to do the cookery for the workers' meals.

VISIT TO BATTERSEA.

Her Majesty also visited Battersea work rooms. The unemployed little clerks of 14 t 16 years were having a bookkeeping lesson given by the L.C.C. teacher, when the Quee arrived. Her Majesty asked the teacher t continue the lesson, and she examined th children's books.

Little girls thrown out of work in othe trades are being given domestic training, an they were busy cutting out and making blouse for themselves. One hundred and fifty wome were at needlework in the adult workroom many of them at "do ups," as they explained The Queen was so interested in a child's dres which had been made from a man's frock coa that she asked for it to be brought back that sh might show it to her lady-in-waiting.

A handkerchief embroidered with the Queen' initials and her Crown drew a smile from th Queen, who said that she liked to think of som little child having it. The working of th Crown on many of the garments was inspecte by her Majesty. "That's all wrong, isn't it?" she said, when the wrong side of a little dres happened to be turned to view.

As usual, the Queen spent most time lookin at the baby clothes, tiny bonnets made of scra of flannel, and embroidered, being particularl admired. Her Majesty noticed a piece of patch work on each square, on which words were em broidered, "Thanks to Queen Mary" occupie the corners, and "Bravo, King Albert" th centre. "You are Belgian?" said the Queen to the worker, and for a few minutes she con versed with her in French, asking if she had news of her husband in Belgium.

Almost every worker wore a little flag, and as the Queen left a corps of soldiers who had been passing were drawn up by the doorway to add their salute to the cheers of the women and children.

LAMBETH WORKROOMS INSPECTED.

Later the Queen went to Lambeth work room, which is lent by Alford House, a boys' an girls' club. Here her Majesty was received b the Mayor and Mayoress and Lady Askwith, re presenting the Central Committee.

The Queen asked many of the women abou their previous employment, and seemed anxiou to know if they were happy in this emergenc work. A sunshade-maker told her Majest that she had had the pleasure of making sun shades for her at the time of her wedding.

Her Majesty's evident enjoyment in th statement made, was remarked by all th women.

In each case the Mayors of the Boroughs wer present to receive the Queen.

The Standard,
Feb. 3rd. 1915.

652.

652/61

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

LESSONS IN DOMESTIC TRAINING FOR CHAIN-MAKERS.

The unemployed women chain-makers of Cradley Heath have brought about a new position in war relief work. No less than five local relief committees of as many districts have united in the management of a common workroom for their benefit.

Because the chain-makers were scattered over a wide area, and the difficulties of finding suitable work for them were so great, the Central Committee on Women's Employment decided to start an experimental scheme of work in their midst. The local representatives of the various districts were invited to co-operate with the central committee.

The great obstacle, which no single local committee felt equal to removing, was the unsuitability of the chain-makers for any other work. The majority, it was said, practically did not understand the use of a needle, and their hands were so hard with the rough work to which they were accustomed that to teach them seemed too great an undertaking.

The Central Committee was not daunted by this difficulty. The establishment of a domestic economy centre which would include a needle-workroom was suggested. There seemed no reason, in the view of the Central Committee, why the opportunity should not be used of instructing the women, who confessedly have little such knowledge in the domestic arts.

Five Local Committees.

The experiment has been a great success. The five local committees entered enthusiastically into the plan. A joint committee was formed of representatives from each and representatives from the Central Committee.

The Workers' Institute, a large, convenient building, was lent for the purpose, and the secretaries of the different committees approached the local education committees for help in forming instruction classes for the workers. Nurses and health visitors were promised for health talks and demonstrations, and the services of an expert cookery teacher were obtained.

The scheme included, in addition, the making and mending of clothes, cradle-making, and the training of sick-room helps.

The results of the work, which has been barely started a month, have been far ahead of all expectations. The workers have not only learned to use a needle, but to turn out very creditable work. They have even got the length of embroidery and making buttonholes. An improvement is remarked in their own personal appearance, and pumice stone and nail brushes are used energetically to the hard hands. Keen competition takes place in the making of the cleanest garment.

Home-Mending Day.

A home-mending day has been instituted, and permission asked for the women to bring their own material to the workroom once a fortnight, in order that the forewomen may cut out and direct the making of their own garments.

The domestic training is having effect upon the homes of the women, which already appear cleaner and more tidy. The food which the women cook at their lessons they are given the opportunity of buying at cost price and taking home.

All communications and gifts for sale for the Queen's Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Daily Telegraph. 10.2.15. Evening Standard. 10.2.15. 652. 652/62

QUEEN'S INSPECTION OF WOMEN'S WORKROOMS

TEACHING USEFUL CRAFTS.

The Queen paid a visit yesterday to the four centres which have been established by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for the relief of necessitous girls and the provision of facilities for training. These establishments assist girls who have been thrown out of work through the war to acquire a knowledge of bookkeeping, shorthand, typing, French, &c., and others are taught domestic economy, needlework, cooking, and various useful crafts. London County Council teachers attend daily, and the girls are greatly interested in their work.

Her Majesty selected Bridewell House, New Bridge-street, E.C., for her first call, and was there received by the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress, Mr. Brinsley-Harper (chairman of the City Committee of the Queen's Fund, under whose control the establishment is carried on), Canon and Mrs. Alexander, Miss Scott (the superintendent), and Miss Morton (organising secretary). With her Majesty was Mrs. Tennant, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, and Miss Mary MacArthur. The Queen at once expressed her desire to familiarise herself with the work executed in every room, and the inspection made was most thorough. In one place a large number of girls were undergoing instruction in physical and commercial geography—a very popular class, she was assured.

DRESSMAKING CLASS.

The Queen was particularly interested in the dressmaking tuition by Mlle. des Tureaux, and spoke to the teacher for some time in French. She was also pleased to observe that the young women were taught to cut their own patterns on scientific lines. With the French language mistress, Mrs. Clifford, the Queen also conversed, and on being told that all the girls could sing the Marseillaise in French she laughed heartily. Dictation exercises were in progress in the shorthand section. Having examined some of the girls' specimen sheets, her Majesty ascended to the top of the building, where the "industrial" women were learning domestic subjects. She was informed that these women, while under training, were being paid a small wage, and were being equipped with means for supporting themselves by skilled labour later on.

In the kitchen, the last place visited, her Majesty expressed gratification at the cleanliness and order that were everywhere apparent. Having carefully examined the various utensils and the crockery, her Majesty watched the cutting up of the bread and butter for tea, and then inquired what the girls had had for dinner for the day. "It is important to have sufficient means for cooking," she said, with a smile, "but it is not less necessary to have wholesome food to cook." The midday meal, it transpired, consisted of beef, haricot beans, and jam roly-poly pudding.

Before leaving the Queen graciously shook hands with the various members of the reception party, and expressed her satisfaction with all she had seen; she was very glad that she had come.

THREE OTHER VISITS.

Subsequently the Queen proceeded to three other premises of a similar character. Motoring first to Bainbridge House, Cleveland-street, her Majesty was received there by the Mayor and Mayoress of the borough, Miss Lupton, Mrs. and Miss Humphry Ward, and Miss Willcocks. At Hammersmith her Majesty was received by the Mayoress, Mr. Gordon (Town Clerk), Mr. Royal, and Mrs. Barrand; and at Fulham by the Mayor and Mayoress, Mrs. Sainsbury, Miss Williams, and Miss Gardiner. At each place the Queen stayed for about twenty to twenty-five minutes, returning to Buckingham Palace about five o'clock. The visits afforded her Majesty an excellent opportunity of observing for herself the uses to which part of her Work for Women Fund is being devoted. Her gracious appearance at the various work-rooms awakened the keenest satisfaction among the staffs and their charges.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

WORK FOUND FOR UNEMPLOYED FOREWOMEN.

A workroom for forewomen unemployed owing to the war is one of the most interesting parts of the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

Hard as the lot of the ordinary woman worker has been when thrown out of work, it is especially so for the forewoman. Better paid work is more difficult to get. She has been used to higher wages, and therefore to a higher standard of living, and in the majority of cases she has someone dependent upon her.

Supervising Relief Work.

The committee was able to meet her case in a measure by the need for very competent forewomen in the women's workrooms. The demand for women with special knowledge of the patterns and methods approved by the committee was at first in excess of the supply.

In addition to those needed in the committee's own experimental workrooms requests came from various local committees who were opening workrooms.

A department for forewomen was at once opened at the depot in Park-street, Park-lane, where 130 women have since been employed for periods varying from one day to a month, or in a few cases longer.

Forewomen were trained elsewhere in cradle-making, also, and one of the Piccadilly workrooms was given over to forewomen who were engaged in practising methods of renovating and re-modelling clothes, before going out to teach women in the Committee's Domestic Economy Centres.

Forewomen are still going in and out of the Park-street workroom, for new workrooms are constantly being opened, and the local committees are eager to avail themselves of the services of a forewoman who has been through the work they are just beginning.

Talent For Teaching.

The forewomen have all been engaged before, either as forewomen in dressmaking or they have had businesses of their own. They are chosen as much with a view to their ability to teach other women as to their experience.

A forewoman of a relief work-room has to deal with young girls and older women of varying occupation, some of whom have never had a needle in their hands. A great deal of patience is, therefore, needed, and tact. Upon the forewoman depends very largely the success or otherwise of the work-room.

The time in the forewoman's work-room is looked upon as a test of suitability for the work. A sample set of infants', children's, and women's garments is also made by each woman, the patterns of which have been approved by the committee. These patterns have been specially designed as suitable and sensible clothing, and have won the approbation of doctors, health committees, and schools for mothers. The forewomen are themselves delighted with them, and go out in every case as enthusiasts of simple, sensible clothing. Each forewoman, in addition, makes an emigration outfit for girls going to Australia under the Queen's Fund.

Home Notes. 13.2.15. 65-2.

652/63

A FACTORY-GIRL GARDEN

Photos, Barratt.

The open-air work and active life suits the ex-factory girls down to the ground.

Planting young fruit-trees proves most interesting and novel to the city-bred girls.

From factory-girl to gardener is rather a step, isn't it? This article, by a girl who was thrown out of work by the war, tells you how the "Queen's Work for Women Fund" helped her to make the change, and what it has been doing for her since.

FACTORY-GIRLS we were, but we're buck-navvies now! The Queen's Fund done it, and what they call the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

"What say we go to the country, Flo?" my pal says to me after we'd been three months looking for work. Every morning we'd been out after it, till we were fair sick of it. And, you know! yer food fair sticks in yer throat when you haven't earned it. So when Kate heard this tale of teaching factory-girls to be gardeners, I said quick, "I'm on!"

We told the lady at the Labour Exchange that we wanted to go, and she wrote to the Central Committee at 8 Grosvenor Place, an' some lady come and asked us a lot of questions—were we unemployed through the war, an' were we over eighteen, an' were we willing to go and live at Radlett—a place about an hour down the line from St. Pancras.

We said "Yes" to them all, an' then she told us we could have training in gardening, fruit-growing, and market-gardening for a year, an' the Queen's Fund would pay us twelve shillings a week all the time. We'd have to keep ourselves, but we could take lodgings in the village or live in a house the Committee's got, and, anyway, she'd see we got a good dinner every day for threepence.

* * * *

We Wouldn't Come Back for Anything.

We'd be under an expert lady gardener, she said, and the land was all ready for thirty of us to start straight away, for a Mr. Phillimore had lent it. The fruit trees and the bulbs were there wait-

One girl's young man pays her fare up every Saturday.

Kate an' me's been planting plum trees. I thought as I should never like it at first, but now I can do the measuring an' sighting it's very interesting. We have to get them straight on four angles, then you see them straight which-ever way you look down the field. We made a hedge, too, with a path between. We've got four fields to plant, an' we work in three lots. We've got a bed of bulbs—narcissus and hyacinths—and another of cabbages, an' we planted plum trees an' apple trees, an' we've got currant bushes and gooseberry bushes in between. Oh, we've learnt a lot.

* * * *

We're Getting Quite Experts Now.

We can do the planting all by ourselves now, with just the forewoman about, an' we've done the clearing the ground an' putting manure in, and the bulbs under the trees, and washing the pots on Saturdays. We look after hens, too, and get lots of eggs every day.

Some of the girls want to be poultry farmers, two is goin' out to Australia to h[illegible] plot of land of their own. Me an' Kate have, but we wouldn't mind being [illegible]re.

We were frightened of the country at wouldn't move out without a lantern we never think of it now.

Kate an' me had two country chaps ldn't put up with them; they were y wanted us to do all the talking. fellow who's a bit chatty on the ro people here say we're too hot. They at the things we say. An' we laugh too.

Our landlord says, "Come into bed all An' when I asked the postman if th letter for Kate he says "Ne'er a on turned round to Kate and said, "N Kate!" and we both exploded.

* * * *

Love From Miss Macarthur.

On Sundays we go for joy rides in Mr. more's motor. He's a gentleman! He te us how to make toys in the evening. That's w we do on wet days, but we get sick of it t[illegible]. We'd all much sooner be out than in.

Miss Macarthur came to see us one Saturday. We saw her in a motor in the village. She was all in a hurry; she'd just got a few hours off. She doesn't have much time, does she? But she saw us, an' the house, and now she sends us her love!

They took our photos, but I don't care about being exhibited in these clothes. They're all right for here, but when they show up in the papers in London, they look funny, I think. We've fine colours, though, an' we think we're a bit improved by the country!

Anyway, I'm not going back. Not me!

(Next week: "Off to Australia!")

Part of ... Chronicle
Lexington 13/2/15

Evening Standard & St James. 652

WOMEN AND THE WAR.

652/64

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

A GERMAN COTTAGE INDUSTRY.

EXPERIMENTS IN CROCHET BUTTONS.

Experiments with an Austrian and German cottage industry are being made in the workrooms of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. It is that of making crochet buttons, for which there is a large and steady demand in this country.

In the country districts of France these buttons are also made, but it is a higher class of work. The peasant women of Brittany are seldom to be seen without some such work in their hands.

The buttons are used for blouse and dress-trimming. They are usually of ball shape, and are completely covered with tightly-made crochet. They can also be elongated or made flat, and they form very decorative fringes. In the women's workrooms their use has been extended already to hat-pins, and golf jersey buttons, carried out in wool.

The Committee are hoping to prove by these experiments that the work could be sufficiently remunerative to be worth considering as a new trade for women. In such case, the girls would be taught the work in preparation for supplying labour for enterprising traders. As a matter of fact, one firm has already taken the work in hand, although not in connection with the Committee's experiment.

The work is very easily learned, an average worker becoming fairly proficient in about ten minutes. A competent worker takes about eight minutes to make a button.

Instead of buying moulds to cover with the crochet, for economy's sake, the women roll up strips of calico, which are left from other work, and crochet over them, the shape being quite as good as that of the model.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

LONDON DRESSMAKERS MAKING 2,000,000 PAIRS OF SOCKS.

London dressmakers have now turned sock-makers in earnest, in order to carry out the contract for two million pairs of socks obtained for them by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

The hand-knitting machines which are being lent to the dressmakers for the work by the Committee are being sent out as fast as possible. Already 400 machines have been allocated. One of the first of the West-end dressmakers to take the work in hand is allowing six of her girls a week in which to learn how to manipulate the machines.

The proprietress herself and the head bodice hand had previously spent two days at the Committee's sock-making school in Piccadilly, and they are assisting the girls to learn the work. An intructress lent by the manufacturer of the machines is also visiting the girls every other day.

Weekly Earnings.

Six machines have been lent by the Committee to this firm, and if the girls are successful in making money on socks, application will be made for more machines. The proprietress is not looking for any profit for herself, but she hopes that the girls will be able to earn about 15s. per week. Before the war an average worker made 25s. per week.

The majority of the women have been with her for twenty years, and, like other dressmakers, she has resorted to every expedient to keep them on. At present a number are making shirts, turning them out at the rate of 100 a week, and one or two of the older workers are attending to the few orders for renovations. Weeks have passed without a single order for a new frock.

Yet this is an old-established business of the first class, and with regular customers, who come in now to see how their dressmaker is faring, but who have "no heart for clothes."

Glad of Any Work.

A few spring models are being made also, but there is no enthusiasm about the work, which is expected to lie about until the fashion has altered.

The proprietress herself feels that it is "sacrilege" to see girls who are expert at Court gowns making shirts and socks, but she is glad to get anything for them to do. And they are glad to have it. They are all dependent upon themselves, and some are supporting other people. One girl is the mainstay of a home where there are father and mother and two sick brothers.

652/65

The Christian Commonwealth

The Organ of the Progressive Movement in Religion and Social Ethics.

No. 1,740. Vol. XXXV. By post {Inland, 6s. 6d. / Abroad, 8s. 8d.} with Sermon Supplement, 10s. 10d. Per Annum. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 17, 1915. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper. Postage {Inland, ½d. / Abroad, 1d.} with Supp. 1d. ONE PENNY. with Supp., 1½d.

A Critical Examination of Recent Modernism.

PRO FIDE.

A DEFENCE OF NATURAL AND REVEALED RELIGION.

Being a Text-book of Modern Apologetics for Students of Theology and others. By CHARLES HARRIS, D.D., late Lecturer in Theology and Parochialia, St. David's College, Lampeter; Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Llandaff. Price 10s. 6d. net.

New and Augmented Edition brought up to date, with fuller discussion of the Bodily Resurrection, the Virgin Birth, and Modernism; and with the Bibliographies rewritten throughout.

COMMENDATION OF THE NEW EDITION BY THE BISHOP OF BRISTOL:

"It is an excellent book, up to date, and will be of real service not only to candidates for Orders, but to Christian people generally, and I shall place it on my list of subjects for Priest's Orders."—George Bristol.

THE MIRACLES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

By the Rev. A. C. HEADLAM, D.D., formerly principal of King's College, London. Large crown 8vo, 6s. net.

". . . the subject is one that suits Dr. Headlam, and enables him to produce one of his best pieces of work. . . . Dr. Headlam is on his own ground, and his treatment appears to great advantage when he comes to deal with the authenticity and trustworthiness of the New Testament documents. No better or fairer statement of the present position of the criticisms of the Synoptists could be desired than that which is given in his fourth lecture . . . the lecture on the Virgin Birth is a model of restraint and good judgment."—The Times.

LONDON: JOHN MURRAY.

THE LATEST WORKS BY

Archdeacon Wilberforce, D.D.

SEEING GOD. 1s. 6d. net.
Personal Recognition of Divine Love.

INWARD VISION. 3s. net.
"Each sermon is an essay packed with thought and radiant with insight . . . clearly the outcome of a rich spiritual experience."—Light.

MYSTIC IMMANENCE. 1s. 6d. net.
"A gem of mystical insight."—The Quest.

"THERE IS NO DEATH."
A New Work on the Future Life. 1s. 6d. net.

Complete List of Works by Archdeacon Wilberforce sent post free.

SHORT STUDIES ON BIBLE SUBJECTS.
By WILLIAM DALE, F.S.A. 2s. 6d. net.
"Extremely interesting . . . a very capital and useful book, which may be heartily commended to the general reader, as well as to teachers and preachers."—Western Daily Press.

"LET IT BE GRANTED."
By W. T. CARLING. 6s. net.
"The author is evidently a thinker, and the results of his thinking are in all cases interesting, and on some subjects highly suggestive and helpful. His book will be useful to those on the look-out for ideas."—Aldersgate Magazine.

MY JUBILEE AS A CHURCH MUSICIAN
(1862-1912). By a LAY CURATE.
Cloth, 1s. 6d. net.
"An entertaining bit of autobiography written with frank enjoyment of personal experiences. Choir-leaders and organists will doubtless find in it both interest and suggestion."—Sunday School Times.

London: ELLIOT STOCK,
7, Paternoster Row, E.C.

A Book Every Woman Should Read

THE DAY-STAR'S MESSAGE TO ALL WOMEN YOUNG OR OLD RICH OR POOR
By SISTER ION. 3s. 6d. net.
"Apart from its intense religious feeling the book is remarkable for its evidences of wide reading in many different fields."—Oxford Chronicle.
London: ROBERT SCOTT, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Commonsense and Idealism.

Visit to the Central Committee Workrooms.

(By Our Special Commissioner.)

Five months ago, almost to a day, I described in these pages how the Central Committee on Women's Employment intended to deal with the problem of finding work and wages for the women workers whom the war had rendered idle. This problem has now been solved. Last week, by the courtesy of the committee, I visited the workrooms, and found that the most interesting and important organisation of women's work that one wonders why it was necessary that the nation should be at war before their value could be seen. When one comes into actual contact with the committee's schemes in any one of the experimental workrooms, one finds it difficult to realise that they were in their origin purely tem-

[Barratt's Photo. Press.

The Photograph at the top illustrates the Farm Work at Redlett, organised by the Central Committee for Women's Employment; below is a Scene in a Workroom. Inset top the left, the Marchioness of Crewe, Chairman of the Central Committee; on the right, Miss Macarthur, the Secretary.

I am not sure whether it is the commonsense or the idealism which strikes one first. If one begins (as I did) at the Central Committee's headquarters in Grosvenor Place, two lordly mansions converted into offices, it is perhaps which obtrudes itself. For here one finds the brains of the organisation, the leaders of the industrially and politically organised women combining with titled people and members of the Civil Service to prepare the schemes which are carried into effect elsewhere. The constitution of the committee, however, was described in an earlier article (Christian Commonwealth, September 16, 1914), and the preliminary activities of Miss Mary Macarthur and her colleagues outlined. It is not necessary to go over that ground again. What is much more interesting now is to make it clear that the Central Committee has definitely established its claim to be regarded as one of the first of the emergency organisations called into being by the war which has secured results. These results are to be found, not at Grosvenor Place, but at the depot in Park Street and at the various experimental workrooms where the training schemes are being carried out.

The Commonsense Aspect

Thither I went from the committee's headquarters. The depot is within a stone's throw of Park Lane, in a large and very handsome house. Here the committee's schemes quite literally begin and end. The interior of the depot bears a very close resemblance to a draper's warehouse. Great piles of dress material, of all textures and colours, are accumulated, travellers' samples, odds and ends of all sorts fill the rooms, and an air of ordered activity pervades the place. All the material upon which the workers are employed in the experimental workrooms is sent out from this depot. A small army of women, most of them dressmakers' forewomen of a superior sort, are engaged in cutting out the garments ready for the sewing women, and others receive the finished product from the workrooms and store it ready for distribution through the relief organisations to the needy people for whom it has been prepared.

At the depot one begins to see the full range of the committee's schemes, and to appreciate the

Economy and Care

with which every detail has been worked out. It was explained to me that a cardinal principle of the workrooms is to get a maximum of work upon every garment made at a minimum of cost. Not, of course, at the expense of the women workers: the committee at the very beginning fixed a minimum rate

Christian Commonwealth

The Organ of the Progressive Movement in Religion and Social Ethics.

No. 1,740. Vol. XXXV. By post {Inland, 6s. 6d. / Abroad, 8s. 8d.} with Sermon Supplement, 10s. 10d. Per Annum. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 17, 1915. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper. Postage {Inland, ½d. / Abroad, 1d.} with Supp. 1d. ONE PENNY. with Supp., 1½d.

A Critical Examination of Recent Modernism.

PRO FIDE.

A DEFENCE OF NATURAL AND REVEALED RELIGION.

Being a Text-book of Modern Apologetics for Students of Theology and others. By CHARLES HARRIS, D.D., late Lecturer in Theology and Parochialia, St. David's College, Lampeter; Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Llandaff. Price 10s. 6d. net.

New and Augmented Edition brought up to date, with fuller discussion of the Bodily Resurrection, the Virgin Birth, and Modernism; and with the Bibliographies rewritten throughout.

COMMENDATION OF THE NEW EDITION BY THE BISHOP OF BRISTOL:

"It is an excellent book, up to date, and will be of real service not only to candidates for Orders, but to Christian people generally, and I shall place it on my list of subjects for Priest's Orders."—GEORGE BRISTOL.

THE MIRACLES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

By the Rev. A. C. HEADLAM, D.D., formerly principal of King's College, London. Large crown 8vo, 6s. net.

". . . the subject is one that suits Dr. Headlam, and enables him to produce one of his best pieces of work. . . . Dr. Headlam is on his own ground, and his treatment appears to great advantage when he comes to deal with the authenticity and trustworthiness of the New Testament documents. No better or fairer statement of the present position of the criticisms of the Synoptists could be desired than that which is given in his fourth lecture . . . the lecture on the Virgin Birth is a model of restraint and good judgment."—The Times.

LONDON: JOHN MURRAY.

THE LATEST WORKS BY

Archdeacon Wilberforce, D.D.

SEEING GOD. 1s. 6d. net.
Personal Recognition of Divine Love.

INWARD VISION. 3s. net.
"Each sermon is an essay packed with thought and radiant with insight . . . . clearly the outcome of a rich spiritual experience."—Light.

MYSTIC IMMANENCE. 1s. 6d. net.
"A gem of mystical insight."—The Quest.

"THERE IS NO DEATH."
A New Work on the Future Life. 1s. 6d. net.
Complete List of Works by Archdeacon Wilberforce sent post free.

SHORT STUDIES ON BIBLE SUBJECTS.
By WILLIAM DALE, F.S.A. 2s. 6d. net.
"Extremely interesting . . . . a very capital and useful book, which may be heartily commended to the general reader, as well as to teachers and preachers."—Western Daily Press.

"LET IT BE GRANTED."
By W. T. CARLING. 6s. net.
"The author is evidently a thinker, and the results of his thinking are in all cases interesting, and on some subjects highly suggestive and helpful. His book will be useful to those on the look-out for ideas."—Aldersgate Magazine.

MY JUBILEE AS A CHURCH MUSICIAN
(1862-1912). By a LAY CURATE.
Cloth, 1s. 6d. net.
"An entertaining bit of autobiography written with frank enjoyment of personal experiences. Choir-leaders and organists will doubtless find in it both interest and suggestion."—Sunday School Times.

London: ELLIOT STOCK,
7, Paternoster Row, E.C.

A Book Every Woman Should Read

THE DAY-STAR'S MESSAGE TO ALL WOMEN YOUNG OR OLD—RICH OR POOR

By SISTER ION. 3s. 6d. net.
"Apart from its intense religious feeling the book is remarkable for its evidences of wide reading in many different fields."—Oxford Chronicle.

London; ROBERT SCOTT, Paternoster Row, E.C.

The Romantic Literature of Early Christian Mysticism.

FIVE LECTURES to be delivered on TUESDAYS, 5 p.m., by
G. R. S. MEAD,
Editor of "The Quest" and "The Quest Series,"
At CAXTON HALL, WESTMINSTER, S.W.
Feb. 23.—THE KNIGHTLY QUEST OF THE KING'S SON.
Mar. 2.—THE HEAVENLY DANCE AND PIPER.
Mar. 9.—THE CRUCIFIXION SEEN BY SPIRITUAL EYES.
Mar. 16.—THE WAY OF UNION IN HEIGHT AND DEPTH.
Mar. 23.—THE VICTOR'S HEAVENLY ROBE.
Course Tickets, 10s. each. Admission to each Lecture, 2s. 6d.

Commonsense and Idealism.

Visit to the Central Committee Workrooms.

(By Our Special Commissioner.)

Five months ago, almost to a day, I described in these pages how the Central Committee on Women's Employment intended to deal with the problem of finding work and wages for the women workers whom the war had rendered idle. This problem has now been solved. Last week, by the courtesy of the committee, I saw the astonishing results. It is no exaggeration to say that the results achieved by the committee in the six months of the war are amazing. They are a triumphant vindication of the practical organising genius of women. The committee's success does, indeed, give rise to rather ironical reflections. The principles upon which the work has been carried out, though applied hurriedly in the midst of a tremendous national crisis, are so obviously adapted to the permanent organisation of women's work that one wonders why it was necessary that the nation should be at war before their value could be seen. When one comes into actual contact with the committee's schemes in any one of the experimental workrooms, one finds it difficult to realise that they were in their origin purely temporary and provisional. They were meant only for the crisis of the war. But they are schemes which belong naturally to times of peace. In fact, the war seems to have little relation to these placid, orderly, comfortable workrooms, these piles of beautiful garments, this atmosphere of domesticity, this friendly, sisterly community of workers. The war is a vast insanity. But this—this is a triumph of commonsense and intelligent idealism.

[Barratt's Photo. Press.

The Photograph at the top illustrates the Farm Work at Radlett, organised by the Central Committee for Women's Employment; below is a Scene in a Workroom. Inset (on the left), the Marchioness of Crewe, Chairman of the Central Committee; (on the right), Miss Macarthur, the Secretary.

I am not sure whether it is the commonsense or the idealism which strikes one first. If one begins (as I did) at the Central Committee's headquarters in Grosvenor Place, two lordly mansions converted into offices, it is perhaps which obtrudes itself. For here one finds the brains of the organisation, the leaders of the industrially and politically organised women combining with titled people and members of the Civil Service to prepare the schemes which are carried into effect elsewhere. The constitution of the committee, however, was described in an earlier article (CHRISTIAN COMMONWEALTH, September 16, 1914), and the preliminary activities of Miss Mary Macarthur and her colleagues outlined. It is not necessary to go over that ground again. What is much more interesting now is to make it clear that the Central Committee has definitely established its claim to be regarded as one of the first of the emergency organisations called into being by the war which has secured results. These results are to be found, not at Grosvenor Place, but at the depot in Park Street and at the various experimental workrooms where the training schemes are being carried out.

The Commonsense Aspect

Thither I went from the committee's headquarters. The depot is within a stone's throw of Park Lane, in a large and very handsome house. Here the committee's schemes quite literally begin and end. The interior of the depot bears a very close resemblance to a draper's warehouse. Great piles of dress material, of all textures and colours, are accumulated, travellers' samples, odds and ends of all sorts fill the rooms, and an air of ordered activity pervades the place. All the material upon which the workers are employed in the experimental workrooms is sent out from this depot. A small army of women, most of them dressmakers' forewomen of a superior sort, are engaged in cutting out the garments ready for the sewing women, and others receive the finished product from the workrooms and store it ready for distribution through the relief organisations to the needy people for whom it has been prepared.

At the depot one begins to see the full range of the committee's schemes, and to appreciate the

Economy and Care

with which every detail has been worked out. It was explained to me that a cardinal principle of the workrooms is to get a maximum of work upon every garment made at a minimum of cost. Not, of course, at the expense of the women workers: the committee at the very beginning fixed a minimum rate of wages—3d. an hour. The cutters-out, being highly skilled women, who in normal times earn much higher wages, are paid 4½d. to 6d. an hour. But in every other direction economy and beauty are the two ideals aimed at, and attained. Nothing is wasted, not even the scraps of material left over. I was shown several rag rugs made out of the odds and ends of the cutting rooms. It was also pointed out that the little bits of coloured material, travellers' samples, and so on, are admirably suited to the making of cuffs and collars for the children's overalls and other garments. I am not expert enough to say how these things are done. That they are done, with very wonderful consequences, I am prepared to affirm after seeing the finished garments in the store-rooms at Park Street.

652/66

The store-rooms, indeed, are the final glory. They would gladden any woman's heart. To a man the matter seems to be merely miraculous; he is shown

Pile upon Pile of "Things," children's dresses, coats, overalls, night-dresses, little tiny baby garments. He is told to admire the workmanship, the sewing, the fancy touches on every garment. He does admire the workmanship. He admires everything. He goes round and round the rooms. He sees a child's hat made (I think) from bits of brown corduroy, slippers made out of silk top hats, collars made out of the linen of men's shirts, belts on the overalls which have been stiffened inside with the starched fronts of the same shirts—this is economy. His conductress explains that it is economy. To him it seems like inspiration. He asks questions, timidly, as befits a man wandering among mysteries, and is told still more wonderful things; as, for instance, that the children's overalls are made on the principles laid down in Miss Synge's book, where, among other matters, it is insisted that children's garments should be so made that the difficulties of buttons—well known to be one of the larger terrors of small children—are overcome and a child soon learns to dress itself without adult help. And he is told that every single garment is made by one worker, save only the cutting out; there is of labour whereby one woman is set to make (say) button-holes or sleeves or collars and nothing else—an infinitely tedious and monotonous thing, from which the worker learns nothing at all.

None of the Specialised Division

I understood this last point better when I went from the depot to the workrooms at Kingsway and St. Pancras. There one sees the women and girls at work upon the articles of dress under the kindly eyes of the very efficient forewomen and instructresses. At the Kingsway workroom there are several score of women and girls who would in normal times be employed in the printing trade. This workroom was started for their benefit. They are employed here for thirty hours a week at 4d. an hour and appear to enjoy their lives. The room presents a rather artistic appearance, since all of the workers wear the same sort of overall, each one of which was made by the wearer as her first task. Then they were set upon other tasks, making up the material sent to them from the depot. Herein they definitely learn a new accomplishment. Many of them knew practically nothing about sewing before they went into the workroom. The making of one whole garment was quite beyond them. I was told of one worker who could not at first settle down to sewing. It worried her.

She Dreamed of it at Night.

But she, too, is learning, and, what is more, taking pride in her work. Others, I gathered, rebelled at the make of the funny little buttons—no "real" buttons are used in these workrooms; and I should say that to make buttons the size of sixpences out of little bits of linen is rather trying to unaccustomed fingers. At this workroom, however, sewing is not the only employment. There are classes held under the L.C.C. for cookery, home laundry work, and for gymnastics, as well as lectures on health and child care.

The results justify the wisdom of the controllers. I was told at St. Pancras that since the workrooms were opened there has been a notable and very significant development of the pride of craft among the workers. At first some of them brought their work back carelessly rolled up in bundles. But now the things are carefully folded and neatly covered, with the worker's name pinned to the garment. There has, too, been a definite improvement in the personal dress of the workers; they are beginning to exercise their newly taught skill on their own clothes. Every one of the forewomen and superintendents to whom I spoke declared their confidence that when these women and girls go back to their ordinary occupations they will have a new standard of beauty, a better sense of economy in the matter of dress, a finer sense of colour. Cheap, ready-made finery will satisfy them less; the pleasure of making their own things and the clothing of their children will be keener. I remarked at St. Pancras upon the colour harmonies and the beauty of the embroideries upon the articles shown to me, and asked whether these were due to the instinct of lessons they are now learning will undoubtedly mean increased efficiency as wives and mothers. Few of them could sew really well when they entered the workrooms. But they are learning. It is a mistake, I gathered, to suppose that women learn to sew by instinct, or that they all find equal pleasure in it. But in the friendly atmosphere of the workrooms, where talking—though it is not exactly encouraged—is certainly not suppressed—they all make rapid progress and find delight in making beautiful things.

What becomes of the beautiful things they make? This is a question which brings one to what is the best side of the Committee's work. All these articles are being made for those who in other words, they are given away to necessitous people, through the various relief organisations, distress committees, health centres, baby clinics. Nothing is sold. In my earlier article I described the Committee's scheme for making maternity outfits, including the famous cradle made out of banana crates. These outfits are made in the workrooms, and very beautiful they are. One can well believe that to the pride of craft which the workrooms are creating must be added the pride of motherhood which must inevitably be increased when a poor mother sees her newly born child properly clothed in daintily made garments. Herein, too, the Committee's work is certain to have important after-effects; a new standard of motherhood is being set up, and the women in the dingy streets who see their neighbour's children clothed thus will themselves conceive a higher self-respect and love of beauty.

"Have no Purchasing Power":

From the workrooms, with their curiously domestic atmosphere, to the open fields and the (superficially) more masculine work on the land is rather an abrupt transition. But it is necessary, since the work of the Central Committee includes a remarkable experiment in training girls for farm work on an estate at Radlett, in Hertfordshire. Some thirty London factory girls have been sent down there and are being taught by two lady gardeners. These girls are learning the whole thing, from digging to the making of nets used to cover strawberry beds, and the baskets in which the fruit is gathered. At Radlett I was told that no girl had expressed any dislike for the work. They revel in it. Digging at first made their backs ache, but that is a healthy sort of fatigue which is in itself a pleasure. When these girls went home to London at Christmas time it was, I think, expected that some of them would feel the fascination of the city too great to resist. But they did not; everyone returned promptly at the end of the holiday, and seemed glad to be back. Most of the girls live in a hostel on the top of the hill, and others are boarded out in the near-by villages. The open-air life has made a wonderful improvement in the health of each of them.

Fruit and Vegetable Farming

Many of the details of the committee's schemes I have not mentioned. Arrangements have been made, for instance, to provide the workers in London with one good meal a day; for this they pay 3d., which includes a cup of tea in the afternoon. At St. Pancras it was found necessary to give the workers hot cocoa in the mornings, since many of them came to work without much breakfast and were often wet and cold on their arrival. This question of meals is really a problem. Some of the workers were reluctant to spend so much as 3d. a day on themselves, explaining that at home that small sum would help to provide a much

(Concluded on page 260.)

The Prime Minister and the Cost of Living.

By Philip Snowden, M.P.

(Mr. Snowden contributes an article every week exclusively to "The Christian Commonwealth.")

The urgency and gravity of the matter, and the debate upon the subject which took place last week in the House of Commons, must be my excuse for returning to the question of the rise in the prices of commodities. The gratitude of the Government to the Labour Party for its invaluable assistance to them in carrying on the war is evidently not going to take the form of treating them with any more respect in the House of Commons, or of showing any more consideration for the proposals which the party put forward. It was the trade unions and the Labour Press which gave articulate expression to the popular feeling about the increase in the cost of living. But for the Labour agitation on this matter no attention would have been given to it by the Government or the daily Press. It was due to a movement made by the Labour Party in Parliament on the first day of the present session that an opportunity was provided by the Government for the discussion of the subject. Naturally one would have thought that under such circumstances the counsel for the plaintiffs would have been permitted to open the case. A resolution was put down upon the Order Paper, in the names of three members of the Labour Party, which stated that the Government should fix maximum prices and acquire control of commodities.

The Government's Strategic Move.

In order to prevent the Labour Party from moving this resolution as a substantive motion, two innocent and inoffensive private members put down a resolution as innocent and inoffensive as themselves, and upon this the debate was taken. It was still open to the Labour Party to move their own resolution as an amendment to the motion, but their reverence for the political truce and the feelings of close comradeship which have been developed by the happy associations of Liberal and Tory and Labour on political and other platforms during the last six months would not permit them to do such an embarrassing and unfriendly act. The debate proceeded on the Government's resolution, and after it had been formally put before the House by its nominal sponsors the Prime Minister made his statement on behalf of the Cabinet Committee, which has been considering this question since last September expected. With that remark, I think, everybody will agree. But if the opinion of the Government at the outbreak of war was that "a much more substantial rise" would take place in the first six months of such a war, it makes the inaction of the Government all the more inexcusable. If "the sober-minded and best-informed judgments in the country apprehended a more substantial rise" than has taken place, then it was the bounden and immediate duty of the Government to take steps at the outbreak of war to provide against such a likelihood. The Cabinet realised the serious financial situation when war broke out. They called bankers and financial experts into consultation. For some days the banks of the United Kingdom were practically commandeered. The Stock Exchange was closed for months in order to prevent panic, and to conserve the financial stability of the bankers. To enable the banks to maintain a paper solvency, to enable them to quote their securities in their balance-sheets at a price at which they could not be sold, a minimum price for securities was fixed. It is true that the Government bought a large quantity of sugar. But why sugar only? Man does not live by sugar alone. It was more important to see that the bread supply of the people was protected against the ravages of famine and famine prices. Mr. Bonar Law's criticism of the Government was the most practical offered in the course of the debate last week. In his opinion, the Government ought to have bought large supplies of wheat last autumn. If they had done that it would have had a considerable effect on prices later. But, instead of doing that last September, the Government appointed a Cabinet Committee to consider and report. And it reports five months later that things are not as bad as they might have been, and that perhaps they will get better soon. This is like telling a man who is very ill that he might be worse—that a friend of his has just died.

Mr. Asquith's History.

Mr. Asquith's references to the period of the Franco-Prussian War were unfair and misleading. His facts and figures were not inaccurate, but the implications and parallels were false and unsound. It is true there was a rise in prices during that war, but there was something else—a rapid and considerable rise in wages. Mr. Asquith said people about present prices by reference to forty years ago. He forgot to mention that the increases which have taken place during the last six months have followed close upon a rise of prices going on for the last eight years. Before the recent advances prices were standing at about 15 per cent. above the figures of eight years ago. The recent rise has been higher than Mr. Asquith mentioned; at least, typical family budgets published in the Press have given a higher result. But if we put the recent rise at 25 per cent., that makes the cost of living 40 per cent. above the figure of 1907. And in the meantime wages have remained practically stationary. This is the reason why the recent rise is being felt so keenly. The pressure of outgo on income was so hard upon working-class families before the war came that the added force is now too strong to be resisted. It means actual starvation to tens of thousands of families. This war is going to have a serious effect upon the physique of the nation. The Napoleonic wars, it is said, reduced the average height of Frenchmen by four inches. The best part of our male population is being destroyed by this war; and at home, by starvation, the young children, the fathers and mothers of the next generation are being stunted in their growth.

The State of Employment.

Two other points made by Mr. Asquith are open to criticism. It is true that there is a state of employment which on the whole is very satisfactory. But some industries are suffering badly—notably the cotton trade, the greatest of our manufacturing trades. From figures which are published dealing with the largest weaving centre in Lancashire I find that in the last three months of last year the average number of weavers unemployed was 32 per cent. of those normally employed, and the earnings of those actually at work were only 75 per cent. of the average earnings per head before the war. These facts apply to tens of thousands of families in Lancashire. While in one-fourth of the families there is total unemployment for certain members, while the earnings are reduced by one-fourth through short time and partial work, the cost of living is up 25 per cent. That is surely a serious state of things, and it calls for some action on the part of the Government more effective than anything the Prime Minister has foreshadowed. One other important point was missed in the discussion on prices. The figures all relate to wholesale prices. When we come to retail prices we find that the advance is altogether out of proportion to the rise in the wholesale price. This is particularly hard on the poor, who have to buy their things in small quantities. Coal is being retailed in London this week at the rate of 52s. a ton.

What Can Be Done.

The powers of even a great State cannot altogether overcome world influences. It is not suggested that the Government could keep all prices down to the pre-war figures. The price of wheat is manifestly regulated largely by forces over which this country has no control. But the recent increases in the price of wheat are to a not inconsiderable extent caused by the rise in freight rates. For instance, on July 15 wheat was quoted at Rosario, Argentina, at 31s. per quarter. The freight was then 2s. 3d. per quarter. Six months later the price was 40s. 5d. per quarter, and the cost of freight 13s. 11d—that is, 10s. 10d. of the increase was due to increased freightage. The Government could deal with that. It might mean taking over the whole of the British mercantile marine, but that presents no insuperable difficulties. It could be done as easily, if not quite so quickly, as the control of the railways was assumed. The proposal of the Government to use some of the interned foreign ships is all right as far as it goes, but its effect upon rates and prices will be about as useful as to scratch an elephant's trunk with a toothpick to cure its neuralgia. We cannot prevent the foreign wheat-growers from getting the best prices for their crops, but the Government can prevent English wheat-growers from taking advantage of the ruling prices in Chicago or Winnipeg to put money they never earned or expended into their pockets. The purchase of the whole British crop at a price which would be a fair return on the cost of production would considerably reduce the average price of wheat. The cost of producing last year's crop was less than in the previous year owing to the increased yield. At the beginning of last year English wheat averaged 35s. a quarter. At present it is fetching 60s a quarter in the home market. The yield this year has been 10 per cent. higher than in the previous year. The farmers ing, the fancy touches on every garment. He does admire the workmanship. He admires everything. He goes round and round the rooms. He sees a child's hat made (I think) from bits of brown corduroy, slippers made out of silk top hats, collars made out of the linen of men's shirts, belts on the overalls which have been stiffened inside with the starched fronts of the same shirts—this is economy. His conductress explains that it is economy. To him it seems like inspiration. He asks questions, timidly, as befits a man wandering among mysteries, and is told still more wonderful things; as, for instance, that the children's overalls are made on the principles laid down in Miss Synge's book, where, among other matters, it is insisted that children's garments should be so made that the difficulties of buttons—well known to be one of the larger terrors of small children—are overcome and a child soon learns to dress itself without adult help. And he is told that every single garment is made by one worker, save only the cutting out; there is of labour whereby one woman is set to make (say) button-holes or sleeves or collars and nothing else—an infinitely tedious and monotonous thing. from which the worker learns nothing at all.

None of the Specialised Division

I understood this last point better when I went from the depot to the workrooms at Kingsway and St. Pancras. There one sees the women and girls at work upon the articles of dress under the kindly eyes of the very efficient forewomen and instructresses. At the Kingsway workroom there are several score of women and girls who would in normal times be employed in the printing trade. This workroom was started for their benefit. They are employed here for thirty hours a week at 4d. an hour and appear to enjoy their lives. The room presents a rather artistic appearance, since all of the workers wear the same sort of overall, each one of which was made by the wearer as her first task. Then they were set upon other tasks, making up the material sent to them from the depot. Herein they definitely learn a new accomplishment. Many of them knew practically nothing about sewing before they went into the workroom. The making of one whole garment was quite beyond them. I was told of one worker who could not at first settle down to sewing. It worried her.

She Dreamed of it at Night.

But she, too, is learning, and, what is more, taking pride in her work. Others, I gathered, rebelled at the make of the funny little buttons—no "real" buttons are used in these workrooms; and I should say that to make buttons the size of sixpences out of little bits of linen is rather trying to unaccustomed fingers. At this workroom, however, sewing is not the only employment. There are classes held under the L.C.C. for cookery, home laundry work, and for gymnastics, as well as lectures on health and child care.

The results justify the wisdom of the controllers. I was told at St. Pancras that since the workrooms were opened there has been a notable and very significant development of the pride of craft among the workers. At first some of them brought their work back carelessly rolled up in bundles. But now the things are carefully folded and neatly covered, with the worker's name pinned to the garment. There has, too, been a definite improvement in the personal dress of the workers; they are beginning to exercise their newly taught skill on their own clothes. Every one of the forewomen and superintendents to whom I spoke declared their confidence that when these women and girls go back to their ordinary occupations they will have a new standard of beauty, a better sense of economy in the matter of dress, a finer sense of colour. Cheap, ready-made finery will satisfy them less; the pleasure of making their own things and the clothing of their children will be keener. I remarked at St. Pancras upon the colour harmonies and the beauty of the embroideries upon the articles shown to me, and asked whether these were due to the instinct of the individual woman or girl. Some of them, I was told, display a good deal of natural taste in this direction, but others are slow to see (as my interlocutor put it) that certain colours cannot go together because they "swear at each other."

At St. Pancras the workers who show a natural talent, especially those who are employed normally in the tailoring and dressmaking trades, are

Selected for Special Training and are given lessons by skilled dressmakers. Upstairs a dozen girls were at work remaking old garments—these were tailoresses who were being taught more of their craft than they would learn in an ordinary workroom, where the division of labour is carried to extremes, and where a "waistcoat hand" makes waistcoats and nothing else for ever. Most of the women, however, are drawn from a great variety of trades, factory work, perhaps, predominating, and for them the question which brings one to what is the best side of the Committee's work. All these articles are being made for those who

"Have no Purchasing Power":

in other words, they are given away to necessitous people, through the various relief organisations, distress committees, health centres, baby clinics. Nothing is sold. In my earlier article I described the Committee's scheme for making maternity outfits, including the famous cradle made out of banana crates. These outfits are made in the workrooms, and very beautiful they are. One can well believe that to the pride of craft which the workrooms are creating must be added the pride of motherhood which must inevitably be increased when a poor mother sees her newly born child properly clothed in daintily made garments. Herein, too, the Committee's work is certain to have important after-effects; a new standard of motherhood is being set up, and the women in the dingy streets who see their neighbour's children clothed thus will themselves conceive a higher self-respect and love of beauty.

From the workrooms, with their curiously domestic atmosphere, to the open fields and the (superficially) more masculine work on [illegible] They revel in it. Digging at first made their backs ache, but that is a healthy sort of fatigue which is in itself a pleasure. When these girls went home to London at Christmas time it was, I think, expected that some of them would feel the fascination of the city too great to resist. But they did not; everyone returned promptly at the end of the holiday, and seemed glad to be back. Most of the girls live in a hostel on the top of the hill, and others are boarded out in the near-by villages. The open-air life has made a wonderful improvement in the health of each of them.

Many of the details of the committee's schemes I have not mentioned. Arrangements have been made, for instance, to provide the workers in London with one good meal a day; for this they pay 3d., which includes a cup of tea in the afternoon. At St. Pancras it was found necessary to give the workers hot cocoa in the mornings, since many of them came to work without much breakfast and were often wet and cold on their arrival. This question of meals is really a problem. Some of the workers were reluctant to spend so much as 3d. a day on themselves, explaining that at home that small sum would help to provide a much

(Concluded on page 269.)

The Prime Minister and the Cost of Living.

By Philip Snowden, M.P.

(Mr. Snowden contributes an article every week exclusively to "The Christian Commonwealth.")

The urgency and gravity of the matter, and the debate upon the subject which took place last week in the House of Commons, must be my excuse for returning to the question of the rise in the prices of commodities. The gratitude of the Government to the Labour Party for its invaluable assistance to them in carrying on the war is evidently not going to take the form of treating them with any more respect in the House of Commons, or of showing any more consideration for the proposals which the party put forward. It was the trade unions and the Labour Press which gave articulate expression to the popular feeling about the increase in the cost of living. But for the Labour agitation on this matter no attention would have been given to it by the Government or the daily Press. It was due to a movement made by the Labour Party in Parliament on the first day of the present session that an opportunity was provided by the Government for the discussion of the subject. Naturally one would have thought that under such circumstances the counsel for the plaintiffs would have been permitted to open the case. A resolution was put down upon the Order Paper, in the names of three members of the Labour Party, which stated that the Government should fix maximum prices and acquire control of commodities.

The Government's Strategic Move.

In order to prevent the Labour Party from moving this resolution as a substantive motion, two innocent and inoffensive private members put down a resolution as innocent and inoffensive as themselves, and upon this the debate was taken. It was still open to the Labour Party to move their own resolution as an amendment to the motion, but their reverence for the political truce and the feelings of close comradeship which have been developed by the happy associations of Liberal and Tory and Labour on political and other platforms during the last six months would not permit them to do such an embarrassing and unfriendly act. The debate proceeded on the Government's resolution, and after it had been formally put before the House by its nominal sponsors the Prime Minister made his statement on behalf of the Cabinet Committee, which has been considering this question since last September. Surely never did any Committee labour so long to bring forth such a miserable mouse. Mr. Asquith spoke what for him was an exceptionally long time. His speech was in the main a long excuse for doing nothing. Three substantial loaves of comfort he offered to the working-class households which are trying to keep alive on starvation rations. He told them things are not so bad as we expected them to be after six months of a great European war, that the prices of some commodities are no higher than they were forty years ago, and, most cheering of all, if they could only manage to keep on starving till June there was a hope that some relief might come.

Mr. Asquith's What Might Have Been.

I want to examine some of Mr. Asquith's statements, particularly those referring to the conditions of things at the time of the Franco-Prussian War. But let me first offer a word of comment upon his observation that things are not so bad as might have been expected. With that remark, I think, everybody will agree. But if the opinion of the Government at the outbreak of war was that "a much more substantial rise" would take place in the first six months of such a war, it makes the inaction of the Government all the more inexcusable. If "the sober-minded and best-informed judgments in the country apprehended a more substantial rise" than has taken place, then it was the bounden and immediate duty of the Government to take steps at the outbreak of war to provide against such a likelihood. The Cabinet realised the serious financial situation when war broke out. They called bankers and financial experts into consultation. For some days the banks of the United Kingdom were practically commandeered. The Stock Exchange was closed for months in order to prevent panic, and to conserve the financial stability of the bankers. To enable the banks to maintain a paper solvency, to enable them to quote their securities in their balance-sheets at a price at which they could not be sold, a minimum price for securities was fixed. It is true that the Government bought a large quantity of sugar. But why sugar only? Man does not live by sugar alone. It was more important to see that the bread supply of the people was protected against the ravages of famine and famine prices. Mr. Bonar Law's criticism of the Government was the most practical offered in the course of the debate last week. In his opinion, the Government ought to have bought large supplies of wheat last autumn. If they had done that it would have had a considerable effect on prices later. But, instead of doing that last September, the Government appointed a Cabinet Committee to consider and report. And it reports five months later that things are not as bad as they might have been, and that perhaps they will get better soon. This is like telling a man who is very ill that he might be worse—that a friend of his has just died.

Mr. Asquith's History.

Mr. Asquith's references to the period of the Franco-Prussian War were unfair and misleading. His facts and figures were not inaccurate, but the implications and parallels were false and unsound. It is true there was a rise in prices during that war, but there was something else—a rapid and considerable rise in wages. Mr. Asquith said nothing of that rather pertinent fact. Moreover, the advances in prices at that time were in a few articles. As a matter of sober fact, the cost of living beween 1871 and 1875 (the years Mr. Asquith took) was 4.9 per cent. lower than in the previous five years (1865-1870). This is shown in the official Government Report on Wages and Prices. During these five years affected by the Franco-Prussian War there was a rise in money wages of no less than 27.3 per cent.! Mr. Asquith took one or two articles, compared the prices with what they are now, and ignored all other relevant matters, thereby conveying a totally wrong impression. Any workman who can remember those days will tell you that the working classes never had such prosperous times as they enjoyed during the time of the Franco-Prussian War.

The Last Straw. . . .

But Mr. Asquith ignored a good many things when he was trying to console the [illegible] the meantime wages have remained practically stationary. This is the reason why the recent rise is being felt so keenly. The pressure of outgo on income was so hard upon working-class families before the war came that the added force is now too strong to be resisted. It means actual starvation to tens of thousands of families. This war is going to have a serious effect upon the physique of the nation. The Napoleonic wars, it is said, reduced the average height of Frenchmen by four inches. The best part of our male population is being destroyed by this war; and at home, by starvation, the young children, the fathers and mothers of the next generation are being stunted in their growth.

The State of Employment.

Two other points made by Mr. Asquith are open to criticism. It is true that there is a state of employment which on the whole is very satisfactory. But some industries are suffering badly—notably the cotton trade, the greatest of our manufacturing trades. From figures which are published dealing with the largest weaving centre in Lancashire I find that in the last three months of last year the average number of weavers unemployed was 32 per cent. of those normally employed, and the earnings of those actually at work were only 75 per cent. of the average earnings per head before the war. These facts apply to tens of thousands of families in Lancashire. While in one-fourth of the families there is total unemployment for certain members, while the earnings are reduced by one-fourth through short time and partial work, the cost of living is up 25 per cent. That is surely a serious state of things, and it calls for some action on the part of the Government more effective than anything the Prime Minister has foreshadowed. One other important point was missed in the discussion on prices. The figures all relate to wholesale prices. When we come to retail prices we find that the advance is altogether out of proportion to the rise in the wholesale price. This is particularly hard on the poor, who have to buy their things in small quantities. Coal is being retailed in London this week at the rate of 52s. a ton.

What Can Be Done.

The powers of even a great State cannot altogether overcome world influences. It is not suggested that the Government could keep all prices down to the pre-war figures. The price of wheat is manifestly regulated largely by forces over which this country has no control. But the recent increases in the price of wheat are to a not inconsiderable extent caused by the rise in freight rates. For instance, on July 15 wheat was quoted at Rosario, Argentina, at 31s. per quarter. The freight was then 2s. 3d. per quarter. Six months later the price was 40s. 5d. per quarter, and the cost of freight 13s. 11d—that is, 10s. 10d. of the increase was due to increased freightage. The Government could deal with that. It might mean taking over the whole of the British mercantile marine, but that presents no insuperable difficulties. It could be done as easily, if not quite so quickly, as the control of the railways was assumed. The proposal of the Government to use some of the interned foreign ships is all right as far as it goes, but its effect upon rates and prices will be about as useful as to scratch an elephant's trunk with a toothpick to cure its neuralgia. We cannot prevent the foreign wheat-growers from getting the best prices for their crops, but the Government can prevent English wheat-growers from taking advantage of the ruling prices in Chicago or Winnipeg to put money they never earned or expended into their pockets. The purchase of the whole British crop at a price which would be a fair return on the cost of production would considerably reduce the average price of wheat. The cost of producing last year's crop was less than in the previous year owing to the increased yield. At the beginning of last year English wheat averaged 31s. a quarter. At present it is fetching 60s. a quarter in the home market. The yield this year has been 10 per cent. higher than in the previous year. The farmers are making enormous profits out of their crops.

The Cost of Coal.

The case of coal is equally scandalous. The rise of prices is due mainly to the greed of the mineowner. Railway rates have remained the same, but in some cases the price at the pithead has gone up by 50 per cent. This is not caused by any increase in the cost of production. It is plain and simple exploitation, though a shorter word would be more appropriate. There is no obstacle in the way of fixing a maximum price for coal at the pithead. The chairmen of the Minimum Wage Courts, who know all about the average prices, could act as assessors. The Government cannot go on fooling with this grave matter of the cost of living. The people are not going to suffer starvation in silence lest they cause some inconvenience to the Government, or disturb the harmony of the political truce.

652/67

Correspondence Column.

De Amicitia.

By the time this article appears in print I shall have ceased to be the minister of East Finchley Congregational Church, and will have just entered upon my new work at Trinity Church, Glasgow. I accepted the call just a month ago, but ever since the publication of my decision my COMMONWEALTH postbag has been mainly composed of messages of comradeship and cheer. For the first time, then, since I took over the duties of this column I feel quite justified in replying to those letters in which no problems are propounded, in sending a response of sincere appreciation to those unknown writers whose kindly thought for me has expressed itself in such a generous manner, and laid me under a very real debt of gratitude for this inspiring witness to their sympathy and love. I want every one of you from whom these splendid letters have come to know how very deeply I appreciate them, and how very helpful it is to hear that I have been of any service to you. But it is not only for these letters that I thank you. I thank you far more for the friendship out of which our intellectual and spiritual comradeship has arisen. After all, you know, unless we believed in each other—you in the sincerity of my convictions and I in the sincerity of your questionings—I doubt if we could ever have helped each other, and by your letters I know that we have. I say "helped each other," for the tackling of your problems has made a stronger man of me.

You are quite right, friend, you who said, "I write to tell you this because I feel that if I were beginning a new and difficult task it would inspire me to know that I have to my brother." There is no other message in the world can inspire a man like that, and with all my heart I thank you for it. Your expression is a daring one, and I dare say it will bring me another sheaf of denunciatory warnings from a certain sincere, well-meaning, and most untiring correspondent, who understands neither me nor my message. But the older I grow, and the deeper into life I see, the more fully do I realise that it is simply in this mediation of God to each other that all true friendship consists. Some of the noblest hours of insight that I have known have been realised in the common by-ways of human companionship, in the thoughtful discussion of some great theme with another kindred spirit, or the silent witnessing of some brave heart struggling upward to its ideal through misunderstanding and calumny, through perplexity and sacrifice. Every experience that awakens or deepens within the soul the consciousness of its own weakness and littleness, and flashes in upon that quickened vision a new sense of the moral significance and the spiritual values of life, is a medium of the eternal Spirit, and every [illegible] that mediation good judgment."—The Times.

Mediated God

LONDON: JOHN MURRAY.

THE LATEST WORKS BY
Archdeacon Wilberforce, D.D.

Christian Commonwealth Fellowship.

Particulars about the C.C.F. may be had on application to Hon. Organiser, Christian Commonwealth Fellowship, Salisbury Square, London, E.C., enclosing stamped addressed envelope. The minimum annual subscription is 1s. Badges, pendants, studs, or brooches, large, 2d., small, 1s. each, post free.

Fellowship is thinking, doing, and being our best, not somebody else's best, but our best; and each according to his or her opportunity and genius, Fellows are finding ways to express their Fellowship in terms of daily life. Two letters this week illustrate this diversity in unity. One is from a working girl who spends her leisure in studying pond-life, flowers, and stars, to discover and realise for herself the oneness of all life. The other from three men in different stations—a landowner, a farmer, and a labourer—who have come into the C.C.F. that they may find together their common humanity. First these letters and then our soldiers at the Front want your help.

Pond Life, Flowers, Stars, and Fellowship.

Here is the letter from the working girl. 2581 (Leicester) writes: "For many years I have felt that the love spirit, irrespective of class, race, or creed, was the only thing that counted, but, although such a simple faith, there are so few who believe it in its simplicity; they cover it with dogmas and creeds until the spirit is almost lost sight of altogether." She goes on to tell us about her appreciation of the C.C.: "I am a regular reader . . . during the dark day, when I felt myself losing faith in all that I had believed since childhood, the C.C. came as a beacon of light;" and then about her interests: "One of my chief pleasures in life is to realise the oneness of all life, and I spend much of my leisure in studying pond life, flowers, and the stars. I am only an ordinary working girl, not clever at any of these, but simply with an interest in the world below and above, as well as around me." 2581 offers friendship, and no doubt some of those who love the Fellowship of Nature will respond.

Linking Three Classes.

And here is the letter demonstrating the unity of the owning class, the working class, and the middle class. 1735 writes:—"I should like to state what we three hope to do by becoming members of the C.C.F. Each of us represents a different class, the three principal classes in this parish; 1736 stands for the farm labourers, 2593 for the farmers, and I for the landlords. We all three intend to wear our badges and treat each other as brothers. It will be an inspiration for us to know that, although we are each living different lives, all three of us have the same ideal, that all three of us are fighting the same battles—that we are, in fact, three brothers-in-arms. We intend to let those around us see that we don't mean to allow any class differences to come between us, and that we are ready always to give ourselves up in service, not only to each other, but also to our fellow-men. And in this way we hope to prove that there is still a spirit of all do not quite understand. Those who have not seen Leaflet 4 should send a stamped addressed envelope for a copy.

Fellowship Offered and Wanted.

2591 (Belfast), democratic Socialist, Communist, interested in writings of Tolstoy and Kropotkin, desires links.

1837 (Oxford), "lonely and shut away," has had to give up dressmaking owing to the war, needs fellowship.

1803 (Chelsea) offers information about Bahai literature and meetings.

2589 (Sheffield), a gardener, Christian Socialist, desires links.

1669 (Islington) "I could write a cheering letter."

2587 (Birmingham), companion-housekeeper, orphan, no relatives or home, interested in temperance work, desires friendship.

Answers to Fellows' Letters.

850 (Skegness): Please write G. S. (Dollis Hill), a teacher of the blind. He will help you with handicrafts.—2345 (Southampton): 2029 and 1693 are Congregationalists near you. You might write also 977.—989 (Southport): 987 and 1959 are members near you.—585 (Paddington) 2529 (Wimbledon) is fond of poetry.

Annual Subscriptions.

We acknowledge, with thanks, the following annual subscriptions:—C. R. (Southport, 2s.); L. R. (Eltham Park, 1s.); R. A. E. (Tunbridge Wells, 1s.); K. E. W. (Thornton Heath, 1s.); G. W. W. (W. Australia, 1s.); M. P. (Wimbledon, 1s.) N. K. (Menoth Copse, near Oxford, 1s. 6d.).

New Members.

We welcome the following new members:—O. G. (Belfast, 1s. 6d.); W. P. (Milwich, Staffs, 1s.); B. W. D. (Milwich, Staffs, 1s.); I. H. (Blackheath, 2s.); J. A. C. (Lower Edmonton, 1s.); Miss C. (S. Tottenham, 1s.); A. A. G. (S. Yardley, Birmingham, 1s.); T. T. (Sheffield, 1s.).

Our Fund for War Time.

We acknowledge, with thanks, the following donations for sending the papers to soldiers and sailors and for our mission to the sad and lonely:—C. R. (Southport), 1s., for papers for Y.M.C.A. camps; K. T. (E. Dulwich), 5s.; H. K. (Islington), 6d.; A. E. W. (Plymouth), 10s.

The address of all members of the C.C.F. is care of Hon. Organiser, Christian Commonwealth Fellowship, Salisbury Square, London, E.C. Put your number and initials in left-hand top corner of envelope.

The Prayer Book in Esperanto.

There are now about 140 members of the Church Esperantist League, and it has four sub-committees at work. A translation of the Anglican Prayer Book is being prepared, and it is hoped that the book will be published when the war is concluded, if not before. A guarantee fund of about £80 or £100 is being raised for this purpose. The League has already published a short form of service in Esperanto, with several hymns included (price 1d. a copy, by post 1½d., from Rev. A. J. Ashley, Hon. Sec. C.E.L., 26, Lea Street, Lindley, Huddersfield), and is compiling a brief form of private devotion in Esperanto. It [illegible] plans for the employment of Welcoming Mr. McClelland.

A largely attended social meeting of the congregation was held in Trinity Church Hall, Glasgow, on Wednesday, when Rev. H. S. McClelland received a warm welcome. Mr. John Fairlie presided, and a pleasant time was spent in the personal introduction of members to the new minister. An attractive musical programme was varied by short addresses of welcome and congratulation. In the course of the meeting Mr. McClelland was presented with a pulpit robe and a new set of service books. The presentation was made by Mrs. Melville, the oldest member of the church.

Mr. McClelland returned thanks in a very humorous speech, in which, under the guise of playful exaggeration, he intimated some of the methods in which he hoped to carry on a good work among his people outside the pulpit. He said they would find him full of the weaknesses and vices which ministers usually had but did not usually confess. He smoked nearly everything that would burn, played golf badly, etc. But he explained that he did many of these things not merely for the pleasure they gave him, but chiefly for the opportunity they provided for getting near to men, of getting down to that common humanity which made them all one. In London he had often sat with young men into the small hours at the fireside and over their cigars, talking of the vital things of life. Some of these young men had said that he was at his best between twelve and two. He felt that the work one could do in that way was often more lasting than the work one could do in the pulpit. He appealed to the young men present to treat him as a friend and not to be afraid to be their real selves when in his company. He had no wish to be their minister if they did not want him to be their friend. Spiritual comradeship and fellowship was of the greatest importance to a church. Without this there was wanting that atmosphere which, quite apart from the pulpit and the services, drew people to the church.

Eckford's

THE ECONOMY OF BUYING GOOD SEED

no matter how much or how little you may require. A season's experience proves this to the gardener, and that is why all gardeners ultimately buy their seed from Eckford—the "Sweet Pea Specialist." There is sound wisdom in buying from the culturist who, more than any living man, has done so much to improve this charming Annual. Every packet of Peas—or other flower seeds—supplied by Henry Eckford represents the maximum of possibilities in regard to fertilization, growth and blossom. In every direction the gardener benefits; raising more and better plants, and with infinitely finer display of bloom. No one who has ever seen an results are to be found, not at Grosvenor Place, but at the depot in Park Street

652/68

Women's Wartime Work.

(Continued from page 250.)

better meal for the whole family. This is a glimpse of the

Unselfishness of these Women and girls, of which the controllers have touching stories to tell. At the depôt I was told of one worker who fell ill, for whom the others made a collection out of their own small wages, which totalled 17s. At St. Pancras the superintendent spoke with genuine feeling and affection of the workers under her charge. Her discipline is strict—as it needs to be where 160 women and girls work together in one room—but her attitude towards them is a delightful blend of authority and friendliness. The committee, indeed, is exceedingly fortunate in its choice of people to whom authority is given; to this the harmony and orderliness of the workrooms are a sufficient testimony.

The work of the committee does not end with the workrooms. Every effort is made to into ordinary employment, either in their own trade or in any other in which there is a demand for workers. No woman is compelled to give up her place in the workroom to take a place at a sweated wage or under bad conditions. But she is encouraged to go out into any occupation which offers a prospect of a living wage. This does not made it impossible to return to the workroom if she fails at her new work. The workers at the Kingsway room often get a few days' work at jobbing, and then return to the workroom. Quite a number from all the workrooms have found permanent employment: at Kingsway between twenty and thirty found jobbing work last week, and from St. Pancras twenty went to permanent places.

Get the Workers Back

This, in broad outline, is what the Central Committee has done. It has found work and wages under conditions as nearly ideal as they can be made in this imperfect world for hundreds of women who would otherwise have been almost destitute: work which is really training, and wages which are really earned. They are relief workrooms, certainly, but relief has been given on new lines, not in a grudging way that undermines the self-respect and pride of the recipient, but frankly as maintenance in return for serious work undertaken with the intent of raising the status of the individual woman, who will go back to other occupations with a new-born pride and dignity—if it is only the pride of being able to make their own clothes, and the dignity which comes of the knowledge that for the help they received when they could not help themselves in ordinary ways they returned a full measure of conscientious service which indirectly helped their still poorer sisters in adversity.

rooms where the training schemes are being carried out.

Requests for Prayer.

Two requests for prayer were mentioned by Rev. Arthur Pringle at the service last Thursday morning in the City Temple:—"May I ask for your prayers for my daughter, that she may recover her reason? We are trying to keep her away from the asylum, if possible. I have good reason to believe in the value of prayer." "For my son, returning to the front, that he may be preserved." Rev. J. S. Roose, Tooting, closed the service with prayer.

At the service on the previous Thursday, Rev. W. Charter Piggott mentioned that several requests for prayer had been received. But he first asked the congregation to engage in silent prayer for "the beloved and honoured minister of this church, so dear to all our hearts, that God may please to increase unto him a new measure of health and strength."

The requests included one for "one of the most unselfish men I ever met, that he may have a great gift of peace—he is so distressed at the brutality of this war that the writer of the letter dreads the result may be a nervous breakdown"; and another from "one who asks us to pray for a loved one who is fighting so bravely at the front, and that his family may also be enabled to bear with fortitude the loss of another loved one who has already passed away."

Thanksgiving was offered on behalf of a daughter for the recovery of her mother from a serious accident; and for "two sons fighting in German West Africa—one was taken prisoner, and has been already commended to the prayer of this congregation, and now the news has come that he has been able to escape."

The closing prayer was offered by Rev. J. H. Shakespeare.

A service of intercession is held daily (Saturday excepted) in the City Temple (12 to 1). It will be constructed as follows:—Feb. 17, R. C. Gillie and E. Aldom French; 18, H. S. McClelland; 19, F. L. Wiseman and J. Tolefree Parr; 22, J. H. Shakespeare and J. E. Rattenbury; 23, Thos. Yates and E. B. H. Macpherson; 24, E. B. H. Macpherson and C. Ensor Walters; 25, W. E. Orchard.

The City Temple.

February 17—24.

Thursday, 12, Intercession Service, Rev. H. S. McClelland, B.A., B.D. (Glasgow); 2, Ladies' War Working Party; 8, Literary Society (Memorial Hall), Rev. H. S. McClelland.

Sunday, 11 and 7, Rev. H. S. McClelland preaches; 4.15, Women's Conference, "Women's Work in Havre, Rouen, and Paris during the War," Mrs. Harry Jeffs.

Liberal-Christian League.

Headquarters: 23, Red Lion Square, W.C.

Every member should receive during this week a copy of report and treasurer's statement, which would have been submitted at the General Assembly last autumn could it have been held. Accompanying them is a copy of Rev. Dr. Miller's address on "God in Modern Thought," delivered at the Spring Assembly. Supply will be sent to secretaries of branches for distribution among members. Will any member who fails to receive

DON'T WEAR A TRUSS!

Brooks' Appliance is a new scientific discovery with automatic air cushions that draws the broken parts together, and binds them as you would a broken limb. It absolutely holds firmly and comfortably and never slips. Always light and cool, and conforms to every movement of the body without chafing or hurting. We make it to your measure, and send it to you on a strict guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded, and we have put our price so low that anybody, rich or poor, can buy it. Remember, we make it to your order—send it to you—you wear it—and if it doesn't satisfy you, you send it back to us, and we will refund your money. That is the way we do business—always absolutely on the square—and we have sold to thousands of people this way for the past ten years. Remember, we use no salves, no harness, no lies, no fakes. We just give you a straight business deal at a reasonable price. Write at once for our Illustrated Booklet

BROOKS APPLIANCE Co., 717a, Bank Bldg., Kingsway, London, W.C.

IT'S A MOTHER'S DUTY

to safeguard her health. If you suffer from any Abdominal complaint send now for my

FREE BOOKLET, FULLY ILLUSTRATED.

It contains priceless information on all Women's Ailments, and will be sent, post free, on request. It also explains, with the aid of illustrations, how Ruptures of all kinds (Navel Umbilical), Displacement, Internal Weakness, &c., can be cured without Operations or Internal Instruments—the latter cause Cancers and Tumours, and should be avoided at all costs. Write to-day to Mrs. CLARA E. SLATER, Dept. F162, Belgrave, Finsbury Park, London, N.

Simple, External Home Treatment
FOR Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Indigestion,
ETC.

Try COUTTS' Guaranteed ACETIC ACID. Small Bottle, 1s. 3d. Sponge on Handle, 6d. Manual of Spinal System of Treatment, 9d. Coutts' Acetic Acid sold by all Chemists.

The Practical Guide, post free, apply.

COUTTS & SONS, 6, Great Eastern Street, London, E.C.

There is a Special Offer to all "C.C." readers on page 252. Take advantage of it.

Cheap Prepaid Advertisements.

Advertisements of the following classes, viz.—Situations Vacant, Situations Wanted, Apartments to Let, Apartments Wanted, Businesses for Sale, Businesses Wanted, EDUCATIONAL.

LINDUM HOUSE, BEXHILL-ON-SEA.—Boarding School for Girls on Progressive Thought lines. Principal, Miss Richardson, B.A. The school stands in its own grounds, where tennis, hockey, and cricket are played. Home care. Thorough tuition. Entire charge of children coming from abroad.

STAMMERING effectually cured by correspondence or personally. Treatise lent free. N. H. Mason, 50, Fleet Street, London. (Established 1875.)

STAMMERERS.—"Can Stammer be Cured by Correspondence?" Interesting booklet and expert advice free.—W. Warring, Netherville, Whalley, near Blackburn.

PUBLICATIONS.

MINISTER offers "Garnett's International Library of Famous Literature," 20 handsome volumes, 20s. Sample volume sent.—Clericus, Hillbrow, Peterafield.

MISCELLANEOUS.

RHEUMATISM.—To advertise our Marvellous Galvanic Ring, which absolutely cures Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, and Nervous Disorders, we have decided to give a quantity away. Write to-day.—Galvanic Ring Co. (Dept. 6), Kew, London.

SKIRTS and Blouses of "Flaxzella"—Irish Linen Fabric, new silky finish, are perfect. 11¾d. to 2s. 4½d. yard; practically unerushable. 200 Patterns FREE!—Hutton's, 133, Larne, Ireland.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH (Old) Bought. On Vulcanite up to 5s. 6d. per tooth; silver, 10s.; gold, 12s. 6d.; platinum, £1 15s. Immediate cash or offers. Call or post mentioning Christian Commonwealth.—Messrs. Paget, 219, Oxford Street, London. Established 150 years.

BOOTS.—Save nearly 50 per cent. buying from Factory direct. Agents Wanted. Send postage 2d. for list and particulars.—British Boot Co. (305), Portland Square, Bristol.

INSOMNIA SPEEDILY CURED without drugs. Many striking testimonials attest the value of the New Treatment. Personal attendance unnecessary.—Nerve Clinic, 56 & 58, High Street, Croydon. Particulars free.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH (Old) Bought.—We pay absolutely highest genuine prices. Up to 6s. per tooth pinned on vulcanite; 11s. on silver; 13s. on gold; 36s. on platinum. Immediate cash. If offer not accepted, we return parcel post free. Satisfaction guaranteed.—S. Cann & Co., 69a, Market St., Manchester. Bankers, Parr's. Mention Christian Commonwealth.

CENTURY CHINA BARGAINS. Household and Individual Orders at Factory Prices. Single Dinner, Tea, Toilet Services, beautiful designs, from 3s.; Complete Home Outfit, 21s.; 30,000 satisfied customers. Church, School and Catering China, 100 persons set, 37s. 6d., name inscribed 49a. 6d. Profitable Bazaar Parcels, 10s. 6d. Complete Illustrated Catalogue Free. Presents offered. Write To-day.—Century Pottery, Dept. 145, Burslem.

SERGES, Scotch and English Tweeds for Suits, Suit Lengths, and Costume Cloths for the million. Direct from warehouse to wearer at wholesale prices. Quality guaranteed. Send at once for patterns.—John Sykes & Co., Woollen Merchants, Ltd., Dept. C.C., Chancery Lane, Huddersfield. Established 1903.

SEEING GOD. 1s. 6d. net.
Personal Recognition of Divine Love.
INWARD VISION. 3s. net.

652

652/69

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1915

QUEEN'S INSPECTION OF WOMEN'S WORKROOMS

TEACHING USEFUL CRAFTS.

The Queen paid a visit yesterday to the four centres which have been established by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for the relief of necessitous girls and the provision of facilities for training. These establishments assist girls who have been thrown out of work through the war to acquire a knowledge of bookkeeping, shorthand, typing, French, &c., and others are taught domestic economy, needlework, cooking, and various useful crafts. London County Council teachers attend daily, and the girls are greatly interested in their work.

Her Majesty selected Bridewell House, New Bridge-street, E.C., for her first call, and was there received by the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress, Mr. Brinsley-Harper (chairman of the City Committee of the Queen's Fund, under whose control the establishment is carried on), Canon and Mrs. Alexander, Miss Scott (the superintendent), and Miss Morton (organising secretary). With her Majesty was Mrs. Tennant, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, and Miss Mary MacArthur. The Queen at once expressed her desire to familiarise herself with the work executed in every room, and the inspection made was most thorough. In one place a large number of girls were undergoing instruction in physical and commercial geography—a very popular class, she was assured.

DRESSMAKING CLASS.

The Queen was particularly interested in the dressmaking tuition by Mlle. des Tureaux, and spoke to the teacher for some time in French. She was also pleased to observe that the young women were taught to cut their own patterns on scientific lines. With the French language mistress, Mrs. Clifford, the Queen also conversed, and on being told that all the girls could sing the Marseillaise in French she laughed heartily. Dictation exercises were in progress in the shorthand section. Having examined some of the girls' specimen sheets, her Majesty ascended to the top of the building, where the "industrial" women were learning domestic subjects. She was informed that these women, while under training, were being paid a small wage, and were being equipped with means for supporting themselves by skilled labour later on.

In the kitchen, the last place visited, her Majesty expressed gratification at the cleanliness and order that were everywhere apparent. Having carefully examined the various utensils and the crockery, her Majesty watched the cutting up of the bread and butter for tea, and then inquired what the girls had had for dinner for the day. "It is important to have sufficient means for cooking," she said, with a smile, "but it is not less necessary to have wholesome food to cook." The midday meal, it transpired, consisted of beef, haricot beans, and jam roly-poly pudding.

Before leaving the Queen graciously shook hands with the various members of the reception party, and expressed her satisfaction with all she had seen; she was very glad that she had come.

THREE OTHER VISITS.

Subsequently the Queen proceeded to three other premises of a similar character. Motoring first to Bainbridge House, Cleveland-street, her Majesty was received there by the Mayor and Mayoress of the borough, Miss Lupton, Mrs. and Miss Humphry Ward, and Miss Willcocks. At Hammersmith her Majesty was received by the Mayoress, Mr. Gordon (Town Clerk), Mr. Royal, and Mrs. Barrand; and at Fulham by the Mayor and Mayoress, Mrs. Sainsbury, Miss Williams, and Miss Gardiner. At each place the Queen stayed for about twenty to twenty-five minutes, returning to Buckingham Palace about five o'clock. The visits afforded her Majesty an excellent opportunity of observing for herself the uses to which part of her Work for Women Fund is being devoted. Her gracious appearance at the various work-rooms awakened the keenest satisfaction among the staffs and their charges.

Nottingham Guardian · 20·2·15

WOMEN'S WORKROOMS AND TRAINING CENTRES.

THE INCREASED COST OF LIVING.

A circular letter has been issued by the Government Committee on the Prevention of Distress to local representative committees, dealing with the subject of the remuneration of women employed in workrooms and with the maintenance allowances payable to girls in attendance at approved juvenile training centres. It is pointed out that the Central Committee on Women's Employment, in their first circular, laid down that the minimum rate of pay in women's workrooms should be 3d. per hour, and that the maximum number of hours worked in any week should be 40. The maximum wage payable was fixed at 10s. per week.

In view of the increase in the cost of living which has recently taken place, the Government Committee has now decided to vary the limits thus imposed, so that the remuneration of the women employed in the workrooms may be raised by an increase not exceeding 15 per cent.

In accordance with this decision, the maximum number of hours to be worked by any woman in any week is increased from 40 to 46, and the maximum amount of 10s. payable in any one week is now altered to 11s. 6d.

In any case in which, for administrative reasons, it may not be practicable to effect the increase in the remuneration of the workers by an increase in the number of hours worked, it is open to the local committee to adopt one of the following methods:

(1) If the local committee are in a position to undertake the catering, meals may be supplied at a small charge. The cost of the meals, which should not exceed 4d. per head per day, may be paid out of the grant. The difference between the value of the meals and the charge made should be equivalent to the increase in the remuneration which it is intended to allow.

(2) Where it is impossible for the local committee to undertake the catering, either as a part of a cookery training scheme or otherwise, an allowance in lieu of meals (also equal to the increase in the remuneration which it is intended to allow) may be made to the worker at the discretion of the local committee.

Should neither of these alternatives be practicable, then either the hourly rate of pay may be increased, or a combination of any of the above methods may be adopted.

As to juveniles, in the case of girls between 16 and 18 years of age who receive a maintenance allowance of 1s. per day, a corresponding increase may be made by raising the rate to 1s. 3d. per day. The allowance of 4s. a week paid to girls between 14 and 16 years may be increased to 5s. The question of making a corresponding increase in the number of hours of work or instruction still remains in the discretion of the local committee.

It is laid down that any increase in remuneration made under these regulations should have regard to the increase in the cost of living in the locality concerned, and also to the risk of diverting workers from their ordinary occupations.

"It should be clearly understood by the local committee, and explained by them to the workers concerned," says the ruling body, "that any of the alterations made in accordance with this circular are of a temporary character, and are subject to revision should there be a material variation from the present cost of living."

The Christian World.
25-2-15.

Christian World 652
25-2-15.

THE WAR & CITY WOMEN.

New Work for the Unemployed.

A Silver Lining to the Cloud.

There is a silver lining even to the cloud of war, and whoever has the opportunity of seeing the work done for unemployed women by the Central Committee on Women's Employment may get a glimpse of it. In the dark days of August the problem of these workless women seemed insoluble. Old women, young women, girls in their 'teens, women unskilled, half-trained, skilled women from slum homes, daughters of artisans, women of the lower middle classes, were thrown idle, and there was every prospect of their numbers increasing. The Central Committee, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairwoman, and Miss Mary MacArthur, the women's trade union leader, the secretary, faced the problem with practical and courageous idealism. Time-worn methods of charity, they decided, were inapplicable. Doles of money grudgingly dispensed after harsh inquisition would leave the women at the end of their period of unemployment impaired in self-respect, demoralised by weary and fruitless searches for work, and liable, when the cycle of industrial depression recurs, to find themselves again in the ranks of the workless. The Committee resolved to avoid all these errors, and so to fashion their scheme that they would not merely tide the women over a difficult time, but make them more competent workers, and more self-reliant women. In brief, they determined to use an incidental evil of the war as an opportunity to increase the sum of human efficiency.

Are they succeeding? The workrooms and training centres in London and the provinces provide the answer. There is a training centre for women clerks at Bridewell House, E.C., a disused police station on the site of a building where Catherine of Aragon appeared before Wolsey and the Papal Commissioner to defend herself against the charges on which Henry VIII. based his case for a divorce. Here, women discharged from City offices, from causes solely due to the war, are taught English, arithmetic, commercial geography, French, book-keeping, shorthand, hygiene, drill, dress-making and sewing. During the period of training they are paid 10s. per week of thirty hours, given their travelling fares, and provided with an excellent dinner for twopence daily. The Committee are enabled to provide meals thus cheaply by presents of carcases of mutton and other foodstuffs from the National Food Fund, frozen rabbits consigned to the Lord Mayor from Australasia, and gifts from other donors. When I visited the centre, unemployed industrial women were busily preparing the dinner under the supervision of a cookery expert; a huge quantity of beef was being cut into portions, vegetables were being prepared for serving, and suet puddings were being boiled in a great washing-copper. The dinner was laid in what may have been formerly the policemen's mess-room, and the flowers and plants on the tables almost effectually banished the chill and penal suggestions of the room. On the upper floors classes were in full swing. The majority of the pupils were women in the 'teens and early twenties, but there was a sprinkling also of elderly women—a grim reminder of the remorseless sifting and rejection by the commercial machine in time of stress. Already many women have so benefited by their training that they have been re-employed, and the others are daily improving in capacity. It is anticipated that there will shortly be 200 women at Bridewell House receiving gratis what is really a first-class commercial education—a remarkable contrast from the days when the old Bridewell Prison earned notoriety for the flogging of women by "rogues in blue."

From a police-station to an adapted swimming bath! At the Prince of Wales's Baths in St. Pancras industrial women are as admirably catered for as their clerical sisters in the City. It is a significant fact that a large number of the women at this centre are dress-makers and ladies' tailoresses, the remainder being of divers occupations ranging from a wigmaker to a piano-forte parts maker. The women are taught to make their own clothes, and dressmakers who wish to "keep their hand in" and others are engaged in converting old garments into new. I was shown cunningly embroidered collars made from men's old shirts; children's slippers contrived from felt, and silk from discarded top-hats; and gaiters and perfectly tailored boys' suits made out of old riding habits and tweed suits. None of the garments and other articles made by unemployed women are sold. That would cause a dislocation of industry and an aggravation of the very evil it is sought to mitigate. They are given away by local relief committees to necessitous persons. A good dinner is given daily to the women at St. Pancras, but it has been found necessary there to supplement it with a morning cup of cocoa. Cookery and domestic subjects are taught to the women at L.C.C. centres. A girl who conducted me to one of these schools told me that she was formerly employed at a factory making playing-cards, and that since she had been under the committee's care she had learned to make "ever so many things" for herself and her family.

At Islington, London County Council teachers instruct the women in laundry work. They wash in small baths on tables, as they would at home. On one occasion, when the women were asked to bring articles of their own to wash, some of them were rather diffident about producing their own clothes; they were helped out by one of their number who brought the family washing with her, and thoughtfully distributed it among them. Some factory girls are being taught fruit and vegetable farming by lady gardeners at Radlett, in Herts. At various other centres women of the right temperament are being trained as sick helps. Printers' girls have been taught to make crochet coats. In some of the experimental workrooms it has been sought to train workers in the Continental cottage industry of making the crochet buttons that are used for blouse and dress trimming. Usually of ball shape, and completely covered with tightly-made crochet, one of these buttons can be made by a skilled worker in about eight minutes. Dressmakers at various trade centres are also being taught to tailor coats and skirts. Upholsteresses are being taught how to make loose covers, how to join velvet without interfering with the pile, and other technicalities of their craft. Milliners are also learning much they did not know of the designing and making of hats

Not the least successful results have been obtained among charwomen. In the East-end one elderly charwoman has learned to sew quite neatly, although, as she quaintly remarked, her "stitches were at first as long as the Pyrenees." In Manchester—the workrooms in the provinces are conducted on lines laid down by the Central Committee—charwomen have been taught to make rag rugs. Nottingham women have been trained in machining. The cleaning, painting and general renovation of old furniture are among the new acquirements in all departments of the church in various ways. To record steady up-building, though the war has had its effect in reg istered a year of progress all along the line.

Once again Crossway Central Mission has

Progress in Spite of War.

CROSSWAY'S GOOD FIGHT.

12.4.'15

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

An Opening for Animal Lovers.

I was surprised the other day to see two large bird-cages in a room which was the family kitchen and sitting-room, and bedroom too for some two or three of the inmates. I felt inclined to protest at the presence of the birds, but fortunately before I had done so I was informed that they belonged to a brother who had joined the Army, and who was paying to have them taken care of. It seems that homes for dogs belonging to men who have enlisted are much in requisition. There are many such men who want their dogs taken care of during their absence, and at least one boarding-house for canine paying guests has been opened in a London suburb. The house readily adapted itself to the purpose, and it has been suggested that such a home might offer an opportunity to those out of employment. I cannot say the plan appealed to me, but to anyone who is really fond of animals, and really loves dogs, it might be worth considering.

Women as Farm Workers.

There has been a good deal of talk lately of women being employed to do farm work, and though the more laborious and exposed tasks are quite unfit for females to perform, there is much they could do efficiently and without fear of bodily harm to themselves. The Scottish Council for Women's Trades is experimenting in this direction, and sending unemployed workers from tailoring factories to farm work, this being one of the trades most affected by the war, and the scheme has been found to succeed. Careful inquiries are made before the girls are sent to a farm, and it is hoped in this way to raise the status and condition of farm work for women. Experts in other parts of the country are advocating that "the large reserve of women" able and willing should take the place of absent men in farm work in England. It is also pointed out that a serious position has arisen by the dearth of milkers. This was the case before the war, but has been accentuated since. An authority says that if a few young women, who are above foolish considerations as to what is fashionable, would learn in their home farms and recruit milkers from among the village girls, they would be doing a national service.

652/70

and liable, when the cycle of industrial depression recurs, to find themselves again in the ranks of the workless. The Committee resolved to avoid all these errors, and so to fashion their scheme that they would not merely tide the women over a difficult time, but make them more competent workers, and more self-reliant women. In brief, they determined to use an incidental evil of the war as an opportunity to increase the sum of human efficiency.

Are they succeeding? The workrooms and training centres in London and the provinces provide the answer. There is a training centre for women clerks at Bridewell House, E.C., a disused police station on the site of a building where Catherine of Aragon appeared before Wolsey and the Papal Commissioner to defend herself against the charges on which Henry VIII. based his case for a divorce. Here, women discharged from City offices, from causes solely due to the war, are taught English, arithmetic, commercial geography, French, book-keeping, shorthand, hygiene, drill, dress-making and sewing. During the period of training they are paid 10s. per week of thirty hours, given their travelling fares, and provided with an excellent dinner for twopence daily. The Committee are enabled to provide meals thus cheaply by presents of carcases of mutton and other foodstuffs from the National Food Fund, frozen rabbits consigned to the Lord Mayor from Australasia, and gifts from other donors. When I visited the centre, unemployed industrial women were busily preparing the dinner under the supervision of a cookery expert; a huge quantity of beef was being cut into portions, vegetables were being prepared for serving, and suet puddings were being boiled in a great washing-copper. The dinner was laid in what may have been formerly the policemen's mess-room, and the flowers and plants on the tables almost effectually banished the chill and penal suggestions of the room. On the upper floors classes were in full swing. The majority of the pupils were women in the 'teens and early twenties, but there was a sprinkling also of elderly women—a grim reminder of the remorseless sifting and rejection by the commercial machine in time of stress. Already many women have so benefited by their training that they have been re-employed, and the others are daily improving in capacity. It is anticipated that there will shortly be 200 women at Bridewell House receiving gratis what is really a first-class commercial education—a remarkable contrast from the days when the old Bridewell Prison earned notoriety for the flogging of women by "rogues in blue."

centres. A girl who conducted me to one of these schools told me that she was formerly employed at a factory making playing-cards, and that since she had been under the committee's care she had learned to make "ever so many things" for herself and her family.

At Islington, London County Council teachers instruct the women in laundry work. They wash in small baths on tables, as they would at home. On one occasion, when the women were asked to bring articles of their own to wash, some of them were rather diffident about producing their own clothes; they were helped out by one of their number who brought the family washing with her, and thoughtfully distributed it among them. Some factory girls are being taught fruit and vegetable farming by lady gardeners at Radlett, in Herts. At various other centres women of the right temperament are being trained as sick helps. Printers' girls have been taught to make crochet coats. In some of the experimental workrooms it has been sought to train workers in the Continental cottage industry of making the crochet buttons that are used for blouse and dress trimming. Usually of ball shape, and completely covered with tightly-made crochet, one of these buttons can be made by a skilled worker in about eight minutes. Dressmakers at various trade centres are also being taught to tailor coats and skirts. Upholsteresses are being taught how to make loose covers, how to join velvet without interfering with the pile, and other technicalities of their craft. Milliners are also learning much they did not know of the designing and making of hats

Not the least successful results have been obtained among charwomen. In the East-end one elderly charwoman has learned to sew quite neatly, although, as she quaintly remarked, her "stitches were at first as long as the Pyrenees." In Manchester—the workrooms in the provinces are conducted on lines laid down by the Central Committee—charwomen have been taught to make rag rugs. Nottingham women have been trained in machining, The cleaning, painting and general renovation of old furniture are among the new acquirements of some of the unemployed women at Cardiff.

In this way the Central Committee on Women's Employment is grappling with the distress that called it into being. Industrial workers and professional women are being made more proficient in their trades. Women whose knowledge of the housewifely arts was of the scantiest are learning the craft of home-making. They are being shielded from the worst forms of economic hardship by the payments of which the minimum is threepence an hour for a week not exceeding forty-eight hours. They secure these payments and the training without taint of pauperism, merely by proving that they have been rendered workless by the war, and that they have duly registered themselves at the Labour Exchange. The Central Committee have converted the women's misfortune into a blessing, and incidentally they have inaugurated a new chapter in social history.

S.

dogs, it might be worth considering.

Women as Farm Workers.

There has been a good deal of talk lately of women being employed to do farm work, and though the more laborious and exposed tasks are quite unfit for females to perform, there is much they could do efficiently and without fear of bodily harm to themselves. The Scottish Council for Women's Trades is experimenting in this direction, and sending unemployed workers from tailoring factories to farm work, this being one of the trades most affected by the war, and the scheme has been found to succeed. Careful inquiries are made before the girls are sent to a farm, and it is hoped in this way to raise the status and condition of farm work for women. Experts in other parts of the country are advocating that "the large reserve of women" able and willing should take the place of absent men in farm work in England. It is also pointed out that a serious position has arisen by the dearth of milkers. This was the case before the war, but has been accentuated since. An authority says that if a few young women, who are above foolish considerations as to what is fashionable, would learn in their home farms and recruit milkers from among the village girls, they would be doing a national service.

652/70

Yorkshire Observer
5.3.15.

Manchester Guardian
25. 3. 15

652

652/7

LACEMAKING IN LONDON.

Another of the Austrian cottage industries is being taught to the women in the Hammersmith Workroom.

At the request of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, an experiment in making German and Austrian crochet buttons has already been carried out in this workroom.

The women are now turning their attention to embroidery for fine underlinen, which has been done largely hitherto by women in their cottages in Austria, and also in convents in Belgium and the north of France.

It is hoped that after the war it may be possible to start a British industry of hand-embroidered underclothing.

Yorkshire Observer
7-10-16 Bradford

New Trades.

The Board of Trade has done very well to arrange so quickly for the second of its "New Trade Exchanges." The exhibition of German and Austrian toys was something more than an exhibition. It was a meeting place for manufacturers and dealers. The Board of Trade's main object was to make known to dealers British manufacturers who already made articles of the kind exhibited, and to encourage manufacturers to take up trades which are now free from German competition. Large immediate results were not to be expected. They are not to be looked for in trades which need workmen of special aptitudes only to be slowly developed. One understands that some definite results have, however, followed the meeting of toy manufacturers and wholesale dealers. A firm of perambulator makers is now making toy editions of the article, and there are other British made toys which will go to their first Christmas market this year. The second "Exchange" will be held to-morrow and the day after. It will be for the benefit of firms concerned in the china, earthenware, and glass industries. One is not sure that making babies' cradles from banana crates is a new industry, but women employed by the Central Committee on Women's Unemployment are now manufacturing these articles in a Bethnal Green workroom, just opened. The finished article will not come on to the market, so this trade is new in the sense that it will not throw anybody out of work. The cradles are to be given to mothers too poor to buy them.

WOMEN'S WORK-ROOMS AND INCREASED COST OF LIVING.

To meet the increase which has lately taken place in the cost of living the remuneration of those employed in the women's workrooms and training centres of the Central Committee on Women's Employment is to be raised by an amount not exceeding 15 per cent. In making known this decision to the local representative committees the Central Committee says:

"The maximum number of hours to be worked by any woman in any week is increased from forty to forty-six. The maximum amount of 10s. payable in any one week is now altered to 11s. 6d. In any case in which for administrative reasons it may not be practicable to effect the increase in the remuneration of the workers by an increase in the number of hours worked it is open to the local committee to adopt one of the following methods: (1) If the local committee are in a position to undertake the catering, meals may be supplied at a small charge. The cost of the meals, which should not exceed 4d. per head per day, may be paid out of the grant. The difference between the value of the meal and the charge made should be equivalent to the increase in the remuneration which it is intended to allow. (2) Where it is impossible for the local committee to undertake the catering either as part of a cookery training scheme or otherwise, an allowance in lieu of meals (also equal to the increase in the remuneration which it is intended to allow) may be made to the worker at the discretion of the local committee. Should neither of these alternatives be practicable, then either the hourly rate of pay may be increased or a combination of any of the above methods may be adopted."

In the case of girls between sixteen and eighteen years of age who receive a maintenance allowance of 1s. per day a corresponding increase may be made by raising the rate to 1s. 3d. per day. The allowance of 4s. a week paid to girls between fourteen and sixteen years may be increased to 5s.

Organising Women's Work.

One unmixed benefit that has sprung from the war is the attention that has been focused on the woman worker. She is already recognised as able to take man's place in the event of a dearth of labour, and there has now been published a really remarkable record of activity on her behalf in the shape of the report of a Committee appointed by Mr. Samuel in August to consider schemes for the provision of work for women unemployed through the war. The Committee have more than fulfilled the terms of their appointment. They have concerned themselves with distributing existing work so as to cause the least unemployment, with starting new work, and with relief. Under the first head they have secured War Office contracts and orders for flannel and woollen "comforts" for firms hard hit by the war, and, where necessary, they have given technical assistance to firms in carrying out these contracts. They have also gone into business on a considerable scale on their own account, securing such orders as that for 2,000,000 socks for the army, 105,000 body belts, and 10,000 shirts a week. Some of this work they have given out, making themselves responsible for it, and some they have had done in workrooms of their own. Trade union rates and conditions have, of course, been observed throughout, and the value of this clearing-house policy, carried out as it has been on sound economic lines, in reducing the whole labour problem must have been enormous. The Committee have also provided capital, to be repaid out of profits, for the furthering of new or neglected trades such as toy-making—a line of activity that will persist after the war. In the course of their relief work they have set going several interesting schemes. Their problem has been to find temporary employment for girls which shall not compete with ordinary business, and which shall have an educative value. To this end they have established experimental workrooms where girls are taught trades, domestic economy training centres, needlework classes, lectures in hygiene, and many other measures to fit the girls who come under their care to be valuable units in the labour market when work is available for them. By the competent way in which it has brought the supply of labour and the demand for it together, and by confidently beginning on a large scale training and relief schemes such as have been only in aspiration in less stirring times, the Committee have shown how the most stubborn social and labour problems may be forced to yield to the energy born of emergency.

Islington Daily Gazette. 4. III. 15.

Western Mail. 8. 3. 15.

652.

652/7

Islington Daily Gazette
AND North London Tribune.

THE THREE WORKGIRLS

A PRETTY AND PATHETIC STORY

THE anxiety of the Mayor of Islington to find three little workgirls of Highbury furnishes a pretty and a pathetic story. From the beginning of the lamentable business in which we are now as a nation engaged, these three unknown workgirls of Highbury have sent week by week a small donation to the Mayor—Ald. Geo. S. Elliott, J.P.—for the Belgian Refugees who are in our midst. Like the widow's mite, which was accounted as precious as any other offering, the Mayor has regarded their tiny gift as one which he was better pleased to receive than many which far exceeded it in amount: for it was a real surrender of what could be hardly spared. It appears that the girls—earning very little—deprived themselves of their only luxury—an illustrated morning newspaper—in order to send this donation; and they were content to remain hidden under the initials of "M.," "E.," and "B." Who are "M.," "E.," and "B."—that is what the Mayor is now asking: for a change has occurred in the dainty little drama: and the Mayor has received a letter of regret. Of the three companions only "E." and "B." sign it. They express sorrow that their usual contribution cannot be sent. Of the comrades only "M." is at work. The other two girls had lost their employment a the beginning of the year: and they are now all in one room. We have not to be especially imaginative to picture the sad lot of this trio of sympathetic and kind-hearted workgirls. Their plight has been pitiable: but they have kept a smiling countenance, and tell the Mayor that they are hoping for better times so that they can renew the generous contributions which they have made towards the relief of their Belgian brothers and sisters. Now, we want to know who these girls are. The Mayor asks them to communicate with him at the Town-hall, telling him their names and where they live. For the Mayor, too, has a soft heart, and is as much touched by this graceful little story as the tenderest of our readers. We hope that the girls will be found and that work will be secured for them. As they have done to others so should they be done by.

WOMEN AND POULTRY FARMING.

Girl clerks who were thrown out of work through the war are now receiving free training by a successful poultry farmer at Boreham Wood, and, in order to enable them to take advantage of the offer, they are to receive a maintenance grant of 3d. an hour in a sixty-hour week. How middle-class women may be trained in intensive poultry farming has been occupying the attention of the Central Committee on Women's Employment for some time, but the cost of expert teaching prevents for the moment the starting of a large scheme. The Boreham Wood scheme will, however, be an interesting experiment, and the manageress of the poultry farm there has confidence that after their training the girls will easily find employment. There is, indeed, a persistent demand for fully-trained poultry managers of the intensive system, and the work is particularly suitable for women, because skill rather than physical strength is the chief qualification. The opening for intensive poultry farming in this country is good, for much of the produce has hitherto come from abroad. As for the system itself, the returns of the Chicago market show that intensive farming supplies it with all the eggs needed. The same may be said of all the large cities throughout the United States.

652.

WEEK ENDING MARCH 13, 1915.

652/73

THANKS TO THE QUEEN!

PAID TO LEARN.

Last week a young widow, thrown out of employment by the war, told you how she was going through a course of Domestic Economy, arranged by the Central Committee of Women's Employment. This time another "out-of-work" tells you her experience of other classes of this same training scheme—where she learnt about sewing and health.

There's a right and a wrong way of using a sewing-machine, but the pupils at the Queen's Workrooms are "shown how" from the start.

I THOUGHT I could sew before I came to the workroom, but when you come to have it put to the test you find you do nothing right.

You see, when you have been married and had a home of your own, you get into a self-opinionated way, and I never had the chance of much education, only what I got from ladies. I was in service till I got married, and I had a nice home till last March, when they took my poor husband away to an asylum.

The baby was only three weeks old, but I got daily work through my old Missis, an' I managed pretty comfortable till the war. Then nobody wanted no cleaning. I tried crochet, but people wanted it for nothing.

Then I started selling things. I was pretty low down, though I was always one of the cheerful sort, and I was just turning round to see what I could do next when a neighbour told me about the Queen's Workrooms. I tell you I felt like singing "God Save the King!" when they told me I could come in at once.

Well, as I was saying, I thought I knew how to sew, but I'd be ashamed to let anyone see the things I used to run up for the children, although I bought most of them in clubs. You know, one woman holds a club an' you pay 3d. or 6d. a week, an' then you all have a turn at getting something at the draper's.

* * * *

We Mend Our Own Things.

When they said they were going to have patching week at the workroom, and we could bring our own things and mend them, I didn't like to bring mine. I thought the others would pick holes in them when we'd been doing such beautiful work. But there was a single woman sat next to me, an' she said, friendly like, "I've only myself an' not much to mend, but you've got a family, an' I'll help you with the mending, if you like."

So I just put my pride in my pocket an' between us we did up nearly forty things in a week. The children have never been so tidy!

They showed us all sorts of dodges to make the things decent. We took the legs of one pair of stockings and cut feet for another pair, an' I made a neat little skirt for my Edie as good as new out of an old one of mine. I've only got the one skirt myself, but the forelady let us take off our things an' mend them, so I did up the bottom just beautiful. And she showed me how to cut out patches and fix them up all ready for putting on Johnnie's trousers. Handy they've been, I can tell you!

I was that took with the things we did, that I asked the forelady if I could go through the Domestic Economy training they're giving to some of the women.

* * * * *

Shoes Out of Hats.

So on the Monday I started in the "making over" room—that's where they make old clothes into new. You should see the shoes we make for children out of gentlemen's tall silk hats!

We do them with bits of felt or carpet for soles, too, an' scraps of stuff for tops, or even the legs of old stockings. They're sent to the schools when we've finished with them, an' my Edie gets a pair given her at school when it's wet. Very handy they are, for I didn't like her going out in the wet with the old boots she has.

I made a little muff out of another gentleman's hat, and another time a cunning little bonnet. The way we turn the bits is something wonderful! I couldn't have believed it if I hadn't seen it. Give me a few old things, and I reckon I could fit a child out from top to bottom. Who'd ever think of cutting a child's pair of combinations out of a big pair?

But there's the shape right inside the old ones, missing out all the worn parts, too. I've made my Jimmy the best pair of knickers he ever had out of my sister's old skirt—an' it all comes of being showed how.

You wouldn't believe that some of us didn't know how to hold the scissors when we began! I wasn't the only one who used to cut the stuff up in the air. But, of course, none of us had been used to that kind of work. Girls that is packers, and corset makers, and hair preparers, and bookbinders and cleaners, hasn't had much time to practise with the scissors.

We're shown all the proper ways of sewing things, too, and how to use the machine. I never made buttonholes till I came here, and as for embroidery, I thought only ladies did that. But when the Queen sends her crown for you to sew on to the things you make, you've just got to learn. An' that crown is a finish! I wouldn't be without it for much. When they gave us pieces to make presents for ourselves at Xmas, I put the crown on everything I made!

We make our own buttons out of bits of stuff, or calico, cut in rounds an' the edges turned in and buttonholed. They wash beautiful. There's a woman what was a cleaner in a public-house before the war, and she couldn't hold a needle when she came, and in a fortnight she'd made a whole set of clothes!

Delightfully serviceable little ... children can be manufactured from silk hats. They are carefully stitched together—

... after having first been cut and put all ready for the process by other workers.

Photos] [Barratt.

One thing I've learnt particular, and that is just how much a child should wear. Petticoats they don't need, it seems, so long as they have warm combinations and knickers on a bodice. Then with a frock over they're finished, and everything does up down the front, so as there's no worry doing half-a-dozen children up. Pockets, too, all the frocks have, so you haven't got to safety-pin a child's hanky on to save it being lost. If we bring our own stuff, the forelady will cut it out and we can make it up in the workroom.

This training is a chance I never thought to have, and my children is reaping the benefit in more ways than one. Look at the health class. I don't say as being a mother with children I don't know a good many of the things the lady doctor tells us. She's a very outspoken lady, but every word she says is true.

There's one girl that doesn't like her talking straight. It's funny to see her face. She shuts her eyes and looks that disgusted! But the most of them is very interested—all the women in the workrooms comes to the lectures. She tells us about the different parts of the body.

"You hear people say when they've come quickly upstairs, 'Oh, my heart!'" she says, "and they're holding on to their side. The heart isn't there at all," she says, and she has a drawing on the blackboard showing just where it is. I always thought myself it was near the waist.

It's useful knowing where everything is, then if you're told to put a poultice on, you won't put it on the wrong place.

She tells us about letting fresh air in, and even if you live in an attic you can take a pane of glass out and paste a piece of muslin over the hole, or if you haven't got that, make little holes in a piece of brown paper.

She told us how we could have a bath, too, even if we live in two rooms and haven't got the convenience. And she talks about having the place clean because of the germs. She's very particular about germs, but there's one thing I don't agree with her about. She says that after we've swep' up we should burn the rubbish, not put it in the dustbin. But I'd like her to feel the smell when you burn things in an open grate, and if you only live in one room you'd have to go out till it had quietened down. I don't agree with that!

But she do say the sensible thing about people not catching consumption if they're careful. I had a brother died of it myself, and we kept everything he used for himself.

There's a young girl at the class who answers up the questions very smart. She made me laugh. She lives with her sister who is married and has two children.

"I asked Lil how she fed the baby," she said, "after what that there doctor said about babies, but she done everything right!"

It makes these girls think a bit, these lessons, and they're learning what they couldn't learn nowhere else, better.

652/74

652/75 652.

THANKS TO THE QUEEN!

PAID TO LEARN.

A young widow who was thrown out of employment by the war tells in this article how she is spending the time until she gets work, in making herself a good housewife. She is receiving a course of Domestic Economy training arranged by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, while she is paid relief wages through the "Queen's Work for Women Fund."

The "cook in the making," with her pots and pans!

WHEN they told me I was to cook, I said, "But I can't cook."

"That's what we want you for," they said—they wanted to learn me; an' they have learned me a lot. Me an' six others is in the kitchen at St. Andrew's Hall cooking the dinners for the women at the Bethnal Green workrooms.

It's the happiest time I've had, an' I'm going to stay as long as they'll let me, although I do say if "Miss" goes I 'ops it. She's the head of us, you see, and I haven't learned nothink but what "Miss" 'as showed me.

I did silk work afore the war, but people can't afford no tassels now.

"Miss" says she couldn't do without me in the kitchen. I takes the girls down Green Street of a mornin' to buy the dinner. I'd never done so much buyin' afore, an' all I knows is what "Miss" 'as taught me.

I takes six of 'em along of me, an' they stands behind an' sees what I do, an' then they knows how. We gives all the shops an' stalls a turn—they've all got to live—that's what I say. I goes to three shops for the meat, an' to them as buried a mother for the 'taters.

Of course, you've got to bait 'em a bit. The girls can buy most things themselves, but they don't like buyin' the meat. When I've got the 'eadache they say, "You keep on till the meat's bought, Mrs. Baker, then you can get bad." They thinks of the time they bought it, an' it were 'ard. The women didn't forget to let 'em know it at dinner time, neither!

Great interest is shown in the culinary art by the pupils, and the teacher's trouble is well repaid.

One girl didn't know a scrag from a breast. I tell 'em the best bits for boiling or baking, an' we only buy just what's going in the pudding, so as the girls will know what to get themselves.

When we gets back "Miss" shows us how to cook the dinner. Forty there is comes for it, an' pays 3d., an' we gives 'em Irish stew and college pudding, or boiled mutton and parsley sauce, and greens and 'taters, and fruit tart—just what "Miss" thinks.

We do 'ave a bit of sport sometimes. Didn't the gas company go an' cut half the gas off! Savin' they called it, but they might have give folk warnin'. We'd got sheep's hearts in the oven, an' jam tarts, and half an hour afore dinner the hearts wasn't warm. We had to take 'em out and fry 'em. An' we had to give the women their teas while they was waitin' for the tarts. Lovely they were, those tarts!

We turned a cup over an' cut them out, and then we put the cup right side up on the paste an' mashed it up close, an' then put the jam in. Like out of a shop they were! We learned them at the cooking class—the London County Council gives it on Monday nights. Then we experiment next day.

Our soup was better than they made at the class, not 'arf it wasn't! An' our fig pudding was, too, 'cos they hadn't time to boil it enough. They let us buy the things we made, an' we eat the pudding on the way home, an' it stuck to the roof of yer mouth. But they do knows how to set abart it, I'd give them that credit.

Cheese tarts we've 'ad, too, an' breakfast an' supper dishes, but I don't hold with the likes of them 'cos I don't 'ave no breakfast or no supper; I don't have nothink but what I 'ave here, an' that's my dinner an' a cup of tea an' a piece of bread an' drippin'. I don't fancy nothink else, 'cos you see, I've got a boy to find hot supper for.

652/75

"Miss" gives us cooking lessons, too, when we have cleared up of an afternoon. She shows us how a big dinner could be made for three or four like, an' what it 'ud cost. For a stew we'd have to buy two pennorth o' pieces, an' a pennorth o' pot 'erbs (carrot an' turnip an' onion), an' half a pound of rice—that 'ud be ¾d.—an' a pennorth of taters. You'd have a good dinner like that for 4¾d. An' we uses up the scraps lovely.

You should have tasted the scones we made out of cold potatoes; they made you feel "moreish," I tell you! And the gingerbread, out of the taste of syrup that was over from the dumpling!

We've had things we've never heard of afore—potato soup, an' cheese an' potato pie, an' a cake pudding. My son sez to me, "You are getting a cook, mum!" Of course, we writes it all darn in a book in our own words, an' we puts in the bits about keepin' apple peelings for the top of the pudding to let the juice run in, an' to keep it from burnin'.

We goes to washin' lessons as well at the Council Schools, an' we can take our own clothes an' wash an' iron them. Some doesn't like to do that, so one woman brought something for everyone to wash, an' got it all done for nothink. They've got all the utensils there, lovely; tubs, an' sinks, an' irons an' all. But they don't put enough o' soda in for my liking.

The way I get stains out of my tablecloth is to rub the place with soap an' put a piece of soda on it an' then roll it in, an' soap the next stain an' put soda on it an' roll it up until the whole thing's in a ball. Then when the copper begins to boil, I pull it all out, an' you should see my cloth! You'd never think there'd been cups of tea spilt over it.

You do learn a thing or two at the class. I thought before that boiling the clothes made 'em white, but it seems that it just grinds the dirt in if they ain't clean when they go in to the copper.

There's all sorts goes to them lessons—dressmakers an' waitresses, an' tea-shop manageresses, an' factory girls, an' daily girls. It's funny to see them wash as never washed afore. I want to take it out of their hands, I do.

Some wanted to boil the flannels with the white things! An' of course there were those that wanted it all their own way, usin' a rubbin' board, an' all.

We took it all down in a book—like this for flannels:—Avoid: steeping, rubbing, hard water, great heat, extreme cold, keeping wet long.

They give us some hints, too, about melting the scraps of soap with boiling water, an' using the jelly to make the water soapy instead of having soap.

Ten weeks we're going on with this schooling; there's health classes, too, an' lessons in cutting out, an' making patterns, an' turning old clothes into new. You'll like to hear about them next week?

I didn't think my head would have held as much. My son, 'e says it's fair burstin' now!

Some "out-of-works" know a great deal about washing and some very little—but there is opportunity enough to learn!

Photos] [Barratt.

Shopping expeditions are headed by a more experienced woman, who knows what to buy and where to buy it.

Daily Sketch.
13. III. 15.

652/77 652.

QUEEN MARY, MRS. BRYAN AND THE CHILDREN.

Queen Mary arriving to see the work of the Women's Guild at Wood Green.

Second from the left is Mrs. Bryan, who made the Queen laugh at the Queen's workrooms in the Kingsway.

Queen Mary arriving to see the work of the Women's Guild at Wood Green.

Second from the left is Mrs. Bryan, who made the Queen laugh at the Queen's workrooms in the Kingsway.

The crèche at Queen Mary's workrooms in the Kingsway Hall.

The Queen spent a busy, happy day yesterday amongst her own workers. A joke with Mrs. Bryan about waist measurements greatly amused her Majesty. The Queen was much interested in the English v. German crochet button question.

The Star. 24.3.15.

652/78

SHIRTS AND SOCKS FOR SOLDIERS.

STORY OF WEST-END MODISTE'S £1,500 ENTERPRISE.

An interesting report was issued by the Central Committee on Women's Employment appointed by Mr. Herbert Samuel last August.

It deals, naturally, with the work that has been already carried out under the auspices of the committee, and with relief works projected for the future, or carried out by other bodies through the initiative or encouragement of the committee.

Making of Body Belts.

As we have received many letters asking what the committee has actually done to find work as distinct from producing future schemes—we shall concentrate our notice upon this particular field of its activity.

The great difficulty has been, of course, to avoid injuring one set of workers already at work by employing others to compete with them in Government workshops.

The Queen entrusted the committee with the purchase of woollen body belts for soldiers, and the committee placed orders for wool with spinners whose staffs were only partially occupied. The making of the belts was done in towns like Kidderminster, Belfast, Strood, and others by women who were already out of work.

London Dressmaker's Experience.

The yarn was obtained from firms who previously manufactured yarn for carpets, and thus assistance was given to an industry which suffered severely by the war.

A London dressmaker employing 100 women, had her business brought to a standstill by the war, but asked leave to tender for the belts. She purchased wool and machinery, trained her staff to a new occupation, and the contract, amounting to £1,500, was carried out satisfactorily. The experience gained has since enabled this dressmaker to tender successfully for Army contracts for hosiery, on which her workers are now fully employed.

Army Shirts and Socks.

The committee undertook, among other orders:—

20,000 grey Army shirts up to October, and 10,000 per week since.
105,000 flannel body-belts.
2,000,000 pairs of Army grey socks.

The first 20,000 shirts were cut out at the Royal Army Clothing Department, and made up by 64 firms, but the department was no longer able to cut out the shirts, and the committee opened a short-cutting room.

Cutting and Buttonholing.

This necessitated a staff of experienced cutters, and they are indebted to the Shirt and Jacket Cutters' Union, who allowed their general secretary to become foreman and supplied several members to work under him.

These shirts are made up by firms where the employers are accustomed to rapid production by power or treadle machines, and wages have been satisfactory, but in others, where expensive garments have been in the past made by hand, the earnings have been less satisfactory. The committee has therefore relieved them of the button-holing, which is done on special machines, at the central workrooms in Piccadilly, where 40 to 60 women are constantly employed.

Increased Output.

The increased efficiency of the women is shown by the fact that at the beginning 59 workers were producing less than 800 shirts a week, while in January 44 workers were turning out 1,400 shirts a week, and earning £1 a week each in this central workroom—this, of course, is quite independent of the work done by the firms who undertook contracts from the committee.

The making of grey socks was taken up at the suggestion of the London dressmaker who was so successful with the hosiery business. On inquiry it was found that the requirements of the War Office as to socks were greatly in excess of the supply, and a meeting of the heads of West-end dressmaking firms passed a resolution asking the Central Committee to tender.

Employment for 800 Women.

The Central Committee will provide hand-knitting machines on loan, and the contract will provide employment for some 800 women until next September.

Up to January 23 the committee had distributed in this part of its work (shirts and body belts) £12,596, practically the whole of which represented payment for labour distributed among the employees of 200 different firms.

Other Avenues.

The committee have had under review as new openings for employment the making of stuffed toys, wooden toys, china dolls' heads and dolls' trunks, etc., the making of artificial flowers, baskets, bonbon bags, boot polish, brushes, crochet buttons, fireless cookers, gloves, Japanese cot quilts, hair nets, memorial wreaths, nets, polished wood fancy articles, potash (from seaweed), slippers, stockinette knickerbockers, surgical bandages, tapestry, and tinsel scourers, gold-beating, the weaving of willow and rush for mats, chairs, and baskets, and the cottage weaving industry.

Poultry and Fruit.

They have also considered plans for extending women's employment in agricultural enterprises, including intensive poultry farming and schemes for fruit-growing, vegetable-preserving and drying. At present their actual contribution to new enterprises consists of financing a fruit preserving and pulping factory at Studley College and the employment of working girls on the land at Radlett, which seems likely to become permanent.

Domestic Economy Centres.

In addition, six experimental workrooms have been started at Bethnal Green, Stepney, Hackney, St. Pancras, Camberwell, and Shoreditch, where 600 or 700 women are employed. They have made clothing for women and children, and have converted banana crates into cradles. The goods made have been distributed free to necessitous persons.

Domestic economy centres have been started to train women in useful occupations, while they have the advantage of cheap dinners in the workrooms. There are 1,500 dinners provided weekly in the six centres.

Millionaires' Flats.

It is interesting to note that the ground floor of that splendid block of flats, Gloucester House, Piccadilly, has been lent by the Duveen family as a cutting room, and that West-end residences like Wimborne House have also been lent to the committee for administrative and other work.

It is quite clear that altogether, apart from its future schemes, Miss Mary McAartur's committee has justified itself by what it has already done.

652/78

Sussex Daily News.
25. 3. 15.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

LONDON, Wednesday Evening.

Another very interesting report on Unemployment is issued to-day. It is that of the Central Committee on Women's Unemployment, which was appointed in August last to report on schemes for the provision of work for women and girls unemployed on account of the war. Lord Crewe is the chairman. The record of work done is in every way encouraging, and there is no doubt that the efforts of the Committee have had a very considerable influence in bringing about the remarkable improvement in the state of the female labour market to which the Board of Trade referred with such satisfaction in its report on the general condition of employment yesterday. One of the most useful functions performed by the Committee has been in securing such conditions in respect of War Office contracts and work as enabled firms which had not been accustomed to service jobs to undertake them. Thus, in the matter of Army clothing, suggestions which were made to the War Office resulted in modifications of the design of the Army service dress which permitted the manufacture to be done by wholesale clothing firms which would not otherwise have been able to undertake this work. The consequence has been that there has been full employment in the tailoring trade and a great improvement in the supply of Army clothing. In relation to the making of shirts for the troops, and in other particulars, the Committee was able to give valuable advice in regard to the placing of contracts. When the Army Clothing Department had to abandon the task of cutting out the shirts the Committee itself tendered to supply these garments, and secured a contract for 10,000 a week.

Nottingham Guardian.
25. 3. 15.

652.

652/79

QUEEN'S GIFT TO TROOPS.

HOW IT GAVE A STIMULUS TO EMPLOYMENT.

WOMEN'S WORK IN WAR TIME.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which Lady Crewe is chairman, and which administers the schemes of employment for women who have lost work as a result of the war, in connection with the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, issued an interim report yesterday. In this it is stated that the personal interest which her Majesty has taken throughout the many activities of the committee has given a great stimulus to the work. The main executive functions of the committee are classified under the headings of "Employment of Women under Economic Conditions" and "Relief Work."

With the object of increasing the number of firms and workers participating in the supply of Government requirements, a special contracts' department was created by the committee, who had thus been enabled to advise in regard to the placing of contracts and orders so that unemployment might be prevented or minimised, and to undertake orders for the Government to be carried out by firms adversely affected by the war, or in workrooms organised by the committee on a self-supporting basis.

THE HOSIERY TRADE.

In regard to the hosiery trade the scope of the work was much extended by the action of her Majesty, who entrusted the committee with the purchase of woollen belts to form part of the "Queen's gift to the troops." In executing the command of her Majesty the committee were able to place orders for wool with spinners whose staffs were only partially occupied, and in the actual making of the belts to provide employment for the workers of other firms similarly situated, and for a considerable number of women in Kidderminster, Belfast, Stroud, and elsewhere, who were already out of work. Altogether 75,000 woollen body belts were provided by the committee.

An interesting example of cases in which her Majesty's order was made the medium of the provision of employment was that of a London dressmaker whose business, employing upwards of one hundred women, was brought to a standstill by the war. On learning of the action of the Queen this dressmaker asked leave to tender to supply a number of the belts, and on the acceptance of her tender proceeded to purchase the required wool and machinery, and to train her staff to a new occupation. The contract entrusted to her, amounting to £1,500, was carried out to the satisfaction of the committee, while the experience gained by the dressmaker has since enabled her to tender successfully for army contracts for hosiery, on which all her workers are now fully employed.

ORDERS OBTAINED.

Among the orders obtained by the committee were the following:—20,000 cut out army grey shirts to be made up, followed by 10,000 similar shirts per week, in the latter case the committee becoming responsible for the cutting as well as the making.

105,000 flannel body belts for the French and British armies.

2,000,000 pairs of army grey socks.

In regard to these orders, the committee emphasise that:—

(1) The work is only undertaken where the ordinary trade is fully employed.

(2) The work is undertaken at trade prices, and is self-maintaining. Advances made from the National Relief Fund in connection with certain contracts are merely working capital which, at the completion of the contract, will be returned in full.

(3) The conditions as to the remuneration of workers have been (since October last) those usual in women's trades, that is to say, payment is mainly by piece, and the limits as to weekly earnings which apply in the relief workrooms are not observed.

By the contract for the supply of army socks, it is hoped to provide employment for some 800 women until September next, the date fixed for the completion of the contract.

MONEY DISTRIBUTED.

Up to the 23rd January the total amount of money distributed by the committee in the contracts department was £12,596 6s. 4d. The resultant output was 92,300 shirts, 105,576 belts, and a small quantity of special goods made up to the order of private individuals. Practically the whole of the £12,596 6s. 4d. represents payment for labour, either in the form of workers' wages, skilled supervision, or management, and was distributed among some 200 different firms.

The committee's desire to keep women as far as possible in employment under normal economic conditions led them to give consideration to the possibility of promoting new trades.

So far, the work has been mainly that of investigation and advice, but two small schemes have been partly financed on the committee's recommendation. The first of these was a fruit-preserving and pulping factory, established at Studley College, and the second an experiment in the employment of working girls on the land, started at Radlett. Both schemes promise well.

The report deals at length with the relief work accomplished by the committee, mainly by means of employment in relief workrooms, and by the provision of training centres for workers, and juvenile training centres. A specially interesting branch of work undertaken in some of the committee's workrooms is the making of cradles out of banana crates.

All the articles made in the workrooms have been distributed free among necessitous persons, in order to avoid competition, direct or indirect, with ordinary industry.

A number of domestic economy training centres have also been established in various parts of the Metropolis, with classes in cookery and dressmaking. Much of the cooking work consists in the preparation of dinners for women employed in relief workrooms. Some 1,500 dinners are provided weekly, at a charge of 3d. each.

Municipal Journal. 2.4.15.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS.

Wages in Women's Workrooms.

The Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress has issued to local representative committees a memorandum prepared by the Central Committee on Women's Employment upon the subject of the remuneration of women employed in workrooms maintained by such committees.

1. The Central Committee in its first circular laid down that the minimum rate of pay in women's workrooms should be 3d. per hour, and the maximum number of hours worked in any week 40. The maximum wage was fixed at 10s. per week. In view of the increase in the cost of living it has been decided to vary the limits thus imposed so that the remuneration may be raised by an increase not exceeding 15 per cent.

2. (a) In accordance with the above decision the maximum number of hours to be worked by any woman in any week is increased from 40 to 46.

(b) The maximum amount of 10s. payable in any one week is now altered to 11s. 6d.

3. In any case in which for administrative reasons it may not be practicable to increase the remuneration by an increase in the number of hours worked it is open to the local committee to adopt one of the following methods:—(1) If the local committee is in a position to undertake the catering, meals may be supplied at a small charge. The cost of the meals, which should not exceed 4d. per head per day, may be paid out of the grant. The difference between the value of the meal and the charge made should be equivalent to the increase in the remuneration it is intended to allow. (2) Where the local committee cannot undertake the catering either as part of a cookery training scheme or otherwise an allowance in lieu of meals (also equal to the increase in the remuneration which it is intended to allow) may be made to the worker.

4. Should neither of these alternatives be practicable, then the hourly rate of pay may be increased, or a combination of any of the above methods may be adopted.

5. In the case of girls between 16 and 18 receiving a maintenance allowance of 1s. per day, a corresponding increase may be made by raising the rate to 1s. 3d. per day. The allowance of 4s. a week paid to girls between 14 and 16 may be increased to 5s. The question of making a corresponding increase in the number of hours of work or instruction remains in the discretion of the local committee.

Evening Standard. 7.4.15. Scotsman. 25.3.15. 652.

652/80

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

NEW WAYS FOR CHARWOMEN AT SCHOOL.

A class for charwomen has been started at the Domestic Economy Training Centre at Islington, initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

The charwomen who have lost their work owing to the war are having lessons in household cookery, cleaning, and washing, in order that a register of really competent cleaners may be kept. The women came to the class at first "to oblige," and when the teacher complimented a woman on her washing, she replied: "Yes, my dear, I knew how to wash before you was born."

The majority, however, although none are under thirty years, and some are over fifty, are "not above learning."

Among the "new ways" is a bag to hang round the waist for holding clothes pegs, and a chair on which to stand the clothes basket. The teacher thinks that it is a pity that charwomen should become doubled up at the early age they do from over-much stooping. Some of the lessons given are as follows:—

1. Washing white clothes; turning out a sitting-room.

2. Folding, mangling, starching; beating rugs.

3. Boiling greens and root vegetables; washing up, cleaning saucepans and sink.

4. Baking joint, making gravy; cleaning knives, plated spoons and forks.

Hay-Box Cookery.

The cooking lessons include hay-box cookery, the women being shown how to make and use the fireless cooker.

Typical charwomen they are, dressed in neat blouses and bib-less aprons, and with hair tightly screwed into a neat knot behind.

The women are taught to use the cheapest methods of cleaning. Fine ashes and a drop of oil were applied to the steel of the gas stove, brasses were cleaned with paraffin and brick-dust, and pieces of soap had been boiled down to make soap jelly. One of the women who were scrubbing tables confessed that she used to scrub in a circle instead of with the grain of the wood, and that she did not know before that silver sand made the wood white, and too much soda in the water made it yellow.

The inside of the copper was cleaned with paraffin, and the pupils were told to dry the mangle and loosen the screw so that there should not be a continual strain upon the rollers.

The harmony which exists between these one-time competitors in cleaning is marvellous. They are careful always to talk of each other as "that lady," reserving the more familiar "my dear" or simply "dear" for the teacher.

WOMEN'S WORK IN WAR TIME.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which Lady Crewe is chairman, and which administers the schemes of employment for women who have lost work as a result of the war, in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund, issued an interim report yesterday. In this it is stated that the personal interest which Her Majesty has taken throughout in the many activities of the Committee, has given a great stimulus to the work. The main executive functions of the Committee are classified under the headings of Employment of Women under Economic Conditions, and Relief Work.

With the object of increasing the number of firms and workers participating in the supply of Government requirements, a special contracts' department was created by the Committee, who had thus been enabled to advise in regard to the placing of contracts and orders, so that unemployment might be prevented or minimised, and to undertake orders for the Government, to be carried out by firms adversely affected by the war, or in workrooms organised by the Committee on a self-supporting basis.

In regard to the hosiery trade, the scope of the work was much extended by the action of Her Majesty, who entrusted the Committee with the purchase of woollen belts to form part of the Queen's gift to the troops. In executing the command of Her Majesty, the Committee were able to place orders for wool with spinners whose staffs were only partially occupied, and in the actual making of the belts, to provide employment for the workers of other firms similarly situated, and for a considerable number of women in Kidderminster, Belfast, Stroud, and elsewhere, who are already out of work. Altogether 75,000 woollen body belts were provided by the Committee

WORK OF THE COMMITTEE.

Among the orders obtained by the Committee were the following:—

20,000 cut-out Army grey shirts to be made up, followed by 10,000 similar shirts per week, in the latter case the Committee becoming responsible for the cutting as well as the making.

105,000 flannel body belts for the French and British Armies, and 2,000,000 pairs of Army grey socks.

In regard to these orders the Committee emphasise that—

(1) The work is only undertaken where the ordinary trade is fully employed.

(2) The work is undertaken at trade prices, and is self-maintaining. Advances made from the National Relief Fund in connection with certain contracts are merely working capital, which at the completion of the contract will be returned in full.

(3) The conditions as to the remuneration of workers have been since October last those usual in women's trades—that is to say, payment is mainly by piece, and the limits as to weekly earnings, which apply in the relief workrooms, are not observed.

By the contract for the supply of Army socks it is hoped to provide employment for some 800 women until September next, the date fixed for the completion of the contract.

Up to the 23rd January the total amount of money distributed by the Committee in the contracts department was £12,596, 6s. 4d. The resultant output was 92,300 shirts, 105,576 belts, and a small quantity of special goods made up to the order of private individuals. Practically the whole of the £12,596, 6s. 4d. represents payment for labour, either in the form of workers' wages, skilled supervision, or management, and was distributed among some 200 different firms

The Committee's desire to keep women as far as possible in employment under normal economic conditions led them to give consideration to the possibility of promoting new trades. So far the work has been mainly that of investigation and advice, but two small schemes have been partly financed on the Committee's recommendation. The first of these was a fruit-preserving and pulping factory, established at Studley College, and the second an experiment in the employment of working girls on the land, started at Radlett. Both schemes promise well.

RELIEF WORK.

The report deals at length with the relief work accomplished by the Committee, mainly by means of employment in relief workrooms, and by the provision of training centres for workers and juvenile training centres. A specially interesting branch of work, undertaken in some of the Committee's workrooms, is the making of cradles out of banana crates. The crates are planed and cleaned, and then covered with unbleached calico, ornamented with simple fancy stitches in coloured cotton. Mattresses and bed clothing complete are also provided. This work has proved especially suitable for the less skilled women, accustomed only to rough factory work. All the articles made in the workrooms have been distributed free among necessitous persons, in order to avoid competition, direct or indirect, with ordinary industry.

A number of domestic economy training centres have also been established in various parts of the Metropolis, with classes in cookery and dressmaking. Much of the cooking work consists in the preparation of dinners for women employed in relief workrooms. Some 1500 dinners are provided weekly at a charge of 3d. each.

THE RESPONSE IN ABERDEEN.

As a result of the Board of Trade appeal in Aberdeen for women to register themselves as willing to take up employment for the purpose of increasing the production of war material, or to release men for active service, a hundred women, mostly from well-to-do families, have sent in their names to the local Labour Exchange.

The Star 25.3.15.

652

The Court Dressmaker.

During the first trying months of the war there was a disposition to complain that the Central Committee on the Employment of Women was occupied too exclusively in collecting statistics and in adumbrating schemes of relief for the future. It is only fair to-day to say plainly that the interim report issued yesterday completely disposes of that criticism. The committee, it now appears, has not confined itself to the six workshops where women have been trained to make things that are afterwards distributed to the necessitous poor, so as not to interfere with the ordinary operations of the market. It has undertaken contracts for shirts and body-belts for soldiers, and has now taken a contract for 2,000,000 pairs of Army socks. When the Army Clothing Factory at Pimlico, owing to the pressure of other work, was no longer able to supply the shirts ready cut out, the Central Committee started a shirt-cutting department. With a boldness that would have taken the official breath away in normal times, they secured the secretary of the Shirt and Jacket Cutters' Union as the foreman, and the work has gone on so well that 10,000 shirts a week have been turned out ever since October. A specially cheering feature of the situation is the way in which some employers have been inspired to divert their energies. The story of the West-end dressmaker with 100 employees whose business was brought by the war to a standstill is as inspiring in its way as a battle. Securing a £1,500 contract for wool body belts, this lady purchased wool and knitting machinery, set her unemployed dressmakers to work, and trained them so successfully that she carried out her contract satisfactorily, and with the experience thus gained has been able to tender for Army hosiery contracts, on which her workers are now fully employed. We are learning from the Germans the need for the more scientific organisation and mobilisation of our labour force, and in that direction this Court dressmaker has set us an excellent example. The work of the Central Committee, which has been to inspire, to finance, or to co-ordinate patriotic efforts like this, seems to us to be worthy of the most cordial recognition.

12.8.15.

The Oxford Times

652/81

MISS MARKHAM ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

On Tuesday morning Miss Violet Markham spoke on the question of unemployed women in war time, in special reference to the work of the Central Committee of Women's Unemployment, of which Miss Markham is a member. She said that she proposed to describe how the Central Committee came into being, and the particular problem with which it was faced; then to invite her hearers' consideration to some of the inherent difficulties of relief work and the point of view by which they approached their task, and the principles they laid down for their own guidance. Thirdly, she proposed to describe the two main executive functions of the Central Committee, which would explain to her hearers how to the best of their ability they applied those principles. The immediate outbreak of war followed with a great industrial confusion and upset, which was very natural. One and all, we were stunned by the catastrophe which had overtaken the world, and no one knew for a time, at least, which way to turn and what we were to expect. We should remember that a certain school of economists had taught us—and she had been one of their most docile disciples—that a European war could not happen, and, if it did, could only last six weeks. It was not an unnatural hypothesis, and was based upon the theory that the modern world had become such an organic being, and so extraordinarily interdependent in its various parts, that it was quite impossible to have an enormous dislocation of war without bringing the great social machine in all parts of the world to a standstill. The economists were wrong; they had been before, and no doubt they would be again. What had been one of the greatest surprises of the present struggle was to find the political machine, in a sense, as adaptable as the human organism, and despite the catastrophe which had befallen, and the appalling state of affairs with which they were confronted, nevertheless the political organisms of the various countries, especially those countries which were not directly suffering, had managed to adapt themselves in a very extraordinary and unexpected manner to under which we were now all living and working. But in the early days of the war that was not so clear as it had become twelve months later. One of the first products of confusion and dismay was the alarming increase of unemployment among women, especially in the dress-making and luxury trades. The luxury trades all closed down almost with a snap at the outbreak of hostilities, and in the days of August last year it became obvious that some steps ought to be taken if they were to avert what promised to be a veritable landslide among the women in those trades. That was therefore the origin of the Central Committee of Women's Employment. Miss Markham then proceeded to give a detailed account of that Committee's work, and referred to the interest taken from the start by Queen Mary in this work, and the influence it had wielded. It was a platitude that the terrible struggle had united all classes of the community into a solidarity of spirit and purpose unknown before in our history, but the fact that the Queen had shown so much sympathy and understanding, and, if she might venture the word, imagination, on behalf of unemployed women in the war—that was to say, the weakest, the most helpless and unprotected section of the population—that fact ought to be a help and example to us in these times—(applause). Miss Markham also spoke of the difficulties of relief works and the promotion of ordinary economic and business employment, and referred to the phrase, "Capturing German Trade," which went at first through the country like wildfire, and ran to the heads of many like champagne. It was not generally understood that there was no reason why certain manufactures should be successful in England because they were in Germany. Many people felt that the phrase was entirely putting our duty in the war on a wrong footing. What we were concerned with was not so much the capturing of German trade as the capture of the German forces in the field—(applause). That was the first duty of the nation. And all that unfortunate talk about destroying German industries gave a bad impression in Germany, and was seized upon by the Germans as the sort of motives which England was out for in the war.

THE TRAGIC CONDITIONS

AS THE RESULT OF THEIR WORK

a total of 83 schemes had been adopted, with a total of about 10,500 workers, which, of course, was exclusive of the contract side. It might be said that that was a modest result, and so it was. By great good luck they had the chance of experimenting and exploring that difficult ground under fairly easy conditions, that was to say, they were not working all the time with the overwhelming pressure upon them of a large bulk of unemployment. What they had been able to do was to perfect their machine, to see what was and what was not possible, and when great distress arose, as she feared it must sometime, they would be in a better position to deal with it than in August of last year. There was no pretention of having solved that problem. Now there was the employment and artificial stimulus of industry which war had brought with it, but they would have to meet unemployment when the war was not going on, and that would be harder than the conditions at present obtaining. At the moment there was not much unemployment, and there was a premium on women's work. In conclusion, it was clear to her that the whole question of women's work was not going to be left by the war in the position where it was found. The old position, like a great many other things, had been swept away, or was in process of being swept away. Women's work was becoming essential to the nation in a way it had never been essential before. Woman was acquiring her place in industry as she had never done previously. It was to be hoped that, when the immediate period of dislocation succeeding the conclusion of war was over, it would be found that there was a large improvement in the women's economic position, and that when that position was won it would be retained and consolidated. There were two points to keep before us in these things unless we were going to pile up serious trouble in the satisfactorily, and with the experience thus gained has been able to tender for Army hosiery contracts, on which her workers are now fully employed. We are learning from the Germans the need for the more scientific organisation and mobilisation of our labour force, and in that direction this Court dressmaker has set us an excellent example. The work of the Central Committee, which has been to inspire, to finance, or to co-ordinate patriotic efforts like this, seems to us to be worthy of the most cordial recognition.

the alarming increase of unemployment among women, especially in the dress-making and luxury trades. The luxury trades all closed down almost with a snap at the outbreak of hostilities, and in the days of August last year it became obvious that some steps ought to be taken if they were to avert what promised to be a veritable landslide among the women in those trades. That was therefore the origin of the Central Committee of Women's Employment. Miss Markham then proceeded to give a detailed account of that Committee's work, and referred to the interest taken from the start by Queen Mary in this work, and the influence it had wielded. It was a platitude that the terrible struggle had united all classes of the community into a solidarity of spirit and purpose unknown before in our history, but the fact that the Queen had shown so much sympathy and understanding, and, if she might venture the word, imagination, on behalf of unemployed women in the war—that was to say, the weakest, the most helpless and unprotected section of the population—that fact ought to be a help and example to us in these times—(applause). Miss Markham also spoke of the difficulties of relief works and the promotion of ordinary economic and business employment, and referred to the phrase, "Capturing German Trade," which went at first through the country like wildfire, and ran to the heads of many like champagne. It was not generally understood that there was no reason why certain manufactures should be successful in England because they were in Germany. Many people felt that the phrase was entirely putting our duty in the war on a wrong footing. What we were concerned with was not so much the capturing of German trade as the capture of the German forces in the field—(applause). That was the first duty of the nation. And all that unfortunate talk about destroying German industries gave a bad impression in Germany, and was seized upon by the Germans as the sort of motives which England was out for in the war.

AS THE RESULT OF THEIR WORK

a total of 83 schemes had been adopted, with a total of about 10,500 workers, which, of course, was exclusive of the contract side. It might be said that that was a modest result, and so it was. By great good luck they had the chance of experimenting and exploring that difficult ground under fairly easy conditions, that was to say, they were not working all the time with the overwhelming pressure upon them of a large bulk of unemployment. What they had been able to do was to perfect their machine, to see what was and what was not possible, and when great distress arose, as she feared it must sometime, they would be in a better position to deal with it than in August of last year. There was no pretention of having solved that problem. Now there was the employment and artificial stimulus of industry which war had brought with it, but they would have to meet unemployment when the war was not going on, and that would be harder than the conditions at present obtaining. At the moment there was not much unemployment, and there was a premium on women's work. In conclusion, it was clear to her that the whole question of women's work was not going to be left by the war in the position where it was found. The old position, like a great many other things, had been swept away, or was in process of being swept away. Women's work was becoming essential to the nation in a way it had never been essential before. Woman was acquiring her place in industry as she had never done previously. It was to be hoped that, when the immediate period of dislocation succeeding the conclusion of war was over, it would be found that there was a large improvement in the women's economic position, and that when that position was won it would be retained and consolidated. There were two points to keep before us in these things unless we were going to pile up serious trouble in the future. In the first place, women would have to be used in increasing numbers in order to set free the men if the war was to be prosecuted to a successful conclusion. It was quite clear that in France and Germany women were being employed to a greater degree than in this country, and the munition and military activities of those countries were largely dependent on and bound up with the employment of their women. She felt most strongly, also, that if there was to be that new introduction of women into industry, they ought to be very carefully organised and safeguarded as to conditions of employment and rates of wages, because, unless that was done, there would be a position unfair to the women themselves and unfair to the men they were temporarily replacing. And at all costs they ought to avoid the creation of a new industrial residue, half-skilled and half-paid, which would be a terrible reserve of labour at the disposal of the sweater and of the extortionate employer in the future. At all hazards that must be avoided. That and many serious problems unquestionably awaited us in the future. Terrible as were the problems of the war, she sometimes thought that the problems of peace, whenever it came, were going to be far more terrible. The dreadful sort of excitement that sustained us now, from day to day, would be gone, and we should be left in the weariness of spirit which followed great upheavals, face to face with our sufferings, our losses and our dead. It would be very difficult; we should find it just as hard as those fishermen who threw their nets at dawn, after a fruitless night of toil; we should find it very hard to launch out into the deep again. She did not say it in any wish to end on a note of despondency; far from it. It was because she felt that the urgent and imperative need for all of us was to step in and make good the sacrifices of the men who had died for us and for their country, and that was England, for which we had to live and work. So she hoped that the vast spirit that had sustained and was sustaining us in the terrible trials of the present—the patriotism and mutual self-sacrifice of all classes, would sustain us when we had to meet the troubles and difficulties of the peace, because if we had the right spirit we should get the right results, because it was her own faith—and she believed it was her hearers' faith also—that the future lay less on the lap of the gods than it lay in the courage and determination of the human heart, and the power of the human heart to rise triumphant from the ashes of sorrow and of failure—(applause).

652/82 Christian age 27.5.20 Sunday Picture

Daily Chronicle 12.9.19. 652

A Woman to Women.

(All letters to "Margot" should be addressed: C/o Editor, 37, Temple House, E.C.)

A PICTURE in a recent issue of THE CHRISTIAN AGE reminds me that I promised to tell you some more about

The Queen's Work for Women Fund.

This scheme was even more necessary than I thought, for owing to various causes for which the war was responsible, over 40,000 women in London alone were thrown out of employment last autumn. Her Majesty Queen Mary quickly grasped the situation, and I think she cannot fail to be satisfied with the success of her enterprise.

I told you before about how our slum sisters were being helped, but since then the idea has grown considerably, and large numbers of women, who are much higher up in the social scale, are now benefiting by the Queen's Fund.

Indeed, there are, at the present time, over 300 branches scattered about England, so the work is not now confined to London as at first.

Amongst many other things, poor women are being taught how to make an appetising meal for almost nothing. This is, of course, worth considering when every article of food has so advanced in price. I rather fancy, however, that you and I would be inclined to turn up our noses (even if unassisted by Nature) at the following recipe for a dinner dish:—

Two pennyworth of green herbs are fried in dripping, then boiling water is poured over them, and a sufficiency of rice, sago, and tapioca is added, together with a seasoning of pepper and salt. The whole is allowed to simmer until cooked, when it is served with slices of bread.

A most needed occupation—or should it be profession?—has been introduced, and poor women who are no longer young are being taught how to become what is known as

"Sick-room Helps."

Not that they may labour, when proficient, in the homes of the great or grand. Oh no! But they minister in the dwellings of their own fellow sisters in poverty who may happen to be ill. Anybody will not do for this important work. The candidates have to be selected with the greatest care, for tact and a sympathetic heart are essential, and these assets cannot easily be met with, although every other condition may be perfectly satisfactory.

As well as caring for the patient, the Sick-room Help has to take the place of the sick mother in the home, "do for" the husband and children, and spend the tiny income available for food, etc., to the best possible advantage.

Some of these "lady" helps are sent out to do daily duty in homes where the mother is not able to do the work. One day she will do washing and give the place a general clean-up; perhaps another client requires a night nurse; and thus the work is varied.

Once a week these "Helps" have to attend at their headquarters and listen to a helpful lecture on the best way of doing many things.

Cutting out paper patterns, typing, bookkeeping, re-modelling hats, and many other things are included in the curriculum of the course of instruction at the various centres.

I think I made it clear to you in my previous talk about Queen Mary's Fund that the women and girls who are thus taught are paid to learn. Is it not the duty, then, of each one of us to help the Fund in some way or other?

The Queen is indefatigable; she goes about from centre to centre and personally inspects all that is going on, to say nothing of the large amount of needlework and knitting she herself accomplishes.

But my attention has been drawn to

The Sad Plight of Some Poor Souls

who are left out in the cold, for the Queen's Fund does not benefit them at all.

I mean women of at least fifty years of age who have hitherto done dressmaking at home, and have been able to keep the "wolf from the door," but not to save anything. Now their late customers either make their own gowns or else buy them at the draper's ready to wear, because they are "so much cheaper," they say, and also "I am saved the trouble and fatigue of being fitted." The class of genteel women thus stranded cannot find employment in the wholesale workrooms even if they so wished, and there is a long gap to be bridged before the old age pension can be claimed.

What are they, then, to do in the interval? Some of us are in the position to relieve their destitution, for we can, if we will, refrain from buying our blouses and gowns ready made, and instead allow those who for so long served us so well to again cut, fit, and make for us in the ordinary, if perhaps old-fashioned, way. The finished articles, when sent home, will not look old-fashioned by any means, and I know they will wear better and give more real satisfaction than the ready-to-wear costumes, always so slightly made, are likely to do.

MANY INDUSTRIES FOR WOMEN OF FORTY.

WHY SHOULD THEY NOT LEARN TO WORK WITH THEIR HANDS?

HOMECRAFTS AND HANDICRAFTS.

By Mrs. Hugh Adams.

The bitter complaint recently voiced in the columns of this paper by "A Woman of Forty," that this grim Motherland has no room left for women over the flapper age, once more brings forth the question, "Why do not more women of education learn to work with their hands as well as their brains?"

For some unsolved reason girls who go in for scholastic and educational work seldom, if ever, are taught to work with their hands as well as their heads.

College-trained women are notoriously bad needlewomen, not because there is anything in their education that prevents them from sewing, but because they have never learned, or attempted to learn, to do so.

In the same way the majority are equally ignorant of the many occupations that come naturally enough to domesticated housewives, who, knowing nothing of "high certificates and qualifications," are often far better equipped to earn their livelihood than scores of educated women.

WHY NOT KNITTING?

Yet in these days when there is a craze for knitted jumpers and golf-coats there are plenty of women well past the fatal forties who are earning far more than a meagre sum by knitting jerseys that sell for such extravagant sums in the big London and provincial shops.

In the same way all the big dressmakers are ready to pay handsomely for expert embroiderers who can do that exquisitely fine needlework that adorns not only all the most fashionable day and evening dresses, but even tailor-made costumes and smart walking-coats as well.

The great scope that exists for gentlewomen to fill this gap and find profitable employment in this direction is best gauged by the lament of so many big firms who declare that "munitions have crippled hand-embroideries" at the very moment when there is an unlimited demand for the same.

For fine embroidery calls for fine hands if it is to be finely executed, and girls who have been working in factories and at munitions for four or five years are finding it impossible to return to their former delicate and dainty work.

THE AMATEUR'S CHANCE.

Clearly this is the chance for the amateur, who seems astonishingly slow at seizing it.

Plenty of work exists for women of forty and upwards, provided they will only be practical and do what is waiting to be done. Inadaptibility is a far greater handicap than age.

The great question of food alone provides opportunities that have never existed before for women of gentle birth to make money. Apart from the growing of small fruit and early vegetables, for which there is a steady demand, and which is work that women are quite capable of undertaking, the demand for home-made jams, sauces, pickles, &c., the cultivation of honey, the rearing of poultry or increase of the egg supply, opens up a money-making market that it seems impossible to overstock, while the high prices that have ruled since the war will compensate for any original outlay such a venture may entail.

Growing herbs for medicines, drying and preserving vegetables, are only a few occupations now open to women of any age, provided that they will be content to use their hands and take to what may be termed home-crafts, which offer them greater liberty and far less arduous work than occupations that call for mental exertion only.

652/83 652.

The Globe
April 30th. 1915.

MAKING RESPIRATORS.

Sir.—Your representative was in error in stating that no arrangements had been made by the Central Committee of Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund in order to supply respirators. The arrangements have been made, several orders have been taken, and the work will begin as soon as the official pattern has been supplied.—Yours truly, ELLEN ASKWITH.

 The exact reply given to our representative's inquiry, made by telephone on Wednesday, was that "no arrangements had been made."—THE EDITOR.

The Yorkshire Observer,
May 6th. 1915.

WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT COMMITTEE

At a meeting of the Bradford Women's Employment Committee yesterday it was reported that since April 1 seventy-nine women had been given relief work, 843 garments had been made, transformed, or repaired for distribution in the city by the Clothing Committee, and thirty-four different places notified by the Health Department had been cleaned by unemployed charwomen. As the need for relief work has steadily decreased during the month of April, the number on the books next week will be only thirty-five.

Morning Post,
May 8th. 1915.

THE QUEEN AT RADLETT.

The factory girls who are being trained as gardeners by the Central Committee on Women's Employment were visited by the Queen yesterday at Radlett, Herts. Her Majesty was attended by Lady Eva Dugdale. The Marchioness of Crewe and Mrs. Tennant, on behalf of the Committee, were waiting to receive the Queen at Common Lane House, the girl-gardeners' Hostel. Mr. and Mrs. Phillimore, on whose land the experiment is being made, were also present. Three girls, representing the various workers, were presented to her Majesty. One of the girls offered the Queen a spray of yellow and white orchids. The Queen was interested in the taste with which the girls had decorated their bed-rooms in the Hostel. The pupils had made a Royal route for her Majesty, digging a path for her between the fields, which they have planted with nearly 30,000 fruit trees and bushes, 10,000 logan-berries, 25,000 raspberries, 40,000 strawberries, and two acres with peas. The Queen walked from end to end of the 20 acres on which the girls were working. The girls have all lost the factory pallor and her Majesty remarked on their healthy appearance. At first they were paid 12s. per week during training, but since the cost of food has increased, their wages, paid by the Queen's Work for Women Fund, have gone up to 14s. They will be a year at Radlett, and afterwards they all hope to find work on the land.

Her Majesty drove with Mrs. Phillimore in a little pony carriage to her home at Battler's Green. The house is now the headquarters of the 3rd Royal Engineers. Her Majesty was much amused when Mrs. Phillimore presented her with what she described as her own property. It was a pair of tongs which one of the Engineers, when working as an electrician, had found under the floor at White Lodge at the time Sir Francis Laking entered into possession.

To the gardening instructress, Miss Taylor, and her assistant, who are training the girls, the Queen said that she had been very pleased to see the experiment working. The workers were all drawn up outside, and, with the soldiers and what seemed the assembled village, gave her Majesty a hearty cheer.

Watford Observer,
May 15th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO GIRL GARDENERS.

The Queen paid a private visit to Mr. and Mrs. Phillimore, at Batlers Green, on Friday afternoon, in order to see the factory girls who are being trained as gardeners by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Early in the afternoon a large number of people made their way to Batlers Green, and many obtained good seats on the high bank in Common-lane, opposite the gardens, where a good view could be obtained. Punctually at 3 p.m. the Queen, attended by Lady Eva Dugdale, arrived by motor and alighted at the entrance to the gardens, near Common-lane House. The Marchioness of Crewe and Mrs. Tennant, on behalf of the committee, were waiting to receive the Queen at Common Lane House, the girl-gardeners' Hostel. Mr. and Mrs. Phillimore, on whose land the experiment is being made, were also present. Three girls, representing the various workers, were presented to her Majesty.

Her Majesty drove with Mrs. Phillimore in a little pony carriage to her home at Battler's Green. The house is now the head-quarters of the 3rd Royal Engineers. Her Majesty was much amused when Mrs. Phillimore presented her with what she described as her own property. It was a pair of tongs which one of the Engineers, when working as an electrician, had found under the floor at White Lodge at the time Sir Francis Laking entered into possession.

To the gardening instructress, Miss Taylor, and her assistant, who are training the girls, the Queen said that she had been very pleased to see the experiment working. The workers were all drawn up outside, and, with the soldiers and what seemed the assembled village, gave her Majesty a hearty cheer.

Nottingham Express,
May 17th. 1915.

...ITTING SOCKS FOR SOLDIERS

Work for Unemployed Lace Hands.

Unemployed lacemakers have taken very kindly to the knitting of Army socks. In spite of the boom in petticoats owing to the wide skirts, a revival in the lacemaking trade has not yet come and a large number of lacemakers have been obliged to seek work in the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund workrooms.

Some 50 of these girls have been transferred from relief workrooms at Long Eaton to the premises of a local manufacturer, where for several weeks they have been knitting Army socks on hand-knitting machines. The experiment, which was initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, which lent the machines and provided the instructors, is considered very successful.

After short initial instruction the girls became expert in their new avocation, and are now producing between them 400 dozen socks per week of good quality. The rate of wages earned is quite as good as that which they are accustomed to in their own trade. Encouraged by the success of this experiment, a second local manufacturer is now in negotiation with the committee for the employment of workers on similar lines.

The Daily Telegraph, 29 May 1915.

RESPIRATORS FOR TROOPS.

An elaborate new respirator, said to be a certain protection against poisonous gases, has been manufactured in large quantities for the troops at the front, but the waterproof cover in which the respirator is contained was difficult to obtain at short notice. A large number of emergency covers were, therefore, demanded at the beginning of last week in order that a first delivery of the new respirator might be made immediately to the troops.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment organised the production of these covers with such expedition that 30,000 were turned out on each of three days, and within five days of attention being called to the matter about 90,000 were completed. The emergency covers were made from tough American cloth. This the shirt cutters in the Central Contracts Work room cut into appropriate portions in two days, the remainder of the work being completed with equal expedition by a large number of small manufacturers.

Daily News & Leader,
May 22nd. 1915.

QUEEN & GIRL WORKERS.

Her Majesty's Visit to the East End.

In connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund the Queen and Princess Mary yesterday watched women learning boot-upper fitting and leather stitching for nearly an hour at the Cordwainers' College, Bethnal Green-road. The pupils are girls sent by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for three months' free training offered by the college and the London County Council.

The Queen followed the progress of the girls from the start, being interested in the first attempts at stitching on paper. The results of the exercises in button-holing, scalloping, and difficult turns were shown to her Majesty, who accepted one or two pieces to take away with her.

Princess Mary asked to be shown how the machines worked with which the girls were stitching. The zigzag machine which herring-bones two pieces together quite flat particularly fascinated her.

The Queen, meanwhile, was talking to a girl who is leaving next week for her first place in a boot factory. Her Majesty learned from the girl that she had formerly been a tie-boxer, but that she found the leather work very much more interesting.

Afterwards her Majesty visited the Lambeth Committee's branch workroom at Herne Hill, where the delighted women had their wish fulfilled. "I wish her Majesty would bring Princess Mary with her," they had said, and yesterday the Queen, dressed in parma violet, with a hat of a deeper shade, with the Princess in a grass-green tailor suit and a cream straw hat with pink roses, completely charmed them.

The Royal tour ended at the Central Committee's contract workroom, where her Majesty was received by Mr. J. J. Mallon, director of the committee's contracts. A number of girls, chiefly from the printing trade, where work is still very scarce, are here employed on hand-knitting machines making socks for soldiers.

Liverpool Courier
May 31st. 1915.

WOMEN'S WORK FOR WAR OFFICE.

30,000 Covers for Respirators per Day.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment has been able, at short notice, to render important service to the troops at the front.

An elaborate new respirator, said to be a certain protection against the poisonous gases, has been manufactured in large quantities, but the water-proof cover in which the respirator is contained was difficult to obtain at short notice. A large number of emergency covers were therefore demanded at the beginning of last week, in order that a first delivery of the new respirator should be made immediately to the troops.

The Central Committee organised the production of these covers with such expedition that 30,000 were turned out on each of three days, and within five days of attention being called to the matter, about 90,000 were completed.

The emergency covers were made from tough American cloth, which the shirt cutters in the Central Contracts Workroom of the Committee worked on with such energy that the material for all the covers was cut into appropriate portions in two days. The work was then distributed over a great number of small manufacturers whose staffs also entered into it with the greatest possible enthusiasm.

The value of the work will, of course, be paid by the War Office, and will not in any way be subsidised by relief funds, the cardinal principle of the committee that relief work should not compete with ordinary trade being thus fully observed.

The Daily Telegraph.
11/8/15.

652

652/84

NOT TOO OLD AT FIFTY.

HELPS AND HOUSEWORKERS.

Although, to a very great extent, young women who were unemployed during the winter months have now found work, yet the problem of the older women wage-earners remains to be solved. This has been taken up in most energetic fashion by the Central Committee for Women's Employment, and in the Queen's Fund Work-rooms at Willesden the usefulness of the schemes approved by the Central Committee is being demonstrated. In the work-rooms over 100 women above 40 years of age are still to be found, and, as the majority of them have not been trained for any kind of work, Mrs. Ackworth, chairwoman of the Employment Committee, has commenced training them as home helps and houseworkers.

As home helps thirty of the women are in training, and it depends on the remainder as to how many will qualify as trained houseworkers. Certificates, first and second class, will be given, and when the women are trained it is Mrs. Ackworth's intention to start a bureau for the supply of first-class or second-class houseworkers. A scale of wages will be fixed according to the class, and it is estimated that all those who are trained will readily find employment in London as daily servants.

As to the home helps, they are in all cases women who have been thrown out of work by the war, and their age is the barrier which prevents them obtaining employment even at the present time, when women are so much needed. But in undergoing training in domestic work they are creating for themselves a future career, as the work which they will do will always be in demand in working-class families. During the period of training they spend a fortnight each in cooking, cleaning, and washing, and the women will later on work in homes where no fee can be afforded for their assistance. In these circumstances they will receive a grant from the Queen's Work for Women Fund of 11s 6d per week.

LARGE ORGANISING CENTRES.

The central committee has two large centres from which the work is organised, one in the West-end and one in the East-end of London. The home helps supervisor not only inspects the homes where the women are working, but also inspects their own homes. They have all done spring cleaning under supervision, and several have been moved to healthier quarters.

Several typical cases can be given where the help has been invaluable. A woman in Stepney is dying of consumption, and has three little children and no one to look after them. For a while they had to depend on what she could do by scrambling in and out of bed. Now, however, everything has changed, as the home help takes entire charge of the little family, and they are all happy, clean, and comfortable. Another instance: An old woman had an operation on her eyes, and had to remain perfectly still for twelve weeks. Her daughter, who was working in a sweet-making factory, had, perforce, to remain at home to look after her mother, and as a consequence the income of the family ceased. Here also the home help came to the rescue, and the daughter was enabled to resume her work with the comforting knowledge that her mother was being well cared for.

Already some of the women have obtained regular employment. One is with an invalid in Hampstead, where she earns 14s per week; another has a temporary situation at 12s 6d per week. Before long many others will be equally well placed.

The Daily Telegraph.
15/6/15

ELDERLY WOMEN AS HELPS IN THE HOME.

DETAILS OF THE SCHEME

COMING LEGISLATION.

"It is a little over eight months since the scheme for training home helps under the Central Committee on Women's Employment originated," said Miss Margaret Bondfield to a representative of The Daily Telegraph. "And since the scheme was first put into operation over 100 women have been trained, all of whom have been thrown out of work by the war, and are of middle age, thus rendering their chances of obtaining employment rather remote."

Asked as to the qualifications necessary to obtain the requisite training, Miss Bondfield replied: "In the first instance, the woman must be unemployed on account of the war, and must be on the list of a local relief fund. Such women, if capable of doing useful work, are brought into the work-rooms of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and if they can sew are given needlework; if not, some other form of employment is found for them. From amongst those women in the work-rooms the home helps are carefully selected by the supervisors, and strict inquiries are made as to their personal character. It is usual, besides, for the women to be visited in their own homes to see in what manner their rooms are kept. This is most necessary, in order to find out whether any particular woman is suited for the special training.

"In some districts a week's trial is given before a definite decision is arrived at by the local authorities of the committee. If it is found that a candidate is not a good subject she is sent back to the work-room. All applicants must be clean, respectable, tidy, and willing to be taught. If the week's trial is successfully passed the candidate is entered on the list of home helps, and a definite course of training is given for not less than three months. After the expiration of the trial period, the home help is sent out to do cleaning in some poor home in the district, under the direction of the supervisor. All the women are employed for forty hours per week for training, four hours being devoted to class work, lectures, and demonstrations in some centre, usually a maternity home or nursing institution."

A DOUBLE AID.

The central committee has two large centres from which the work is organised—one in the West-end and one in the East-end of London. From Westminster, home helps are supplied to Chelsea, Holborn, and Southwark; while a branch operates in Battersea and Wandsworth. In the East-end Toynbee Hall has been lent as an office, and the women work in Stepney, Bethnal-green, Hackney, Bow, Poplar, and Shoreditch. In St. Pancras, Tottenham, and Plaistow the local representatives have a special grant from the National Relief Fund.

In South London all attend classes at Battersea Polytechnic in cookery and laundry, while a course in hygiene is being given at the headquarters of the central committee.

At Stepney the London County Council is giving classes in cookery, laundry, housewifery, and hygiene, and infant care at the School for Mothers. At Tottenham first aid is included in the curriculum. In Stepney there are seventeen women in training, in Westminster eleven, and Battersea and Wandsworth eleven at present. In Whitechapel three women are attending the crèche for a thorough training in the care of infants.

"We are assisting middle-aged women who want employment, and very poor families who want assistance in their homes," said Miss Bondfield. "We want to build up an organisation, and we are prepared to do everything within our power, but our powers are limited. We would like to have some permanent basis of employment in the way of day helps for women who cannot afford to keep servants, and in times of illness cannot employ anyone to look after their homes and their family. We are anxious that our Home Helps should get employment through the various charitable organisations, external departments of hospitals, and nursing associations, and we have received intimation that trained women would be most useful to such associations, as they would be able to assist the really expert woman and enable her to devote more of her time to the actual nursing. This would apply to district nurses especially, a great amount of whose time is at present taken up with putting a room to rights and looking after one or two of the children. If the Home Help worked in conjunction with the nurse she would do the housework and cooking and look after the home generally, things the neglect of which very often retards a patient's recovery. If a mother knows that she need not worry about her family, that her husband will find his meals cooked, that the children will be washed and sent out to school at the proper time, she will get and cooking and look after the home generally, things the neglect of which very often retards a patient's recovery If a mother knows that she need not worry about her family, that her husband will find his meals cooked, that the children will be washed and sent out to school at the proper time, she will get well much faster, since her mind is at rest."

CARE OF MATERNITY.

"We find that our trained women take a great pride in being of assistance to others, and are delighted to go to a poor home to help, and their training makes them particularly useful where there is illness. At the start we were told that people would not care to have a woman sent to their houses, as the very poor might not wish to have their poverty known. But the proportion of objections has been very small indeed. Of course, we never send a help where she would not be welcome. Since the commencement of our scheme, indeed, we have received no complaints, and we are constantly hearing from hospitals and nursing associations warm testimony to the assistance rendered to the poor in their homes by our trained women.

"The other day," said Miss Bondfield, "I was a member of a deputation which waited on Mr. Walter Long to urge immediate legislation dealing with the care of maternity and infancy. We feel that, in the present time of crisis, too much importance cannot be attached to the care of the mother and child, and we hope that before long a bill will be introduced in Parliament by Mr. Long making the Notification of Births Act universal, giving additional powers to County Councils to cover the establishment of maternity centres and maternity hospitals, and providing also that sanitary authorities should have legal power to arrange for ante-natal advice and treatment, and carry on preventive health work among children. Mr. Long agreed that a bill on the lines suggested was most necessary, and would not be opposed, and he would have much pleasure in putting it before Parliament.

"In this," said Miss Bondfield, "the home help will have her proper place. There should be a certain number of home helps allocated to each municipal centre or borough. Wherever a health visitor considers it necessary to render some assistance in a home, whether for an ailing baby whose mother is not able to give it sufficient care on account of her housework, or for the mother who cannot lie up as she has no one to look after the house, the visitor ought to be able to secure that assistance from the local municipal authority, whether payment can be afforded or not."

As to the payment of the home helps, Miss Bondfield said that they were paid 11s 6d per week during their period of training, but, after they were trained, the committee considered that they should receive not less than 5d per hour, if employed by the hour. If employed by the week they should not be paid less than 12s 6d per week with food, but some had already found employment at 14s per week. "We have a certain number of really well-trained women at present, doing very useful work, but we feel that there ought to be some association or organisation outside a relief fund able and willing to employ these women. We want people to apply to the Central Committee for the names of these women who can do this [illegible] before, charitable agencies, Church and social funds, and hospitals.

"If anyone wishes to present money for an endowment, we feel that no better use could be found for such endowment than to give it to the extern department of a hospital to which a certain number of home helps would be attached. The assistance these trained women could render in poor districts, especially to the aged, pensioners, and infirm, is incalculable, as they could be employed to look after these poor people, keeping their rooms in order, and giving them those little attentions which are so necessary in such cases.

"My hope is that the municipal authorities will take up this scheme, and will undertake to train and employ the home helps as part of their organisation for raising the health of each particular district. The financial responsibility they would have would be trivial compared with the immense benefit gained by the community. There is no reason why the scheme should not be largely self-supporting, as the authority would have only the initial expenditure, and even the poorest could afford to pay a small sum by weekly instalments to cover the cost of attendance when required, or a lump sum might be paid. But, as regards the conditions of payment, doubtless each district would arrange a separate plan.

"In the suburbs there are thousands of middle-class women who cannot afford to be ill because they cannot pay a servant, but most of these could pay 12s 6d a week to a help to come and take charge for a few weeks, with the comforting knowledge that a reliable and competent woman was looking after household affairs, and that everything would be found in order when assistance was no longer needed. This," said Miss Bondfield, "is the scheme we have inaugurated, and it has boundless possibilities."

The Daily Chronicle
5/8/15.

NOT TOO OLD AT 50.

WORK FOR ELDERLY WOMEN IN WAR-TIME.

The training given to women thrown out of work by the war in the workrooms, initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment is proving of great value in finding them work.

Even those who are no longer young find that they have a chance. A widow of 51 years is now for the first time engaged in a trade. Before the war she kept herself and her little boy by taking in washing. She was taught to sew in the Stepney workroom, and proved so skilful that when an employer in mantle making asked for young girls the widow of 51 was specially recommended.

She is now earning 15s. a week, and expecting to make more every week as she becomes quicker at the work.

The older women have proved themselves very willing to learn at the committee's training centres. "Might we be so bold as to ask your age?" the women at Bethnal Green kitchen asked their certificated cookery teacher the first day she came, and she, being very young, was afraid that they meant to take advantage of her age.

Beyond taking a motherly interest in her, asking if she was "walking out" with anyone and giving her advice on how to manage a husband, they have never done so, however. As a matter of fact they think she has a "wonderful headpiece" because she keeps the accounts.

The Daily News & Leader
15/8/15.

THE COMPLEAT CHARWOMAN.

A scheme for training charwomen, formed by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, is held up for want of a house. It is felt that the ideal place for learning housework is in an unoccupied house, furnished in a way which would give the women practical experience of every form of housework. It is proposed to train ten to a dozen women at a time under a competent supervisor, and they would be selected from among the older women who are still in the committee's workrooms.

During the time of training they would receive a maintenance grant of 11s. 6d. per week from the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Offers of furnished houses for this purpose will be gratefully received by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

Wood Green Weekly Herald, 20/8/15.

652

652/87

The Queen at Edmonton & Tottenham

VISITS TO WORKROOMS.

For the second time since the outbreak of war Her Majesty Queen Mary has visited this district. The more recent occasion was on Friday afternoon, when she motored to Wood Green, Edmonton and Tottenham, to see the workrooms in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund. Much secrecy was observed in compliance, it is said, with the wishes of Her Majesty. Special police were detailed for duty at Green-lanes, Harringay, but beyond them and a few shop-keepers, no one in that neighbourhood knew of her coming.

After leaving Wood Green Her Majesty travelled to Edmonton, via Lordship-lane and Bruce Grove, Tottenham.

She was attended by Lady Eva Dugdale and Mr. E. W. Wallington, and accompanying her in another car were Miss Mary MacArthur, hon. secretary of the Central Committee of the Work for Women Fund, Mrs. Tennant and Miss Violet Markham.

The news had leaked out that the Queen was coming, and for upwards of an hour a large crowd awaited her arrival outside the Council buildings, where, in the second-class bath the workroom is carried on. The north side of Knight's-lane was practically blocked with people, and with those in Fore-street the gathering must have numbered two or three thousand.

Her Majesty was received at the entrance to the Public Baths by Cr. W. A. Cull, J.P., Chairman of the District Council, and the Rev. Preb. E. A. B. Sanders. In the carpeted vestibule, which was decorated with palms and other plants lent by Mr. Cull, the following ladies and gentlemen were presented :—Mrs. W. A. Cull, Mrs. E. A. B. Sanders, Cr. and Mrs. S. J. Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbert Brown, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Dobb, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Payne, Miss Haughton and Mrs. Nuttall, the chairman and secretary respectively of the local sub-committee responsible for the workroom, and Miss Elsie Cull, the twelve-year-old daughter of the Council Chairman.

The Queen shook hands with each one with a winning smile, and was most gracious in her manner. She then entered the workroom, where about forty women were employed, and proceeded to a table on which some of the finished garments were displayed. Here Miss Vincent, the manageress, was introduced, and the Queen also shook hands with her and asked her a number of questions with affability.

Her Majesty next descended the empty bath, where the women were engaged on needlework of various kinds. There were four tables, and she went to each one, spoke to several of the women, and inspected various articles. Those whom she addressed were Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Neal, Mrs. Tripp, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Hastings, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. Gledhill (to whom the Queen spoke about her former occupation as a farm hand), and Miss Venables, the latter an elderly lady, in whom she showed special interest. Some of them were asked what they had done before, and other questions. Her Majesty noticed that Miss Robinson, one of the two forewomen, had an embroidered garment, and remarked, "That is something more elaborate." She also passed a comment to Miss Giles, who was giving instruction with regard to a certain class of work.

Miss Vincent accompanied the Queen on her inspection, and when she mentioned that a number of those formerly employed there were now working at Hey's Factory, Her Majesty showed that she was quite ODDS AND ENDS.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT.

Unostentatiously and unknown to the great majority of the inhabitants, the Queen visited the women's workrooms in Wood Green, Edmonton and Tottenham last week, and thus showed her real interest in these very praiseworthy efforts to help some of our less fortunate womenfolk. Nearly all ceremony was dispensed with—in fact directions were given that there should be nothing in the nature of a public display of loyalty—and Her Majesty was most gracious in her manner. We have heard that there has been a good deal of heartburning in some quarters with reference to the selection of those, who were permitted to be present, and one complaint has been that whilst active helpers in connection with the rooms were excluded, others who had not assisted in any way were allowed to attend. We can quite understand that those, who had the making of the arrangements in their hands, had by no means an enviable task. It should be stated that Mr. E. Frost, the Chairman of the Tottenham Council, was in no way responsible for the proceedings at the Polytechnic, although that impression seems to have got abroad.

Rather an amusing story is related by "Rover" in the "Wednesday Herald," in reference to the efforts to ensure secrecy at Tottenham. "Strict orders," he says, "were given that no Press representatives were to be admitted, although I happen to know that both the King and Queen have, on a number of occasions, encouraged the granting of proper facilities to members of the Fourth Estate in the performance of their duties. Following the Royal motor car was a taxi-cab containing four other ladies, two of whom were reporters from Fleet-street, and another, Miss Mary MacArthur, of the Central Committee of the Queen's Work for Women Committee. The Press women were thought to be members of the Royal party, and they followed the Queen during the inspection. It was not until the visitors departed that the officials were acquainted by a local journalist, who had seen the ladies in question in the workroom at Edmonton, that the newspaper world had had its agents there."

passed a comment to Miss Giles, who was giving instruction with regard to a certain class of work.

Miss Vincent accompanied the Queen on her inspection, and when she mentioned that a number of those formerly employed there were now working at Eley's Factory, Her Majesty showed that she was quite familiar with their new occupation by observing, "We must keep that going." The cards which record how the articles have been distributed were produced, and she looked through a number of them and expressed her satisfaction.

As the Queen returned to the entrance, Mrs. Parker, the sister of Lord Kitchener, was presented, and a brief conversation took place between them. Mrs. Parker was desirous that Her Majesty should pay a visit to the recently-opened club for soldiers and sailors' dependants on the Green, but as the Queen was already due at Tottenham she had to decline. Reaching the vestibule again, Her Majesty received a bouquet of pink carnations from Miss Elsie Cull, and inquired her age Then shaking hands with several of the company once more she rejoined her motor car, and departed, to the accompaniment of cheers from the assembled people.

Throughout the visit Her Majesty's manner was most natural, and she placed those with whom she conversed quite at ease.

At Tottenham.

Her Majesty next visited the workroom at the Tottenham Polytechnic, passing along the High-road in her car practically unobserved. There was a small knot of persons outside the building, but the secret of Her Majesty's coming had evidently been well-kept.

The Queen was received by Mr. Reginald Coupland Graves, LL.B. (the Clerk of the District Council), who presented to Her Majesty Mr. E. Frost, J.P. (the Chairman of the Council) and Mrs. Frost, Mr. W. H. Prescott, M.Inst.C.E. (the hon. secretary of the local representative committee of the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund) and Mrs. Prescott, Dr. Sophia Seekings (the Chairman of the Tottenham Women's Employment Committee) and Miss Marie Sims (the hon. secretary of the Committee). Her Majesty having accepted a bouquet from Mrs. Frost, proceeded to the workroom, where Miss Jennings (the forewoman in charge) and Miss Jones, were also presented.

About sixty women were employed in the room at the time, and the Queen displayed an interest in their work and conversed freely with several of them during the few minutes that she remained there.

After her Majesty left the room, Mr. J. W. Tomlinson, the Secretary of the Polytechnic, and Mrs. Tomlinson, were presented to her, and she thanked Mr. Tomlinson for all he had done, observing that the workroom was a charming one. The Queen then inquired as to the number of students there are at the Polytechnic, and how the classes had been affected by the war. Her attention was drawn to the Roll of Honour, in which she was much interested. She asked Mrs. Tomlinson many questions about her son, Flight-Lieut. Noel Tomlinson, on special duty with the Royal Naval Air Service. She was greatly interested and remarked what good work the Naval airmen had done.

Upon taking her departure the Queen expressed satisfaction with the arrangements which had been made for her recep-

The Star. 28/8/15 652

652/88

THE BRIGHT SIDE OF WAR.

The transplantation of many women from work in the crowded towns to healthy and congenial labour in the country is one of the few good results of the war. This girl was a Poplar factory hand before the war. The Central Committee of Women's Employment has given her a happy occupation on the land. (Photo Clarke and Hyde.)

Standard.
19. 9. 15.

HOME HELPS SOCIETY.

To the Editor of "The Standard."

Sir,—We desire to bring to the notice of your readers the claims of the Home Helps Society—an outcome of one of the training schemes initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The object of the Home Helps Society is the organisation of a permanent supply of properly trained home helps. These home helps must not undertake any duties which belong to the sphere of the nurse or midwife, but are trained in domestic work, including cooking, washing, care of children, mending, marketing, etc. The need for this class of helper has been amply demonstrated during the period of the C.C.W.E. training scheme.

The Home Helps Society has the cordial support of nursing and midwifery associations, maternity centres, and working women's organisations, and it is connected with the Association of Infant Welfare and Maternity Centres. The management committee is composed of representatives of these groups. One thousand pounds is needed at once to place the scheme on a permanent basis. The Queen has expressed her interest in this work and has contributed to its funds.

Contributions should be sent to the Treasurer, Home Helps Society, 4, Tavistock-square.—We are, Sir, yours truly,

MARGARET G. BONDFIELD,
Chairman, Training Schemes Sub-Committee, C.C.W.E.

MARGARET CREWE,
Treasurer, Home Helps Society.
Crewe House, St. James's.

Morning Post.
14. 9. 15

THE HOME HELPS SOCIETY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE MORNING POST.

Sir,—We desire to bring to the notice of your readers the claims of the Home Helps Society—an outcome of one of the training schemes initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. The object of the Home Helps Society is the organisation of a permanent supply of properly trained home helps. These home helps must not undertake any duties which belong to the sphere of the nurse or midwife, but are trained in domestic work, including cooking, washing, care of children, mending, marketing, &c. The need for this class of helper has been amply demonstrated during the period of the training scheme. The Home Helps Society has the cordial support of nursing and midwifery associations, maternity centres, and working women's organisations, and it is connected with the Association of Infant Welfare and Maternity Centres. The Management Committee is composed of representatives of these groups.

The sum of £1,000 is needed at once to place the scheme on a permanent basis. The Queen has expressed her interest in this work, and has contributed to its funds. Contributions should be sent to the Treasurer, Home Helps Society, 4, Tavistock-square.—Yours, &c.,

MARGARET G. BONDFIELD,
Chairman Training Schemes Sub-Committee, C.C.W.E.

MARGARET CREWE,
Treasurer, Home Helps Society.
Crewe House, Curzon-street, Sept. 13.

Evening Standard.
9/15

65-2.

652/89

To the Editor of the "Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette."

Sir,—We desire to bring to the notice of your readers the claims of the Home Helps Society, an outcome of one of the training schemes initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

The object of the Home Helps Society is the organisation of a permanent supply of properly trained home helps. These home helps must not undertake any duties which belong to the sphere of the nurse or midwife, but are trained in domestic work, including cooking, washing, care of children, mending, marketing, etc. The need for this class of helper has been amply demonstrated. Two illustrations may be permitted:—

(1) Mrs. G. came out of hospital in March, having had a leg amputated above the knee. She has had many operations, and is very nervous and helpless, and she found the five children and the household completely out of hand. The home help has been working there for weeks, has got the children into order, and keeps the whole house spotless. They are all devoted to her, and feel very lost when she is not there on Saturdays and Sundays. Mrs. G. is waiting for a false leg, which we hope will make her more independent.

(2) An old woman who has lately gone blind and is very helpless was ordered by the hospital to keep her head quite still and to rest entirely for twelve weeks. Her only daughter, who is in a sweet-making factory, had to give up work and come home to look after her mother. The old woman was persuaded with some difficulty to try a home help, who went in with the daughter for a few days, and at the end of that time she willingly allowed the daughter to go back to work, as her wages were absolutely necessary, and the home help is still there taking care of her.

The Home Helps Society has the cordial support of nursing and midwifery associations, maternity centres, and working women's organisations, and it is connected with the Association of Infant Welfare, and Maternity Centres. The management committee is composed of representatives of these groups.

£1000 is needed at once to place the scheme on a permanent basis.

The Queen has expressed her interest in this work, and has contributed to its funds.

Contributions should be sent to the treasurer, Home Helps Society, 4, Tavistock-square, W.C.

MARGARET G. BONDFIELD, Chairman Training Schemes Sub-Committee, C.C.W.E.

MARGARET CREWE, Treasurer Home Helps Society.

Crewe House, Curzon-street, W.

Daily News.
14. 9. 15.

HOME HELPS SOCIETY.

£1,000 Wanted to Train Helpers in Domestic Work.

An appeal is issued on behalf of the Home Helps Society—an outcome of one of the training schemes initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

The object of the Home Helps Society is the organisation of a permanent supply of properly-trained Home Helps. These Home Helps are trained in domestic work, including cooking, washing, care of children, mending, marketing, etc. The need for this class of helper has been amply demonstrated during the period of the C.C.W.E. Training Scheme.

The society has the cordial support of nursing and midwifery associations and working women's organisations, and it is connected with the Association of Infant Welfare and Maternity Centres. The management committee is composed of representatives of these groups. £1,000 is needed at once to place the scheme on a permanent basis. The Queen has expressed her interest in this work, and has contributed to its funds.

Contributions should be sent to the Treasurer, Home Helps Society, 4, Tavistock-square, W.C.

Manchester Courier.
11/10/15.

Business Training for Girls.

That training with maintenance is better in the end than finding unemployed and inefficient girls temporary work was long ago recognised by the Central Committee on Women's Employment as answering in part the question, "What shall be done with our girls?" Even in those harassing days of last autumn and winter, when the dislocation of the industrial system affected women workers so generally and directly throughout the country, it was decided to give business training instead of temporary work to a number of girl clerks, and to enable this to be done successfully a grant was made by the Queen's Work for Women Fund. A hundred girls were nominated by the Central Committee jointly with the City Labour Exchange, and fifty were at once selected, after an elementary examination in general education, as qualified to take the course. These girls—many of whom had received a little training, but not sufficient to take over the duties of the city clerk—showed a keen appreciation of the offer, seeing that it was accompanied by a maintenance and expenses allowance. A report has now been prepared for the Committee which speaks eloquently of the achievements of the girls during their period of training. Dealing with 57 of the girls who have received instruction and maintenance at Clark's College and the City of London College, it appears that 51 have been placed in permanent employment, and all have secured a substantial advance on the wages they earned before the war, when their salaries averaged 15s. a week. The question, "What shall be done with our girls?" especially in these strenuous times, has thus received a practical answer.

The Westminster Gazette
13.10.15.

652.
652/90

"HOME HELPS."

To the Editor of the "Westminster Gazette."

Sir,—One year of war has shown an alarming drop in the birth-rate, which was already steadily decreasing. If we consider also the terrible daily death-rate, the need at once comes home to us of saving to the nation every possible infant life.

For this reason a society is being started in connexion with the Association of Infant Welfare and Maternity Centres at 4, Tavistock-square for the supply of Home Helps for working-class homes where the mother is temporarily laid up, either by illness or a confinement.

In many cases, of course, the need is adequately met by a kindly neighbour or relative; but there remain countless homes where for the want of a decent, capable "Help" the smaller children are neglected and half-starved, and the mother's own convalescence is seriously impeded by worry and by the necessity to get up and work before she is fit—a necessity which re-acts very seriously also on the health of the new-born baby.

For months past the Central Committee on Women's Employment has been training a number of carefully selected women, giving them practical instruction in cookery, laundry, housewifery, &c., and sending them to work daily in necessitous homes where there was sickness, at a wage of 11s. 6d. weekly, paid from the Queen's Fund. The success of the scheme has been amazing, and the devotion of the women to their adopted families is beyond all praise. Pressing appeals have been received from many districts (especially from nurses and midwives) for the scheme to be made permanent, and it is proposed to put it on a provident basis, collecting the wages of the Help in small weekly payments from the women.

This will, of course, take time, and funds are badly needed to start the scheme and to supplement the payments of the poorer women who cannot afford to give the full wage for the Help. Lady Crewe has kindly consented to be hon. treasurer, and the Queen has sent us a donation, with a message of goodwill to the society.

Further information may be obtained from Miss W. H. Moberly (hon. secretary Home Helps Society), 4, Tavistock-square, W.C., and any sums, however small, will be most gratefully received. The working expenses will be kept to a minimum, office room, clerical help, &c., being given free, so that any money sent is directly available for the services of the Helps in the poorer homes.

—I am, &c.,

ELISABETH S. HALDANE.

New Statesman 23.10.15.

HOME HELPS

To the Editor of THE NEW STATESMAN.

SIR,—At a time when the death rate is already higher and the birth rate lower than in any previous record of modern times, it is evident that we can afford to neglect no possible measures for the welfare of our mothers and babies. For this reason the "Home Helps Society" has come into existence. The home help is generally a middle-aged widow or spinster, and she goes daily to working-class houses where the mother is laid up for the time, to look after the home and children until she is well again. A society has just been formed to train and supply such women for various districts in London, thus effecting the double purpose of giving a profession to the elderly women, unskilled in all but domestic work, whose employment is such a difficult problem, and of satisfying a very long felt want in the homes of those who cannot afford the luxury of a servant, and who in illness are dependent on the kindness of a chance neighbour or relative. Nor should we attempt to replace these in many cases where, in spite of the claims of their own homes, they ungrudgingly do all that is necessary: but every nurse and midwife in London can tell gruesome stories of half drunk and

What I have called "the Southern Slav prospect on the Adriatic" is not merely, as the draughtsman of your map appears to indicate, a question of "possible outlets to the sea from Serbia": it is really summed up in the question, "What is the destiny of Dalmatia?" The map referred to is drawn in a manner which suggests that the Adriatic coast from Fiume to the Bocche di Cattaro lies outside the Balkans altogether, whereas that coast has now become the very key to the whole problem. To offer Serbia the Albanian ports of Durazzo and San Giovanni di Medua as her "outlets," and at the same time to deny her Dalmatia, would be a doubly flagrant violation of the

The Globe. 2.9.15.

HOME HELPS.

As an outcome of the training schemes initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, the Home Helps Society has been organised to train and supply "home helps" for the times of emergency that so often occur in small households in times of illness. These trained helps must not undertake any duties in the sphere of nurse or midwife, but they can and do execute the domestic work, cooking, washing, cleaning, taking care of the children, and keeping the home going while the mistress of it is laid up, and their ministrations are proving a positive boon, not only in homes of the poorest class, but in others where no maid is kept. It is an excellent idea, which has the cordial approval of Queen Mary—who has sent a contribution to the funds—and also of the nursing and working women's organisations, and the Association of Infant Welfare and Maternity Centres, with which it is connected. A thousand pounds is needed to place the scheme on a sound and permanent basis, and contributions should be sent to the hon. treasurer, Lady Crewe, Home Helps Society, 4, Tavistock-square, W.C.

clerk—showed a keen appreciation of the offer, seeing that it was accompanied by a maintenance and expenses allowance. A report has now been prepared for the Committee which speaks eloquently of the achievements of the girls during their period of training. Dealing with 57 of the girls who have received instruction and maintenance at Clark's College and the City of London College, it appears that 51 have been placed in permanent employment, and all have secured a substantial advance on the wages they earned before the war, when their salaries averaged 15s. a week. The question, "What shall be done with our girls?" especially in these strenuous times, has thus received a practical answer.

the devotion of the women to their adopted families is beyond all praise. Pressing appeals have been received from many districts (especially from nurses and midwives) for the scheme to be made permanent, and it is proposed to put it on a provident basis, collecting the wages of the Help in small weekly payments from the women.

This will, of course, take time, and funds are badly needed to start the scheme and to supplement the payments of the poorer women who cannot afford to give the full wage for the Help. Lady Crewe has kindly consented to be hon. treasurer, and the Queen has sent us a donation, with a message of goodwill to the society.

Further information may be obtained from Miss W. H. Moberly (hon. secretary Home Helps Society), 4, Tavistock-square, W.C., and any sums, however small, will be most gratefully received. The working expenses will be kept to a minimum, office room, clerical help, &c., being given free, so that any money sent is directly available for the services of the Helps in the poorer homes.

—I am, &c.,

ELISABETH S. HALDANE.

New Statesman 23.10.15.

HOME HELPS

To the Editor of THE NEW STATESMAN.

SIR,—At a time when the death rate is already higher and the birth rate lower than in any previous record of modern times, it is evident that we can afford to neglect no possible measures for the welfare of our mothers and babies. For this reason the "Home Helps Society" has come into existence. The home help is generally a middle-aged widow or spinster, and she goes daily to working-class houses where the mother is laid up for the time, to look after the home and children until she is well again. A society has just been formed to train and supply such women for various districts in London, thus effecting the double purpose of giving a profession to the elderly women, unskilled in all but domestic work, whose employment is such a difficult problem, and of satisfying a very long felt want in the homes of those who cannot afford the luxury of a servant, and who in illness are dependent on the kindness of a chance neighbour or relative. Nor should we attempt to replace these in many cases where, in spite of the claims of their own homes, they ungrudgingly do all that is necessary: but every nurse and midwife in London can tell gruesome stories of half drunk and wholly incapable women hurriedly summoned in time of need, because there was no one else, and left in sole charge of a helpless mother and little children; while it is no uncommon thing to find a woman dragging herself about, at the wash-tub perhaps, a day or two after her baby's birth, because the work must be done. For such as these the Home Help has proved a veritable "Angel in the House." One example, taken at random from many, will suffice:

Mrs. F. was desperately ill and the baby and four small children were being terribly neglected when the Home Help was sent in. She took entire charge of the house, which she kept "like a new pin," and she quite won the children's hearts, so that when the mother recovered enough to be sent away for a little change, she was more than content to leave them under the care of the Home Help, who went in daily at 6.30 and stayed with them until the father returned from work in the evening.

In very many cases, however, it is quite impossible for the families to pay a living wage for the help, and for these funds are badly needed to enable the Society to supplement their payments. A provident scheme is also being arranged by which they can pay in small weekly contributions, from 1d. upwards, towards the services of a Home Help in time of need.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment has for the last year been training such women and sending them to necessitous homes where there was sickness. They have been an immense success, but relief funds are no longer available for the purpose, and it, therefore, was decided to start a society, in connection with the Association of Infant Welfare and Maternity Centres. Lady Crewe has kindly consented to be Hon. Treasurer, and the Queen has expressed her interest and has sent a donation. I shall be very glad to receive any contributions or to give further information.—Yours, etc.,

(Miss) W. H. MOBERLY
(Hon. Sec. Home Helps Society).

4 Tavistock Square,
London, W.C.

The Globe. 30.9.15.

HOME HELPS.

As an outcome of the training schemes initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, the Home Helps Society has been organised to train and supply "home helps" for the times of emergency that so often occur in small households in times of illness. These trained helps must not undertake any duties in the sphere of nurse or midwife, but they can and do execute the domestic work, cooking, washing, cleaning, taking care of the children, and keeping the home going while the mistress of it is laid up, and their ministrations are proving a positive boon, not only in homes of the poorest class, but in others where no maid is kept. It is an excellent idea, which has the cordial approval of Queen Mary—who has sent a contribution to the funds—and also of the nursing and working women's organisations, and the Association of Infant Welfare and Maternity Centres, with which it is connected. A thousand pounds is needed to place the scheme on a sound and permanent basis, and contributions should be sent to the hon. treasurer, Lady Crewe, Home Helps Society, 4, Tavistock-square, W.C.

652.
652/91

The Common Cause.
29.10.15.

HOME HELPS.

WORK FOR THE MIDDLE-AGED.

A new profession has been opened up for a class of woman who has so far been very difficult to " place "—the middle-aged widow or spinster of the working class, who is unskilled except in domestic work, and who is anxious to keep her home. The Central Committee on Women's Employment have for months past been carefully selecting and training a limited number of these women, giving their services free in poor homes where the mother was laid up, either through illness or a confinement, They are only taught domestic work, such as cookery, laundry, infant-care, &c., and are, in fact, meant to be " visiting mothers "; they are in no sense nurses, being forbidden to undertake such work; at the same time, they are the greatest boon to the nurse or midwife, for by their care of the home and children they secure the best possible conditions for the speedy recovery of the patient. For instance, Mrs. P. had for years had an ulcerated leg. She has a large family and a very small income, and, of course, rest was out of the question, till it got so bad that the hospital warned her that it might have to be amputated, and appealed to us for a Home Help. One was sent in and took entire charge of the family, making the mother rest to such good effect that in a few weeks her leg was quite healed, and she was able once more to take up her duties. This is only one of the countless cases where one is appalled to think of what happens when no Home Help is available; neighbours are often wonderfully kind, but they are very busy, and not always very capable, and it is no uncommon thing to hear a woman say, " I was paying Mrs. —— to come in, but she drank so I had to get rid of her."

Incidentally, the example of a woman who is one of themselves, doing the work really well and carrying out the teaching of the School for Mothers and the other training she has had, should be of great educational value to the families, who are reaping the direct benefit in increased comfort and economy.

So valuable have these women proved that now that the Relief Funds are no longer available for this work, a society is being established, to ensure the continuance of their services. Of course, the families themselves will have to contribute the bulk of the Home Help's salary, and there will be a provident scheme to enable them to pay in small weekly contributions from 1d. upward, towards the services of a Home Help in their time of need; but the utmost they can pay is, in most cases, not enough for a living wage for the Home Help, and the society has therefore to appeal for funds to supplement their payments. Lady Crewe has consented to be Hon. Treasurer, and the Queen has expressed her interest, and has contributed to the funds. The Society is connected with the Association of Infant Welfare and Maternity Centres, which is kindly giving us office room, and all contributions should be sent to the Hon. Sec., Miss W. H. Moberly, Home Help Society, 4, Tavistock Square, W.C.

Textile Mercury.
30.11.15

652

652/92

Padiham

Thomson's Alma Mill has restarted, after having been closed 18 weeks. Altogether work has been found for 350 employees. A number of girls who have been working at the Technical School, under the Queen Mary's Work for Women Scheme, have resumed their occupations as ring spinners and weavers. Church-street Manufacturing Co. have started the looms at the new Levant Mill this week.

Evening Standard 30.11.15.

652/93 652.

RELIEF WORK-ROOMS.

The "Training Centre" as an Alternative Suggestion.

"Work-rooms have, over and over again, proved themselves to be a most expensive form of relief," says Miss Cicely L. Brown, in an interesting and critical article on relief work-rooms, which appears in the November number of "The Englishwoman."

That mushroom growth, "the Relief Work-room," which sprang up in all towns and villages, as a result of the great unemployment among women that marked the early months of the war, has had a fair chance. It helped many to tide over the time until a reaction in the labour market set in. And Miss Brown's thoughtful article does not criticise the work of the war relief work-rooms of last year, nor the value of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, but rather the system of the relief work-room as a permanent feature of our industrial life.

Against Relief Workrooms.

Two main arguments the writer brings forward against relief work-rooms. Briefly, they are harmful to our industrial system, and they are harmful to the workers employed in them. Work-rooms, the writer believes, encourage a form of undercutting, for garments made in work-rooms supported by charity can be sold for less than those made in work-rooms run on business lines.

Then, again, "relief work is demoralising," says the writer when referring to the harmful effect of the "Relief Work-room" atmosphere.

"The weekly wage is known to depend on need of help rather than ability to work, and sewing which would ordinarily entail dismissal is submitted without any fear of such consequences. The fact that many of the women are not skilled workers lowers the standard of the whole room."

If the relief workroom is to go, what is to take its place? "The training centre," says the writer. Two classes which are frequently to be found in relief workrooms are women employed in unskilled trades and skilled women in trades which are normally overcrowded.

"The only way of helping such women permanently and efficiently is to train them in some trade where there is a regular shortage of labour and where they will have the chance of earning a fair wage.

"If such women are sent to a workroom, they are no more fitted to earn their living when they come out than before they went in, and the slightest depression of trade will render them liable to lose their employment, and come once more for charitable assistance."

When workrooms are necessary, in times of slackness among skilled workers, they can be made of greater utility than in the past.

"The aim of the work provided," says the writer, "should be to increase the skill of the workers rather than to finish a piece of work, and there are opportunities, in connection with the cleaning of the rooms and the preparation of the dinners, for instruction in domestic economy and household management, in which the majority of girls are so sadly deficient.

"Work on these lines is worth doing and of definite value to the community, whereas the old system of herding the unemployed together in sewing-rooms and of giving them work irrespective of its actual or educational use was at best harmless and at worst dangerous."

The Guardian, 30.12.15.

HOME HELPS.

For some months past a number of charwomen and others who were thrown out of employment by the war have been going through a course of training as "Home Helps" under the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Home helps, it must be explained, are not ordinary domestic servants, but middle-aged working women, generally widows or spinsters, with homes of their own, who go daily to the houses of the working class where the mother is ill at home or away at hospital, and take care of the home and children until she is well again. They are very carefully chosen to begin with, and are trained by means of L.C.C. and Polytechnic classes, schools for mothers, and crèches, in cooking, laundry, housewifery, and the care of children, their work being arranged and looked after by a skilled supervisor. They are not allowed to do any nursing, but their work forms a valuable supplement to that of the nurse. They do much to improve the conditions of the home, so that the labours of doctor and nurse may take effect.

The scheme has proved an immense success. Numbers of letters are received testifying to the patients' appreciation of their "help." We hear of homes where the mother has been too ill to work reduced by the Home Help to order and cleanliness, the children washed, and fed, and tidied, and generally looked after; or if the mother is away in hospital her cares are lightened and her recovery accelerated by the knowledge that all is well at home. Many of the letters end, "I do not know what I should have done without her." The Home Help gets very much attached to her family, and often does them kindnesses quite outside her bond. Thus it was discovered by accident that one woman had been sitting up night after night with a sick baby while doing her day's work as usual. Another is doing the same now with a young woman in Stepney who is in the last stage of consumption because "she hasn't the heart to leave the poor thing," though for her own sake efforts have been made to dissuade her. These women, who are neighbourly and well trained, can often see something that is wrong in a home—can get a delicate child to attend the hospital, or can improve the family diet. They form a very useful educational channel for the ideas of the School for Mothers and the Baby Clinic, carrying them right into the homes, together with improved methods of cooking, cleaning, ventilation, and so on.

But the relief scheme, which was only a temporary expedient, is now at an end. The Society of Home Helps has been formed to carry on the work, and to prevent sick women and mothers from having to rely as before on the good offices of busy neighbours, or on women who, even if paid, are untrained, and often drunken and dishonest. The work was never so needful as to-day. The hospitals are full, and many cases which they would in normal times receive must be nursed at home. Young lives are more valuable to the nation than ever before. And though in few cases could the patient pay the Home Help a full living wage, she is better able now than she usually is to make small weekly contributions, especially in preparation for a coming baby. It is above all for maternity work that the Home Helps are so urgently required. Nurses, midwives, and social workers have alike welcomed them. The Honorary Secretary will send further information and literature to any one who is interested. Lady Crewe has consented to be Honorary Treasurer, and the Queen has sent a donation and a message of good will. The office of the Society, which is connected with the Association of Infant Welfare and Maternity Centres, is at 4, Tavistock square, W.C.

Daily Citizen 1-12-15

~~66~~ 652

652/94

WOMEN SUFFER IN SILENCE.

NATIONAL PROGRESS OF THE QUEEN'S FUND.

A vast network of local organisations all over the country is now connected with the Central Committee on Women's Employment of the Queen's Work for Women Fund. Thirty-two boroughs in London and Greater London have now opened workrooms approved by the committee and 34 provincial towns.

The result to the women of the country should be threefold: present distress is checked, the level of women's work is being raised by trade and commercial teaching, and training in domestic economy augurs well for the future home. The schemes of work have been adapted to meet the local needs, for the occupations of the women out of employment are widely different.

Domestic economy has proved the most popular of all the Central Committee's schemes. Swansea, for instance, has a training centre for the teaching of housewifery, laundry, cookery, hygiene, and baby-management. It is proposed also to teach further subjects approved by the Board of Education.

TRAINING SCHEME

Several towns, including Swansea and Gloucester, have taken up the committee's plan of training older women to be sick-room helps. Burnley, Lewisham, and Deptford are giving their unemployed juveniles a course of hygiene, home nursing, cooking, dressmaking, English, and physical drill, and there seems to be room for more schemes of this nature to help the young wage-earners thrown out of work through the war. A marked feature of all the training schemes is the co-operation, on the advice of the central committee, with local education authorities. The classes in most cases are being given free to the women in the relief workrooms.

Until a workroom is actually opened, it is felt by some local committees that the real extent of unemployment among women is not known. The self-respecting women who are thrown out of work by the war do not readily go to the committees for financial help, but when work is available the distress they have suffered becomes apparent.

Now that the Christmas trade is over the need of an ever-increasing Work for Women Fund is great and urgent.

Y. 24/1/16.

652

652/95

WOMEN'S WORK SCHEMES IN SCARBOROUGH.

THE SHELL BAG FACTORY.

The alterations at the premises in Westborough, which are being converted into a factory for the manufacture of shell bags, are fast nearing completion. The installation of the necessary machinery is now being put in hand, and it is hoped that the factory will be opened early in February.

The shell bags will be manufactured under Government contract, and apparently there will be an ample supply of female labour to ensure the carrying on of Lady Galway's scheme. Applications have been numerous, and whilst by the circumstances of the case it will not be possible to begin with the full number of one hundred hands which it is expected will be reached, yet it is hoped in a very short time after the opening, when the initial difficulties have been overcome, to employ fully that number.

HOSIERY FACTORY ESTABLISHED.

WORK NOW PROCEEDING.

Another scheme for the employment of female labour in the town is being carried out at the Springwell Hosiery Works, at the back of St. Nicholas Cliff, in the premises there until recently occupied by Messrs. E. T. W. Dennis and Sons. The large, lofty and well-lighted room is admirably adapted to the purpose. A bench has been installed running along almost the length of the room and upon it are fixed the machines, which at present are exclusively for the knitting of socks; but it is proposed later to install other types of machine in addition so that woollen gloves and cardigan jackets may also be produced.

With to-day (Saturday) closes the first week of practical experience in the working of the factory. Fifteen girls have been employed and have made good progress in learning the manipulation of the machines. Another twenty will be taken on next week. Only a few learners can be dealt with at a time, but it is hoped soon to have not less than sixty employed at the Springwell Works.

The name, by the way, is after that of a hosiery establishment with which Mr. Fenton was associated before settling in Scarborough. Mr. Fenton is the man at the back of the enterprise, and as instructors to the girls he has the assistance of Mrs. Fenton, who has had experience in this class of work, and of Miss Standage, of London, who has been sent down by the Central Committee for Women's Employment. That Committee has lent the knitting machines, of which thirty have been installed, and the number is being added to as expeditiously as possible.

Through that Committee also the socks are being knitted under Government contract the material being supplied, and there is a strict understanding that the operators are to be paid a fixed sum per dozen socks. This price, we are informed by Mr. Fenton, will enable the girls, when they have established a mastery over the machines and become skilled operators, to earn an average wage of 15s. to 17s. per week. It is not to be expected that this can be done after a single week of practice, but even for the first week the learners should earn about 3s. or 4s. The second week she should earn more and in a month should be capable of earning not less than 12s. It is estimated to take a couple of months before a girl obtains the skill and speed requisite to the earning of an average weekly wage of 15s. to 17s. The really smart operator will earn an appreciably higher wage than that.

A similar establishment was opened in the Isle of Man about the middle of last year. Mr. Fenton says that he has communicated with its promoters and learns from them that it has proved successful and that the girls are making an average of 15s. to 17s. per week.

Replying to a question as to what might happen after the war was over and Government contracts had ceased, Mr. Fenton said that he hoped to be able to continue the works as a hosiery factory. By that time there will be a supply of skilled female workers, and it is not intended to restrict operations to socks, but to install also machines for the production of gloves and cardigan jackets.

At the present time Mr. Fenton has received over a hundred applications, so that he will have no difficulty in staffing all the machines which it is in contemplation to install.

Spectator
1. 3. 19

652

652/96

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN.

[To the Editor of the "Spectator."]

Sir,—At this moment when the question of the after training of educated women about to be demobilized from the various Government offices and war-work centres is a matter of great urgency, may I bring before the notice of your readers the work of the Society for Promoting the Employment of Women, 23 Berners Street, W., of which I am President? This Society advances loans, free of interest, for fees, to suitable candidates, to enable them to train for professions and spheres of usefulness. Amongst the careers which our grantees have taken up during the past year are such varied occupations as those of accountancy, dentistry, dispensing, domestic economy, gardening, massage and electrical treatment, maternity nursing, medicine, secretarial work, and elementary, secondary, and kindergarten teaching. During the last fifty-nine years the Society has done excellent work on these lines. With the view to increase our scope of work at the present time when the need for training is greater than it has ever been before, the Committee would gratefully welcome contributions to the funds, so as to enable them to meet the present urgent demand.

—I am, Sir, &c.,
Leigh, President.

Stoneleigh Abbey, Kenilworth.

Daily Chronicle.
11.9.19.

EFFICIENCY OF THE WOMAN OF FORTY.

VALUED IN COMMERCIAL LIFE WHERE SHE HAS TRAINING AND EXPERIENCE.

UNTRIED WOMEN HANDICAPPED.

Inquiries by "Daily Chronicle" correspondents in the provincial cities into the difficulties in the way of educated women of 40 securing and keeping employment confirm in the main the experience of London, as indicated yesterday.

Women with experience and training are in no peril of losing their posts when they are over 40. In fact, their efficiency and reliability makes them at that age more valuable to their employers.

Where the gentlewoman of 40 is disadvantaged, according to all provincial experience, is where she is compelled to make a belated entry into the labour market, and, unequipped by business training and experience, she finds herself in competition with the cheaper and more active and adaptable girl in her teens.

LADY MAYORESS'S VIEW.

HARD CASES OFTEN THE RESULT OF A BELATED START.

Inquiries among manufacturers in Leeds show that, so far from women being too old at 40, they very often are most useful employees at that age, steadier and more reliable in every way.

It is also abundantly clear that employers as a rule fight shy of the gentlewomen of middle life who seek to enter commercial life without previous experience.

In an interview on the subject the Lady Mayoress of Leeds (Mrs. A. E. Hartley), who is a prominent social worker, said:—

"I know that if a woman has to begin to earn her living at 40, and she has no sort of experience to fit her for the task, she is faced with a very serious problem. But of my own knowledge this does not apply to the woman who has been earning her living previously.

"I have not heard of women of 40 and over being turned off and thrown on the labour market merely because they have been deemed too old or to make way for younger women.

"Perhaps I may be thought hard, but I should say that in most cases where a woman of 40 and over is suddenly faced with the necessity of working for a livelihood, she ought to have foreseen the possibility of such a thing happening, and have fitted herself to cope with it when it occurred."

Another lady mentioned that she knew of a spinster lady over 40, a highly gifted artist in oils, a student of Herkomer and the best masters, who was suddenly faced with the necessity of earning money to live. After many weary months' searching, she was at last glad to accept a post as junior art mistress at £30 a year.

GIRLS GET PREFERENCE.

BUT OLDER WOMEN HAVE BEST CHANCE OF KEEPING THEIR JOBS.

Liverpool, except during the war, never offered much scope for women labour, and it is certainly the fact here, wires the "Daily Chronicle" correspondent, that the applicant for a job who is over 40 is regarded somewhat suspiciously.

She is handicapped in competition with the big army of girls, active and capable, though the staff superintendent of a big shipping line tells me an older woman who actually retains her position has the best chance of keeping it, inasmuch as she is more reliable and steady.

A Labour Ministry official who confirms the too-old-at-forty theory, takes the view that the situation will right itself with reviving trade and a flourishing condition of industry, which will increase the demand for workers and automatically re-absorb older women into industry.

Employers at present want youth, especially where manual work is concerned, and many pathetic instances could be told of war widows tramping in vain in search of jobs to supplement their meagre pensions.

"The idea," said a social worker, "that a woman is too old at 40 is preposterous. She has got all the flapper's nonsense shaken out of her head, is not absorbed in amusements and dress, and as she has probably reconciled herself to spinsterhood, she settles down to office work conscientiously; she makes it her profession, whereas the younger woman regards business merely as a convenient means of bridging an interval, and is woefully indifferent and unproficient in consequence."

MADE GOOD AT FORTY.

HOLDING HIGH POSITIONS IN SCHOOLS, BUSINESSES, & HOSPITALS

Mrs. Annot Robinson, organising secretary of the Manchester branch of the Women's International League, would not admit that women of 40 were too old for employment.

She pointed to the fact that in the schools, banks, nursing homes, hospitals, and the like it was the experienced woman over 40 who held the responsible positions. In the large warehouses in Manchester the heads of millinery and dressmaking departments were likewise over that age.

The woman at 40 had usually made good at that age, granted, of course, that she had any ability at all.

It was true that in offices employers would not engage older women, but this was because an elderly woman would not accept a position at the rate of pay which the younger girl would. Again, it was easier to train a girl to office routine.

Mrs. Robinson added that in her wide and varied experience she had not known that 40 was an age limit for responsible positions. In fact it was quite the reverse in the teaching profession, with which she was very intimate. Years of experience were absolutely essential before a woman could attain to the position of a headmistress, and she did not know of an instance where a woman under that age was in such a position.

WANTED AT NOTTINGHAM.

MANY OCCUPATIONS OPEN, BUT FALSE DIGNITY A HINDRANCE.

Educated women who complain of being told they are too old at 40 to obtain employment are recommended by Mrs. Phillips, organiser of the women's section of the Nottingham branch of the Worker's Union, to try their luck at Nottingham.

The city affords exceptional scope for women workers owing to the nature of its industries. "But," says Mrs. Phillips, "she must be prepared to come down from her high pinnacle to the level of the ordinary working woman.

"Unless she has experience in some higher form of work, such as clerical, or is a shorthand-typist, she must not expect without experience to be taken into an office, and if she goes in for manual labour she must bring her mind to associating with girls she regards as inferiors."

SHEFFIELD EXPERIENCE.

ONLY TROUBLE IN CASE OF WOMEN WITH HOME TIES.

"So far as Sheffield is concerned, I am glad to say that there is no too old at 40 problem," said Mrs. Wilkinson, district secretary of the Federation of Women Workers, to the "Daily Chronicle" correspondent yesterday.

"We do occasionally have trouble in finding employment for two types of women, those with infirm parents, whom they have to work for and be at home at different periods in the day to get their meals. The other type is the widow with children, who cannot take regular employment.

"Apart from those two classes, we have no trouble in finding employment for women, and the question of age has never been raised as far as I know."

WOMEN AND UNEMPLOYMENT.

The Industrial Conference, presided over by Sir Robert Horne, Minister of Labour, held at Westminster last week, was representative of the organised industry of the country, gathered from employers' organisations, trade unions, etc.

Sir Robert Horne said that the unemployment returns of the trade unions showed that unemployment was not greater now than it was in February, 1914. This statement cannot, however, afford much satisfaction to the men who are seeking work, e.g., to the V.C. plumber, who cannot find employment, and who asserts his intention of going round the streets and to Buckingham Palace with a barrel-organ. Proceeding to deal with the woman worker, the chairman continued: "In regard to women, they found a very much larger proportion of unemployment. . . . Enormous bodies of women had gone into industrial work during the period of the war who previously did no work at all. These people to-day were swelling the figures of unemployment, but from all the information a very large proportion of these women did not desire now to go back to work at all." There is no doubt that this statement eased the mind of many present, and, though it conflicts with other evidence on the pages of the same issue of The Times, which contains the report of the Joint Industrial Conference, we will not question it at this juncture. We would rather ask the Minister of Labour and the prominent trade unionists present two or three questions which are suggested by the statement:—

(1) Are idle people who "do not want to work" a positive benefit to the community?

(2) If they do not work, upon whose shoulders does their support fall?

(3) Is it true, as trade unionists have often affirmed, that the working classes of the country have, by their labour, not only to support their own people, but also that section of the community who do no productive work?

(4) Is it, therefore, advisable to put every hindrance on the work of any section of the community?

(5) Is work so desirable that it must be kept for men, i.e., as long as the work is adequately paid?

(6) Does the only hope for a prosperous industrial future for the country consist in increased production, and, if so, ought women to be discouraged from working?

The answers to these questions require some consideration. If answered to the effect that women should, as far as possible, be kept out of industry, we trust we shall hear no more of the "idle rich," or of the burden of labour which is thrown on the worker, owing to the fact that there are so many drones in the community.

Having explained that a very large proportion of women were not demanding to be reabsorbed into industry, Sir Robert Horne continued to say that unemployment among women could be attributed to the unemployment donation which women were receiving. He considered that, "perhaps unfortunately," the figure of 25s. a week "compared very favourably with what women were able to earn in many of the employments which they followed prior to the war." It does not seem to have occurred to the Minister of Labour that, if it was "unfortunate" that a woman should have had to live on less than 25s. before the war, it was still more unfortunate, in consideration of the fall in the value of money, that she should have to live upon this sum to-day. He conceded that the reluctance of women to go back to employment as long as the unemployment donation lasted was "natural." Did it not occur to him that the reluctance would very speedily be broken down by the offer of employment at a wage so substantially in excess of 25s. as to compensate for the increased prices which prevail to-day? He explained that the unemployment donation was to be continued for another three months, but at a reduced figure, and that for the second three months women would receive 15s. weekly instead of 25s.

Miss J. Stevens (representative of the National Federation of Women Workers on the workpeople's side of the Interim Industrial Reconstruction Committee for the Catering Industry) said that, if a girl was not going to get more than 15s. a week, she had got to sell herself to a sweating employer or go on the streets. In a district where she was organising women workers, there were firms which were paying 11s. a week to women of 19 and 20, and a 5s. time-keeping bonus, which they lost if they were absent from their work for half a day during the week. She condemned the proposal to reduce the unemployment benefit, and said the women were quite willing to work if the Government would provide them with suitable work at trade union rates of wages.

The Industrial Conference appointed a Joint Committee consisting of an equal number of employers and workers, to report to a further meeting of the Conference on the causes of the present unrest and the steps necessary to promote the interests of employers, workpeople, and the State, and especially to consider (1) questions relating to hours, wages, and the general conditions of unemployment; (2) unemployment and its prevention; (3) the best methods of promoting co-operation between capital and labour. Miss Margaret Bondfield and Miss Tynan were appointed to represent the women workers.

It is clear that there is a general feeling among both workers and employers that no reversion to pre-war conditions of industry is possible. The worker has a heightened sense of his value, and, even in the era of war prices, has enjoyed security of employment at a wage which has enabled him to live at a standard of comfort in excess of that at which he lived before the war. This applies to an even greater extent to women workers, and will have to be reckoned with in the near future. The problems connected with the industrial life of the nation are many and very varied. We have to insist that a woman has equal rights with a man to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Women will not consent to be regarded as adjuncts or finishing touches to life. They demand their share of the world's work and the world's rewards, and they are showing that any attempt to deprive them of that which they consider their due will rouse in them a spirit of resentment and opposition which will not be allayed by appeals to their patriotism. Indeed, who can say that either men or women ought to be content with anything less than justice?

E. M. N. C.

AUTHORITY: The Fundamental Problem of Society.

A course of Lectures on this subject will be given by Mr. Homer Lane (of the Little Commonwealth) at the CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER, every Tuesday at 8 o'clock.

On March 11th, 18th, 25th, April 1st.

Subject: March 11th—"DYNAMICS OF MIND."

Tickets for the Course, price £1 1s. and 10s. 6d., single tickets 2s. 6d., can be obtained from the Sec., Women's International League, 14, Bedford Row, W.C. 1.

The Scotsman, Oct. 11th. 1914.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS.

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN.

PROPOSED ACTIVITIES OF THE SCOTTISH COMMITTEE.

A general statement of the aims and proposed activities of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment has been prepared, and the memoranda forwarded to the secretaries of the Local Committees of the National Relief Fund.

An explanatory memorandum states that the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment has been constituted by the Scottish Advisory Committee to deal in a comprehensive way with the questions of unemployment and under-employment among working women caused by the war. Many grave problems of this type will arise, and it is essential that they should be treated under a well co-ordinated national scheme and with due regard to sound economic principles. In particular, it is desirable that the numerous local and voluntary proposals which are being put forward shall be guided along the proper lines. For the purposes indicated above, money may be available either from the Prince of Wales's Fund or from the Queen's Work for Women Fund, or from special Government grants. One of the most important duties of the Committee will be to formulate principles and give considered advice as to the application of such funds. The Committee will have at its disposal reports from all parts of Scotland dealing with the degree and causes of unemployment among women, and the information so collected will form the basis of its recommendations for grants of money.

EMPLOYMENT SCHEMES.

It is essential that in any employment schemes there should be no interference with ordinary trade, or displacement of labour already employed under economic conditions. Further, it is desirable that, in distributing employment, regard shall be had to the needs of the different areas. No grants of money can be made unless these conditions are observed. The Committee will consider schemes of employment for women to be administered by the Local Committees already established in all the counties and principal burghs of Scotland. The details of such schemes must be submitted to the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment before grants of money can be made. Further, the Committee may suggest schemes to the Local Committees, and, where these are accepted, may recommend grants of money for their due execution. The Committee may also find it desirable to initiate schemes and carry these out in all their details. Such schemes will not be numerous, as it is desired to work through the recognised Local Committees as much as possible. But in certain cases, especially those of an experimental nature, the centralised method may have distinct advantages. As regards schemes administered by local or voluntary bodies from their own resources—e.g., rates, grants from Government Departments, &c., the activities of the Committee can only be of an advisory nature. But it is hoped that the originators of such schemes will bear in mind the need for proper co-ordination, the evils of overlapping and duplication, and the advantages of securing the guidance which the accumulated information of the Committee as to social and economic conditions will make possible. It is accordingly recomended that the advice of the Committee be sought when any new scheme is initiated, however small in scale or local in character. At the office of the Committee such advice will be given at any time, either by letter or by interview. The Committee will take such action as may appear advisable (in conjunction where possible with the Government Departments) to promote a more equal distribution of work with a view to preventing overtime and part-time (or unemployment) existing concurrently in the same trade or branch of a trade; and will also consider arrangements for transferring skilled workers from a depressed trade to any other trade in which the special skill of these displaced workers would be applicable. Schemes for the general or technical education and training of the unemployed, especially young persons, will be considered in co-operation with the education authorities. The question of the establishment of new trades for women will have the special consideration of the Committee. In this matter, it experiments are made, it will only be after the most careful examination of the issues involved and full consultation with representative employers and other experts. Offices for the Committee have now been opened in Edinburgh.

PROPOSED LOCAL SUB-COMMITTEES.

Another memorandum states that it is desirable that there should be in each locality a Sub-Committee of the Local Committee to deal with questions of unemployment amongst women. It should include among its members a strong representation of working women or those representing women's industrial organisations. Where it is desired to set on foot a special scheme of employment the Local Committee should have before it the views of this Sub-Committee before sending on the proposal to the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, who may approve or suggest modifications in any scheme so submitted.

The following suggestions are made as to the nature of employments and occupations:—(1) Training workers in trades in which new openings are now offered for British trade. (2) Training in skilled trades in which there is normally a shortage of labour, such as machinists, hand-ironers, &c. (3) Training in domestic economy, especially cooking. Schemes of education or training should be carried out in conjunction, where possible, with the Education Authorities. (4) Production of useful articles, such as clothing for cases of distress, night-dresses, bed jackets for poor sick women nursed in hospitals or in their own homes, all kinds of garments, but especially knitted garments for poor babies, cradles, and various accessories which are often lacking, but are always desirable in the nursing of the sick poor and in maternity cases. In the selection of the particular articles to be made in any locality it would be necessary that no work should be undertaken the product of which would come into competition with ordinary business. (5) Altering, making, and mending of workers' own garments.

It is proposed that the conditions applying to schemes should be as follows:—(1) For skilled workers the usual rates in their trade should be paid, but in no case should the minimum rate fall below 3d. per hour net. (2) The wages earned in the week should not exceed in any case 10s., and the maximum hours worked should be 40, that number to be reduced where the rate of pay exceeds 3d. per hour. (3) The supervisors of women employed under any scheme should be skilled instructresses or competent forewomen paid at the market rate for similar work. The rule as to maximum number of hours might be modified in the case of the supervisors. (4) It will be the duty of the Local Committees to see that work is only given to those who are in distress through the war. (5) It is hoped that suitable premises (whether factories which are shutting down or other rooms) can be obtained for the scheme free of charge, or subject only to a charge in respect of light, power, and heating.

UNEMPLOYMENT AMONG WOMEN.

Lord Provost Inches presided yesterday at a meeting of the National Relief Committee held in the Edinburgh City Chambers, and the question of the unemployment of women was discussed. It was decided to form a sub-committee of ladies to deal with the whole subject with a view to bringing forward a scheme for the employment of various classes of labour.

652a/1 652a

Glasgow Herald, Oct. 14th. 1914.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS.

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN.

Miss Mary M. Paterson, 121 George Street, Edinburgh, hon. secretary to the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment (which has just been instituted by the Scottish Advisory Committee), has issued explanatory memoranda to the secretaries of local committees of the National Relief Fund. It is explained that the committee is appointed to deal in a comprehensive way with the questions of unemployment and under-employment among working women caused by the war. For the purposes indicated above money may be available either from the Prince of Wales's Fund or from the Queen's Work for Women Fund, or from special Government grants. One of the most important duties of the committee will be to formulate principles and give considered advice as to the application of such funds. The committee will have at its disposal reports from all parts of Scotland dealing with the degree and causes of unemployment among women, and the information so collected will form the basis of its recommendations for grants of money. It is essential that in any employment schemes there should be no interference with ordinary trade or displacement of labour already employed under economic conditions. Further, it is desirable that, in distributing employment, regard shall be had to the needs of the different areas. No grants of money can be made unless these conditions are observed. As regards schemes administered by local or voluntary bodies from their own resources, e.g. rates, grants from Government Departments, etc., the activities of the committee can only be of an advisory nature. But it is recommended that the advice of the committee be sought when any new scheme is initiated, however small in scale or local in character. The committee will take such action as may appear advisable (in conjunction where possible with the Government Departments) to promote a more equal distribution of work with a view to preventing overtime and part-time (or unemployment) existing concurrently in the same trade or branch of a trade; and will also consider arrangements for transferring skilled workers from a depressed trade to any other trade in which the special skill of these displaced workers would be applicable. Schemes for the general or technical education and training of the unemployed, especially young persons, will be considered in co-operation with the education authorities. The question of the establishment of new trades for women will have the special consideration of the committee.

SUGGESTED OCCUPATIONS.

The following are the suggested nature of employments and occupations:—(1) Training workers in trades in which new openings are now offered for British trade. (2) Training in skilled trades in which there is normally a shortage of labour, such as machinists, hand-ironers, etc. (3) Training in domestic economy, especially cooking. Schemes of education or training should be carried out in conjunction where possible with the education authorities. (4) Production of useful articles, such as clothing. (5) Altering, making, and mending of workers' own garments. The conditions applying to schemes are as follow:—(1) For skilled workers the usual rates in their trade should be paid, but in no case should the minimum rate fall below 3d per hour net. (2) The wages earned in the week should not exceed in any case 10s, and the maximum hours worked should be 40, that number to b reduced where the rate of pay exceeds 3d per hour. (3) The supervisors of women employed under any scheme should be skilled instructresses or competent forewomen paid at the market rate for similar work. The rule as to maximun number of hours might be modified in the case of the supervisors. (4) It will be the duty of the local committees to see that work is only given to those who are in distress through the war. (5) It is hoped that suitable premises (whether factories which are shutting down o other rooms) can be obtained for the scheme free of charge or subject only to a charge in respect of light, power, and heating.

Aberdeen Free Press,
Oct. 26th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Owing to the rapid development of the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, it has been found necessary to move to new offices. These are situated at 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, and all communications should now be sent to the honorary secretary of the committee at that address. Scottish subscriptions to the Queen's Fund should, however, be sent to Lady Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, who will transmit them to Her Majesty the Queen.

Glasgow Evening Citizen
Oct. 29th. 1914.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS IN GLASGOW.

To enable the Glasgow Committee of the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund to take steps for the relief of unemployment arising out of the war, Mr John Lindsay, Town-Clerk, and secretary to the committee, requests that men wholly or partially unemployed in consequence of the war shall at once register themselves at the Labour Exchanges, and that women shall register themselves at the women's department of the Labour Exchanges or at the Women's Central Office, 104 West George Street. Applicants must give full particulars of their circumstances and the work they have been doing.

The Scotsman,
Oct. 31st. 1914.

RELIEF WORK FOR WOMEN IN EDINBURGH.

WHAT IS A FAIR WAGE?

Under the auspices of Edinburgh Trades Council and Edinburgh Labour Emergency Committee, a conference of women workers was held in the Melbourne Hall, George IV. Bridge, last night, to consider the question of the employment of women at the present juncture. Mr R. Allan presided, and among the organisations and trades represented were the Shop Assistants' Union, tailoresses, female compositors, warehouse girls in the printing trade, clerkesses, the National Union of Women Workers, the Upholsterers' Society, St Cuthbert's Women's Guild, Women's Freedom League, National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, and various Socialist bodies. There were about forty ladies present.

The Chairman said that while there was not much distress in Edinburgh as yet, it was true that certain sections of women's employment were affected, such as dressmakers, women and girls in the printing trade and in the confectionery trade. Criticising the composition of the Relief Committees, he said that if the working classes were not given a fair share in the representation of these Committees, then the working classes would have no other course but to withhold their subscriptions, and administer them through their own organisations. He moved a resolution urging upon the Local Central Committee of the National Relief Fund "the imperative need for providing schemes of employment for women in the city who are at present out of employment, and who are likely to be thrown out of employment by the war," and demanding that on all committees and sub-committees created to deal with this matter women's industrial organisations should be adequately represented.

Mrs Cheshire (National Warehousemen and Cutters' Society), who seconded, criticised the suggested wage of 10s. per week for women given relief work, because, in her opinion, that wage was going to drive these people below the poverty line.

The resolution was carried.

Mrs M'Lean, Mrs Geddes, and Miss Brown explained the steps already being taken in regard to employment schemes, in the way of toy-making and flower-making.

Mrs Morley Fletcher, Women's Emergency Corps, explained that a start would be made next week in Melville Street with a scheme of toy-making, under which beginners would receive 10s. a week, and later would be paid from 15s. to £1 a week.

Miss Mitchell suggested that pressure might be put on the authorities to employ women as postmen. It was work that was done in other countries, and she did not know why it should not be done here. (Applause.)

Among other schemes suggested was the washing of the common stairs of the city.

Councillor Crawford moved a resolution urging upon all women workers suffering through the war to at once apply to the ward sub-committees either for work or relief, "as the funds are subscribed for the purpose of assistance to those in distress."

Edinburgh Evening Dispatch,
Oct. 26th. 1914.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS.

STORIES OF WOMEN'S HEROIC SUFFERING.

Every case in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund is investigated by the Woman Investigator for the district, and fifty per cent. of them are reported by her to be in urgent distress.

"Only three of the people I have visited," she said on Saturday, "have proved unsatisfactory. These are the kind of women I find:—

"A skilled dressmaker regularly earning 18s. to 25s. per week went for her holiday at the beginning of August. When she returned there was nothing for her to do. For about three years she has supported her brother, who has tuberculosis, and she has 7s. rent to pay per week. Of course, she has been selling things, and they have both been half-starved, but they never say anything about that. The reason people think that there is no distress among the better-class workers is that they keep their troubles to themselves. They are too proud to say they are hungry.

"There is a young dressmaker of seventeen who is practically the breadwinner of her family. Her mother is a widow, one sister is paralysed and cannot work at all, and the younger sister of fourteen is apprenticed and is hoping to have 1s. a week pocket money. The dressmaker used to earn 12s. 6d. a week, and with 7s. 6d. which the mother earned for three days' charing every week they managed very comfortably. Since the girl was thrown out of work these four people have been existing on the 7s. 6d. the mother earns. That is not the worst.

"An old woman of sixty had to make 6d. last from Saturday noon till Tuesday noon, and that money a neighbour, who was nearly as badly off as herself, had given her for making a baby's frock. I shall not forget her face when I told her she could come to the Mayoress's workroom.

"Some of the women are so dazed with semi-starvation that for a few hours they can scarcely hold a needle. No one knows what the tea and bread and butter given in the afternoon mean to these women who starve and say nothing."

THE WORK IN SCOTLAND.

Owing to the rapid development of the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, it has been found necessary to move to new offices. These are situated at 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, and all communications should now be sent to the Honorary Secretary of the Committee at that address.

Scottish subscriptions to the Queen's Fund should, however, be sent to Lady Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, who will transmit them to Her Majesty the Queen.

652a.

The Scotsman,
Oct. 26th. 1914

SCOTTISH COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

Owing to the rapid development of the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, it has been found necessary to move to new offices. These are situated at 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, and all communications should now be sent to the Honorary Secretary of the Committee at that address.

Scottish subscriptions to the Queen's Fund should, however, be sent to Lady Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, who will transmit them to Her Majesty the Queen.

The Committee were greatly indebted to the United Free Church for their courtesy in making available the office at 121 George Street, Edinburgh, during the initial period of the work.

The Scotsman,
October 27th. 1914.

EDINBURGH SCHEME FOR UNEMPLOYED WOMEN.

The Sub-Committee on the Employment of Women of the local Committee of the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund held a meeting in the City Chambers, Edinburgh, yesterday—Mrs T. J. Millar presiding. A scheme for the institution of a workroom was approved by the meeting, and has been sent to the Prince of Wales's Committee for adoption. On the receipt of a grant from the Advisory Council the workroom will be put into operation. The offer of a house on loan has been made for use as a workroom, and it is proposed as a preliminary step to give employment to thirty women, who will be under the supervision of an experienced forewoman and an assistant. The women will make clothing for cases of distress, and also alter and repair garments suitable for wounded soldiers leaving hospital. It is proposed that those women who are entirely dependent on their own resources will be first assisted. The wages to be paid are those suggested by Miss Mary MacArthur, secretary of the Queen's Work for Women (London) Fund. Should this imtial effort prove successful, it is intended that the scheme should be developed.

Aberdeen Free Press,
29th. Oct. 1914.

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN IN ABERDEEN.

WORKROOMS IN SCHOOL.

A special meeting of Aberdeen School Board was held last night—Mr John Keir, chairman, presiding. A letter was received from Mr J. A. Nicol, local acting secretary of the Prince of Wales' Relief Fund, proffering a request on behalf of the Works and Unemployment Sub-committee for the use of Northfield School, to be used as workrooms for unemployed women, and asking the board to assist in the establishment of classes in domestic subjects.

The board resolved to accord them the use of the school on the condition that they defray the outlays, and remitted the question of the establishment of classes in domestic subjects to its Continuation Class Committee to confer with a representative of the sub-committee with a view to the establishment of classes as far as it may be deemed practicable.

652a/2

RELIEF OF DISTRESS IN GLASGOW.

To enable the Glasgow Committee of the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund to take steps for the relief of unemployment arising out of the war, Mr John Lindsay, Town-Clerk, and secretary to the committee, requests that men wholly or partially unemployed in consequence of the war shall at once register themselves at the Labour Exchanges, and that women shall register themselves at the women's department of the Labour Exchanges or at the Women's Central Office, 104 West George Street. Applicants must give full particulars of their circumstances and the work they have been doing.

The Scotsman,
Oct. 31st. 1914.

RELIEF WORK FOR WOMEN IN EDINBURGH.

WHAT IS A FAIR WAGE?

Under the auspices of Edinburgh Trades Council and Edinburgh Labour Emergency Committee, a conference of women workers was held in the Melbourne Hall, George IV. Bridge, last night, to consider the question of the employment of women at the present juncture. Mr R. Allan presided, and among the organisations and trades represented were the Shop Assistants' Union, tailoresses, female compositors, warehouse girls in the printing trade, clerkesses, the National Union of Women Workers, the Upholsterers' Society, St Cuthbert's Women's Guild, Women's Freedom League, National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, and various Socialist bodies. There were about forty ladies present.

The Chairman said that while there was not much distress in Edinburgh as yet, it was true that certain sections of women's employment were affected, such as dressmakers, women and girls in the printing trade and in the confectionery trade. Criticising the composition of the Relief Committees, he said that if the working classes were not given a fair share in the representation of these Committees, then the working classes would have no other course but to withhold their subscriptions, and administer them through their own organisations. He moved a resolution urging upon the Local Central Committee of the National Relief Fund "the imperative need for providing schemes of employment for women in the city who are at present out of employment, and who are likely to be thrown out of employment by the war," and demanding that on all committees and sub-committees created to deal with this matter women's industrial organisations should be adequately represented.

Mrs Cheshire (National Warehousemen and Cutters' Society), who seconded, criticised the suggested wage of 10s. per week for women given relief work, because, in her opinion, that wage was going to drive these people below the poverty line.

The resolution was carried.

Mrs M'Lean, Mrs Geddes, and Miss Brown explained the steps already being taken in regard to employment schemes, in the way of toy-making and flower-making.

Mrs Morley Fletcher, Women's Emergency Corps, explained that a start would be made next week in Melville Street with a scheme of toy-making, under which beginners would receive 10s. a week, and later would be paid from 15s. to £1 a week.

Miss Mitchell suggested that pressure might be put on the authorities to employ women as postwomen. It was work that was done in other countries, and she did not know why it should not be done here. (Applause.)

Among other schemes suggested was the washing of the common stairs of the city.

Councillor Crawford moved a resolution urging upon all women workers suffering through the war to at once apply to the ward sub-committees either for work or relief, "as the funds are subscribed for the purpose of assistance to those in distress, and are national funds, to be disbursed without taint of charity or pauperism."

Mr F. Smithies seconded, and the resolution was carried, as was also another protesting against the niggardly and pauperising 10s. a week" allowed relief workers.

hold a needle. No one knows what the tea and bread and butter given in the afternoon mean to these women who starve and say nothing."

THE WORK IN SCOTLAND.

Owing to the rapid development of the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, it has been found necessary to move to new offices. These are situated at 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, and all communications should now be sent to the Honorary Secretary of the Committee at that address.

Scottish subscriptions to the Queen's Fund should, however, be sent to Lady Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, who will transmit them to Her Majesty the Queen.

suitable for wounded soldiers leaving hospital. It is proposed that those women who are entirely dependent on their own resources will be first assisted. The wages to be paid are those suggested by Miss Mary MacArthur, secretary of the Queen's Work for Women (London) Fund. Should this initial effort prove successful, it is intended that the scheme should be developed.

Aberdeen Free Press,
29th. Oct. 1914.

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN IN ABERDEEN.

WORKROOMS IN SCHOOL.

A special meeting of Aberdeen School Board was held last night—Mr John Keir, chairman, presiding. A letter was received from Mr J. A. Nicol, local acting secretary of the Prince of Wales' Relief Fund, proffering a request on behalf of the Works and Unemployment Subcommittee for the use of Northfield School, to be used as workrooms for unemployed women, and asking the board to assist in the establishment of classes in domestic subjects.

The board resolved to accord them the use of the school on the condition that they defray the outlays, and remitted the question of the establishment of classes in domestic subjects to its Continuation Class Committee to confer with a representative of the sub-committee with a view to the establishment of classes as far as it may be deemed practicable.

652a/2

6520 3

The Inverness Courier, Nov: 3rd. 1914.

SCOTTISH COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INVERNESS COURIER.

20 Melville Street,
Edinburgh, 29th October 1914.

The following circular has been issued:—

Sir,—In Circular No. 111, issued to you by the Scottish Advisory Committee, reference was made to the question of collections for the Prince of Wales' Fund. In connection therewith, I am directed to inform you of the position as regards Scotland of the related Queen's Work for Women Fund. That fund has now been made applicable to Scotland, and grants are to be made from it to promote employment among Scotswomen unemployed and in distress owing to the war. The Marchioness of Linlithgow has been appointed honorary treasurer for Scotland, and all subscriptions for the fund from Scotland should be sent to her at Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, Linlithgowshire. The Scottish receipts will be incorporated with the Queen's Fund, and a letter of acknowledgment from Buckingham Palace will be sent to each contributor.—I am, yours faithfully,

MARY M. PATERSON,
Interim Hon. Secretary.

The Scotsman, Nov: 4th. 1914.

SCOTTISH COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment appointed to administer the Queen's Work for Women Fund in Scotland has settled down to the serious consideration of the problems of women's unemployment where that is caused by the war. The problems are those of the future rather than of the present, for unemployment, even amongst women, who are undoubtedly more affected than men, is still far from general. This is an advantage, as obviating the necessity for hasty action on the part of Local Committees, and allowing time for preparation for the distress which will surely come. Sub-Committees of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment have been formed to deal with (1) administration, (2) schemes of education and training, (3) schemes of work for the women of the crofting and fishing areas, (4) experimental workrooms. Information is being collected throughout Scotland which will guide the Committee in its work.

Already a number of schemes have been submitted by Local Committees, and approval has been given to a small number, while others are under consideration.

The Local Committee of Edinburgh has come early into the field, and will probably be the first to open a workroom.

The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment is representative of many interests. Lady Susan Gilmour is its chairman, Miss Paterson (National Insurance Commissioner) interim hon. secretary, and amongst its members are Miss Younger, chief woman officer of the Labour Exchange; the Hon. Mrs Stirling of Keir, Dunblane; and Miss Clarice M'Nab, member of Leith Town Council.

Glasgow Herald, Nov: 4th 1914. 6520a.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN.

The problems associated with the unemployment of working women owing to the war are receiving the careful consideration of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment appointed in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund in Scotland. In the meantime, it is believed, unemployment, even amongst women, cannot be said to be in any way general throughout the country. The problems which have to be dealt with accordingly relate rather to the future than to the present. There is therefore the less danger of hasty and ill-considered action on the part of local committees, and careful preparation can be made for the distress which is an inevitable consequence of the war. The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment have set up a number of sub-committees to specialise on various departments of the work. A sub-committee has been appointed to deal with administration, another with schemes of education and training, a third with schemes of work for the women of the crofting and fishing areas, and a fourth with experimental workrooms. Information bearing on the problems to be dealt with is being collected throughout the country, and the facts of the situation as so ascertained will guide the committee in their work. Schemes have already been matured and submitted by local committees, and a small number of these have been approved, the others being still under consideration. The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment is widely representative. It is presided over by Lady Susan Gilmour, and the members also include Miss Paterson, National Insurance Commissioner; Miss Younger, chief woman officer of the Labour Exchange; the Hon. Mrs Stirling of Keir, Dunblane; and Miss Clarice M'Nab, member of the Leith School Board. Further Scottish subscriptions to the fund have been received to the amount of £173 4s 4d. With subscriptions already acknowledged, amounting to £456 13s 8d, this makes a total up to date of £629 18s. The Scottish subscriptions are received by the Marchioness of Linlithgow, and are then forwarded to London.

Apart from the urgency of relieving distress, the problems before the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment afford an interest, from a detached, economic point of view, which should attract widespread attention. Such a Committee, formed on a national basis, with responsibilities which embrace the whole industrial system of the country, and under the necessity of carrying with it the confidence of the entire community, has to work under definite limitations, and requires to give to every scheme which qualifies for its support the most careful consideration. The general, as well as the local and particular, effects of any scheme have to be kept constantly in view. It is obvious that the provision of work for those out of employment in one locality should not have the effect, while relieving the local distress, of dislocating workers at a distance. The field of enterprise thus available to the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment is, therefore, limited to enterprises which are industrially non-competitive. The projects which may be taken up and approved by the Committee, and supported from the Queen's Work for Women Fund, have been generally defined in one of the Committee's circulars. They include "new industries" now open to British enterprise through the new situation created by the war; training in skilled trades in which there is normally a shortage of labour; training in domestic economy, especially cooking; and the production of articles destined for consumption not in the ordinary way—such as clothing for cases of distress, special articles of wear for poor sick women nursed in hospitals, knitted garments for babies in the poorer homes, and so on.

Generally, the Scottish Committee have in view the dispensing of the amount subscribed in a manner which will be genuinely economic and beneficial in the wider sense. The mere granting of doles is considered in most cases unsatisfactory. Subscribers to the Queen's Work for Women Fund in Scotland are assured that their money is not only providing subsistence for women workers who are in distress, but that along with this it is doing something either to educate and advance the individual receiving it, or is enabling that individual to dispense with relief of this kind at an early date, by fitting her to become once more a self-supporting and independent worker. In its broad general effects the Queen's Work for Women Fund, as administered by the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, should relieve the drain upon the Prince of Wales's Fund by affording such training as will enable the unemployed women to become self-supporting even during the currency of the present industrial crisis.

It is considered necessary that the various schemes which are put in operation in the different localities should be carried on through the agency of the local Sub-Committees for Women's Employment, appointed under the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund, and working under the general supervision of the Scottish Advisory Committee and the Scottish Committee for Women's Aberdeen Free Press, Nov: 11th. 1914.

WOMEN'S WORK IN WAR TIME.

AN UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM.

NEW METHODS OF ASSISTANCE.

One of the most important phases of the industrial situation created by the war is that relating to women. The extent to which women are affected by unemployment or under-employment, or are suffering distress due to reduction of their rate of remuneration reveals in a striking manner the extent to which women are now engaged in the industries of the country. Women workers of all classes have been affected. The war has curtailed the earnings of factory workers of various kinds, of shop assistants, office employees, and of those engaged in occupations requiring specially skilled and well educated women. The problem of dealing with the situation is complex and difficult. The ordinary methods which have obtained in the past are no longer considered satisfactory. It is acknowledged on all hands that the mere granting of doles does not meet the case. Almost universally amongst the workers themselves money relief will be accepted only in the last extremity. What they want is work. But the provision of work, possibly of an emergency character, requires the most careful consideration in view of the numerous collateral interests concerned. Evil effects, which may easily spring from ill-devised schemes, must be avoided. It is an easy matter to meet the distress in any given locality by furnishing work, if no regard is to be had to the effect which any scheme of employment may have on employment elsewhere. It is to foster suitable schemes and to avoid undesirable indirect effects that the Queen's Work for Women Fund has been instituted, and that, in Scotland, the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment has been appointed to administer it. The fund provides the means for instituting schemes of training and employment; and the committee will supervise any projects with a view to meeting the situation which may be brought forward locally. The chief function of the committee is to see that such schemes do not disturb existing employment, are economical and essentially useful, and that in an adequate manner they meet distress which has been created amongst the women workers in the country. Where workrooms have been started, the premises have been generally obtained free of charge. "New industries" in contemplation will probably involve only modest capital charges to give them a start. Facilities for training in domestic economy, in cooking, and in making and mending, and for similar purposes, have been afforded by educational authorities and private individuals. Generally, the subscribers to the Queen's Work for Women Fund in Scotland, for which the Marchioness of Linlithgow is acting as treasurer, have the assurance that the money which they give is spent in the most beneficial manner for those whom it is intended to relieve.

Various agencies have already been brought into existence to deal with the situation. It is felt important, however, that there should be some method of co-ordination and supervision. This object is secured by the institution of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, which advises the Scottish Advisory Committee dealing with the Prince of Wales' National Relief Fund, and which considers and makes recommendations upon schemes submitted by the local sub-committees associated with the Prince of Wales' Relief Fund Committees in the various counties and towns. The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, being on a national and ethical basis, must consider the general effects of any individual scheme; and with the information which is available, drawn from all parts of the country, the committee can deal with all such

The Scotsman, Nov: 5th. 1914.

PROVIDING EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN IN EDINBURGH.

At a meeting of the Women's Freedom League, which was held last night in 90 Lothian Road, Edinburgh—Mrs Bell presiding—a report was submitted dealing with the workroom scheme of the League and its probable extension. The League, it was explained, have had in operation for six months a scheme for providing work for women in the city who have been thrown out of employment on account of the war. The scheme, which is much in line with what is proposed by the Scottish Sub-Committee on Women's Employment, has been so successful that the League are anxious to extend its operations, and with that object in view have applied for a grant of money to the Sub-Committee. There is now, it was stated, the certainty of serious unemployment amongst women in the city.

The Scotsman, 12th Nov: 1914.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEMS IN SCOTLAND.

WOMEN'S INTERESTS.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

THE remarkable extent to which the problem of unemployment and under-employment amongst women in Scotland is engaging attention is an inevitable consequence of the widespread participation of women in the work of the country. So far, the adverse industrial effects of the war have affected principally the women workers. For this there are various obvious explanations. The outlet for the unemployed in the shape of Army service is not open for women as in the case of men. Further, the general scale of remuneration amongst women being lower than that of men, earnings sooner sink below the subsistence level, when the workers are put on short time, or where the rate of remuneration has to be reduced. The various local committees administering the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund have already realised the fact that in the meantime the unemployment problem is in Scotland chiefly a women's problem. The importance of this aspect of the industrial situation is also seen in the appointment of a special committee, under Government auspices, to deal with women's interests. The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment is the central authority for the various women's sub-committees which have been appointed in connection with the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund local committees in the various counties and burghs. To this central committee is entrusted the general administration of the Queen's Work for Women Fund. Support in building up that fund is derived from those who are interested in schemes for the alleviation of distress amongst women in the first instance, but specially, and more particularly, in schemes which are devised not so much to relieve immediate distress as to provide for the future, in the way of devising new channels of industry, or of raising the standard and efficiency of individual workers.

Interim Hon. Secretary.

Aberdeen Free Press, Mon: 11th. 1914.

WOMEN'S WORK IN WAR TIME.

AN UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM.

NEW METHODS OF ASSISTANCE.

One of the most important phases of the industrial situation created by the war is that relating to women. The extent to which women are affected by unemployment or under-employment, or are suffering distress due to reduction of their rate of remuneration reveals in a striking manner the extent to which women are now engaged in the industries of the country. Women workers of all classes have been affected. The war has curtailed the earnings of factory workers of various kinds, of shop assistants, office employees, and of those engaged in occupations requiring specially skilled and well educated women. The problem of dealing with the situation is complex and difficult. The ordinary methods which have obtained in the past are no longer considered satisfactory. It is acknowledged on all hands that the mere granting of doles does not meet the case. Almost universally amongst the workers themselves money relief will be accepted only in the last extremity. What they want is work. But the provision of work, possibly of an emergency character, requires the most careful consideration in view of the numerous collateral interests concerned. Evil effects, which may easily spring from ill-devised schemes, must be avoided. It is an easy matter to meet the distress in any given locality by furnishing work, if no regard is to be had to the effect which any scheme of employment may have on employment elsewhere. It is to foster suitable schemes and to avoid undesirable indirect effects that the Queen's Work for Women Fund has been instituted, and that, in Scotland, the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment has been appointed to administer it. The fund provides the means for instituting schemes of training and employment; and the committee will supervise any projects with a view to meeting the situation which may be brought forward locally. The chief function of the committee is to see that such schemes do not disturb existing employment, are economical and essentially useful, and that in an adequate manner they meet distress which has been created amongst the women workers in the country. Where workrooms have been started, the premises have been generally obtained free of charge. "New industries" in contemplation will probably involve only modest capital charges to give them a start. Facilities for training in domestic economy, in cooking, and in making and mending, and for similar purposes, have been afforded by educational authorities and private individuals. Generally, the subscribers to the Queen's Work for Women Fund in Scotland, for which the Marchioness of Linlithgow is acting as treasurer, have the assurance that the money which they give is spent in the most beneficial manner for those whom it is intended to relieve.

Various agencies have already been brought into existence to deal with the situation. It is felt important, however, that there should be some method of co-ordination and supervision. This object is secured by the institution of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, which advises the Scottish Advisory Committee dealing with the Prince of Wales' National Relief Fund, and which considers and makes recommendations upon schemes submitted by the local sub-committees associated with the Prince of Wales' Relief Fund Committees in the various counties and towns. The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, being on a national and official basis, must consider the general effects of any individual scheme; and with the information which is available, drawn from all parts of the country, the committee can deal with all such schemes from a broad and comprehensive point of view. Overlapping, unnecessary competition, and the mistaken expenditure of limited funds, will thus be avoided. The headquarters of the Scottish Committee are at 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

Younger, chief woman officer of the Labour Exchange; the Hon. Mrs Stirling of Keir, Dunblane; and Miss Clarice M'Nab, member of Leith Town Council.

The Scotsman, Nov: 5th. 1914.

PROVIDING EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN IN EDINBURGH.

At a meeting of the Women's Freedom League, which was held last night in 90 Lothian Road, Edinburgh—Mrs Bell presiding—a report was submitted dealing with the workroom scheme of the League and its probable extension. The League, it was explained, have had in operation for six months a scheme for providing work for women in the city who have been thrown out of employment on account of the war. The scheme, which is much in line with what is proposed by the Scottish Sub-Committee on Women's Employment, has been so successful that the League are anxious to extend its operations, and with that object in view have applied for a grant of money to the Sub-Committee. There is now, it was stated, the certainty of serious unemployment amongst women in the city.

The Scotsman, 12th Nov: 1914.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEMS IN SCOTLAND.

WOMEN'S INTERESTS.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

THE remarkable extent to which the problem of unemployment and under-employment amongst women in Scotland is engaging attention is an inevitable consequence of the widespread participation of women in the work of the country. So far, the adverse industrial effects of the war have affected principally the women workers. For this there are various obvious explanations. The outlet for the unemployed in the shape of Army service is not open for women as in the case of men. Further, the general scale of remuneration amongst women being lower than that of men, earnings sooner sink below the subsistence level, when the workers are put on short time, or where the rate of remuneration has to be reduced. The various local committees administering the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund have already realised the fact that in the meantime the unemployment problem is in Scotland chiefly a women's problem. The importance of this aspect of the industrial situation is also seen in the appointment of a special committee, under Government auspices, to deal with women's interests. The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment is the central authority for the various women's sub-committees which have been appointed in connection with the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund local committees in the various counties and burghs. To this central committee is entrusted the general administration of the Queen's Work for Women Fund. Support in building up that fund is derived from those who are interested in schemes for the alleviation of distress amongst women in the first instance, but specially, and more particularly, in schemes which are devised not so much to relieve immediate distress as to provide for the future, in the way of devising new channels of industry, or of raising the standard and efficiency of individual workers.

being still under consideration. The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment is widely representative. It is presided over by Lady Susan Gilmour, and the members also include Miss Paterson, National Insurance Commissioner; Miss Younger, chief woman officer of the Labour Exchange; the Hon. Mrs Stirling of Keir, Dunblane; and Miss Clarice M'Nab, member of the Leith School Board. Further Scottish subscriptions to the fund have been received to the amount of £173 4s 4d. With subscriptions already acknowledged, amounting to £456 13s 8d, this makes a total up to date of £629 18s. The Scottish subscriptions are received by the Marchioness of Linlithgow, and are then forwarded to London.

Apart from the urgency of relieving distress, the problems before the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment afford an interest, from a detached, economic point of view, which should attract widespread attention. Such a Committee, formed on a national basis, with responsibilities which embrace the whole industrial system of the country, and under the necessity of carrying with it the confidence of the entire community, has to work under definite limitations, and requires to give to every scheme which qualifies for its support the most careful consideration. The general, as well as the local and particular, effects of any scheme have to be kept constantly in view. It is obvious that the provision of work for those out of employment in one locality should not have the effect, while relieving the local distress, of dislocating workers at a distance. The field of enterprise thus available to the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment is, therefore, limited to enterprises which are industrially non-competitive. The projects which may be taken up and approved by the Committee, and supported from the Queen's Work for Women Fund, have been generally defined in one of the Committee's circulars. They include "new industries" now open to British enterprise through the new situation created by the war; training in skilled trades in which there is normally a shortage of labour; training in domestic economy, especially cooking; and the production of articles destined for consumption not in the ordinary way—such as clothing for cases of distress, special articles of wear for poor sick women nursed in hospitals, knitted garments for babies in the poorer homes, and so on.

Generally, the Scottish Committee have in view the dispensing of the amount subscribed in a manner which will be genuinely economic and beneficial in the wider sense. The mere granting of doles is considered in most cases unsatisfactory. Subscribers to the Queen's Work for Women Fund in Scotland are assured that their money is not only providing subsistence for women workers who are in distress, but that along with this it is doing something either to educate and advance the individual receiving it, or is enabling that individual to dispense with relief of this kind at an early date, by fitting her to become once more a self-supporting and independent worker. In its broad general effects the Queen's Work for Women Fund, as administered by the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, should relieve the drain upon the Prince of Wales's Fund by affording such training as will enable the unemployed women to become self-supporting even during the currency of the present industrial crisis.

It is considered necessary that the various schemes which are put in operation in the different localities should be carried on through the agency of the local Sub-Committees for Women's Employment, appointed under the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund, and working under the general supervision of the Scottish Advisory Committee and the Scottish Committee for Women's Employment. Only in this way can the public be adequately assured that money will not be uneconomically spent, and that the evils of overlapping and absence of co-ordination will be avoided. Already various interesting schemes are in operation. Workrooms have been established in Edinburgh, and there are interesting proposals under consideration in connection with the "new industries" department of the scheme. The support from interested members of the public has already been of a very gratifying nature. Where workrooms have been started, the use of suitable premises is generally available free of cost. Such schemes are being carried through with the greatest economy, so that subscriptions to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, for which the Marchioness of Linlithgow has consented to act as Scottish treasurer, will afford the maximum relief to unemployed women involved. The movement will probably enlist the support of many who are sympathetically interested in women's employments in Scotland, and the development of the various schemes which are now in process of inauguration will no doubt be watched with interest by the general community.

Weekly Scotsman, November 12th. 1914.

WAR RELIEF SCHEMES.

SCOTTISH WOMEN WORKERS.

Distress owing to the war in the meantime is chiefly affecting the women workers in Scotland. Fortunately, only certain classes are concerned. In the Border districts, for instance, factories are working overtime, and the women's earnings are probably unprecedented. Some of them, indeed, are taking the place of men in the tweed and hosiery factories. The women workers who are adversely affected belong chiefly to what might be called the accessory occupations. Shop assistants, restaurant waitresses, clerkesses, and typists, as well as those engaged in artistic and educative occupations, are suffering to a considerable extent either from unemployment, under-employment, or reduction of remuneration. Even amongst the domestic servant class there are dislocation and difficulty owing to the war. This has chiefly arisen through persons who have large household staffs reducing the number of their servants for reasons of economy.

For the first time the question of unemployment is receiving systematic and expert treatment. The Government, instead of leaving unemployment questions to be dealt with privately and charitably, are lending their assistance and direction in minimising the hardships of war. Various committees have been set up in connection with the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund. Their duties are to direct and control the flow of the generous funds which are being provided for the purpose of mitigating distress amongst the workers of the country.

The Committee in Scotland specially charged with the care of women's interests is the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment. The offices of this Committee, which is the central authority, are at 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh. There are, however, local women's sub-committees in each county or town for which there is a local committee of the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund. These women's sub-committees deal directly with local problems, make suggestions regarding the opening of workrooms, the starting of "new industries" suitable for women who are out of employment owing to the war, or the inception of schemes for training in cooking, domestic economy, or in making or mending garments for special use—for poor persons nursed in hospitals, for infants in poor homes, and similar purposes.

The Scottish Women's Committee is widely representative. It includes amongst its members:—Lady Susan Gilmour, Chairman of the Queen Victoria's Jubilee Institute for Nurses, Inch House, Liberton, Midlothian; Mrs Hannay, of the Glasgow Voluntary Health Visitors; Miss M. H. Irwin, secretary of the Scottish Council of Women's Trades, Glasgow; Miss Clarice M'Nab, a member of Leith Town Council and School Board; Miss Marion Rutherford, Warden of the Queen Margaret Settlement, Glasgow; Mrs Lamont, of the Women's Co-operative Guild, Edinburgh; Mrs D. H. L. Young, Glasgow; Miss Alice Younger, Chief Woman Officer of the Labour Exchange; Mrs J. D. Hope, Fife House, Inveresk; Miss L. P. Young, secretary of the Scottish National Federation of Women Workers; and Miss Mary M. Paterson, of the National Health Insurance Commission (Scotland), who is acting as interim honorary secretary.

Edinburgh Evening Despatch, Nov. 19th. 1914.

START OF IMPORTANT SCHEME IN EDINBURGH.

One of the most difficult problems relating to distress due to the war is that of providing employment for skilled women workers.

It is gratifying to know, then, that workrooms have been established at 18 Melville Street by the Edinburgh Sub-Committee for Women's Employment, and that they represent the beginning of a great systematic effort to relieve distress among this class of the industrial population of the country on a sound economic basis. The establishment is one of the first of its kind inaugurated in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund and the Prince of Wales' National Relief Fund, and its cost is relatively small to the relief afforded.

The Melville Street premises, which are airy, well-lighted, and in every way suitable for the purpose, have been obtained free of any charge for rent. Skilled and capable voluntary workers are giving their services in connection with the management of the workrooms.

WAGES v. DOLES.

The grants made from the Queen's Work for Women Fund, on the recommendation of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, are expended in the form of wages. The superiority of this form of relief over money subsistence grants is seen in the fact that the money being productively spent, there is a return not only in the shape of the production of articles of equivalent value, but also in the fact that the workers themselves derive benefit from the training and tuition received during their employment.

To-morrow afternoon the workrooms will be formally opened by the Marchioness of Linlithgow, though they have as a matter of fact been in operation for some time and a considerable number of women workers in various occupations have already benefited from them.

Women and girls are engaged in making various kinds of garments. For the most part the materials are supplied by persons who wish to assist in providing clothing for charitable or special purposes, and who are willing to give the material but who cannot themselves pay for the cost of making it up.

CHARACTER OF THE WORK.

The Scotsman, Nov. 17th. 1914. 652a

UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM IN SCOTLAND.

20 Melville Street, Edinburgh,
November 16, 1914.

SIR,—I notice in The Scotsman of the 14th inst. a letter under the heading "Unemployment Problem in Scotland," in which it is suggested by the writer that employers of labour should be consulted, especially in connection with new industries. May I say that the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment appointed to deal throughout Scotland with schemes of training and employment of women who have lost their work through the war fully realises the value of the help which can be given by employers of labour. My Committee has had occasion already to ask the advice of employers, and it is expected that as the work develops it will frequently be necessary to do so. May I add that my Committee would be very glad to have the names of employers, not in Edinburgh only, but throughout Scotland, who are willing to help with suggestion or advice.—I am, &c.

MARY M. PATERSON (Interim), Hon. Secretary.

Glasgow Herald Nov. 20th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

NEW SCHEME IN EDINBURGH.

The Marchioness of Linlithgow, Scottish treasurer of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, is to formally open this afternoon the new workrooms at 18 Melville Street, Edinburgh, which have been organised by the Edinburgh Sub-Committee on Women's Employment with a view to meeting unemployment and distress among women workers in the city. The premises in Melville Street have a capacity for 98 workers, and it is anticipated that at an early date further accommodation will be required to meet the demands which are being made upon the sub-committee. The work at Melville Street in the meantime is divided into two main departments. In one of these new garments for charitable or other special purposes are being made by dressmakers and others skilled in that occupation under the superintendence of an expert forewoman. Special care is being taken to guard against any production of the workroom coming into competition with ordinary sources of supply outside. In the main the articles produced are intended for the poor persons being treated in hospitals or otherwise, while a considerable number of garments are being made for the use of the Indian troops, the Government having required these urgently and factories being unable to supply them to the extent required in the ordinary course. An interesting order which is being executed in the workrooms at present is for a supply of garments to be used on the hospital train in France. In the other department the workers, under a teacher experienced in this special work, are engaged in renovating old garments or in converting an old garment into a new one of a different kind. A soldier's overcoat, for instance, is converted into a lady's cloak, and a lady's cape into a boy's overcoat. The training in this department forms a valuable item in ordinary domestic economy, and is one which is being specialised in by the continuation classes in Edinburgh. Meals at an exceedingly moderate rate are purveyed for the workers, who receive 10s a week during their employment at Melville Street. An appetising luncheon is purveyed at a cost of 3d, while teas are supplied at the low price of a penny. In this department expert volunteer assistance has been given from the Edinburgh School of Cookery. The premises at Melville Street have been secured free of any charge for rent. The grants from the Queen's Work for Women Fund are required only for the payment of the workers and incidental costs. The venture is the first that has been put into operation at the instance of the Edinburgh sub-committee, but already there are in progress arrangements for opening other premises in the city, especially to meet the case of part time workers. This form of relief, while beneficial in itself in respect that it affords training and the raising of the standard of efficiency on the part of those relieved, is also proving specially acceptable to the large class of women and girls suffering from unemployment owing to the war who are reluctant to accept money relief without any return, but who desire subsistence payment in return for their services.

652a/4.

are at 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh. There are, however, local women's sub-committees in each county or town for which there is a local committee of the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund. These women's sub-committees deal directly with local problems, make suggestions regarding the opening of workrooms, the starting of "new industries" suitable for women who are out of employment owing to the war, or the inception of schemes for training in cooking, domestic economy, or in making or mending garments for special use—for poor persons nursed in hospitals, for infants in poor homes, and similar purposes.

The Scottish Women's Committee is widely representative. It includes amongst its members:—Lady Susan Gilmour, Chairman of the Queen Victoria's Jubilee Institute for Nurses, Inch House, Liberton, Midlothian; Mrs Hannay, of the Glasgow Voluntary Health Visitors; Miss M. H. Irwin, secretary of the Scottish Council of Women's Trades, Glasgow; Miss Clarice M'Nab, a member of Leith Town Council and School Board; Miss Marion Rutherford, Warden of the Queen Margaret Settlement, Glasgow; Mrs Lamont, of the Women's Co-operative Guild, Edinburgh; Mrs D. H. L. Young, Glasgow; Miss Alice Younger, Chief Woman Officer of the Labour Exchange; Mrs J. D. Hope, Fife House, Inveresk; Miss L. P. Young, secretary of the Scottish National Federation of Women Workers; and Miss Mary M. Paterson, of the National Health Insurance Commission (Scotland), who is acting as interim honorary secretary.

Edinburgh Evening Despatch, Nov. 19th 1914.

START OF IMPORTANT SCHEME IN EDINBURGH.

One of the most difficult problems relating to distress due to the war is that of providing employ- [redacted] women workers.

It is gratifying to know, then, that workrooms have been established at 18 Melville Street by the Edinburgh Sub-Committee for Women's Employment, and that they represent the beginning of a great systematic effort to relieve distress among this class of the industrial population of the country on a sound economic basis. The establishment is one of the first of its kind inaugurated in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund and the Prince of Wales' National Relief Fund, and its cost is relatively small to the relief afforded.

The Melville Street premises, which are airy, well-lighted, and in every way suitable for the purpose, have been obtained free of any charge for rent. Skilled and capable voluntary workers are giving their services in connection with the management of the workrooms.

WAGES v. DOLES.

The grants made from the Queen's Work for Women Fund, on the recommendation of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, are expended in the form of wages. The superiority of this form of relief over money subsistence grants is seen in the fact that the money being productively spent, there is a return not only in the shape of the production of articles of equivalent value, but also in the fact that the workers themselves derive benefit from the training and tuition received during their employment.

To-morrow afternoon the workrooms will be formally opened by the Marchioness of Linlithgow, though they have as a matter of fact been in operation for some time and a considerable number of women workers in various occupations have already benefited from them.

Women and girls are engaged in making various kinds of garments. For the most part the materials are supplied by persons who wish to assist in providing clothing for charitable or special purposes, and who are willing to give the material but who cannot themselves pay for the cost of making it up.

CHARACTER OF THE WORK.

Another interesting department of the workrooms consists of that in which second-hand garments are reconstructed, and in which mending and work of a similar character is carried on.

In the basement is the cooking department, which is under the supervision of experts in cooking and domestic economy from the Edinburgh School of Cookery, whose services are given voluntarily. Here wonders are performed in the way of providing nourishing and appetising meals at a small cost.

The workrooms in Melville Street afford accommodation for 98 workers, and the accommodation it is anticipated, will, at an early date, be insufficient.

burgh, which have been organised by the Edinburgh Sub-Committee on Women's Employment with a view to meeting unemployment and distress among women workers in the city. The premises in Melville Street have a capacity for 98 workers, and it is anticipated that at an early date further accommodation will be required to meet the demands which are being made upon the sub-committee. The work at Melville Street in the meantime is divided into two main departments. In one of these new garments for charitable or other special purposes are being made by dressmakers and others skilled in that occupation under the superintendence of an expert forewoman. Special care is being taken to guard against any production of the workroom coming into competition with ordinary sources of supply outside. In the main the articles produced are intended for the poor persons being treated in hospitals or otherwise, while a considerable number of garments are being made for the use of the Indian troops, the Government having required these urgently and factories being unable to supply them to the extent required in the ordinary course. An interesting order which is being executed in the workrooms at present is for a supply of garments to be used on the hospital train in France. In the other department the workers, under a teacher experienced in this special work, are engaged in renovating old garments or in converting an old garment into a new one of a different kind. A soldier's overcoat, for instance, is converted into a lady's cloak, and a lady's cape into a boy's overcoat. The training in this department forms a valuable item in ordinary domestic economy, and is one which is being specialised in by the continuation classes in Edinburgh. Meals at an exceedingly moderate rate are purveyed for the workers, who receive 10s a week during their employment at Melville Street. An appetising luncheon is purveyed at a cost of 3d, while teas are supplied at the low price of a penny. In this department expert volunteer assistance has been given from the Edinburgh School of Cookery. The premises at Melville Street have been secured free of any charge for rent. The grants from the Queen's Work for Women Fund are required only for the payment of the workers and incidental costs. The venture is the first that has been put into operation at the instance of the Edinburgh sub-committee, but already there are in progress arrangements for opening other premises in the city, especially to meet the case of part time workers. This form of relief, while beneficial in itself in respect that it affords training and the raising of the standard of efficiency on the part of those relieved, is also proving specially acceptable to the large class of women and girls suffering from unemployment owing to the war who are reluctant to accept money relief without any return, but who desire subsistence payment in return for their services.

Edinburgh Evg. Dispatch,
Nov: 20th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

COMBATING THE UNEMPLOYMENT CAUSED BY THE WAR.

The workrooms which have been opened at 18 Melville Street, Edinburgh, by the Edinburgh Sub-Committee for Women's Employment, were formally opened this afternoon by the Marchioness of Linlithgow. Mrs T. J. Millar, who presided, said the Committee's work was the beginning of an attempt to deal with the unemployment of women—one of the biggest problems which had come upon them since the war began.

The Marchioness of Linlithgow, in declaring the rooms open, said the problem of providing employment for women workers was one of the most difficult of the war. She thought that these rooms would do something towards relieving distress in that particular neighbourhood, although it was only part of a scheme which she hoped would be applied to the United Kingdom. The wages paid to the workers were taken out of the Queen's Work for Women's Fund, for which she was treasurer for Scotland. There was need for greatly increased support of this fund. (Applause.)

In moving a vote of thanks to the Marchioness, Professor Lodge said he did not think that we in Scotland could be sufficiently grateful for the fact that the distress and dislocation of industry consequent upon the war had hitherto reached comparatively small proportions. They owed that primarily to the success of their naval forces. So long as the defence of their commerce was maintained as it had been, he had the strong and confident hope that they might meet this crisis in their history without having any of the horrors of extensive poverty.

Referring to the suffering amongst women workers, he said that, unlike unemployed men, they had not been able to enlist, and there was on the whole a larger area of alternative employment for men than for women. The prevalence of unemployment among women was due to a general pressure of curtailment caused by the war, and there was a very considerable measure of distress which was not visible on the surface of things. It was due, not to a large number of women turned out of one factory, but just the steady pressure of want. Women were not so voluble in their complaints as men. When there was suffering among men they would soon hear of it. Accordingly, they were grateful to those who had set themselves to deal with this real national problem of unemployment among women by provision such as had been made there. They all knew that it was better for men and women that they should work than that they should have the money placed in their hands. He thought it was due to the women of Edinburgh that they very creditably desired to work for what they got from the Fund, instead of merely getting the money. (Applause.)

Weekly Scotsman,
Nov. 21st. 1914.

PROGRESS OF WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT SCHEME IN EDINBURGH.—At a meeting of the Sub-Committee on Women's Employment held in the City Chambers, Edinburgh—Mrs T. J. Millar presiding—it was reported that the workrooms in Melville Street had been open for a week and that about two dozen girls were at work there under two experienced forewomen. There was a sewing room and a renovating room. The girls were paid 3d. an hour and 10s. a week, and cheap dinners, the preparation of which was superintended and assisted by voluntary workers from the School of Cookery in Atholl Crescent, were being supplied, and were much appreciated. Other premises had been offered and accepted, and it was hoped that the work might be considerably developed. There were many applications from people who had been thrown out of employment, and the Committee was anxious to have the scheme thoroughly under way before the unemployment problem became too pressing.

Edinburgh Evg. Despatch,
Dec: 7th. 1914.

THE WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, which administers the Queen's Work for Women Fund in Scotland, has just received a fresh proof of Her Majesty's kindly interest in the extension to workrooms under control of the Scottish Committee of the privilege recently accorded to the English workrooms under the Queen's Fund—that of using Her Majesty's crown and initials upon articles turned out by the workrooms.

The Scottish treasurer of the Queen's Fund is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, to whom subscriptions should be sent. Communications respecting the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the honorary secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

Glasgow Herald,
Nov: 21st. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

EDINBURGH WORKROOMS OPENED.

One of the problems arising out of the distress created by the war is the provision of employment for skilled women workers, and, as already described, the Edinburgh Sub-Committee for Women's Employment has organised an establishment at 18 Melville Street, Edinburgh. This relief work is rendered possible through the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and the Marchioness of Linlithgow, who is the treasurer of the fund for Scotland, attended an inaugural meeting at 18 Melville Street yesterday and formally declared the workrooms open. There was a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen interested in this class of relief work, and among those present were Lady Gibson, Lady Susan Gilmour, Lady Carlaw Martin, Sir John and Lady Clark, and Sir Thomas Hunter.

Mrs Millar, the convener of the sub-committee, who presided, explained that after obtaining a grant they had set up the workrooms to meet the situation created by the unemployment of women.

The Marchioness of Linlithgow, who was accompanied by her father, Sir F. Milner, said that although the workrooms had been in use for some time she had been asked to open them formally with the object of making them more widely known. One of the most difficult problems due to the war was to provide employment for women workers, and she hoped the rooms would go a long way to relieve distress. The premises had been obtained free of charge of rent, and there was accommodation for 96 workers, and it was anticipated that at an early date further accommodation would be required. The workers were now engaged in making a large number of shirts and other garments for use on the hospital train in France and cardigan jackets ordered by the Government for Indian troops. There were also various articles suitable for hospital and other uses, and a feature of the work was the fashioning of new clothes out of old. There had been already a gratifying response to the appeals sent out, but there was need for greatly increased support.

Professor Lodge moved a vote of thanks to Lady Linlithgow. He said that he did not think that they in Scotland could be sufficiently grateful for the fact that the distress and dislocation of industry had hitherto reached, he was glad to say, comparatively small proportions if they looked at the country as a whole. They owed that primarily and largely to the success of their naval forces in protecting and maintaining their overseas commerce. The suffering of women workers was, however, far larger than the general public knew, and there was among that class a very creditable and honourable desire to work for what they could get from any fund rather than to receive from a fund without having done anything for it.

The company thereafter had an opportunity of inspecting the workrooms.

Scotsman, Nov. 23rd. 1914.

WOMEN'S WORKROOM FOR THE ST LEONARD'S DISTRICT.

In view of the large number of women workers, especially tailoresses and dressmakers, either unemployed or on short time, who were making applications under the National Relief Fund in the St Leonard's district, a representation was made to the Edinburgh Sub-Committee on Women's Employment in favour of the establishment of one of their workrooms in the St Leonard's Ward. The proposal was considered by the Edinburgh Sub-Committee, and it has been decided to put forward a scheme to the Scottish Committee for Women's Employment, and ask for a grant to open a workroom in this area of the city.

Glasgow Evg. Citizen,
December 7th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, which administers the "Queen's Work for Women" Fund in Scotland, has received a communication from the Secretary for Scotland conveying Royal permission to make use of the Queen's crown and initials on articles made in the workrooms under the committee's control. The Scottish treasurer of the Queen's Fund is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, to whom subscriptions should be sent. Communications regarding the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

652a/5 652a
Scotsman,
Edinburgh, 21.11.14.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

LADY LINLITHGOW OPENS EDINBURGH WORKROOMS.

PROFESSOR LODGE ON THE INDUSTRIAL SITUATION.

THE Marchioness of Linlithgow yesterday opened the workrooms at 18 Melville Street, Edinburgh, which have been obtained and fitted for the work of the Edinburgh Sub-Committee for Women's Employment, and which are now the scene of much useful activity. That the war has been felt seriously by many classes of skilled workwomen is a fact which is becoming more evident daily; and the efforts of the Sub-Committee, whilst directed to the relief of distress by the provision of employment, are guided to the end that neither the general state of work nor of wages shall be prejudiced by the operations under its control. The scheme and the premises in which it is being admirably worked out were outlined and described in our columns yesterday.

There was a good gathering at the opening ceremony. Mrs T. J. Millar presided. Lady Linlithgow was accompanied by Sir Frederick Milner, and the company included Lady Susan Gilmour, Professor Lodge, Sir Thomas Hunter, Sir John and Lady Clark, Lady Martin, Mrs Wauchope of Niddrie, Lady Gibson, Lady Salvesen, Mrs Leslie Mackenzie, Mrs Maitland, Miss Alice Low, Miss Lois P. Young, Mr A. Stuart and Mrs Stuart, Mrs A. P. Melville, Mrs Boeme, and Mrs Naismith.

Mrs T. J. Millar described the steps which had been taken by the Edinburgh Sub-Committee to date, and called upon Lady Linlithgow to formally open the workrooms.

The Marchioness of Linlithgow expressed the pleasure she had in formally declaring the workrooms open. It was desirable that the claims of this valuable work should be widely known, as one of the most difficult problems created by the war at the present time was that of providing employment for skilled workwomen. She hoped those rooms would prove of the greatest value in the relief of distress, and that that was only part of a scheme which would ultimately include the whole of the United Kingdom. (Applause.) There was accommodation in the building for 96 workers, and it was anticipated that that might be only the starting-point of a much larger scheme. (Applause.) Thanks were due to those energetic and capable workers who were giving their services voluntarily in connection with the management of the workrooms. (Applause.) There had already been a gratifying response to the appeals sent out, but there was need for greatly increased support before the scheme of the Queen's Work for Women Fund could meet adequately the great need which existed. (Applause.)

THE INDUSTRIAL POSITION.

Professor Lodge, hon. secretary of the Scottish Advisory Committee of the National Relief Fund, in moving a vote of thanks to the Marchioness of Linlithgow, said that in the position he occupied it had been his duty to watch carefully for the last three months the industrial condition of Scotland, and the possible rise of any serious distress from the dislocation of industry through the war. He did not think that we in Scotland could be sufficiently grateful for the fact that that distress and that dislocation of industry had so far been of comparatively small proportions, looking at the country as a whole. (Applause.) We owed that primarily and largely to the success of the naval forces of His Majesty—(applause)—in protecting and maintaining our overseas commerce. As long as that defence of our commerce was maintained as efficiently as it had been, he felt strongly, and confidently hoped, that we might meet this great crisis in our history without having added to the horrors of war the horrors of extensive poverty or even famine. He must qualify that hopefulness by saying that there was one part of the population whose sufferings, though not on a very extensive scale, were yet far greater than the general public knew—the sufferings of the women workers of the country, of more than one social class. There had not been in the case of women such a relief of the pressure caused by the war as had been afforded to men by opportunities of enlistment, and by the fact that a larger area of alternative employment was open to men. There had been general pressure from the curtailment of luxuries—inevitably and rightly curtailed—caused by the war, and very considerable distress among women workers, and material aid would be given by such provision as was being made that day. (Applause.) They all knew that it was better that people should have

652a/6

The Scotsman, November 21st. 1914.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEMS IN SCOTLAND.

SIR,—With reference to the contributed article under this heading which appeared in The Scotsman of 12th instant, "Employer" suggests that the publication of the names of the members of committees and sub-committees would interest your readers.

The following are the members of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment:—Lady Susan Gilmour, chairman of the Queen Victoria's Jubilee Institute for Nurses, Inch House, Liberton, Midlothian; Mrs Hannay, of the Glasgow Voluntary Health Visitors; Miss M. H. Irwin, secretary of the Scottish Council of Women's Trades, Glasgow; Miss Clarice M'Nab, a member of Leith Town Council and School Board; Miss Marion Rutherford, Warden of the Queen Margaret Settlement, Glasgow; Mrs Lamont, of the Women's Co-operative Guild, Edinburgh; Mrs D. H. L. Young, Glasgow; Miss Alice Younger, chief woman officer of the Labour Exchange; Mrs J. D. Hope, Fife House, Inveresk; Miss Lois P. Young, secretary of the Scottish National Federation of Women Workers; and Miss Mary M. Paterson, of the National Health Insurance Commission (Scotland), who is acting as interim honorary secretary.

The Edinburgh Sub-Committee is as follows:—Mrs T. J. Millar, 10 India Street (convener); Mrs Maitland, 6 Heriot Row, and Miss Alice Low (National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies), 68 Temple Park Crescent, joint honorary secretaries; Mrs Leslie Mackenzie, 4 Clarendon Crescent; Mrs Pringle, 2 Rothesay Terrace; Mrs M'Lean, 1 Marchmont Street (Co-operative Women's Guild); Miss Agnes Skinner, Labour Exchange, Lauriston Place; Mrs Stewart Gemmell, c/o Mrs Maitland, 6 Heriot Row; Mrs Alexander, 45 Cluny Drive (Edinburgh and East of Scotland Committee for Clothing Men on Active Service); Mrs Wauchope, Niddrie House, Craigmillar (Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association); Mrs Melville, 16 Carlton Street (National Union of Women Workers); Lady Carlaw Martin, 4 Gordon Terrace; Mrs Naismith, 2 Ramsay Garden; Mrs Patrick Geddes, 14 Ramsay Garden; Mrs George Kerr, 1 Orwell Terrace (Charity Organisation Society); Miss Rosalipe Masson, 20 Ann Street (Conservative and Unionist Franchise Association); Mrs Lamont, 1 Orwell Terrace (National Federation of Women Workers); Mrs Cheshire (Printing and Kindred Trades Federation); Miss Isa Davidson (Shop Assistants' Union); Miss Alexia B. Jack (representative of Women's Freedom League); Miss N. Brown (Labour War Emergency Committee); Miss De la Cour (Principal of Edinburgh School of Domestic Economy.)

The members of the Leith Sub-Committee are as follows:—Councillor Clarice M'Nab, 43 Dudley Crescent (convener); Miss Balfour Melville, Pilrig House, Pilrig Street (S.S.F.A.); Mrs James Currie, Larkfield, Wardie; Mrs Malcolm Smith, Clifton Lodge, Boswall Road; Mrs Cameron, 27 Bangor Road; Mrs Wallace, Claremont Cottage, Claremont Road (Women's Labour League); Mrs Adams, 9 Burlington Street; Miss J. Hughes, 4 Admiralty Street; Miss Pressley Smith, 40 Shandwick Place (N.U.W.S.S.); Miss J. Wright, 46 Newhaven Road (secretary Ancient Order of Foresters, Court Helen); Miss Robbie (Labour Exchange.)—I am, &c.

H.

The Scotsman, December 14th. 1914.

DUMBARTONSHIRE AND THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Hartfield, Cove, Dumbartonshire,
December 12, 1914.

SIR,—As one of the Queen's Council, I am commanded by Her Majesty to collect for this Fund in Dumbartonshire, and will be grateful if you will help me by publishing this letter. The Fund is a national one, and it is hoped that sympathisers who live in districts where there is little or no distress through unemployment amongst women will contribute towards the urgent help required in counties more unfortunately placed, and from which automatically a smaller amount in collections can only be expected. The Fund is to be immediately applied to the assistance of schemes promoted by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and approved by the Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress.

Within the burghs in this county the Provosts have made or are making arrangements to receive subscriptions. I shall be glad to receive donations and subscriptions from the county area, or these may be sent to Mr T. S. Harrison, Clydesdale Bank, Helensburgh, who has kindly consented to act as hon. treasurer.

All subscriptions will be forwarded to the Marchioness of Linlithgow, hon. treasurer for Scotland, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, and eventually each subscriber will receive an acknowledgment from Buckingham Palace. The smallest subscriptions and any offers of help will be very gladly received.—I am, &c.

CHARLOTTE INVERCLYDE.

The Scotsman, December 9th 1914.

PROVIDING EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN IN EDINBURGH.

Mrs T. J. Millar presided at a meeting of the Sub-Committee on Women's Employment, which was held in the City Chambers, Edinburgh, last night. The Sub-Committee, which now consists of 32 members, appointed an executive committee as follows:—Mrs Millar (convener), Miss Alice Low (secretary), Mrs Melville, Mrs Pringle, Mrs Leslie Mackenzie, Mrs Alexander, Miss de la Cour, Lady Carlaw Martin, Mrs Cheshire, and Mrs Naismith. Reports were given as to the work being carried on in the different workrooms. Sixty-nine girls were at present employed at 18 Melville Street. Part-time workers were employed at 29 Frederick Street. A number of girls who applied stated that previously they had been earning 17s. a week, and were now reduced to 3s. At a domestic training centre that had been opened at 1 Randolph Crescent, the workers, among other duties, were engaged in cooking dinners for the girls from the other workrooms who preferred to go there. A two-course dinner was provided for 3d. Reports were also submitted of interviews with representatives of the School Board, members of the Distress Committee, and members of the National Advisory Committee and other public bodies. Gratification was expressed at the success that was attending the efforts of the Sub-Committee.

The Scotsman, Dec 11th.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

20 Melville Street, Edinburgh,
December 8, 1914.

SIR,—As the paragraph which appears in your issue of to-day's date, under the heading "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund," is likely to give rise to misunderstanding, I shall be obliged if you will kindly permit me to state that the conditions therein laid down do not apply to the working of the Fund in Scotland.

The Queen's Fund is administered in Scotland through the agency of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, and no such arrangements have been made in connection with the Scottish workrooms as those quoted in the above mentioned paragraph, which may refer to the English workrooms under control of the Central Committee on Women's Employment.—I am, &c.

MARY M. PATERSON,
Interim Hon. Secretary.

The Glasgow News. Dec: 11th. 1914.

The Queen and Women's Unemployment.

Her Majesty the Queen has been pleased to permit the Scottish Committee on Women's Unemployment to enjoy the privilege of using her Royal initials with the Crown, and certain articles made in the workrooms of the Scottish local committee will in future bear the Royal badge. In the Edinburgh workrooms a special feature is made of infants' outfits for distribution through the maternity hospitals and nursing associations, and the pride which many poor mothers will take in the cosy little flannel and woollen garments will doubtless be augmented by the tiny M.R. and the crown stamped upon each. The Queen's Fund is already doing valuable work in Scotland, and is assisting in the development of numerous practical schemes for opening up new industries and giving special training with a view to alleviating industrial distress among women. The Scottish treasurer of the Fund, which is in need of money to carry on its work, is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, and Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, is the hon. secretary.

Dundee Courier. Dec: 24th. 1914.

TRAINING SCHEME FOR WOMEN AND GIRLS.

The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment has been in consultation with the education authorities and with other organisations having a special knowledge of conditions among girls and women, and it is proposed that the School Board and the local committees of the National Relief Fund may usefully co-operate in organising and carrying out some scheme of training in addition to providing work.

There is no payment from the National Relief Fund or the Queen's Work for Women Fund to the School Board. The School Board, on the other hand, under the continuation classes code, provides the educational opportunities without charge. The scheme of training is not to keep girls and women from ordinary employment when the opportunity of returning to it is offered. On the contrary, all such women and girls in receive grants for maintenance are to be registered at the Labour Exchange, and their claim to maintenance would cease if they refused to accept suitable work when offered to them.

The Scotsman, November 20th. 1914. 652a.

EDINBURGH LOCAL SUB-COMMITTEE FOR WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

WORKROOMS, MELVILLE STREET, EDINBURGH.

These workrooms at 18 Melville Street, Edinburgh, which are to be formally opened by the Marchioness of Linlithgow to-day, have been organised by the Edinburgh Sub-Committee for Women's Employment, and represent one of the first establishments of the kind inaugurated in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund and the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund. One of the difficult problems relating to distress due to the war is that of providing employment for skilled women workers. The war has chiefly affected women workers, and the workrooms in Melville Street represent the beginning of a systematic effort to relieve distress amongst this class of the industrial population of the country on a sound economic basis. The cost of establishing the workrooms is relatively small to the relief afforded. The Melville Street premises, which are airy, well-lighted, and in every way suitable for the purpose, have been obtained free of any charge for rent. Skilled voluntary workers are giving their services in connection with the management of the workroom. The grants made from the Queen's Work for Women Fund, on the recommendation of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, are expended in the form of wages. The superiority of this form of relief over money subsistence grants is seen in the fact that the money being productively spent, there is a return not only in the shape of the production of articles of equivalent value, but also in the fact that the workers themselves derive benefit from the training and tuition received during their employment. This form of relief also is to be preferred to ordinary money payments, as it meets the wishes of the great body of women workers, especially in the skilled industries, who in most cases are unwilling to accept money relief without doing work in return.

The effect of the production of workrooms on the labour market has been carefully considered, and effective safeguards have been devised against work being done at 18 Melville Street interfering in any way whatever with outside employment.

The workrooms, although only formally opened this week, have been in operation for some time, and a considerable number of women workers in various occupations have already benefited from them. At present there are two main departments. In the first of these, the large well-lighted room on the first floor, women and girls are engaged in making various kinds of garments. For the most part the materials are supplied by persons who wish to assist in providing clothing for charitable or special purposes, and who are willing to give the material, but who cannot themselves pay for the cost of making it up. In every case where they are able to pay for the material and for the making they are directed to employ workers in the ordinary way outside. The articles produced in the workrooms are of considerable variety. A large number of shirts and other garments, for instance, are in process of being made for use on the hospital train in France. The Government have found some difficulty in securing supplies of cardigan jackets required for the Indian troops, and as these are urgently required and cannot be provided otherwise, a certain amount of the jackets has been allocated to the Edinburgh workrooms. Other articles of clothing of this kind which provides suitable work for dressmakers and others out of employment are being forwarded for use of poor persons in the hospitals. Material for garments of this description in some instances has been offered by manufacturers. In so far as work of this kind is being done at the instance of private persons, the workrooms are serving the purpose of an employment agency, and are bringing the unemployed workers into contact with those who wish to give them employment in the manner indicated. The workroom for the production of new garments is under the superintendence of a skilled forewoman. Sewing machines are used, and these and accessory materials represent the chief item of expenditure, apart from the payments of the workers out of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Another interesting department of the workrooms consists of that in which second-hand garments are reconstructed, and in which mending and work of a similar character is carried on. This workroom to the rear of the building is carried on under the superintendence of a lady who has special experience in this work in connection with the Continuation Scheme of Edinburgh School Board. Amongst other interesting examples of sartorial metamorphosis carried through in the workrooms may be mentioned the re-construction of soldiers' greatcoats to form ladies' useful cloaks, and an elegant cape re-constructed from a child's overcoat. This fashioning of new clothes out of old on scientific lines, as taught in the workrooms, forms a useful and valuable training in domestic economy.

In the basement is the cooking department, which is under the supervision of experts in cooking and domestic economy from the Edinburgh School of Cookery, whose services are given voluntarily. Here wonders are performed in the way of providing nourishing and appetising meals at a small cost. Dinners are provided for the workers at the rate of 3d. a head, and teas for 1d. each. The workers are not required to take these meals unless they please, but many are eager to avail themselves of such good value. It is found possible to meet the cost of the materials out of these sums, and any margin left over one day is used to supplement the fare for the next.

The workrooms in Melville Street afford accommodation for ninety-eight workers, and the accommodation, it is anticipated will, at an early date, be

Marchmont Street (Co-operative Women's Guild); Miss Agnes Skinner, Labour Exchange, Lauriston Place; Mrs Stewart Gemmell, c/o Mrs Maitland, 6 Heriot Row; Mrs Alexander, 45 Cluny Drive (Edinburgh and East of Scotland Committee for Clothing Men on Active Service); Mrs Wauchope, Niddrie House, Craigmillar (Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association); Mrs Melville, 16 Carlton Street (National Union of Women Workers); Lady Carlaw Martin, 4 Gordon Terrace; Mrs Naismith, 2 Ramsay Garden; Mrs Patrick Geddes, 14 Ramsay Garden; Mrs George Kerr, 1 Orwell Terrace (Charity Organisation Society); Miss Rosalipe Masson, 20 Ann Street (Conservative and Unionist Franchise Association); Mrs Lamont, 1 Orwell Terrace (National Federation of Women Workers); Mrs Cheshire (Printing and Kindred Trades Federation); Miss Isa Davidson (Shop Assistants' Union); Miss Alexia B. Jack (representative of Women's Freedom League); Miss N. Brown (Labour War Emergency Committee); Miss De la Cour (Principal of Edinburgh School of Domestic Economy.)

The members of the Leith Sub-Committee are as follows.—Councillor Clarice M'Nab, 43 Dudley Crescent (convener); Miss Balfour Melville, Pilrig House, Pilrig Street (S.S.F.A.); Mrs James Currie, Larkfield, Wardie; Mrs Malcolm Smith, Clifton Lodge, Boswall Road; Mrs Cameron, 27 Bangor Road; Mrs Wallace, Claremont Cottage, Claremont Road (Women's Labour League); Mrs Adams, 9 Burlington Street; Miss J. Hughes, 4 Admiralty Street; Miss Pressley Smith, 40 Shandwick Place (N.U.W.S.S.); Miss J. Wright, 46 Newhaven Road (secretary Ancient Order of Foresters, Court Helen); Miss Robbie (Labour Exchange.)—I am, &c.

H.

The Scotsman,
December 14th 1914.

DUMBARTONSHIRE AND THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Hartfield, Cove, Dumbartonshire,
December 12, 1914.

SIR,—As one of the Queen's Council, I am commanded by Her Majesty to collect for this Fund in Dumbartonshire, and will be grateful if you will help me by publishing this letter. The Fund is a national one, and it is hoped that sympathisers who live in districts where there is little or no distress through unemployment amongst women will contribute towards the urgent help required in counties more unfortunately placed, and from which automatically a smaller amount in collections can only be expected. The Fund is to be immediately applied to the assistance of schemes promoted by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and approved by the Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress.

Within the burghs in this county the Provosts have made or are making arrangements to receive subscriptions. I shall be glad to receive donations and subscriptions from the county area, or these may be sent to Mr T. S. Harrison, Clydesdale Bank, Helensburgh, who has kindly consented to act as hon. treasurer.

All subscriptions will be forwarded to the Marchioness of Linlithgow, hon. treasurer for Scotland, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, and eventually each subscriber will receive an acknowledgment from Buckingham Palace. The smallest subscriptions and any offers of help will be very gladly received.—I am, &c.

CHARLOTTE INVERCLYDE.

The Scotsman, Dec 11th.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

20 Melville Street, Edinburgh,
December 8, 1914.

SIR,—As the paragraph which appears in your issue of to-day's date, under the heading "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund," is likely to give rise to misunderstanding, I shall be obliged if you will kindly permit me to state that the conditions therein laid down do not apply to the working of the Fund in Scotland.

The Queen's Fund is administered in Scotland through the agency of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, and no such arrangements have been made in connection with the Scottish workrooms as those quoted in the above mentioned paragraph, which may refer to the English workrooms under control of the Central Committee on Women's Employment.—I am, &c.

MARY M. PATERSON,
Interim Hon. Secretary.

The Glasgow News.
Dec: 11th. 1914.

The Queen and Women's Unemployment.

Her Majesty the Queen has been pleased to permit the Scottish Committee on Women's Unemployment to enjoy the privilege of using her Royal initials with the Crown, and certain articles made in the workrooms of the Scottish local committee will in future bear the Royal badge. In the Edinburgh workrooms a special feature is made of infants' outfits for distribution through the maternity hospitals and nursing associations, and the pride which many poor mothers will take in the cosy little flannel and woollen garments will doubtless be augmented by the tiny M.R. and the crown stamped upon each. The Queen's Fund is already doing valuable work in Scotland, and is assisting in the development of numerous practical schemes for opening up new industries and giving special training with a view to alleviating industrial distress among women. The Scottish treasurer of the Fund, which is in need of money to carry on its work, is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, and Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, is the hon. secretary.

Dundee Courier,
Dec: 24th. 1914.

TRAINING SCHEME FOR WOMEN AND GIRLS.

The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment has been in consultation with the education authorities and with other organisations having a special knowledge of conditions among girls and women, and it is proposed that the School Board and the local committees of the National Relief Fund may usefully co-operate in organising and carrying out some scheme of training in addition to providing work.

There is no payment from the National Relief Fund or the Queen's Work for Women Fund to the School Board. The School Board, on the other hand, under the continuation classes code, provides the educational opportunities without charge. The scheme of training is not to keep girls and women from ordinary employment when the opportunity of returning to it is offered. On the contrary, all such women and girls as receive grants for maintenance are to be registered at the Labour Exchange, and their claim to maintenance would cease if they refused to accept suitable work when offered to them.

The superiority of this form of relief over money subsistence grants is seen in the fact that the money being productively spent, there is a return not only in the shape of the production of articles of equivalent value, but also in the fact that the workers themselves derive benefit from the training and tuition received during their employment. This form of relief also is to be preferred to ordinary money payments, as it meets the wishes of the great body of women workers, especially in the skilled industries, who in most cases are unwilling to accept money relief without doing work in return.

The effect of the production of workrooms on the labour market has been carefully considered, and effective safeguards have been devised against work being done at 18 Melville Street interfering in any way whatever with outside employment.

The workrooms, although only formally opened this week, have been in operation for some time, and a considerable number of women workers in various occupations have already benefited from them. At present there are two main departments. In the first of these, the large well-lighted room on the first floor, women and girls are engaged in making various kinds of garments. For the most part the materials are supplied by persons who wish to assist in providing clothing for charitable or special purposes, and who are willing to give the material, but who cannot themselves pay for the cost of making it up. In every case where they are able to pay for the material and for the making they are directed to employ workers in the ordinary way outside. The articles produced in the workrooms are of considerable variety. A large number of shirts and other garments, for instance, are in process of being made for use on the hospital train in France. The Government have found some difficulty in securing supplies of cardigan jackets required for the Indian troops, and as these are urgently required and cannot be provided otherwise, a certain amount of the jackets has been allocated to the Edinburgh workrooms. Other articles of clothing of this kind which provides suitable work for dressmakers and others out of employment are being forwarded for use of poor persons in the hospitals. Material for garments of this description in some instances has been offered by manufacturers. In so far as work of this kind is being done at the instance of private persons, the workrooms are serving the purpose of an employment agency, and are bringing the unemployed workers into contact with those who wish to give them employment in the manner indicated. The workroom for the production of new garments is under the superintendence of a skilled forewoman. Sewing machines are used, and these and accessory materials represent the chief item of expenditure, apart from the payments of the workers out of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Another interesting department of the workrooms consists of that in which second-hand garments are reconstructed, and in which mending and work of a similar character is carried on. This workroom to the rear of the building is carried on under the superintendence of a lady who has special experience in this work in connection with the Continuation Scheme of Edinburgh School Board. Amongst other interesting examples of sartorial metamorphosis carried through in the workrooms may be mentioned the re-construction of soldiers' greatcoats to form ladies' useful cloaks, and an elegant cape re-constructed from a child's overcoat. This fashioning of new clothes out of old on scientific lines, as taught in the workrooms, forms a useful and valuable training in domestic economy.

In the basement is the cooking department, which is under the supervision of experts in cooking and domestic economy from the Edinburgh School of Cookery, whose services are given voluntarily. Here wonders are performed in the way of providing nourishing and appetising meals at a small cost. Dinners are provided for the workers at the rate of 3d. a head, and teas for 1d. each. The workers are not required to take these meals unless they please, but many are eager to avail themselves of such good value. It is found possible to meet the cost of the materials out of these sums, and any margin left over one day is used to supplement the fare for the next.

The workrooms in Melville Street afford accommodation for ninety-eight workers, and the accommodation, it is anticipated, will, at an early date, be insufficient. The workrooms, however, form probably only the starting point of a large scheme which should prove of valuable aid in mitigating distress which may increase on account of the war. [illegible] meeting the cost of these and other schemes Queen's Work for Women Fund has been [illegible]ed, and the Treasurer for Scotland is the [illegible]oness of Linlithgow. There has been already [illegible] satisfying respons[illegible] to invitations fo[illegible]pport; but there is need fo[illegible] increas[illegible]efore the schemes unde[illegible] be sufficiently extensi[illegible] them.

652a.

652a/7

The Glasgow Herald, December 23rd. 1914.

SCOTTISH COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

The question of unemployment among women is one of the most urgent of the economic difficulties caused by the war. Efforts are being made to meet this problem by providing work for women, and Her Majesty the Queen has initiated a special fund for this purpose. But among the younger women and girls it is felt that something more should be done than merely giving them work to do, and that some attempt should be made to increase their economic and their civic value by supplying in addition a certain amount of training. On this question the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment has been in consultation with education authorities and with other organisations having a special knowledge of conditions among girls, and it is proposed that the school board and the local committees of the National Relief Fund may usefully co-operate in organising and carrying out such schemes of training. In order to avoid any misapprehensions two things must be noted:—(1) There is no payment from the National Relief Fund or the Queen's Work for Women Fund to the school board. All that comes from these funds is a grant for the maintenance of the women and girls who are unemployed through the war and who earn the grant by following an approved course of training. The school board, on the other hand, under the continuation classes code provides the educational opportunities without charge. (2) The scheme of training is not to keep girls and women from ordinary employment when the opportunity of returning to it is offered. On the contrary, all such women and girls as receive grants for maintenance are to be registered at the Labour Exchange, and their claims to maintenance would cease if they refused to accept suitable work when offered to them. The schemes which are at present under consideration include both trade instruction and practical domestic training similar to that already given in the "mothers' classes for thrift" already well known in Edinburgh and other districts.

The Scotsman, December 23rd 1914.

WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT IN EDINBURGH.

A meeting of the Sub-Committee on Women's Employment for Edinburgh was held yesterday in the City Chambers—Mrs T. J. Miller, the Convener, presiding. There are now 32 women on the Sub-Committee, representative of women's interests throughout Edinburgh.

A long discussion took place with regard to certain garments which had been made in the workrooms. The Convener stated that a number of cardigans for the Indian troops had been made in the workrooms. At the time the order was placed it was impossible to obtain any quantity of these garments in this country, a number having to be obtained in America. Those made in the workrooms, it was pointed out, would either have been made by voluntary workers or not made at all, and the Indian troops might thereby have been the sufferers. The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment were very anxious that there should be no interference with legitimate trade, and it was stated by the Convener that great care was being taken to prevent interference in any way.

A letter was read from the Women's Freedom League suggesting that a Women's Day should be held in Edinburgh, and asking that the Committee should send a representative to make arrangements for holding such a day. It was decided to take no action, as the individual members would no doubt be present to represent their different societies.

Excellent reports were submitted dealing with the work at the Melville Street, Frederick Street, and Randolph Crescent workrooms, and it was pointed out that it was important that other workrooms should be opened as soon as possible.

A letter was read by the secretary stating that the Hope Park Square grant had been received. Mrs Maclean, of the Co-operative Guild, made a protest against the delay which had arisen between the time the application was made and the receipt of the grant. She said it would now be difficult to open the workroom till after the New Year, and there was a long waiting list of girls.

It was mentioned that the workers would get holidays from Thursday to Monday in both Christmas and New Year weeks, and they would be paid the same as usual.

Entertainments are being organised on Saturday, 26th December, for the girls employed in the workrooms, and on Saturday, 2nd January, for the women who are receiving home work from the home work department at the City Chambers.

It was reported that the whole work was being carried on in a satisfactory manner, and further workrooms would be opened as the need for them arose, if grants could be obtained from those in authority.

652a/8

652a

The Queen,
January 2nd. 1915.

Glasgow Workrooms for Women.

Workrooms for unemployed women are being opened in Glasgow under the direction of the sub-committee on Employment of the Citizen's Relief Committee for Glasgow, and approved by the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment. At the workroom in South Woodside-road, twenty-five girls are employed, all those taken on being women or girls directly affected by the war. Even learners are able to earn a weekly wage of 10s., but in order to make the benefits go round and to give workers a chance of getting back into regular employment as soon as possible, it is usually thought best not to keep any but learners longer than four or five weeks, and the employees are all required to register at the Board of Trade office every week, so that situations may be secured. Most of the work done in these emergency workrooms is mending, altering, and remaking old garments, and making up Red Cross work, as it is not allowed that relief work should in any way compete with regular trades. The Women's Emergency Corps are opening workrooms in Cowcaddens, and early in January large premises granted by the Corporation of Glasgow will be opened at the "Spout Mouth." In these workrooms as many as 150 workers will be employed. Should distress break out in any other districts of the city, arrangements can be made almost immediately whereby employment can be supplied. So anxious, indeed, are the authorities to relieve distress caused among working women by the war, and also to give these women a trade which will stand them in good stead when the present crisis is over, that any branch of trade (however small) which needs learners, may be undertaken by the sub-committee on employment.

The Scotsman,
Jan: 9th. 1915.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS.

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN IN EDINBURGH.

At a meeting of the Edinburgh Committee under the National Relief Fund it was reported that the offer of domestic training for women and girls had not, up to the present time, been taken advantage of, and a further opportunity was to be offered to the ward sub-committees to recommend suitable cases. The workrooms, however, were proceeding satisfactorily, and authority was given to the Sub-Committee on Women's Employment to dispose of the articles which had been made to various charitable and other organisations. It was reported that there were 74 women and girls employed at Melville Street. The Hope Park Halls workroom had now been opened, and that would relieve the pressure elsewhere. For the purpose of this workroom a grant of £180 had been received. The scheme at this centre would provide for the employment of 60 women and girls. There were 27 employed at that date, but it was anticipated that within a short time the full number would be engaged.

THE EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN IN DUNDEE.

The question of providing work for women in Dundee thrown out of employment on account of the war was discussed by two local Committees yesterday.

A sub-committee of the Dundee Women's Employment Committee of the Prince of Wales's Central Executive considered the question of opening workrooms to relieve distress in the city. It was felt that there was not sufficient evidence of unemployment to justify them taking action in the opening of workrooms. The Committee agreed to recommend the Central Executive to apply for a grant from the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment to develop the existing toy industry which was recently established by the Dundee Women's War Relief Fund.

The Dundee Advisory Board of the Scottish Council for Women's Trades passed a resolution deciding to co-operate with others, or, if need be, to originate and organise such temporary work for women and girls as might be considered necessary. The question was put as to whether there were sufficient numbers to justify the Board taking action, and the Rev. A. C. Mackenzie said that from his own personal knowledge he could contribute as many cases of under-employment and unemployment as they began with in Edinburgh. A sub-committee were appointed to consider and report upon the best methods of carrying the object into practical effect with the least delay.

The Glasgow Herald,
Jan: 9th. 1915.

DUNDEE WOMEN AND THE WAR.

Representatives of the Dundee Women's Employment Committee and the Advisory Board of the Scottish Council for Women's Trades met yesterday afternoon to discuss ways and means of finding work for women thrown out of employment by the war. The Women's Employment Committee felt that there was not sufficient evidence of unemployment to justify them opening workrooms to relieve distress, but they recommended that application should be made to the Prince of Wales's Fund Executive for a grant from the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment to develop the toy-making industry, which has been started in the city. The Advisory Board of the Scottish Council for Women's Trades passed a resolution that in view of the dislocation in certain departments of business due to the war with the consequent total unemployment or under-employment for women and girls, they resolved to co-operate with others or if need be originate and organise such temporary work for women and girls as might be considered necessary. It was pointed out that three centres had been opened in Glasgow and that the Local Government Board had recognised the work done there by giving grants.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund amounted yesterday to £123,538.

The Edinburgh Fund amounts to £106,628. The Paisley Fund has reached £22,030, and the Dalbeattie Fund £203.

The Scotsman,
Jan 14th 1915.

CLOTHING FOR EDINBURGH RELIEF FUND RECIPIENTS.

It has been decided to put certain goods made at the workrooms carried on by the Sub-Committee on Women's Employment in Edinburgh, under the National Relief Fund, at the disposal of the Ward Sub-Committees, for the purpose of relieving distress amongst those eligible for other forms of relief from the Fund, and applications are invited from the ward secretaries with a view to the allocation of goods and the nature of the garments desired. In the case of goods for which application is not made by the Ward Committees within a reasonable period, the Edinburgh Committee will hold itself at liberty to dispose of them otherwise. The garments, which will be of distinct service in the poorer areas at this time, include all forms of clothing for boys and girls as well as many garments for adults.

The Scotsman,
January 6th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

THE Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £122,009.

A memorable week has just closed in the experimental workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Anxious that the women who have suffered so much through unemployment should have something to mark the gift season, the Committee sent a large bundle of oddments and sample pieces to each workroom, with the invitation to the women to make what they liked for themselves. A whole week was given up to present-making. The Committee had a second object, which has been as successful as the first. It desired to encourage initiative in these women, who have until now had little chance of being anything but machines. The results have been as good as an examination in the lessons given in the workrooms.

Glasgow Herald,
Jan: 10th. 1915.

EMPLOYMENT.

20 Melville Street, Edinburgh,
January 14.

Sir,—In the midst of so many demands upon a generous public one almost hesitates to issue yet another appeal, and especially an appeal for cast-off clothing, as it would seem that the urgent needs in this line of the nation's Belgian guests must have wellnigh exhausted the supply. Should there, however, be some amongst your readers who have not entirely come to an end of the resources of their wardrobe, I should like to call their attention to the needs of the workrooms which are being carried on in different parts of Scotland under the Queen's Work for Women Fund. These workrooms are providing employment for hundreds of women who have been thrown out of work owing to the war, and who are now engaged in making, amongst other things, clothing for the destitute poor and infants' outfits for distribution through the maternity hospitals and nursing associations. The cost of sufficient new material to keep so many workers constantly employed is a heavy drain upon the fund, and the various local committees managing the workrooms are most grateful for donations of cast-off garments in fairly good condition, which can be altered, repaired, and made down. The infants' outfits must necessarily be made of new material, but the workers are becoming expert in the fashioning of children's clothing out of old garments "of a larger growth," and very attractive little frocks, suits, and under-garments are made from what may seem at first sight to be rather unpromising material. The chief aim of the workrooms is not so much the production of large quantities of work in a given time as the encouragement of neat workmanship, and the giving of a thorough training in cutting out, making, and mending, which will not only serve to tide the workers over a season of unemployment, but will be of lasting benefit to them in after life. No one need therefore hesitate to present to the workrooms garments which may seem to require a good deal of time and work in order to render them fit for use. If any of your readers have clothing to dispose of it would be extremely kind if they would communicate with the Hon. Secretary, Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, stating what articles they would propose to send. The committee would then give information as to where such a gift might be most acceptable at the time, and the cost of carriage would be met. The garments would in this way be serving a double purpose, in clothing the destitute and in furnishing work for the unemployed.—I am, etc.,

MARY M. PATERSON,
Interim Hon. Secretary.

Edinburgh Evg Dispatch
2-2-15,

Flower Making for Women.

TO THE EDITOR.

Surely it is a great pity that the Edinburgh Sub-Committee of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should have felt themselves obliged to abandon the scheme for making artificial flowers. It is said to be an industry recommended by the Board of Trade as profitable. That the preliminary cost is considerable and that some time must necessarily elapse before it pays is no doubt the case, but is this sufficient reason for dropping the scheme? No doubt, work of this kind, which requires technical skill, cautious handling, and artistic instinct, cannot be used for purposes of immediate relief for the average unskilled worker. But many of us forget that the war has brought hard times to numerous skilled and artistic workers of what is called the middle class. They are more difficult to provide with work, and such work must necessarily be of a kind which takes time and money to set going. Yet there is no reason why it should not be done, so long as it does not interfere with existing trades.

A good deal is being done to meet the needs of the unemployed factory hand and the less skilled trade operative, but very little is being done to help the artists, designers, and highly skilled women workers.

Here is a case in which the Women's Emergency Corps might perhaps be of use. The whole question is worthy of their consideration. If the Executive Committee of the Corps were to decide to try to start flower making it would, of course, mean that a special appeal would have to be made to raise the necessary funds, as it has hitherto been impossible to obtain any help for the Corps from the national relief funds.

MARY H. EELES,
Hon. Secretary, Women's Emergency Corps,
29 Drumsheugh Gardens.

Evening Standard. 2.2.15.

VARIETY OF SCHEMES FOR RELIEF OF WOMEN'S UNEMPLOYMENT.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment, as a centre for finding work for unemployed women, now looks out to a vast network of local schemes spreading all over the country.

One by one the provinces have adopted the central committee's plans of giving work, and have linked up with the centre. Thirty-two boroughs in London and Greater London have now opened workrooms approved by the committee, and thirty-four provincial towns.

The result to the women of the country should be threefold: present distress is checked, the level of women's work is being raised by trade and commercial teaching, and the future of England's homes assured, by training in domestic economy.

The schemes of work have, of course, been adapted to meet the local needs, for the usual occupations of the women out of employment are widely different.

What the Provinces are Doing.

Nottingham is training women in machining, for when they are competent work can be found for them; Gloucester is teaching the mending and re-making of cloth, and proposing to train older women as sick-room helps to meet a local need.

Women who cannot sew, and are too old to learn, such as the unemployed charwomen of Manchester, are making rag rugs. When they are younger, as in the case of the winder pattern girls of Nottingham, they are being taught to sew.

A variety of work is done in the workrooms, very often with a view to the needs of the poor of the district, to which it will ultimately be sent. Bacup makes bed-quilts and dresses dolls; Burnley workers spend part of the time mending their own garments, and paper quilts and pillows are occupations at Stourport.

Baby Management and Hygiene.

Most popular of all the central committee's schemes has been the domestic economy training. Swansea has a training centre for the teaching of housewifery, laundry, cookery, hygiene and baby-management. It is proposed also to teach further subjects approved by the Board of Education.

Gloucester is proposing to train young women specially for domestic work, and the Gloucester School of Domestic Science has offered to take the girls at £1 per term, including dinner, and two students without charge.

Cardiff women are being taught general cleaning and the renovation of old furniture by cleaning and painting, as well as cooking and laundry work. Lectures which may be useful to them in the home are also given, including first aid and home nursing. Tynemouth is hoping to have a domestic training centre also.

In addition, several homes, including those

Scotsman.
6. 2. 15.

6529

6529/9

COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

20 Ann Street, Edinburgh, February 3, 1915.

SIR, — The members of the Sub-Committee on Women's Employment (Prince of Wales's Fund) will feel grateful to Mrs Eeles for calling the attention of the public, in her admirable letters in The Scotsman and in the Evening Dispatch, to the abandonment of the scheme for making high-class artificial flowers. May I, as a member of that Sub-Committee, and with the consent of our convener, be allowed to explain that why we felt obliged to abandon it in the meantime was not because we consider the scheme unworkable or inadvisable, but because our Committee has to submit all schemes to the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment before we can obtain any money from the Prince of Wales's Fund to carry out the schemes, and that, in the case of this scheme, the attitude of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment was so unsympathetic and unhelpful that we realised that in spite of all our work and efforts the scheme would be doomed to fail. We abandoned this scheme in the meantime "regretfully," and with protest.

As a matter of fact, our Committee has had this particular scheme very much at heart a scheme for making what is known as "evening dress flowers." There is no trade of the kind in Scotland, and only two small firms in London which carry it on. It is the one scheme we have as yet put forward that is not merely the eternal sewing which seems to be the only work for women that is encouraged. It offers training for both hand and eye. It is, as Mrs Eeles points out, a training that might help the more skilled women workers, who form a class greatly in need of help, and likely to be even in greater need as the war goes on, and for long after it is over.

Our Committee, over three months ago, took steps to ascertain the financial possibilities of the business. Our hon. secretary went to London in October, made full investigations, and took expert advice, and submitted a report for our consideration. The fact that a leading London house has since bought up one of the two existing London firms as a going concern, taking over forewomen, workers, and plant, shows that the work can be made to pay; and in the hands of a Committee such as ours, comprising all the elements necessary for the able handling of such an enterprise in Edinburgh, the scheme might have resulted in the formation of a new trade for women in this city.

All this work was done by our Committee over three months ago; but in the meantime, we have, through delay that is not ours, lost many of the advantages that we could have obtained. After this long delay, we were informed that no money could be granted from the Prince of Wales's Fund for "plant," nor for the payment of the teacher, that all that could be given was weekly wages on the war-relief scale of 10s. per week; and even that not unless we could guarantee capital to provide plant and launch the business.

By the memorandum of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, training for, and the promoting of new trades for, women form part of the work the Committee undertake. But both these have been hitherto ignored by the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment. Our Local Committee has never received any suggestions from this Committee of any possible new trades or industries or of training which would improve a woman's value in the labour market; and our own suggestions, as in the case of this flower making project, have been met in a spirit entirely unhelpful and disheartening. Our initiative has been hampered by stereotyped formulæ.

If, in larger matters, the Government had acted in the same spirit, without the realisation that the extraordinary conditions have to be met by extraordinary measures, I venture to say the country would now be at the same stand-still as that in which our Committee is at the present moment.

The waste of our Committee's time and influence would not matter; but, at the back of it all stands the crowd of women bread-winners who are suffering from the war, for whom, among others, the Prince of Wales's Fund was subscribed, and for whose welfare, therefore, the various Committees that deal with that Fund are morally responsible.

After all, those who gave, and are still giving, so generously to the Prince of Wales's Fund for national relief did not ear-mark their subscriptions for the benefit of Trades Unions.—I am, &c.

ROSALIND MASSON.

to raise the necessary funds, as it has hitherto been impossible to obtain any help for the Corps from the national relief funds.

MARY H. ELES,
Hon. Secretary, Women's Emergency Corps,
29 Drumsheugh Gardens.

Evening Standard. 2.2.15.

VARIETY OF SCHEMES FOR RELIEF OF WOMEN'S UNEMPLOYMENT.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment, as a centre for finding work for unemployed women, now looks out to a vast network of local schemes spreading all over the country.

One by one the provinces have adopted the central committee's plans of giving work, and have linked up with the centre. Thirty-two boroughs in London and Greater London have now opened workrooms approved by the committee, and thirty-four provincial towns.

The result to the women of the country should be threefold: present distress is checked, the level of women's work is being raised by trade and commercial teaching, and the future of England's homes assured, by training in domestic economy.

The schemes of work have, of course, been adapted to meet the local needs, for the usual occupations of the women out of employment are widely different.

What the Provinces are Doing.

Nottingham is training women in machining, for when they are competent work can be found for them; Gloucester is teaching the mending and re-making of cloth, and proposing to train older women as sick-room helps to meet a local need.

Women who cannot sew, and are too old to learn, such as the unemployed charwomen of Manchester, are making rag rugs. When they are younger, as in the case of the winder pattern girls of Nottingham, they are being taught to sew.

A variety of work is done in the workrooms, very often with a view to the needs of the poor of the district, to which it will ultimately be sent. Bacup makes bed-quilts and dresses dolls; Burnley workers spend part of the time mending their own garments, and paper quilts and pillows are occupations at Stourport.

Baby Management and Hygiene.

Most popular of all the central committee's schemes has been the domestic economy training. Swansea has a training centre for the teaching of housewifery, laundry, cookery, hygiene and baby-management. It is proposed also to teach further subjects approved by the Board of Education.

Gloucester is proposing to train young women specially for domestic work, and the Gloucester School of Domestic Science has offered to take the girls at £1 per term, including dinner, and two students without charge.

Cardiff women are being taught general cleaning and the renovation of old furniture by cleaning and painting, as well as cooking and laundry work. Lectures which may be useful to them in the home are also given, including first aid and home nursing. Tynemouth is hoping to have a domestic training centre also.

In addition, several towns, including Swansea and Gloucester, have taken up the committee's plan of training older women to be sick-room helps. Burnley, Lewisham, and Deptford are giving their unemployed juveniles a course of hygiene, home nursing, cooking, dressmaking, English and physical drill, and there seems to be room for more schemes of this nature to help the young wage-earners thrown out of work through the war.

Lectures on Poultice-Making.

A marked feature of all the training schemes is the co-operation on the advice of the Central Committee with local education authorities. The classes, in most cases, are being given free to the women in the relief workrooms. Even when there is not a complete training scheme, a course of lectures is often given to the women by educational authorities. At Birmingham, for instance, lectures are in progress on such subjects as linseed meal poulticing, with practical illustrations, invalid cookery, the feeding of infants, and food values.

One workroom for unemployed women is by no means the extent of local activity. In Burnley, where the unemployment is high, there are no less than four schemes of work.

---

eye. It is, as Mrs Eeles points out, a training that might help the more skilled women workers, who form a class greatly in need of help, and likely to be even in greater need as the war goes on, and for long after it is over.

Our Committee, over three months ago, took steps to ascertain the financial possibilities of the business. Our hon. secretary went to London in October, made full investigations, and took expert advice, and submitted a report for our consideration. The fact that a leading London house has since bought up one of the two existing London firms as a going concern, taking over forewomen, workers, and plant, shows that the work can be made to pay; and in the hands of a Committee such as ours, comprising all the elements necessary for the able handling of such an enterprise in Edinburgh, the scheme might have resulted in the formation of a new trade for women in this city.

All this work was done by our Committee over three months ago; but in the meantime, we have, through delay that is not ours, lost many of the advantages that we could have obtained. After this long delay, we were informed that no money could be granted from the Prince of Wales's Fund for "plant," nor for the payment of the teacher, that all that could be given was weekly wages on the war-relief scale of 10s. per week; and even that not unless we could guarantee capital to provide plant and launch the business.

By the memorandum of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, training for, and the promoting of new trades for, women form part of the work the Committee undertake. But both these have been hitherto ignored by the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment. Our Local Committee has never received any suggestions from this Committee of any possible new trades or industries or of training which would improve a woman's value in the labour market; and our own suggestions, as in the case of this flower making project, have been met in a spirit entirely unhelpful and disheartening. Our initiative has been hampered by stereotyped formulæ.

If, in larger matters, the Government had acted in the same spirit, without the realisation that the extraordinary conditions have to be met by extraordinary measures, I venture to say the country would now be at the same stand-still as that in which our Committee is at the present moment.

The waste of our Committee's time and influence would not matter; but, at the back of it all stands the crowd of women bread-winners who are suffering from the war, for whom, among others, the Prince of Wales's Fund was subscribed, and for whose welfare, therefore, the various Committees that deal with that Fund are morally responsible.

After all, those who gave, and are still giving, so generously to the Prince of Wales's Fund for national relief did not ear-mark their subscriptions for the benefit of Trades Unions.—I am, &c.

ROSALINE MASSON.

The Scotsman,
Jan: 14th. 1915.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

ARRANGEMENTS IN FIFE.

The Countess of Elgin presided at a meeting at Dunfermline in connection with the effort which is being made by her Ladyship to raise money for the Queen's Work for Women Fund in the county of Fife. The meeting was attended by representative ladies from all parts of the district. In a memorandum accompanying her letter calling the meeting, the Countess of Elgin explained that the primary function of the Central Committee of the Fund was to think out and to put into operation schemes that would avoid any interference with ordinary trade, while providing work for women and girls whom the war had thrown out of employment.

After some discussion, Committees were appointed and arrangements made for taking collections at all religious services on the first Sunday in February; for a flag-day on the last Saturday in January; for a collection of subscriptions from shops, works, and warehouses; for a sale of picture post-cards by children attending Sunday schools; and for the holding of entertainments in connection with the last-mentioned, of which two halls have been placed free of charge at the disposal of the Committee.

Dundee Advertiser,
Jan: 16th 1915.

SCOTTISH COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

Under the Queen's Work for Women Fund employment has been found for hundreds of women who have been thrown out of work owing to the war, and who are now engaged in making, amongst other things, clothing for the destitute poor, and infants' outfits for distribution through the Maternity Hospitals and Nursing Associations. The cost of sufficient new material to keep so many workers constantly employed is a heavy drain upon the fund, and the various local Committees managing the workrooms are most grateful for donations of cast-off garments in fairly good condition, which can be altered, repaired, and made down.

Glasgow Evg News,
Jan: 29th. 1915.

SCOTTISH COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

A LABOUR EXCHANGE OFFICE IN TOLLCROSS.

20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, Jan. 28.

Sir,—As the Royal Commission on Housing in Scotland is resuming its sittings, the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, which has been permitted to make use of a part of the Housing Committee's premises at 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, will remove on Monday, 1st February, and will be temporarily located in the Labour Exchange Offices, 174 Lauriston Place, Tollcross.

Communications should therefore be addressed, on and after 1st February, to the Hon. Secretary, Scottish Committee on Women's Emloyment, Labour Exchange, 174 Lauriston Place, Tollcross.—I am, etc.,

LOIS C. P. YOUNG, Hon. Secretary.

The Scotsman,
Jan: 16th 1915.

SCOTTISH COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

20 Melville Street,
Edinburgh, January 14. 1915.

SIR,—In the midst of so many demands upon a generous public, one almost hesitates to issue yet another appeal, and especially an appeal for cast-off clothing, as it would seem that the urgent needs in this line of the nation's Belgian guests must have well-nigh exhausted the supply.

Should there, however, be some amongst your readers who have not entirely come to an end of the resources of their wardrobes, I should like to call their attention to the needs of the workrooms which are being carried on in different parts of Scotland, under the Queen's Work for Women Fund. These workrooms are providing employment for hundreds of women who have been thrown out of work owing to the war, and who are now engaged in making, amongst other things, clothing for the destitute poor and infants' outfits for distribution through the maternity hospitals and nursing associations. The cost of sufficient new material to keep so many workers constantly employed is a heavy drain upon the fund, and the various local committees managing the workrooms are most grateful for donations of cast-off garments in fairly good condition, which can be altered, repaired, and made down. The infants' outfits must necessarily be made of new material, but the workers are becoming experts in the fashioning of children's clothing out of old garments "of a larger growth," and very attractive little frocks, suits, and under-garments are made from what may seem at first sight to be rather unpromising material. The chief aim of the workrooms is not so much the production of large quantities of work in a given time as the encouragement of neat workmanship, and the giving of a thorough training in cutting out, making, and mending, which will not only serve to tide the workers over a season of unemployment, but will be of lasting benefit to them in after-life.

No one need, therefore, hesitate to present to the workrooms garments which may seem to require a good deal of time and work in order to render them fit for use.

If any of your readers have clothing to dispose of, it would be extremely kind if they would communicate with the hon. secretary, Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, stating what articles they would propose to send. The Committee would then give information as to where such a gift might be most acceptable at the time, and the cost of carriage would be met. The garments would in this way be serving a double purpose—in clothing the destitute and in furnishing work for the unemployed.—I am, &c.

MARY M. PATERSON, Interim Hon. Secretary.

The Scotsman,
Jan. 30th 1915.

WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT IN EDINBURGH.

January 28, 1915.

SIR,—Surely it is a great pity that the Edinburgh Sub-Committee on Women's Employment should have felt themselves obliged to abandon the scheme for making high-class artificial flowers. It is said to be an industry recommended by the Board of Trade as profitable. That the preliminary cost is considerable, and that some time must elapse before it pays, is no doubt the case; but is this sufficient reason for dropping the scheme? Undoubtedly work of this kind, requiring technical skill and artistic instinct, cannot be used for purposes of immediate relief for the average unskilled worker. But many of us forget that the war has brought hard times to numerous skilled workers of the middle class. They are more difficult to provide with work, and such work must necessarily be of a kind which takes time and money to set going. Yet there is no reason why it should not be done, so long as it does not interfere with existing trades. A good deal is being done to meet the needs of the unemployed factory hand and less skilled operative, but little is being done to help the artists, designers, and highly-skilled women workers. Here is a case in which the Women's Emergency Corps might perhaps be of use. The whole question is worthy of their consideration. If the Executive Committee of the Corps decided to start flower-making, it would, of course, mean that a special appeal would have to be made to raise the necessary funds, as it has hitherto been impossible to obtain any help for the Corps from the National Relief or the Women's Work for Women Funds.—I am, &c.

MARY H. EDIE, Hon. Secretary,
Women's Emergency Corps,
29 Drumsheugh Gardens.

Glasgow Herald 652a.
Jan: 27th 1915.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Scottish subscriptions to the Queen's Work for Women Fund to date amount to £2926 7s 7d. Last week's receipts included £61 12s 11d as a further contribution from Dumbartonshire, per Mr T. S. Harrison, Clydesdale Bank, Helensburgh; £27 12s from Cupar and district, per Mrs Gilroy, Clatto, Cupar-Fife; £10 9s 6d from Perthshire, per the Hon. Mrs Stirling of Keir; and £5 8s from Wigtownshire, per Lady Borthwick. The Scottish treasurer for the Queen's Fund, to whom subscriptions should be sent, is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry. Communications regarding the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the honorary secretary, Miss Lois Young, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh. The Queen's Work for Women Fund amounted yesterday to £127,919.

SCOTTISH COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

Amongst the numerous activities set on foot by the Central Committee on Women's Employment dealing with the unemployment of women in England with a view to lessening the distress resulting amongst women workers from the war is the placing of contracts, and the committee has already done much useful work in giving advice as to the distribution of these in the most needy districts, where the employment so given is of the greatest value. In London a large number of workshops engaged in the manufacture of blouses, dresses, and men's clothing closed down soon after the declaration of war, causing acute distress amongst many hundreds of women workers, but through the efforts of the Central Committee contracts for shirts were obtained and the workshops reopened, the proprietors undertaking the work mainly in order to keep their staffs together. The Scottish Committee on Women's Employment is now developing work along similar lines in Scotland, and hopes to be able to arrange for the placing of contracts amongst dressmakers and other firms throughout the country who may be finding difficulty in providing employment for their workers and who may be willing to undertake work of this kind in preference to reducing their hours of work or closing down altogether. It is felt that in this way valuable assistance may be rendered in quarters where the problem of unemployment is hourly becoming one of increasing difficulty. Communications and inquiries regarding this work should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

652a/10

The Glasgow Herald 11/6/15

652a 652a/11

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN.

Owing to the war and the suspension of the fishing industry a large number of young women in the Western Isles who at this time of year are usually employed at the curing of herring at Yarmouth and Lowestoft are out of employment. The case of these young women has been taken up by the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, and negotiations are in progress which may result in a large number of these young women being employed in Ayrshire and elsewhere at the digging of potatoes. They are said to be quite as well qualified for this class of work as the Irish migratory labourers, as they are all used to working on their own crofts at home in the spring and autumn.

17-2-15
Evening Standard
St James Gazette

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

SCHOOL-CHILDREN'S SHOES MADE BY UNEMPLOYED WOMEN.

LECTURES ON HYGIENE.

The results of the shoe-making for school children, carried on in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, have been greatly appreciated in the schools to which shoes have been sent.

During the recent wet weather, the shoes have been in constant use. The object of making them and presenting them to schools has been to provide the children who come with bad boots with a change when they are wet.

A Wet Day at School.

On a wet day the schoolroom presents rather a curious appearance. Over the hot pipes hang a collection of pitifully ragged stockings, and underneath, a row of what were once boots. The children have bare feet comfortably tucked into slippers which have been made by unemployed women in the workrooms of scraps of material—felt, serge, cloth—the tops of old stockings, or silk top hats.

Each pair is neatly bound round the top with binding or braid, and pieces of carpet or some other stout foundation have been used for soles. Before the shoes came, the children sat in their bare feet.

In one school, to which sixty pairs of shoes were given, almost as many more are needed, and one of the teachers conceived the idea of asking the better clothed children to bring old socks to school to supplement the slippers.

The school contains the most mixed collection of children perhaps in London. Some are the children of clerks and shopkeepers, while others belong to families where the father is practically unemployable.

The better-class children bring all their old boots to school for the others, and a boot club has been instituted whereby the mothers pay a weekly contribution, and the school provides the child with boots. A record of the entries for one child is evidence of the difficulty of even paying back: ½d., 1d., ½d., ½d., ½d., ½d., 1½d., ½d., 1½d., ½d., 4½d., 1½d., ½d., 3d. . . . and so on until the price is paid.

Boots as School Prize.

In some instances the child is in such urgent need that the teacher looks about for an excuse to give her a pair of boots as a prize.

In spite of such assistance, more than half of every class comes with boots and stockings wet through on a bad day. One child, who is now walking about with almost the whole of the upper free from the sole of her boot, has had the same pair since the Country Holiday Fund gave them to her in August. Another was taking turn about, morning and afternoon, with her brother in coming to school, for they had only one pair of boots between them.

For the drill class the emergency shoes are used also, as the children can hardly walk in their bits of boots, and they certainly can not dance or do exercises.

A double benefit has been conferred by the gift of shoes, for some of the mothers have taken a hint from the work of the unemployed women, and themselves have made shoes for the children to wear at home. The pieces have been obtained, according to the children, from the "rag-and-bone."

Training College for Unemployed Clerks.

The Training College for unemployed clerks opened by the City of London Committee, with the approval of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, has now close upon 150 students. These are all clerks who have been employed in the City, and who are thrown out of work through the war.

They come from thirty-eight different boroughs, and, instead of occupying the time of unemployment in needle-workrooms in their own districts, they are having the opportunity of a thorough commercial training.

London County Council teachers attend every morning, and classes are held in English, economic history, geography, arithmetic, and personal hygiene. Every student is expected to attend these classes, but in book-keeping, shorthand, and French a choice of taking two subjects out of three is given.

Popularity of French Classes.

For shorthand, the pupils are divided into two classes. In the elementary class are many girls who have simply been typists, and any shorthand they knew was not good enough for them to use.

The French class is very popular, the girls recognising the fact that with a knowledge of commercial French they will be able to command better salaries.

A hot dinner is provided for the clerks every day at a nominal cost, the food being supplied by the National Food Fund. Other gifts to the college include cheese, salmon, flour, mutton, and potatoes from the Colonial Governments, and jam, meat, and butter from the London Chamber of Commerce.

A voluntary gymnasium class has been formed for the recreation hour, the teachers being supplied from the Greystoke Training College. This exercise forms a pleasant break to the usual sedentary occupation.

The afternoons are occupied in typewriting lessons and practice, and in dressmaking classes.

The girls are learning to make their own patterns and to cut out and make their own clothes. The day finishes with lectures in hygiene and other subjects, demonstrations being also given in cookery. The girls are encouraged to practise what they are shown at home, and a cookery competition is to be held for the dishes which the girls make themselves.

652

Glasgow Herald.
11.11.15

652a/12

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN.

The ninth annual meeting of the Women's Employment Bureau for Glasgow and West of Scotland was held in the office at Albany Chambers, Charing Cross, Glasgow, on Tuesday. The adoption of the report was moved from the chair by Mrs Thomas Johnston, and was seconded by Miss L. E. Mitchell. A satisfactory increase was shown in the number of posts offered and filled, and in the number of clients who had taken advantage of the information department. There was also an improvement in the financial position.

Miss E. B. Mitchell, hon. secretary of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, spoke of the effect of the war on women's work and prospects. She pointed out how successfully industrial women workers had taken advantage of the opportunities which the war had brought them. This had not been so easy in the case of clerical and professional women. Owing to a certain shortage of skilled workers a great many women who were eager to give their services to the nation had not so far been accepted. In view of this shortage of skilled workers the necessity was urged for women to prepare themselves for business, for social work, for gardening and agriculture, for all callings, in fact, which would be useful in the difficult times which we have to face, when undoubtedly a much plainer and simpler standard of living must be adopted than has existed for many years.

Miss M. K. Pickering, secretary of the Central Office for Women, gave an interesting account of the organisation of canteens for women workers in the munition factories. A vote of thanks to the speakers was moved by Miss Hannan Watson, of Laurel Bank School.

652a

Dundee Advertiser
17-1-17

652a/13

WOMEN'S WAR WORK.

SUCCESSFUL STATION BARROW.

There was a large attendance yesterday at the meeting of the Dundee Women's War Relief Committee, which was held in the Town Hall. Miss Kynoch presided.

Mrs Harry Walker expressed the gratitude of the 4th Black Watch Comforts Committee for the aid of the Dundee Women's War Relief Committee, and intimated that, in return, during the three months when the socks were being supplied the Comforts Committee would send to the Central Depot at Bank Street £20 worth of wool monthly.

On the motion of Miss Kynoch, seconded by Mrs J. B. Taylor, it was agreed that the various wards should in rotation receive a share of this wool.

Mrs Kerr, Hon. Treasurer, intimated that there was a balance at the Central Depot of £128 2s 1d, and a ward balance of £1147 4s 0½d.

The reports of the various wards and Sub-Committees were read and approved. These were in all instances extremely satisfactory.

Of especial interest was the report of the patriotic barrow, which was read by Mrs W. H Buist. Already over 2244 men had been served with tea. In all they had about 80 workers, but they would be very glad if more would come forward. The financial response had been exceedingly generous, and the thanks of the Committee were gratefully extended to Mr George Draffen, who so generously gave the barrow, and to the 4th and 7th Wards for their splendid contributions. Nor could they omit to mention the kindness which they had received from the station officials, who had all along evinced such a kindly interest in the work.

The names of Mrs Syme, 12 Clarendon Terrace, and Miss Ella Air, Dunmore, were added to the Committee.

Miss Duncanson, Hon. Secretary, stated that gifts had been received from the following:—Martyrs' Church Mothers' Meeting, Miss Brodie Wilson; St Mary's Church, Newport; Miss M. S. Barbour, Bonskeid; Meigle Work Party, Carnoustie Parish Work Party; Mrs Johnstone, Craighead, East Newport; Miss Low, Ashlea, Monifieth;, Mrs Cox, Drumkilbo; Mrs Philip, U.F. Manse, Invergowrie, Brown Street Hall Mission.

After some discussion it was decided to send 300 pairs of socks to Colonel Murray, Black Watch, and 100 pairs of socks to the following for distribution:—Captain Bowman, Lieutenant Crooks, Captain Richardson, and Lieutenant Colonel W. E. Foggie. It was also agreed that 100 pairs of socks and 90 pairs of hosetops should be despatched to the South African Scottish.

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, November 7th. 1914.

652

652b/1

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

TRAGEDY OF THE LONELY MIDDLE-AGED WORKERS.

GIRL GUESTS.

WAISTCOAT MAKERS AND THEATRICAL DRESSERS.

Workrooms for the girls employed through the agency of the Central Committee on Women's Employment have in almost every case been lent. In one district the provision is a public-house which has never been licensed, and Westminster's unemployed girls are given the hospitality of a private house in South Audley-street.

Beef-Cup and Rolls.

The girls enjoy many of the privileges of invited guests. Their hours are from one o'clock till 7.30, and at four o'clock they are entertained to coffee and buns, and beef-cup and rolls on Saturday, when they come in the morning. While they work they sing, and the daughter of the house plays for them. The pathos of "A long, long way to Tipperary" is perhaps nowhere so evident as in this workroom, where the girls seem a long, long way from their own work, lost through the war. They sing away happily, however, and on Saturday afternoons when the work is over many of them stay for the recreation which is provided. A lady has offered to teach them Spanish dancing.

Friendless No Longer.

The hostess takes a personal interest in her girls and women, forty-five of whom are now at work on maternity outfits and clothes for necessitous mothers and children. A little orphan who had hip-disease and is very lame, and who seems not to have a friend in the world, will be friendless no longer.

In Westminster it is the middle-aged women who live alone who have suffered most. They are waistcoat workers, theatrical dressers, and small dressmakers. There is a little bent seamstress of forty years who seems to concentrate in herself the tragedy of the war. She could hardly speak when she came to the workroom for want of food.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Nation, Nov. 21st. 1914.

RELIEF WORK FOR WOMEN.

To the Editor of THE NATION.

SIR,—The fine protest you have made in to-day's NATION on the subject of the penalization of soldiers' wives encourages me to hope you will allow me to point out another and no less gross injustice. It is an accepted principle of relief work for men that it should take the form of some useful capital expenditure for the nation. Road-making and afforestation have been specially designated for the purpose. The Women's Employment Fund, by some amazing perversity of judgment, has gone back to the old bad system of bygone days—days of the Irish famine, forgotten in England but remembered still with bitterness across the Channel. The interest of the monopolist and the contractor were then put above the interests of the people, and relief work took the form of work that nobody wanted and nobody would pay for in the ordinary way.

It is a condition laid down by the Women's Employment Fund that no work done in the workrooms must be sold, and that the garments made must be given away to people who could not buy. The consequence is, of course, that the standard of work is very low, that there is often great slackness on the part of the workers, and that the distribution is liable to the ordinary abuses of amateur charitable management. The effect morally is deplorable. It is a degrading and pauperizing system that will leave the working women coming under its influence appreciably worse off, economically, than they were before the war. It does away with the stimulus of competition without substituting a compensating sense of communal responsibility.

Workrooms that are run frankly with a view to becoming self-supporting, whether toy-making or arts and crafts, or merely needlework, have an entirely different effect upon the worker. And the plan of giving a bonus for good work, or for paying by piece-work, has a very healthy effect in combating the depression caused by the sudden drop of wages in all departments of women's work.—Yours, &c.,

J. T. KINGSLEY TARPEY.

33, Buckingham Mansions, West End Lane, N.W.
November 14th, 1914.

The Common Cause - 20 - 9. 14.

At time of going to press no particulars are yet forthcoming of the schemes that are being drawn up by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for providing work for professional women. Sympathy is being expressed in many quarters for the clerical workers, and other trained and capable women, who are forced to remain idle while work which they could well perform is attempted by voluntary helpers who are often inefficient; and it is hoped that some effort will be made by the Committee to induce various organisations to employ at least a proportion of salaried workers. In the meantime, Mrs. Hoster has already had several answers to the appeal mentioned in our last issue, and in one day was able to fill five good posts.

Help for women hitherto engaged in music, drama, and the fine arts and crafts is being organised by a Committee of the Three Arts Club, 19a, Marylebone Road, W., who have opened an Employment Fund, and are asking for donations. The object of the fund is to fit artists who cannot, owing to present conditions, find work in their own professions for some productive industry. The Committee states that:—

"In order not to encumber the labour market, only industries with present scope for enlargement will be chosen, either in connection with the land, where such occupations as poultry farming and market-gardening may be usefully extended, or in connection with manufacturing trades which now find room for development in this country owing to the war. The toy-making industry may be taken as an example.

"The Women's Emergency Corps, with which this fund will co-operate, is already finding establishments in which free training will be given in the various industries, and is taking steps ultimately to provide employment."

The Press Contributors' Emergency Fund, to which an office has been lent by the National Union, has already found work for several journalists, both men and women. The Secretary of the Fund would be glad to hear of any suitable paid posts in connection with literary and journalistic work, in libraries, as secretaries, investigators, or organisers. All communications should be addressed to Miss Hall, Press Contributors' Emergency Fund, Parliament Chambers, 14, Great Smith Street, Westminster, S.W.

Several other organisations are also arranging assistance for the professional classes. The "Professional Classes War Relief Council," composed of nominees of the majority of the principal professional institutions, and representatives of the chief societies engaged in relief work, are organising assistance in matters of education, training, emigration, maternity aid, and temporary employment. All those interested are invited to give support by sending donations to the Treasurer, Professional Classes War Relief Council, 13 and 14, Princes Gate, London, S.W.

Irish Times, Nov. 19th. 652a.

6526/2

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

6526

UPWARDS OF £90,000 RAISED.

APPOINTMENT OF COMMITTEE FOR IRELAND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached, last night, a total of £90,195.

In connection with the fund, the following have been appointed as a Committee on Women's Employment for Ireland for the provinces of Leinster, Munster, and Connaught:

President—The Countess of Aberdeen.

Members—Misses E. Buchanan, C. Cahalan, Mary E. Duggan, E. Gleeson, Lady Emly, Lady Everard, Countess of Fingall, Mrs. Noel Guinness, Mrs. Stephen Gwynn, Countess of Mayo, Miss D. Mellone, Mrs. Vere O'Brien, Miss Richardson, Miss M. L. Robinson, and Mrs. T. Russell.

Commercial advisers and official advisers have been appointed, as follow:—

Mr. J. C. Clements, managing director, Messrs. Switzer and Co., Grafton street, Dublin; Mrs. L. Gordon, manageress, Crochet and Lace Depôt, 44 Mary street, Dublin; Miss Rowan, of Rowan and Co., 64 South Great George's street; Mr. E. Walpole, 9 Suffolk street; Mrs. Dickie, National Health Insurance Commissioner, Ireland; Mr. W. T. McCartney Filgate, Department of Agriculture; Mr. G. Fletcher, Department of Agriculture; Miss Haire Forster, organising officer for women's work, Labour Exchange Unemployed Insurance, Board of Trade; Mr. Geo. Russel, editor "Irish Homestead," Dublin; Miss E. J. Slocock, H.M. Senior Lady Inspector of Factories.

An Ulster Committee has been appointed as follows:—

Dowager Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava, Lady Mayoress of Belfast (Mrs. Crawford McCullagh), Mrs. T. Sinclair, Belfast; Mrs. R. J. McMordie, Belfast; Mrs. E. Macnaghten, Co. Antrim; Hon. Lady Kennedy, Co. Down; Mrs. Nagle, Belfast; Miss McCance, Co. Antrim; Mrs. J. M. Andrews, Co. Down; Mrs. Harold Barbour, Co. Antrim; Mrs. Stevenson, Derry; Miss Galway, Secretary of Belfast Branch of Textile Operatives of Ireland, Belfast; Miss F. Clark, Belfast; Mrs. Nancy Letts, Belfast; Miss Magee and Mrs. Mercier Clements, Belfast.

Board of Commercial Advisers—Lord Mayor of Belfast (Councillor Crawford McCullagh, J.P.), Mr. James Johnston, J.P., linen manufacturer, Lurgan; Mr. Guy Morris, shirt and collar manufacturer, Londonderry; Mr. J. Stirling, Flax Spinning Company, Belfast; Mr. F. Anderson, manager Linen Weaving Factory, Portadown; Mr. T. Somerset, manufacturer hand embroidery, Belfast; Mr. Garrett Campbell, flax spinner, Belfast; Mr. James Johnston, J.P., merchant, Belfast; Mr. H. Berrington, manufacturer, Belfast; Mr. J. Milne Barbour, D.L., flax spinner, Co. Antrim.

Board of Official Advisers—Miss Dickie, Insurance Commission; Miss Slocock, H.M. Senior Lady Inspector of Factories; Miss Haire Forster, Miss A. M. Daunt, Labour Exchange; Mr. A. S. Eraut, H.M. District Inspector of Factories.

The Irish Independent, Nov. 19th. 1912.

WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

652b

QUEEN'S FUND IRISH COMMITTEE.

In connection with the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, the following Committee has been appointed on Women's Employment in Ireland for the Provinces of Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, with Lady Aberdeen as President:—

Members—The Countesses of Fingall and Mayo, Miss E. Buchanan, P.L.G.; Miss C. Cahalan, Miss M. E. Duggan, LL.B.; Lady Emly, Lady Everard, Miss E. Gleeson, Mrs. Noel Guinness, R.D.C.; Mrs. Stephen Gwynn, Miss D. Mellon, Mrs. Vere O'Brien, Miss Richardson, Miss M. L. Robinson, and Mrs. T. W. Russell.

Commercial Advisers—Mr. J. C. Clements (Switzer and Co.), Dublin; Mrs. L. Gordon (Lace Depot), Mary street, Dublin; Miss Rowan (Messrs. Rowan and Co.), 8th. Gt. George's street, Dublin; Mr. E. Walpole, Suffolk street, Dublin.

Official Advisers—Mrs. Dickie, Insurance Commissioner, Ireland; Messrs. W. T. Macartney Filgate and M. G. Fletcher, of the Department; Miss M. Haire Forster, organiser women's work, Labour Exchange; Mr. G. Russell, Dublin; and Miss E. J. Slocock, Senior Lady Inspector of Factories.

A separate Committee has been appointed for Ulster.

Dundee Courier.
November 25th. 1914.

SHORTAGE OF WOMEN WORKERS IN CUPAR DISTRICT.

A meeting was held in the Town Hall, Cupar, yesterday, under the chairmanship of Miss Marshall, Lochmalony, to arrange for giving support to Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund, and to form a Women's Committee to deal with unemployment of women in the district.

Representatives of various parishes were appointed members of the committee, and these, it was stated, would be co-opted by the Central Committee appointed in connection with the National Relief Fund.

Mr J. M. Mitchell, solicitor, the secretary of the District Relief Fund Committee, stated there was very little distress in the district caused by unemployment. Indeed, in some places there was a shortage of women workers, and the only place where women workers were on short time was at Springfield. There, it was suggested, the women might be given knitting to do in their spare time.

A remit was made to the committee to take what steps was considered necessary.

Irish Independent
Dec: 21st. 1914.

On Saturday afternoon the Countess of Aberdeen presided at a meeting of the Central Committee on Women's Employment for Leinster, Munster, and Connaught held at 63 Dawson street. Afterwards her Excellency visited the Danemer Guild's sale of work organised by Miss Gleeson at the United Arts Club. Subsequently her Excellency presided at a meeting of the Committee of Management of Peamount.

Belfast News Letter
December 10th. 1914

THE EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN.

Meeting of Ulster Central Committee

A meeting of this committee was held on Tuesday, at the City Hall, under the presidency of the Dowager Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava. Among those present were—The Honourable Lady Kennedy, the Honourable Ethel Macnaghten, Mrs. Thomas Sinclair, Miss M'Cance, Mrs. Harold Barbour, Mrs. Letts, Mrs. Nagle, Miss Magee, Miss Galway, Mrs. Stevenson (Londonderry), Mrs. Dickie, Miss Slocock, Miss Daunt, Mrs. Mercier-Clements, honorary secretary; Mr. R. Garrett Campbell, Mr. J. Milne Barbour, Mr. Anderson (Portadown), Mr. J. H. Stirling, Mr. Morrish (Londonderry), Mr. Gageby, Mr. James Johnston, J.P.; Mr. T. Somerset, and Mr. S. Eraut. There were also present—Mr. G. Fletcher and Mr. M'Cartney-Filgate, representing the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, and Mr. F. C. Forth, Principal of the Belfast Municipal Technical Institute. Apologies for absence were received from the Lady Mayoress and Mrs. M'Mordie. A scheme for employment of women thrown out of work by the war was submitted by the Local Distress Committee of Lurgan. Schemes from Londonderry and Lurgan (power loom weavers) have already been approved by the Ulster Central Committee and are in operation at the present time. A deputation from Belfast County Borough brought up a scheme. The advisability of encouraging technical training for unemployed women was fully discussed after much useful information has been placed before the committee by Mr. George Fletcher and Mr. Forth. The honorary secretary submitted to the committee a return of unemployment owing to the war.

652b.

Belfast News Letter
December 16th. 1914.

THE EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN.

Meeting of Ulster Committee.

A meeting of the Ulster Committee on Women's Employment was held in the City Hall yesterday. The Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava presided, and the attendance included the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, the Honourable Lady Kennedy, Mrs. M'Mordie, Mrs. Harold Barbour, Mrs. Letts, Miss Galway, Miss Slocock, Miss Clark, Miss M'Cance, Miss Magee, Miss Daunt; Messrs. James Johnston, J.P.; H. Berrington, S. Eraut, Garrett Campbell, John Johnston (Lurgan), J. Milne Barbour, D.L.; F. Anderson (Portadown), T. Somerset, R. Gageby, J.P.; and Mrs. Mercier Clements, hon. secretary. Apologies were received from the Honourable Miss Macnaghten, Mrs. David Stevenson (Londonderry), Mrs. Dickie, Mrs. Garrett Nagle, and Mrs. Thomas Sinclair. Schemes for Belfast and Lurgan were submitted, and after discussion were finally approved and forwarded to the Local Government Board. It should be pointed out that the Ulster Central Committee on Women's Employment is only an Advisory Committee, to whom all schemes for the employment of women out of work owing to the war must be submitted by the local relief committees. Schemes approved by the Central Committee are forwarded to the Local Government Board and recommended for grants, the Central Committee having no power to make grants.

652b/3

The Irish Times,
Jan: 4th. 1915.

THE CITY OF DUBLIN COMMITTEE.

The General Committee met in the Mansion House last Thursday evening. Mr. John Irwin, J.P., presided. Also present:—The Marchioness of Aberdeen, Mrs. Cox, Miss Gargan, Miss E. O'Reilly, Mr. William Fry, J.P.; Mr. George D. Williams, Mr. Richard Booth, J.P.; Rev. R. M. Gwynn, F.T.C.D.; Mr. William E. Taylor, J.P.; Mr. J. H. Webb, Mr. Charles Eason, M.A., J.P., and M. J. Fitzpatrick (Secretary). Mr. E. A. Aston, Local Government Board Inspector, was also present.

Reports of the work done during the past fortnight by the Finance, Allotments, and Works Sub-Committee were submitted and approved. The financial statement and estimate of the amount requird to cover cost of wages and relief for unemployed persons for the month of January was adopted, and ordered to be forwarded to the Local Government Board. Correspondence was read conveying the decision of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction in reference to the proposal to establish certain additional classes for instructing young girls in other branches of trade which the Committee understand are not carried on in this country, and a Sub-Committee was appointed to wait upon the Department and discuss the points at issue.

Miss E. O'Reilly submitted a report upon the state of employment in the various workrooms; also a recommendation with a view to carrying on a certain industry which has suffered severely owing to the effects of the war.

The Chairman and Miss O'Reilly were requested to take all necessary steps in connection with this matter.

The Secretary was directed to communicate with the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and elicit their opinion in reference to certain suggestions for the employment of girls.

It was reported that up to the eve of Christmas 150 cheeses of 80lbs. each and 300 bags of flour had been distributed, and Her Excellency informed the Committee that the Lord Lieutenant had received a communication from the Premier of Canada expressing pleasure with the manner in which the Irish portion of their gift had been received.

After disposing of other business the Committee adjourned.

The Irish Times,
Jan: 8th. 1915.

CITY OF DUBLIN COMMITTEE.

The Finance and General Purposes Committee met in the Mansion House last Wednesday evening. Mr. John Irwin, J.P., presided. The Marchioness of Aberdeen was present. Correspondence with the Local Government Board and the Central Committee on Women's Employment for Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, was submitted and dealt with. The Chairman and Mr. Henry MacLaughlin (Chairman of the Works Sub-Committee) were requested to meet the Central Committee on Women's Employment next Saturday afternoon, and discuss with them matters affecting the existing workrooms, and arrange for a joint inspection of the same, also to consult with the Central Committee proposals with regard to other workrooms for women, which have been suggested. The Secretary submitted correspondence from the Hon. Secretary of the Women's Training Centre in reference to the registering of the names of young girls employed therein, and the Committee ordered that the wishes of the Local Government Board be given effect to.

Proposals were submitted from the Hon. Secretary of the Committee in charge of the toy industry in reference to the re-opening of this workroom, which has proved such a success under the management of Miss MacTier, and the hope was expressed that this industry, new as it is in Dublin, may be taken over at the conclusion of the next term, and carried on as a commercial concern, the desire of the Relief Fund Committee being to avoid clashing in any way with private enterprise. The Allotments Committee, composed of all the members of the General Committee, reported that they had met regularly and dealt with all applications for relief received to date, and the grants of Canadian flour and cheese were approved. The financial statement was presented, and accounts passed for payment. The Committee then adjourned till next week.

The Irish Times,
Jan: 16th. 1915.

652b.

MEETING OF DUBLIN COMMITTEE.

The general meeting of the Dublin Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress was held in the Mansion House on Thursday evening, the 14th January. Mr. John Irwin, J.P., in the unavoidable absence of the Lord Mayor, presided. Present:—The Marchioness of Aberdeen, Mr Henry M'Laughlin, Mr. Wm. Fry, J.P.; Miss E. O'Reilly, Mr. R. W. Booth, J.P.; Sir Wm. Thompson, M.D., Mr. C. Eason, J.P.; Mrs. M. F. Cox, Mr W. E. Taylor, J.P., and Mr P. J. Little.

It was arranged that Mrs. Michael Cox would, at the request of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, represent the Dublin Relief Committee at the Committee meetings of that Society.

The Chairman reported the result of a deputation to the Central Advisory Committee on Women's Employment, and the arrangements that were being made for the collective inspection on behalf of the two Committees to the workrooms receiving wages grants from the Relief Committee.

The Secretary reported on the grants made by the Allotments Committee in relief and wages since last meeting. Upwards of 260 persons are at present receiving relief wages from the Committee.

In connection with the distribution of gifts of cheese from Quebec and of Canadian flour, numerous letters of thanks were received from the institutions and centres to which these gifts were forwarded, showing that they were greatly appreciated. Two hundred cheeses, weighing 80lbs. each, and 520 bags of flour, have so far been distributed by the Committee.

A report submitted by the Women's National Health Association of their workrooms was read and approved.

An application on behalf of the Sisters of Charity, St Laurence O'Toole's, for grants in connection with proposed classes in cookery and domestic science was considered and approved of in principle.

Mr. Henry M'Laughlin, Chairman of the Works Advisory Committee, made a report on the position of unemployment in the city as revealed by the returns of the Labour Exchange, an increase of unemployment being evident in the building trade, portion of which, however, might be regarded for the season as normal.

Mr. M'Laughlin reported that he was in negotiation with the Local Government Board regarding the development of the playgrounds scheme inaugurated by the Women's National Health Association.

Dundee Advertiser.
13.9.15.

SCOTTISH COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

Appointment of Miss Elizabeth Mitchell.

On the resignation of Miss Lois Young, owing to the pressure of her work in connection with the National Federation of Women Workers, the Scottish Advisory Committee has appointed Miss Elizabeth Mitchell to be Hon. Secretary to the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment. Miss Mitchell has connections both in Edinburgh and Glasgow, being a daughter of the late Andrew Mitchell, Sheriff-Substitute of Stirling (who was previously for some years a Bailie of the City of Edinburgh), and a granddaughter of the late Mr J. B. Mirrlees, of the well-known firm of engineers in Scotland Street, Glasgow. Miss Mitchell was educated at the St George's High School, Edinburgh, and went on to the Universities of Edinburgh and Oxford; at Oxford she had a very successful career, winning firsts both in "Mods" and "Greats." Miss Mitchell is the author of a study of social conditions "In Western Canada before the War," published this year by John Murray. Since last autumn she has been working in the service of the Scottish Committee of Women's Employment. All communications as to the administration in Scotland (not the collection) of the Queen's Work for Women Fund should now be addressed to Miss Mitchell at the central office of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, 174 Lauriston Place, Edinburgh.

652b/4

Freeman's Journal.

DUBLIN RELIEF COMMITTEE.

RAINING WOMEN WORKERS.

NEW INDUSTRIES ESTABLISHED.

VISIT TO THE CENTRES.

The work which is being carried out in the city of Dublin by the Local Representative Relief Committee to alleviate distress amongst young girls and women thrown out of employment by the war is of a most practical and encouraging character. It is practical in the training which is imparted to hitherto unskilled workers. They are being taught and rendered efficient in occupations which will enable them to earn their livelihood at work requiring skill and application. It is also encouraging from the industrial standpoint, as the tuition will enable the workers to engage in the manufacture of articles, eminently adapted for the development of successful home industries. The work consists of shirt, sock, glove, and toy-making. In the successful production of these articles the decision of the Government Committee that the training of those in distress should form a leading [illegible] relief is being performed in most satisfactory manner. The centres where this splendid work is executed are at the Exchange Buildings, Parliament street; Lower Baggot street, the Convents of the Sisters of Charity, Seville place and Gardiner street, and at the Dublin Toy Factory, 152 Great Brunswick street, Dublin. Representatives of the Press were given an opportunity by Sir John Irwin and Miss Browning yesterday of inspecting the varied activities of this great enterprise. The relief wages are provided by the National Relief Fund and the Unemployed Workmen Act Grants, and a Joint Employment Board, of which the Lord Mayor is Chairman, controls the expenditure. The Women's Employment Advisory Bureau has been established at the Exchange Buildings, where information and advice are given to the applicants for relief and work. If they had been previously engaged at skilled occupations, every effort is made to obtain employment for them at their own distinctive calling. Should they be inefficient or unskilled workers, they are advised for what they ought to train, and are put into training centres.

At the Exchange Buildings Centre they are instructed in the working of shirts, gloves, and army bandoliers. From 80 to 90 girls and young women are engaged in their manufacture, and as a result of the efficient training 98 other workers have been enabled to secure remunerative employment in other spheres. The shirts of flannel and the gloves of wool are an Army contract. The machines used are driven by electric power, and the finished articles seem of a high class standard. 600 gloves per week are being turned out, and several of the girls are earning 10/- a week. As they become more expert they will be in a position to command more wages, but the most favourable feature is that when the war is over the knowledge and skill acquired can be utilised in the manufacture of these articles as home industries.

The Headquarters of the Central Committee on Women's Employment for Leinster, Munster, and Connaught are at Lower Baggot street, Dublin. There the shirts are cut out by young women and sent to the various centres in Cork, Killarney, New Ross, Sligo, Bray, Baldoyle, to be made up. The material is Irish flannel, and already 75,000 shirts have been sent to the Army. About 90 workers are employed at this centre.

The Supper Room of the Mansion House, with the permission of the Lord Mayor, has been utilised as another centre. There the work is being performed by elderly women, and the glove making is done by hand. The Department of Technical Instruction provided the instructors for the different centres, and the Local Government Board have been exceedingly helpful in placing the funds at the disposal of the Committee. Gloves are made for the Army, and orders are being fulfilled for several local firms. Indeed, the articles reflect the highest credit upon the workers. Over 100 women are engaged, and the training they have received will enable them to supple-

Dublin Toy Factory, 152 Great Brunswick street, Dublin. Representatives of the Press were given an opportunity by Sir John Irwin and Miss Browning yesterday of inspecting the varied activities of this great enterprise. The relief wages are provided by the National Relief Fund and the Unemployed Workmen Act Grants, and a Joint Employment Board, of which the Lord Mayor is Chairman, controls the expenditure. The Women's Employment Advisory Bureau has been established at the Exchange Buildings, where information and advice are given to the applicants for relief and work. If they had been previously engaged at skilled occupations, every effort is made to obtain employment for them at their own distinctive calling. Should they be inefficient or unskilled workers, they are advised for what they ought to train, and are put into training centres.

At the Exchange Buildings Centre they are instructed in the working of shirts, gloves, and army bandoliers. From 80 to 90 girls and young women are engaged in their manufacture, and as a result of the efficient training 98 other workers have been enabled to secure remunerative employment in other spheres. The shirts of flannel and the gloves of wool are an Army contract. The machines used are driven by electric power, and the finished articles seem of a high class standard. 600 gloves per week are being turned out, and several of the girls are earning 10/- a week. As they become more expert they will be in a position to command more wages, but the most favourable feature is that when the war is over the knowledge and skill acquired can be utilised in the manufacture of these articles as home industries.

The Headquarters of the Central Committee on Women's Employment for Leinster, Munster, and Connaught are at Lower Baggot street, Dublin. There the shirts are cut out by young women and sent to the various centres in Cork, Killarney, New Ross, Sligo, Bray, Baldoyle, to be made up. The material is Irish flannel, and already 75,000 shirts have been sent to the Army. About 90 workers are employed at this centre.

The Supper Room of the Mansion House, with the permission of the Lord Mayor, has been utilised as another centre. There the work is being performed by elderly women, and the glove making is done by hand. The Department of Technical Instruction provided the instructors for the different centres, and the Local Government Board have been exceedingly helpful in placing the funds at the disposal of the Committee. Gloves are made for the Army, and orders are being fulfilled for several local firms. Indeed, the articles reflect the highest credit upon the workers. Over 100 women are engaged, and the training they have received will enable them to supplement the income of their families as home workers. Work of this description is also carried out at Monasterevan. The Baggot street centre is now self-supporting.

TOY-MAKING.

The toy-making industry is another feature of the Committee's work, and as the result of their well-directed aid a flourishing little factory has been established at 152 Great Brunswick street. After the outbreak of war, when distress was acute, the Women's Suffrage Emergency Council and Miss McTier requested the Relief Committee to send them girls, who would be trained in the making of toys. The Committee granted the request, and paid the maintenance grant of the girls whilst they were being trained. The young women, who were thrown out of work, have been engaged at their original employment, and others were trained. The industry, which consists in the manufacture of dolls, is now self-supporting. The price of the dolls made range from 6d. to 2/6. They are finished in the most artistic and stylish manner. Already, a big export trade is being done with the Colonies, South Africa, and Buenos Ayres. Lady Aberdeen has secured a big order from Boston, whilst Mr J. P. Boland, M.P., has given valuable assistance in the promotion of the industry. Thirty young girls are employed.

At Seville place and Gardiner street, under the supervision of the Sisters of Charity, the work done in the manufacture of dolls and toys is a revelation. Sixty girls are engaged at Seville place, and forty at Gardiner street. In Seville place the doll made is unbreakable, and through the enterprise of Mr. M'Clean, managing director of Cahill and Co., Ormond quay, in providing the face of papier machie, a difficulty has been solved. The wholesale trade is catered for, but no export. The price is from 6d to 1/-. This centre is also self-supporting. Work is also provided for women in the mending and patching of gifts of clothing for the poor. At Gardiner street, a cheap doll is manufactured, as well as a dearer class, and the variety and style of the designs are clever and artistic. The finished articles are beautiful. Dolls' houses of a substantial kind are made, and the whole work is neatly done. Certainly the National Relief Committee in the work it has provided and the training given to unemployed females [illegible] great good.

DUBLIN UNEMPLOYED

Suggested Dismissal of 50 Poor Women

LORD MAYOR'S SOLICITUDE

29.6.17.
Freeman Journal.

In the course of a letter to a contemporary, Mr. Wm. Richardson states that the Dublin Relief Committee, of which the Lord Mayor "is the head and absolute master" has dismissed 52 helpless women, mostly widows, and conveys the suggestion that the Lord Mayor is responsible for this course of action.

When seen last night in reference to this statement the Lord Mayor said he was at the office of the Committee in Parliament street on Mon[illegible], and it was mentioned to him that it was in contemplation to knock off 50 women in order to cut down expenses.

At the time he made the following memorandum, which he handed to the Secretary, for the information of the Committee:—"The Lord Mayor understands from Miss O'Reilly that the Central Committee on Women's Employment will consider this afternoon the necessity of dismissing 50 women to cut down expenses, as per the terms of a letter received by the Lord Mayor from the Local Government Board. As, unfortunately, we have too many unemployed in the city at present, both men and women, the Lord Mayor thinks it would not b eat all advisable to dispense with the services of 50 women at present, and he undertakes to see Sir Henry Robinson about the matter."

Before he had an opportunity of seeing Sir Henry Robinson, the Lord Mayor received the following letter from the Relief Committee:—

Dear Lord Mayor—

Referring to the memorandum which you dictated in this office on Monday, and having reference to the undesirability of disemploying some 50 women, I beg to inform you that this matter was considered at a meeting of the Finance and General Purposes Committee yesterday in connection with a letter which had been received from the Joint Employment Boar. In the letter referred to it is stated:—"The Chairman informs this Board that, having carefully considered the question of the members at present employed in workrooms in conjunction with Sir Henry Robinson's letter to the Lord Mayor, he (the Chairman) recommended that the reduction in members employed in handknitting workrooms in Seville place workrom, as dealt with in his report to the Lord Mayor, be given effect to at once, in order that the expenditure be kept within the limit of £130 weekly, as decided by the Local Government Board. The classes in munition training to be discontinued.

The order of the Joint Employment Board regarding the foregoing was as follows—"The Board agree to the course recommended by the Chairman should be followed, as it appears inevitable the proposed reduction be given effect to inorder that the farm colonies be worked on such lines as to safeguard the expenditure already incurred, and obtain the best possible results by way of crops. The Central Committee, the Rev. Mother, Seville place, and Technical Education authorities to be notified accordingly. The Local Relief Committee to be notified of the foregoing decisions.

Having discussed the situation, the Finance and General Purposes Committee, "though most anxious to fall in with your lordship's decision, regret that in the face of the decision of the Local Government Board, and of a conevrsation which the chairman had with Mr. C. H. O'Conor, Local Government Board Inspector, in this office on Monday last, it is imperative to reduce the number of women in receipt of relief wages, as already indicated."

It is only right that your lordship should know of the decision of the Finance Committee, as above conveyed, in regard to the decisions of the Joint Employment Board, as set out above.—I am, dear Lord Mayor,

Yours faithfully,
W. J. FITZPATRICK,
Secretary.

Commenting on the terms of this letter, the Lord Mayor said—I consider the action of the Committee somewhat hasty, in view of my suggestion to see Sir Henry Robinson. I saw Sir Henry Robinson to-day in reference to the matter, and he agreed that the 50 women should be kept on, and not alone that, but he promised that more of the unemployed should be taken on likewise. In reference to these women, if they have been dismissed, their dismissals have taken place without my sanction, and they will be reinstated immediately.

Daily Chronicle 10.2.20.

FACTORY GIRL MAY BECOME A DOCTOR.

MUNITION WORKERS WHO ARE WORTH TRAINING.

CLERKS AS TEACHERS.

It is possible, under the Ministry of Labour's new scheme for training unemployed women, announced in the "Daily Chronicle" yesterday, that a factory girl may become a doctor.

Miss Mary Macarthur, secretary of the committee which is to make the scheme effective, told a "Daily Chronicle" representative yesterday that the training offered is available for every class of woman.

"We have not a great deal of money to dispose of," she pointed out, "and naturally the number of expensive trainings, such as medical and legal courses, must be limited. But if we find a factory girl, eligible for assistance under the rules, who wants to be a doctor, and is likely to make a good doctor, we shall be able to give her the necessary training.

TRAINING AS TEACHERS.

"The grants are not intended to take the place of the monetary assistance which well-to-do parents are able to give their daughters. But all women whose training was interrupted by the war, or who find themselves out of work or their earning powers diminished because of the war, will be available for help. The exact terms will be stated in a few days.

"Women will be trained only for careers in which there is a demand for more workers. At present there is a shortage of 9,000 women teachers. We hope to be able to train many of the demobilised clerical workers up to the standard demanded by the Board of Education for women taking the elementary teacher's course.

"Games mistresses are wanted, and teachers of domestic science, and later on we hope to increase the number of training centres where nurses can get their C.M.B. certificate. At present most of these training schools are full

OTHER OCCUPATIONS.

"Shorthand, typing, and languages will be offered to the girl with a good knowledge of office routine who has no other qualifications.

"The headquarters of the committee will be at St. Ermin's Hotel, but although we shall use Government machinery, there will be no red tape about our methods, and the committee will be free to develop its plans in the way it believes to be best."

Miss Lilian Barker, one of the committee members, was helping Miss Macarthur with preliminary plans yesterday.

"The great point about the scheme, to my mind, is that it applies to all classes," she said. "I quite expect to find some of my old girls at Woolwich, who drifted into all sorts of temporary occupations after the armistice, demanding training. And many of them would be well worth the training."

Daily Mirror 31.3.20

TRAINING FOR WOMEN.

Maintenance Scholarships for the Professions.

"We are out to train the right women for the right job," said Miss Mary Macarthur, speaking at a private meeting of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment yesterday. "Millions are being spent on the training of ex-service men, but so far nothing is being done for the women."

The committee, which is largely the same as that which was responsible for the administration of the money collected by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund during the war, has had £500,000 allotted to it by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund, and has also the machinery of the Ministry of Labour behind it.

It is intended to provide a number of maintenance scholarships for women whose positions have been injuriously affected by the war, to enable them to train for various professions, to appoint interviewing boards throughout Great Britain and Ireland so as to enable selected women to qualify in the higher professions such as medicine, dentistry and law.

Reynolds Newspaper 8.2.20.

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN.

New Training Schemes to be Devised.

It was announced officially last night that the Minister of Labour has appointed the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment to be a Standing Committee to consider, devise, and carry out special schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of conditions arising out of the war.

The Committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund.

The Marchioness of Crewe is chairman, Miss Mary Macarthur honorary secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant honorary treasurer of the Committee.

It is hoped to provide immediately a number of maintenance scholarships, which will enable women to qualify as teachers of domestic science, physical culture, etc., and also to enable women to qualify for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work generally.

Special consideration will be given to ex-Service and other women whose entry into war work has necessitated the interruption of their professional training, and whose circumstances are now so altered as to make it difficult to continue their studies.

The committee are prepared to consider any schemes which may be submitted to them for carrying out objects for which they have been appointed, but no individual applications can be considered at the moment.

Daily Telegraph 16.2.20

WOMEN WORKERS' DEMANDS.

GOVERNMENT'S TRAINING SCHEME.

The Women's Industrial League have issued a report of the deputation to Sir Robert Horne. Assurances were asked that the Ministry of Labour's training scheme for women should be continued beyond June 30, and that its scope should be much wider. The Ministry, it was also urged, could take a more favourable attitude towards the claim of equality as between men and women workers, and a claim was made for woman war workers to be admitted to the building trades. It was maintained that, in many cases, quite short periods of training would make the invaluable and efficient workers, and some would be able to take up the work at once.

Sir Robert Horne, in replying to the deputation, said there were more women in employment than there were before the war, but the great bulk of our pre-war markets now took little or nothing of our goods. This necessarily retarded industry, and prevented many obtaining employment. Once things got going, he believed, there would be employment for all who desired it. He sympathised with women who had been employed on work previously done by men and who had to leave it, but the Government's duty of fulfilling its pledges to the trade unions must be realised. With regard to the relative positions of male and female dilutees, it rested with the trade unions to enforce the obligations if they so desired. The Government was under an obligation to employ discharged soldiers in all departments; women must not forget this.

With regard to the training allowance, Sir Robert agreed that 20s or 25s a week was not a large sum, but it was a training grant, and was not to be regarded as a wage for work done. He did not feel able to give any hope that the amount would be raised, but promised to consult the Treasury. He was, however, prepared to consider the continuation of the scheme. Shorthand and typewriting courses, he pointed out, were not restricted to women with a secondary education, but it was given only to those whose education enabled them to profit by them. With regard to the admission of women to the building trades, it would be holding out false hopes to say there was any prospect of the building trade unions admitting them.

In reply to the question as to whether women's maintenance allowance could be made equal to men's, on the principal of equal pay for equal work, Sir Robert Horne said that payment during training was not made for work done, but as a maintenance grant, and as it cost a man more to live, his grant was naturally higher.

BRITISH FUNDS.

Consols	46	Victory Bonds	76½
War Loan 5%	88¼+¼	Irish Land 2¾%	47
Do. 4½%	79¼	India 3½%	57+½
Do. 4%	93¼+½	Do. 3%	48¾
Do. 3½%	81¼+¼	Local Loans 3%	50¼

In an interview afterwards, [illegible] explained that it was intended to arrange a series of intensive courses for women who desired to become teachers, in order to bring them up to the matriculation standard, and qualify them for a training college under the Board of Education.

"I am afraid," she concluded, "that the teaching profession is at present even more unpopular than domestic service!"

Forms of application can be obtained after Easter from any Employment Exchange, or from the Professional Women's Registry, 99, Queen's Gate, London, S.W.1.

Manchester Guardian 9.2.20.

The Demobilised Woman.

So many minds and pens are busy at the moment with the problem of the returned soldier and how to find work for him that perhaps a good many people are inclined to overlook the fact that the same difficulty applies equally to a large number of women. Some very significant figures were given to us the other day by Dr. MURRAY LESLIE on the existing preponderance of women over men. Those figures mean a good many things, but one of the most important of them is that more women will have to earn their own living than ever before. Yet there are great numbers of young women whose choice of a way of achieving their own economic independence is at the present moment as thoroughly restricted as that of any demobilised officer or man. Very many of them actually served in uniform as auxiliaries to the armed forces, and entered on this valuable service at the very moment when in happier times they would have been training themselves for some permanent career. Still more women put themselves at the civil disposal of the country and were content temporarily to take the place of the men on active service—no one can have forgotten how wonderfully the man-power of the nation was transformed into woman-power in the later days of the war. These temporary needs have now disappeared, and the women who filled them are fronted with the task of finding or training for a real and permanent career of their own. They are entitled to all the help that can be given them at a very critical time, and the Ministry of Labour, in transforming the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment into a Standing Committee that is specially concerned with the problem that has been outlined, has obviously taken a just and necessary step. The details that are announced to-day give merely the proposed basis of the scheme, but it is interesting to see that it is to be partly financed by a grant of £500,000 from the National Relief Fund. That fund was largely subscribed to at the beginning of the war under the impression that we should then have to deal with a great amount of unemployment and distress. Events falsified that apprehension, and the unemployment now confronts us at the other end of the struggle. Money that was subscribed to meet it can hardly be better applied than in helping both men and women to the clear start in life that was forgone by them when they took up all the innumerable aspects of "work of national importance."

Globe. 9.2.20.

£500,000 FOR WOMEN.

TRAINING SCHEME FOR UNEMPLOYED AND DISABLED.

The Minister of Labour has appointed the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment to be a Standing Committee to consider, devise, and carry out special schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of conditions arising out of the war.

The Committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the National Relief Fund.

The Marchioness of Crewe is chairman, Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant hon. treasurer.

The Committee hopes to provide immediately a large number of maintenance scholarships, which will enable women to qualify as teachers of domestic science, physical culture, etc., and for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work generally.

It is hoped also to afford a small number of carefully selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine and the law.

Schemes are also contemplated for enabling women to qualify in higher grade cookery and higher clerical work.

6521/1.

Daily Chronicle 10.2.20.

FACTORY GIRL MAY BECOME A DOCTOR.

MUNITION WORKERS WHO ARE WORTH TRAINING.

CLERKS AS TEACHERS.

It is possible, under the Ministry of Labour's new scheme for training unemployed women, announced in the "Daily Chronicle" yesterday, that a factory girl may become a doctor.

Miss Mary Macarthur, secretary of the committee which is to make the scheme effective, told a "Daily Chronicle" representative yesterday that the training offered is available for every class of woman.

"We have not a great deal of money to dispose of," she pointed out, "and naturally the number of expensive trainings, such as medical and legal courses, must be limited. But if we find a factory girl, eligible for assistance under the rules, who wants to be a doctor, and is likely to make a good doctor, we shall be able to give her the necessary training.

TRAINING AS TEACHERS.

"The grants are not intended to take the place of the monetary assistance which well-to-do parents are able to give their daughters. But all women whose training was interrupted by the war, or who find themselves out of work or their earning powers diminished because of the war, will be available for help. The exact terms will be stated in a few days.

"Women will be trained only for careers in which there is a demand for more workers. At present there is a shortage of 9,000 women teachers. We hope to be able to train many of the demobilised clerical workers up to the standard demanded by the Board of Education for women taking the elementary teacher's course.

"Games mistresses are wanted, and teachers of domestic science, and later on we hope to increase the number of training centres where nurses can get their C.M.B. certificate. At present most of these training schools are full

OTHER OCCUPATIONS.

"Shorthand, typing, and languages will be offered to the girl with a good knowledge of office routine who has no other qualifications.

"The headquarters of the committee will be at St. Ermin's Hotel, but although we shall use Government machinery, there will be no red tape about our methods, and the committee will be free to develop its plans in the way it believes to be best."

Miss Lilian Barker, one of the committee members, was helping Miss Macarthur with preliminary plans yesterday.

"The great point about the scheme, to my mind, is that it applies to all classes," she said. "I quite expect to find some of my old girls at Woolwich, who drifted into all sorts of temporary occupations after the armistice, demanding training. And many of them would be well worth the training."

Daily Mirror 31.3.20

TRAINING FOR WOMEN.

Maintenance Scholarships for the Professions.

"We are out to train the right women for the right job," said Miss Mary Macarthur, speaking at a private meeting of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment yesterday. "Millions are being spent on the training of ex-service men, but so far nothing is being done for the women."

The committee, which is largely the same as that which was responsible for the administration of the money collected by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund during the war, has had £500,000 allotted to it by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund, and has also the machinery of the Ministry of Labour behind it.

It is intended to provide a number of maintenance scholarships for women whose positions have been injuriously affected by the war, to enable them to train for various professions, to appoint interviewing boards throughout Great Britain and Ireland so as to enable selected women to qualify in the higher professions such as medicine, dentistry and law.

Reynolds Newspaper 8.2.20.

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN.

New Training Schemes to be Devised.

It was announced officially last night that the Minister of Labour has appointed the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment to be a Standing Committee to consider, devise, and carry out special schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of conditions arising out of the war.

The Committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund.

The Marchioness of Crewe is chairman, Miss Mary Macarthur honorary secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant honorary treasurer of the Committee.

It is hoped to provide immediately a number of maintenance scholarships, which will enable women to qualify as teachers of domestic science, physical culture, etc., and also to enable women to qualify for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work generally.

Special consideration will be given to ex-Service and other women whose entry into war work has necessitated the interruption of their professional training, and whose circumstances are now so altered as to make it difficult to continue their studies.

The committee are prepared to consider any schemes which may be submitted to them for carrying out objects for which they have been appointed, but no individual applications can be considered at the moment.

Daily Telegraph 16.2.20

WOMEN WORKERS DEMANDS.

GOVERNMENT'S TRAINING SCHEME.

The Women's Industrial League have issued a report of the demands submitted by their deputation to Sir Robert Horne. Assurances were asked that the Ministry of Labour's training scheme for women should be continued beyond June 30, and that its scope should be much wider. The Ministry, it was also urged, could take a more favourable attitude towards the claim of equality as between men and women workers, and a claim was made for woman war workers to be admitted to the building trades. It was maintained that, in many cases, quite short periods of training would make the invaluable and efficient workers, and some would be able to take up the work at once.

Sir Robert Horne, in replying to the deputation, said there were more women in employment than there were before the war, but the great bulk of our pre-war markets now took little or nothing of our goods. This necessarily retarded industry, and prevented many obtaining employment. Once things got going, he believed, there would be employment for all who desired it. He sympathised with women who had been employed on work previously done by men and who had to leave it, but the Government's duty of fulfilling its pledges to the trade unions must be realised. With regard to the relative positions of male and female dilutees, it rested with the trade unions to enforce the obligations if they so desired. The Government was under an obligation to employ discharged soldiers in all departments; women must not forget this.

With regard to the training allowance, Sir Robert agreed that 20s or 25s a week was not a large sum, but it was a training grant, and was not to be regarded as a wage for work done. He did not feel able to give any hope that the amount would be raised, but promised to consult the Treasury. He was, however, prepared to consider the continuation of the scheme. Shorthand and typewriting courses, he pointed out, were not restricted to women with a secondary education, but it was given only to those whose education enabled them to profit by them. With regard to the admission of women to the building trades, it would be holding out false hopes to say there was any prospect of the building trade unions admitting them.

In reply to the question as to whether women's maintenance allowance could be made equal to men's, on the principal of equal pay for [illegible] Sir

Miss Lilian Barker, answering questions, said: "We want to cater for women who wish to become chefs, sanitary inspectors, and dispensers, and who wish to enter the legal and medical professions. We also aim at doing something to ease the present urgent need of teachers, but I may say, unofficially of course, that the profession is not sufficiently well paid to be attractive."

In an interview afterwards, Miss Barker explained that it was intended to arrange a series of intensive courses for women who desired to become teachers, in order to bring them up to the matriculation standard, and qualify them for a training college under the Board of Education.

"I am afraid," she concluded, "that the teaching profession is at present even more unpopular than domestic service."

Forms of application can be obtained after Easter from any Employment Exchange, or from the Professional Women's Registry, 33, Queen's Gate, London, S.W.7.

Manchester Guardian 9.2.20.

The Demobilised Woman.

So many minds and pens are busy at the moment with the problem of the returned soldier and how to find work for him that perhaps a good many people are inclined to overlook the fact that the same difficulty applies equally to a large number of women. Some very significant figures were given to us the other day by Dr. MURRAY LESLIE on the existing preponderance of women over men. Those figures mean a good many things, but one of the most important of them is that more women will have to earn their own living than ever before. Yet there are great numbers of young women whose choice of a way of achieving their own economic independence is at the present moment as thoroughly restricted as that of any demobilised officer or man. Very many of them actually served in uniform as auxiliaries to the armed forces, and entered on this valuable service at the very moment when in happier times they would have been training themselves for some permanent career. Still more women put themselves at the civil disposal of the country and were content temporarily to take the place of the men on active service—no one can have forgotten how wonderfully the man-power of the nation was transformed into woman-power in the later days of the war. These temporary needs have now disappeared, and the women who filled them are fronted with the task of finding or training for a real and permanent career of their own. They are entitled to all the help that can be given them at a very critical time, and the Ministry of Labour, in transforming the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment into a Standing Committee that is specially concerned with the problem that has been outlined, has obviously taken a just and necessary step. The details that are announced to-day give merely the proposed basis of the scheme, but it is interesting to see that it is to be partly financed by a grant of £500,000 from the National Relief Fund. That fund was largely subscribed to at the beginning of the war under the impression that we should then have to deal with a great amount of unemployment and distress. Events falsified that apprehension, and the unemployment now confronts us at the other end of the struggle. Money that was subscribed to meet it can hardly be better applied than in helping both men and women to the clear start in life that was forgone by them when they took up all the innumerable aspects of "work of national importance."

Globe. 9.2.20.

£500,000 FOR WOMEN.

TRAINING SCHEME FOR UNEMPLOYED AND DISABLED.

The Minister of Labour has appointed the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment to be a Standing Committee to consider, devise, and carry out special schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of conditions arising out of the war.

The Committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the National Relief Fund.

The Marchioness of Crewe is chairman, Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant hon. treasurer.

The Committee hopes to provide immediately a large number of maintenance scholarships, which will enable women to qualify as teachers of domestic science, physical culture, etc., and for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work generally.

It is hoped also to afford a small number of carefully selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine and the law.

Schemes are also contemplated for enabling women to qualify in higher grade cookery and higher clerical work.

65 2 1.

Illustrated Sunday Herald. 8.2.20.

HIGH POSTS FOR WOMEN.

Sir Robert Horne Initiates Far-reaching Scheme.

LAW AND MEDICINE.

Preference for Girls Who Helped to Win the War.

Quiet, industrious, patriotic, a large body of women sacrificed all in the great struggle against Germany. Demobilisation found them either without employment or forced to engage in work entirely unworthy of their capacity.

To the help of these and other women has now come the Minister of Labour.

LADY CREWE.

It was officially announced last night that a Central Committee of well-known women had been appointed, to consider, devise and carry out schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed, or whose earning capacities and opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of conditions arising out of the war.

The committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund and a further sum of £500,000 allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund.

Lady Crewe's Committee.

The Marchioness of Crewe is chairman of the committee, Miss Mary Macarthur hon. secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant treasurer. Members are:—

Lady Askwith,	Miss A. S. Lawrence,
Lady Roxburgh,	Hon. Mrs. A. Lyttelton,
Miss Lilian Barker,	Miss Violet Markham,
Miss M. G. Bondfield,	Lady Midleton,
Mrs. Austen Chamberlain,	Hon. Lily Montagu,
Mrs. Gasson,	Dr. Marion Phillips,
Miss R. E. Lawrence,	Miss Squire.

The Illustrated Sunday Herald understands a number of maintenance scholarships will be provided immediately to enable women to qualify for:—

Domestic science.
Physical culture.
Ministry of Health work.
Higher grade cookery.
Higher clerical work.

Training for the Law and Medicine.

In suitable cases it is hoped to afford the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine and the law.

Special consideration will be given to ex-Service and other women whose entry into war work has necessitated the interruption of their professional training, and whose circumstances are now so altered as to make it difficult to continue their studies.

It is also proposed, in conjunction with the local authorities, to provide special schemes whereby women of suitable qualities may receive an intensive course of training to enable them to fulfil conditions prescribed by the Board of Education for entering into training under the terms offered by the local education authorities.

Any woman is eligible who can prove her circumstances bring her within the Committee's terms of reference.

Daily News 9.2.20

£500,000 FOR WOMEN.

Committee to Consider a Special Scheme of Training.

The Minister of Labour has appointed the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment to be a Standing Committee to consider, devise, and carry out special schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of conditions arising out of the war.

The committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the National Relief Fund.

The committee is largely the same as was responsible for the administration of the moneys collected by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund during the war, with the addition of a few new members. The Marchioness of Crewe is chairman, Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. sec., and Mrs. H. J. Tennant hon. treasurer.

The committee hopes to provide immediately a large number of maintenance scholarships, which will enable women to quality as teachers of domestic science, physical culture, etc., and for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work generally. It is hoped also to afford a small number of carefully selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine and the law. Schemes are also contemplated for enabling women to quality in higher grade cookery and higher clerical work.

Daily Telegraph 9.2.20

TRAINING OF WOMEN.

We all profess our admiration and gratitude for the work of women during the war. Indulgence of those pleasant emotions ought to stimulate us to provide larger opportunities for women's work in peace. We cannot afford to dispense with any efficient force in the tasks of recuperation and development which lie before us. It would be injustice and folly to bar the roads to independence and prosperity to the hundreds of thousands of women whose future cannot be in married life. Therefore, all must welcome the announcement which we make today that the Minister of Labour has made arrangements for the training of women who are unemployed, or whose earning capacities have been injuriously affected as a consequence of the war. The body, which is known as the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment, is appointed to devise and put into operation the necessary schemes. It is endowed not only with the residue of the QUEEN'S "Work for Women" Fund, but with a further sum of £500,000 assigned to it by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund. We venture to say that the money at the disposal of that body could not be more wisely or more fruitfully expended. The amount is large, but when the capital sum is translated into terms of annual scholarships it will be seen that the number of students who can be provided for is none too great. We have to remember that almost the whole of the educational endowments of this country are at present devoted to the other sex. Such a division, considering the inadequate funds available for education, may be reasonable. But we should bear it in mind when we ask how far the new half-million will go. The Committee to administer it command general confidence; the Marchioness of CREWE is chairman, Miss MARY MACARTHUR hon. secretary, and Mrs. H. J. TENNANT hon. treasurer. These names are sufficient evidence that neither knowledge of the conditions of women's employments nor sympathy with women's aspirations, and with diverse classes, will be lacking. The other members represent all parties in the State, and contribute valuable experience and ability. The Committee intend to establish at once a large number of scholarships providing maintenance and training for women to qualify as teachers of domestic science and physical culture, and for posts under the Ministry of Health. A comparatively small body of students will be set on the road to the learned professions. It is intended to enable women to qualify for training under the schemes of Local Education Authorities. Other branches of work already in contemplation relate to the higher kinds of clerical employment and advanced cookery. The selection of students will be made first by the possession of those qualities which are likely to make successful valuable workers, and, secondly, by the degree of individual need. There is to be no endowment of those who require no help, nor any attempt to train square pegs to fit round holes. The sketch we have given must not be understood as representing all the work of the Committee, for other schemes of training may be, and we hope will be, planned. But in its broad outlines the policy of the Committee may be judged, and there is no doubt that it will be heartily supported. The task is one of the most important of our time, and its successful performance will add much to the prosperity and even more to the happiness of the community.

Scotsman 652
22. 3. 20. I

Numerous complaints, the outcome of a lively agitation, have been received from Scotland as to the arrangements for distributing the sum of half a million sterling allocated from the National Relief Fund for the training of women whose position has been injured by the war. These complaints, to the effect that a separate Committee should have been formed for Scotland and a specific share of the fund allotted to Scotland, have been addressed to the Labour Ministry under the belief that that Department is responsible. It is not so. The administration is in the hands of a committee nominated b ythe National Relief Fund, with Miss Mary M'Arthur as chairman. The Labour Ministry's only connection with the matter is that it agreed to give the Committee the assistance of its organisation in order to avoid the expense of setting up separate machinery. It was laid down that the Committee should avoid industrial training, which is in the hands of the Ministry, and that it should be clear that the Minister was not responsible for the acts of the Committee. Interviewing Boards are being set up in Scotland at Edinburgh, Glasgow, Perth, Aberdeen, and Inverness to see the applicants for grants, investigate their qualifications, determine whether they are likely to profit from the assistance, and to recommend a grant or refuse it. The recommendations of these Boards will come before a Central Committee in London in order to secure that the grants should be given on a uniform principle. Sir Robert Horne has always contemplated that it would be necessary to have on the Central Committee representatives of Scotland and Ireland, and in pursuance of that view he has just nominated the Hon. Mrs Hope and Miss M. M. Paterson to the Committee. These two ladies will besides act respectively as president and secretary of a Scottish Committee consisting of the heads of the five interviewing Boards. This Committee will have power to co-opt additional members on the understanding that nothing is done to cause delay. It is suggested that those interested in the movement in Scotland should direct their efforts to the nomination of suitable members to form the interviewing Boards rather than to an agitation which proceeds on a wholly false assumption. The ear-marking of a part of the fund, I am told, is regarded as impracticable, as it would lead to differentiation in classification and the amounts of the awards in different parts of the country. Moreover, it does not follow that separatist treatment would redound to the benefit of the Scottish applicants.

Liverpool Courier 9. 4. 20

TRAINING FOR WAR WORKERS.

Miss Mary MacArthur, at a meeting recently held at St. Ermin's Hotel, stated that "Millions have been spent on training ex-service men, but so far nothing has been done to meet the needs of women whose capacity for earning a livelihood had been injured or handicapped through conditions produced by the war." It is therefore a matter for congratulation that the Ministry of Labour has allocated a sum of half a million for the training of ex-service women. Certain other funds will be added to this amount, and a thoroughly representative committee has been appointed for the disbursement of the money. All the machinery of the Ministry of Labour will be at the disposal of the committee. It has been decided that this scheme shall have nothing to do with industrial training. The aim of this new endeavour will be to fit for a career those women who willingly interrupted their own educational courses to enter one or other of the women's auxiliary services or to make munitions.

6521/2

Manchester Guardian
9.2.20

£500,000 FOR WOMEN'S TRAINING.

LABOUR MINISTER APPOINTS COMMITTEE.

AN OPENING TO PROFESSIONS.

The Minister of Labour has appointed the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment to be a Standing Committee to consider, devise, and carry out special schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of conditions arising out of the war. The Committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund.

The Committee is largely the same as was responsible for the administration of the moneys collected by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund during the war, with the addition of a few new members:

The Marchioness of Crewe (chairman),
Miss Mary R. Macarthur (hon. secretary),
Mrs. H. J. Tennant (hon. treasurer),
Lady Askwith,
Miss Lilian Barker,
Miss Margaret G. Bondfield,
Mrs. Austen Chamberlain,
Mrs. Gasson (Women's Co-operative Guild),
Miss R. E. Lawrence,
Miss A. Susan Lawrance (L.C.C.),
The Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton,
Miss Violet Markham,
Lady Midleton,
The Hon. Lily Montagu,
Dr. Marion Phillips,
Lady Roxburgh,
Miss Squire.

Sir Robert Horne has also appointed Mr. F. G. Bowers, the Accountant General of the Ministry of Labour, to be financial adviser to the Committee.

The Committee has already met to consider its new work. It will be in close co-operation with the present Training Department of the Ministry of Labour, and will not in any way overlap with its schemes. The Committee will also have the co-operation of the Employment Department of the Ministry of Labour. The universities and the local education authorities are being invited to assist in providing training and additional facilities.

Scholarships.

The Committee hopes to provide immediately a large number of maintenance scholarships, which will enable women to qualify as teachers of domestic science, physical culture, &c., and also to enable women to qualify for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work generally. It is hoped also to afford a small number of carefully selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine and the law. Special consideration will be given to ex-service and other women whose entry into war work necessitated the interruption of their professional training and whose circumstances are now so altered as to make it difficult to continue their studies.

It is also proposed, in conjunction with the local authorities, to provide special schemes whereby women of suitable qualities may receive an intensive course of training to enable them to fulfil the conditions prescribed by the Board of Education for entering into training under the terms offered by the local education authorities. Schemes are also contemplated for enabling women to qualify in higher grade cookery and higher clerical work. Any woman will be eligible provided that she can show conclusively that her circumstances bring her within the Committee's terms of reference.

Candidates will be selected from those who apply according to the degree of their need, and to the possession of those qualities and abilities which will make them most likely to benefit permanently from the courses of training and to render the most valuable and permanent work when trained. The Committee are prepared to consider any schemes which may be submitted to them for carrying out objects for which they have been appointed, but no individual applications can be considered at the moment. It is hoped in a few days to make a further announcement regarding the procedure which applicants must adopt.

£500,000 FOR WOMEN
Times — 9.2.20
COMPREHENSIVE PLANS FOR TRAINING.

SPECIAL CONSIDERATION TO WAR WORKERS.

The Minister of Labour has appointed the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment to be a standing committee to consider, devise, and carry out special schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed, or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of conditions arising out of the war. The committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund. The committee is largely the same as that which was responsible for the administration of the money collected by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund during the war, with the addition of a few new members. The members are:—

Lady Crewe (chairman), Miss Mary R. Macarthur (honorary secretary), Mrs. H. J. Tennant (honorary treasurer), Lady Askwith, Miss Lilian Barker, Miss Margaret G. Bondfield, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, Mrs. Gasson (Women's Co-Operative Guild), Miss R. E. Lawrence, Miss A. Susan Lawrance (L.C.C.), the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Miss Violet Markham, Lady Midleton, the Hon. Lily Montagu, Dr. Marion Phillips, Lady Roxburgh (secretary, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund), and Miss Squire.

Sir Robert Horne has appointed Mr. F. G. Bowers, the Accountant-General of the Ministry of Labour, to be financial adviser to the committee.

The committee has already met to consider its new work. It will be in close co operation with the present Training Department of the Ministry of Labour, and will not in any way overlap with its schemes. The committee will also have the co-operation of the Employment Department of the Ministry of Labour. The universities and the local education authorities are being invited to assist in providing training and additional facilities.

MAINTENANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.

It is hoped to provide immediately a large number of maintenance scholarships, which will enable women to qualify as teachers of domestic science, physical culture, &c., and also to enable women to qualify for posts under the Ministry of Health in connexion with public health work generally. It is hoped also to afford a small number of carefully selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine and the law. Special consideration will be given to ex-service and other women whose entry into war work necessitated the interruption of their professional training and whose circumstances are now so altered as to make it difficult to continue their studies. It is also proposed, in conjunction with local authorities, to provide special schemes whereby women of suitable qualities may receive an intensive course of training to enable them to fulfil the conditions prescribed by the Board of Education for entering into training under the terms offered by the Local Education Authorities. Schemes are also contemplated for enabling women to qualify in higher grade cookery and higher clerical work.

Any woman will be eligible provided that she can show conclusively that her circumstances bring her within the committee's terms of reference. Candidates will be selected from those who apply according to the degree of their need and to the possession of those qualities and abilities which will make them most likely to benefit permanently from the courses of training and to render the most valuable and permanent work when trained. The committee are prepared to consider any schemes which may be submitted to them for carrying out the objects for which they have been appointed, but no individual applications can be considered at the moment. It is hoped in a few days to make a further announcement regarding the procedure which applicants must adopt.

WIDE SCOPE OF SCHEME.

HOPE OF TRAINING 5,000 WOMEN EFFECTIVELY.

The grant from the National Relief Fund was foreshadowed in The Times on Saturday. The Queen is much interested in the scheme, which was primarily initiated on the nucleus of the Fund which she was so largely instrumental in raising.

Miss Macarthur discussed the scheme with a representative of The Times on Saturday.

"There is no doubt," she said, "that the present position of employment in higher grade posts is worse than it was before. There is, of course, plenty of work to do and plenty of women who cannot do it. Take the women who have been employed in the different Government services, the disbanded naval and military services, and the Government Departments. A certain number have reached a high standard of education and in many cases courses of studies were interrupted for patriotic reasons, and the women now have not the means to resume their interrupted studies.

"At present the Board of Education announces a shortage of 9,000 women teachers. A large number of those dismissed from Government Departments would, if they had a short intensive course to bring them up to the standard of the Board of Education, be suitable for training as elementary teachers. A scheme to provide a short course with maintenance has been arranged in conjunction with various education authorities throughout the country. Manchester is very keen, and has already several hundred applicants. As to the many thousands of dismissed clerical workers, if they had a knowledge of stenography and one or more modern languages, particularly Spanish, a large number could get employment, in view of the trade openings with South America. We propose, therefore, to offer a number of maintenance scholarships.

652 I/3

652 I

"NO FAVOURITISM OR PATRONAGE."

"The Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund have laid special stress on the fact that only women who can show that their unemployment is due to the war, that their opportunities have been detrimentally affected, and that their capacity for availing themselves of the training is sufficient, will be accepted. There will be no favouritism and no patronage. It will be possible to deal only with a portion of the women who apply. If we deal with 5,000 effectively we shall have done well. There seems no reason why any working class girl should not be equally eligible with the high grade clerk in a Government department or W.A.A.C. offices. We want to add to the pool of national efficiency. The women will be chosen for training, not only according to the degree of their need, but the likelihood of their getting permanent benefit from it.

"We intend that the money shall be spent in a scientific way, for though it is not Government money, Government machinery will be used instead of frittering away a large number of small sums among charitable or semi-charitable schemes. No age limit has been considered, but in giving training the age of the applicant for training in certain professions is important. The labour exchanges and the professional registries will be used in selecting candidates, and for the highly expensive courses, like medicine or degrees in commerce, applications will be considered by a special committee of selection."

Manchester Despatch
10.2.20

WOMEN'S £500,000.

Training Scheme for All Classes.

COOKS TO LAWYERS.

So many women have found themselves and their economic conditions injuriously affected by the war that the news that something definite is to be done to relieve such cases will be hailed with general approval.

It is now definitely announced that the Minister of Labour has appointed the Central Committee on women's training and employment to be a Standing Committee to consider, devise, and carry out special schemes of work and training for women whose earning capacities have suffered by the war. Mr. F. G. Bowers, Accountant General of the Ministry of Labour, has been appointed financial adviser to the committee, which, except for the addition of a few new members, is largely the same as the former "Work for Women" Fund Committee. The residue of that fund has been placed at the committee's disposal, and a further grant of £500,000 has been made by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund. The Marchioness of Crewe is chairwoman, Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. secretary, and Miss H. J. Tennant hon. treasurer.

Speaking yesterday to a representative of the Daily Dispatch, Miss Macarthur appeared optimistic regarding the future of the new scheme.

No Favouritism.

"There are several points," continued Miss Macarthur, "that I want to emphasise about this scheme. There will be no class barriers and no element of favouritism or patronage in the selection of those eligible.

"Recently we have been in correspondence with the Manchester educational authorities. They advertised for women desirous of training as teachers, so we sent them a circular, and they have now asked us if we are prepared to help them and give them financial aid."

Lady Roxburgh, who was formerly secretary of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, is also on the committee of the new scheme. "It is," she said yesterday, "to early yet to enter into much detail regarding the work we hope to do, but generally speaking, this half-million and the residue of the Queen's Fund will provide a large number of maintenance scholarships to help women to qualify not only as good domestic servants and clerks, but as higher grade cooks, teachers in domestic science, and, in carefully selected cases, as doctors and lawyers."

Times
9.2.20

Women and Work.

An important step has been taken by the MINISTER of LABOUR for the assistance of women whose capacity of earning a livelihood has been injured or handicapped by conditions produced by the war. As we announce today, he has appointed the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment to act as a Standing Committee for the consideration and execution of special schemes of work and training for their benefit. LADY CREWE is the chairman of the Committee, which is almost identical with that which administered the Queen's Work for Women Fund during the war. In addition to the unexpended residue of the QUEEN'S Fund they will have at their disposal a sum of £500,000, which has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund. The need for the work which they have undertaken for their fellow-women is urgent. After the Armistice, and again after the signing of the Peace Treaty, many thousands of girls and women of all classes who had been doing almost everything except fight for their country, in Service units, in hospitals, in munition works, in Government offices, and scores of other branches of municipal and national service were automatically thrown out of employment. The units were disbanded, the munition works were closed, the fighting men whose places they had taken came home, and there was nothing left for them to do but to retire. Many, if not most, of them had, so far as their future occupations were concerned, lost from one to five of the most valuable years of their lives. Whatever their degree of education and intelligence, their training for their normal careers had either not been begun or had been cut short. Every woman who is now in that position, and at the same time is out of work, will eventually have the right to submit her case for the consideration of the Committee. Medicine and law, domestic science and physical culture, advanced cookery and clerical work, poultry keeping and needlework, are some of the subjects in which instruction leading to professional careers and a living wage will be offered. The Committee have already secured the cooperation of the employment and training departments of the Ministry of Labour and are endeavouring to enlist the practical sympathy of the universities and local education authorities. The distressing case of thousands of women who are only or can only be fitted for the humbler classes of work, such as domestic service, is well shown in an appeal issued by the Young Women's Christian Association. Every night they are forced to turn away a hundred respectable girls who have nowhere to go. Before the Association can open more domestic servants' training hostels, they must pay off their present debt of £10,000, and although by no means all those who apply to them are suitable for housework, the scarcity of servants is so great that the endeavour to meet it deserves every encouragement. The more general and comprehensive proposals of the Committee presided over by LADY CREWE command, we understand, the heartfelt sympathy of the QUEEN. It must be the wish of every woman and every man in the country that their efforts to lend a helping hand to the unemployed girls and women who dared and endured so much during the war may be wisely guided to a triumphant success.

British Citizen
12.2.20.

652
I

AN IMPORTANT WOMEN'S COMMITTEE.

BUT WHY ARE EX-SERVICE WOMEN IGNORED?

652 I/4

A committee has been appointed by the Minister of Labour to consider, devise, and carry out schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed, or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of the conditions arising out of the war. This is an excellent move, and the residue of the £1,250,000 subscribed to the Queen's Work for Women Committee is to be allocated to the new committee, together with £500,000 from the National Relief Fund.

So far, so good. It is when we come to the personnel of the committee that we have doubts. The list of seventeen contains the names of harmless though probably excellent ladies such as Lady Crewe (chairman), Lady Midleton, Miss Violet Markham, and Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, such well-known ladies as Miss Susan Lawrence, Miss Lilian Barker, Mrs. H. J. Tennant, Lady Askwith, and Miss Squire. Other names are of such doubtful national repute—at least so far as their record during the war was concerned—as Dr. Marion Phillips, Miss Margaret Bondfield, and last, but not least, as secretary, Miss Mary Macarthur.

But not a single representative of the women's services which rendered such loyal and invaluable assistance during the war. Is this a deliberate snub, or have the W.A.A.C.'s, the W.R.N.S., the V.A.D.'s' the Women's Legion, the W.R.A.F.'s, and the Land Corps, not to mention others, been overlooked by some quaint coincidence? Perhaps Sir Robert Horne can explain.

Daily Express
9.2.20.

£500,000 TO TRAIN WOMEN.

CANDIDATES FOR LAW AND MEDICINE.

The Minister of Labour has appointed central committee on women's trainin and employment to administer a grant o £500,000 from the National Relief Fund t assist unemployed women.

The Marchioness of Crewe is chairman Miss Mary Macarthur honorary secretary and Mrs H. J. Tennant honorary treasurer.

"No woman can be entitled surplus who is efficiently trained to do necessary work," said Miss Macarthur to a "Daily Express" representative yesterday. "The only surplus men or women are those who are not doing their share of the world's work. There are jobs enough to go round, to all trained workers. Application for assistance must not, however, be made yet."

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The scheme will not interfere with any of the Government training schemes already in existence, but will be carried on in conjunction with them. A large number of maintenance scholarships will be provided which will give women the opportunity of qualifying as teachers of domestic science, physical culture, and other subjects.

Other women will be assisted while qualifying for public health work. A few may be chosen as suitable for medicine and law.

Schemes are contemplated for giving some the opportunity to study higher-grade cookery and higher clerical work.

Special consideration will be given to ex-service and other women whose entry into war-work necessitated the interruption of their professional training, and whose circumstances are now so altered as to make it difficult to continue their studies.

In addition to the half-million from the National Relief Fund, the committee is empowered to use the residue of the Queen's Work for Women Fund. It will have the co-operation of the Ministry of Labour, the universities, and local education authorities.

Daily Herald
9.2.20.

UNEMPLOYED WOMEN

New Maintenance and Training Scheme

£500,000 GRANTED

As a result of suggestions from the National Federation of Women Workers a grant of £500,000 has been made from the National Relief Fund to assist unemployed women, and, in addition, the residue of the Queen's Work for Women Fund is to be applied to that end.

The funds will be administered by the Central Committee of Women's Training and Employment, which the Minister of Labour has now appointed as a Standing Committee and its work will be to devise and carry out special schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of the war.

Maintenance Scholarships

The scheme is to provide at once a large number of maintenance scholarships, which will enable women to qualify as teachers of domestic science, physical culture, and other subjects. Other women will be assisted while qualifying for public health work. A few may be chosen as suitable for medicine and law.

Schemes are contemplated for giving some the opportunity to study higher-grade cookery and higher clerical work. In conjunction with local authorities, it is proposed to provide special intensive courses to enable women to fulfil the conditions prescribed by the Board of Education for entering into training under the terms offered by local education authorities.

Interrupted Careers

Special consideration will be given to ex-Service and other women whose entry into war-work necessitated the interruption of their professional training, and whose circumstances are now so altered as to make it difficult to continue their studies.

Of the Central Committee Miss Mary Macarthur is honorary secretary and the members of the Committee include Miss Margaret Bondfield, Mrs. Garson, Miss Susan Lawrence, and Dr. Marion Phillips.

Woman's Leader
13. 2. 20

£500,000 for Women.

The residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, with a further sum of £500,000 allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund, will be used for training women who are unemployed, or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been affected by conditions arising out of the war. The Ministry of Labour has appointed the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment to be a Standing Committee to carry out the scheme; the Marchioness of Crewe is Chairman of the Committee, Miss Mary Macarthur hon. Secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant Treasurer. A number of maintenance scholarships will be provided immediately to enable women to qualify for Domestic Science, Physical Culture, Ministry of Health Work, Higher Grade Cooking, and Higher Clerical work. A scheme to provide a short course with maintenance has been arranged with various education authorities throughout the country, and hundreds of Government clerks, by short intensive courses, will be brought up to the standard required by the Board of Education for training as elementary school teachers. There will also be opportunities for suitable applicants to qualify for the Higher Professions, such as Law and Medicine. Many hundreds of the more competent dismissed clerical workers will go on to higher clerical work, where they will learn Spanish with a view to our trading with South America. Women will be trained only in those professions when there is a demand for more workers, such as highly qualified nurses, teachers of domestic science, physical culture, and health supervisors. The Commitee have already secured the co-operation of the Employment and Training Department of the Ministry of Labour, and hope to secure the sympathy and services of the Universities and local Education Authorities. We trust that the efforts of the Committee to help the unemployed war workers will be crowned with success; that they will bear fruit in the years to come we cannot doubt.

Times
26. 2. 20

TRAINING OF WOMEN.

SIR R. HORNE, Minister of Labour (Hillhead, C.U.), in reply to MAJOR HILLS (Durham, C.U.), said:—The Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment, to whom the sum of £500,000 has been allocated from the National Relief Fund, are giving careful consideration to the problem of women whose education or training was interrupted in consequence of the war. The Committee are working in the closest cooperation with the heads of the women's services and other organizations concerned.

CAPTAIN REDMOND (Waterford, Nat.) asked whether any portion of this sum was allocated to the training of women in Ireland. SIR R. HORNE replied that the Committee dealing with the matter were allocating the money entirely at their own discretion. He had no doubt that they would consider every proposal that came before them. The fund (he added in answer to another question) was in no way under his jurisdiction, nor were the Committee. The Committee of women who were charged under previous funds with the duty of helping women whose interests were injured in the war were awarded this sum from the National Relief Fund. They asked for and he was giving his help, but he had no jurisdiction over anything they did or supervision over their executive action. He had put the whole machinery of his Department at their disposal, and that was their relation with the Ministry of Labour.

652
I

6521/5

The Gentlewoman Feb 21. 20.

The VOICE of WOMAN.

THE GOVERNMENT'S NEED OF US.

DAYBREAK

WHEN the war came to an end, and reconstruction plans were drawn up by the Government, the sum of six million pounds was voted to the Board of Education, to be spent on helping demobilised soldiers, whose training had been interrupted by the war, to complete their education at the University or elsewhere, so that they might fit themselves to fill responsible posts later on. Besides voting six million pounds, our Government sought to find other ways in which to help these men who had sacrificed so much for their country, and consequently deserved so much from it, and it established various technical schools and courses of training which it arranged for ex-Service men to attend, either on special terms or free of charge.

But among all these excellent schemes the woman citizen might search in vain for one which benefited the woman worker, and in particular those of us who were interested regretted that no official recognition was given to members of the women's forces who had also sacrificed much, who also wished to make up for lost time and complete their education, and who in many cases stood in need of a Government grant to help them. At first we confined ourselves to regretting, for we felt that, great as was the claim of the women's forces upon the nation, the claim of the men was even greater, and we knew only too well that there might not be "enough to go round." But when rumours reached our ear that more money had been voted to the Board of Education than was being applied for, then certain leaders of women's organisations approached the Powers that Be, and asked that the grant might be available for demobilised Service women as well as for demobilised Service men.

GOOD NEWS, AND UNEXPECTED.

All this is somewhat ancient history. At the time, the Government made no alteration in its arrangements, and one jumped, perhaps rather hastily, to the conclusion that no provision for women's education would be made for the present. The delight of last week's announcement was therefore increased, because the news came unexpectedly to us all. Last week, whether as a result of the representations of organised women on the grave unemployment among women, or whether for some other reason, the Ministry of Labour announced its decision to appoint a Standing Committee to devise and carry out schemes of work and training for women who are unemployed or whose working capacities have been impaired by war conditions.

Five hundred thousand pounds have been allotted to this Committee for its work as well as what remains unspent of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, raised during the war. The Marchioness of Crewe is the chairman of the committee, and its members are all women well known for their public work and their knowledge of women's affairs. It is particularly interesting to notice that these Committee members are of no one party or line of life, but are known to be of widely varying political views and activities. Who says that women can never co-operate? The Committee has already met to discuss general schemes of work. Universities and local bodies are being asked for sympathy and assistance, and the training and employment departments of the Ministry of Labour are to work in close collaboration with the new body.

EARTH

HIGH HOPES AND ENDEAVOURS.

The Committee not only hopes to provide scholarships to enable women to qualify as teachers of the domestic sciences, but also to train women for posts under the Ministry of Health, and, in the case of specially selected women, for entry into the medical and legal professions. Cookery, clerical work, teaching in schools, teaching in physical culture—all these and many other forms of employment the Committee will arrange for training. Truly this is an ambitious scheme, and one which, when carried out, should prove of the very greatest possible value to women. No woman citizen who knows anything or cares anything for women's position as workers to-day, will fail to take a keen interest in the work of the Committee and to give it her loyal support should the opportunity occur.

The practical working of the scheme will, of course, benefit many demobilised members of the women's Services. Perhaps it seems ungrateful to express regrets in face of the establishment of this new and most welcome Committee, and yet I cannot help wishing that our women's forces as such had been recognised in the provision of training facilities for the demobilised. However, what women's work during the war has failed to win, women's work in peace time will surely achieve, and every woman who profits by the proposed new training schemes and fits herself to fill and ultimately successfully fills the post for which she is trained, will be doing something towards persuading the country that women's service is one of its greatest assets which it does well to render efficient and make use of as widely as it can.

Portia.

Yorkshire Observer
Bradford. 17. 2. 20

Civil Servants held an election last week to decide which members of the staff should sit as representatives on the newly-formed Whitley Council, which is to include both the heads of departments and representatives of the various grades in the service, and is to consider all recommendations for alterations in conditions of work, promotion, or pay in the various Government Departments.

Electorates were somewhat small, as in one Department there were only thirty voters, but this served to accentuate the personal interest. The successful candidate of this particular Department, I am told, was a "promoted abstracter," which meant a clerk who had obtained promotion from the lowest grade automatically during the war owing to the shortage of men, and not by public examination. The ex-soldiers also ran a candidate, but he was defeated by one vote, a result which his supporters attribute to the fact that he abstained from voting while the successful candidate did not.

* * *

The Government training schemes are due to end on June 30 next, and Sir Robert Horne, in response to the urgent request for a deputation of the Women's Industrial League, is considering whether they shall be extended beyond that date. In view of the possibility of their being terminated at the conclusion of the original period during which grants were intended to operate, added interest is lent to the formation of the new Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment, which has been formed to disburse the surplus of the Queen's Work for Women Fund and the £500,000 which has been allocated out of the National Relief Fund.

The primary object of this Committee will be to train suitable women whose prospects have been affected by the war for the professions, and the question that is now occupying women interested in such subjects is how far the Committee will go towards carrying on the lower grade training schemes.

The new Committee, I am told, has secured the service of Miss Lilian Barker as organising secretary. Miss Barker has been lent by the Ministry of Labour, and will be a tremendous asset to the new Committee, of which Miss Mary MacArthur is secretary. During the war Miss Barker was in charge of all the welfare work for women at Woolwich Arsenal, but her real task came after the armistice in endeavouring to re-settle the girls as they were discharged daily by the thousand.

Glasgow Herald
29. 3. 20

QUEEN'S FUND AND SCOTTISH WOMEN

March 26.

Sir,—A letter from Sir Robert Horne to Sir Richard Lodge, published in Thursday's press, expounds the method by which it is proposed that the Central Committee on Women's Employment and Training should administer the residue of the Queen's Work for Women Fund and a sum of £500,000 given by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund. The machinery which is proposed for Scotland provides a committee which would have merely advisory powers.

We, the undersigned, ask you through the medium of your valuable paper to give publicity to the expressed desire of many women's organisations in Scotland that a separate Scottish Committee should be set up with powers to deal with Scottish applications and to dispense any part of the funds which may be set aside for Scotland.

In the letter from Sir Robert Horne it is alleged that it was "well known to many women in Scotland who take an interest in these matters that this application was being put forward by the committee in question." We regret that Sir Robert Horne has apparently been misinformed, as the earliest information generally available that the grant had been made was obtained through the daily papers some time in February, and steps were at once taken to put the claims of Scotland before the responsible authorities.

Past experience has proved that regulations laid down by bodies sitting in London, composed of those who have not special knowledge of Scottish conditions, cannot always be usefully applied to Scotland. For example, in the autumn of 1919 a sum of £11,000 was allocated to Scotland from the National Relief Fund for the benefit of young persons whose education had suffered through the war. This sum was entrusted to a special Scottish committee to administer under regulations laid down in London. The Scottish committee were unable to bring any of the cases which applied to them within the terms of their remit. The £11,000 was thus lost to Scotland, though in general it will be agreed that the education of young persons in Scotland had suffered during the war. This Scottish committee occupied approximately the position that is contemplated for the interviewing boards.

Whilst we agree that it is necessary to have a uniform principle for making grants, we contend that this could be secured by setting up a Scottish committee to act as a "sieve," independent of but in communication with the committee in London.

The money to be used was given by the public of the three kingdoms, Scotland contributing a generous proportion, and the public have the right to insist that it shall be administered with more careful regard to the individual claims of those who apply for the fund than is possible by means of an over-centralised system. —We are, etc.,

(Signed) ISOBEL, ABERDEEN AND TEMAIR, Convener, Standing Committee of the Scottish Branches of the National Council of Women.
J. E. HANNAY, Vice-Convener, Standing Committee of the Scottish Branches of the National Council of Women.
J. J. M. SALVESEN, Joint Convener, Scottish Training School for Policewomen and Patrols.
HELEN LESLIE MACKENZIE, President, Scottish National Association of Women Health Visitors and Women Sanitary Inspectors.
A. W. GILL, President, Scottish Matrons' Association.

---

103 West Regent Street, Glasgow,
March 27.

Sir,—I fear the laboured and somewhat disingenuous explanation on the above by Miss Macarthur which appears in your columns of yesterday is likely rather to increase than to allay the distrust and resentment felt in Scotland by those who are conversant with the facts of the case. It is an explanation which explains nothing.

I need only deal with the essential point at issue:—(1) Miss Macarthur takes exception to my saying that the sum of £500,000 was "handed over" to her committee to be "used at their discretion," and that instead "no sum of £500,000" but "an equivalent sum" (whatever that may mean) has been "allocated as a fund" from which her committee "are permitted to draw from time to time as required under new and specific terms of reference." It is unnecessary to comment on such a statement as this.

The actual facts have already been set forth in your columns. Permit me once more briefly to recapitulate them. The women's committee in London, of which Miss Macarthur is secretary, has not only made claim to the administration of the whole residue of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, but has also obtained the above substantial sum from the National Relief Fund, both of which were raised throughout the United Kingdom, and are, therefore, joint property. With much complacency they next proceeded to make arrangements for setting up throughout the country what they termed "interviewing boards," which would be nominally under the Ministry of Labour, but really, it now appears, under the entire control of this women's London committee. These were to have no executive powers, and their functions were to be restricted to interviewing candidates and recommending them for grants—all such applications and recommendations having to be submitted to the London committee before any of the money (including Scotland's share of the same) would be granted. This is neither "administering" nor "financing." Therefore Miss Macarthur's statement that the "selection and financing of Scottish applicants—in fact, the whole administration of the Scottish work, will be exclusively in Scottish hands," does not appear to be an accurate presentation of the facts. Needless to say such a proposal, which would place Scotland on the same level as an English county, does not commend itself to Scottish people, and to re-name these bodies "selection boards," as Miss Macarthur now does, will not make them any more acceptable.

(2) Miss Macarthur does not reply to my question as to what the residue of the Queen's Fund amounts to. It is a question to which the public who subscribe have a right to an answer.

(3) It is hardly necessary to deal with Miss Macarthur's trifling inaccuracy in regard to three of her leading officials being Scotswomen, while, I understand, only two can claim this distinction. Scotland is not really concerned as to the precise spots in the United Kingdom which have the honour of being the birthplaces of these ladies. What it is concerned about is the proposal to place the supreme control of a joint fund under a women's committee sitting in London, to which appeals for assistance and money from Scottish women must be referred This we hold to be neither consistent with the dignity of Scotland nor practical from a business point of view.

(4) The appointment, as a second thought, of two women from Scotland to sit on this London committee is an arrangement which was neither asked nor desired. On the contrary, in the influentially signed memorial appearing in the "Herald" the other day a strong protest is made against this as "giving a false sense of security which has no foundation in reality."

If instead of claiming the whole of a joint fund Miss Macarthur's committee had contented themselves with a just share, and in place of thus assuming (unasked) a dictatorship for Scotland these ladies had confined their energies to England (surely a large enough field for even the most ambitious), no objection would have been offered. If Scotland has been behindhand with England in asking for a grant, that is an omission which can easily be remedied.

One more point. If Miss Macarthur had the knowledge of Scottish women's affairs which would justify her interference in this matter she would have been aware that schemes and suggestions for training and employment have been submitted repeatedly by expert women's societies in Scotland to various Departments in the State, including the Ministry of Labour.

The crucial question is this, By whose authority have Miss Macarthur's committee assumed these powers, and who has authorised them to bring forward out and dried schemes for the administration for the whole of the United Kingdom? Sir Robert Horne disclaims all responsibility, and, so far as I am aware, no other Government Department stands sponsor for them. It would appear, therefore, that these ambitious proposals have been brought forward by these ladies "on their own," and that they have trusted to sheer bluff and the apathy of the public for carrying them through. It is well, therefore, that, thanks to the vigilance of our Scottish women's societies, the circumstances have been brought to light and their action challenged.—I am, etc.,

A. BALLANTYNE.

Morning Post
31. 3. 20.

How the Women's Training and Employment Committee was enriched against its UNSOUGHT will was told yesterday by Miss PROFITS. Mary Macarthur, the Hon. Secretary. "We have," she said, "a little nest-egg of £10,000 which we got out of some Government contracts without trying. We obtained certain contracts for shirts and socks and similar goods on our merits for the sole purpose of finding employment for women and with no idea of making any profit. In fact, we tried hard not to make any profit, but we simply couldn't help doing so, although we paid higher wages and used less efficient labour than did other contractors, and were not able to command the same mechanical facilities." One wonders what profits were made by those contractors who paid lower wages for more efficient labour, who possessed adequate machinery, and who did not try to work without gain?

Star
11. 3. 20

652
I

LAST 2½ MILLIONS OF PRINCE'S FUND.

Money Being Used in Relief of Unemployment.

The unallocated balance of the National Relief Fund is now under a million. According to the balance-sheet up to June 30, 1919, the undistributed money amounted to 2½ millions, and the public will be interested to know how it is proposed to spend it.

"The Star" is informed by a high official of the fund that recently £500,000 was granted to the Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which Lady Crewe is chairman and Miss Mary Macarthur the secretary.

Training Women Workers.

This grant is for the purpose of training women war workers and others brought into employment during hostilities who have found themselves stranded on the return of the men.

Their work in many cases was highly specialised, and while they acquired great dexterity at it the knowledge gained is of no value whatever except with the country in a state of war. And unless they are trained they have no prospect of obtaining work.

Another of the objects is to assist girls to complete their education and studies in medicine, in hygiene, etc., which they forsook in order to become Waacs or Wrens. Many find the financial position of their parents has altered, and they are unable to take up their studies without assistance.

Helping Emigrants.

A grant of £500,000 has been made for the assistance of ex-service men, women and civilians who have suffered on account of the war and who wish to emigrate.

Although it is no part of the policy of the Committee to encourage emigration, it has been reported to them that a large number of people intend to emigrate anyhow, and Lord Milner urged the view that it was in the interests of the mother country and equally of the dominions that these people should be helped to go out under conditions which would give them a fair chance of success.

In many cases the Government is paying the passage and the Relief Fund is making grants towards equipment

The £500,000 is the maximum grant, but it is not certain the whole of this sum will be needed to meet the needs of intending emigrants

£100,000 for Ex-Officers

This grant is administered by a joint committee consisting of representatives of the executive committee of the fund and of representatives of the overseas settlement committee appointed by the Colonial Office

Other recent allocations are £100,000 to Lord Haig's Officers' Association; £100,000 to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, and £50,000 to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families' Association. These grants were supplementary to the out-of-work donation and to the grants of the War Pensions Fund.

The Committee is now considering a scheme for continuing the out-of-work donation fund.

Distress Due to Unemployment.

When it ceased last November as far as civilians were concerned, the Government appealed to the Committee to arrange for the relief of distress due to unemployment so far as that unemployment was due to the war.

The Committee accordingly circularised the local authorities, who would know where special circumstances existed, and where necessary special local relief committees have been appointed to make the grants.

How much money the latter scheme will absorb is not known. "It may even consume the remainder of the balance," said the official. "We don't know, as the inquiries have not yet been completed."

652
I

Westminster Gazette
1.4.20

WOMEN'S WELFARE.

THE TRAINING & EMPLOYMENT SCHEME.

POST-WAR PLANS.

The Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment, St. Ermins, Westminster, S.W.1, is largely the same as that which was responsible for the administration of the money collected by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund during the War, with the addition of some new members. The members are:

The Marchioness of Crewe (chairman), Miss Mary R. Macarthur (hon. secretary), Mrs. H. J. Tennant (hon. treasurer), Lady Askwith, Miss Lilian Barker, Miss Margaret G. Bondfield, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, Mrs. Gasson (Women's Co-operative Guild), Miss R. E. Lawrence, Miss A. Susan Lawrence (L.C.C.), the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Miss Violet Markham, Lady Midleton, the Hon. Lily Montagu, Dr. Marion Phillips, Lady Roxburgh (secretary, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund), Miss Squire, the Marchioness of Londonderry (to represent the North of Ireland), Miss F. H. Durham, Miss A. Anderson, and Miss G. Tuckwell.

The Hon. Lady Hope and Miss M. M. Paterson have been asked to represent Scotland on the Central Committee, and Lady Kenmare to represent the rest of Ireland.

The committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund. The Minister of Labour has put the machinery of the Department at the disposal of the committee, and has appointed Mr. F. G. Bowers, the Accountant-General of the Ministry of Labour, to be financial adviser to the committee.

Wide Scope of Training.

The scheme will cover a wide scope of training, and it is hoped to provide a number of maintenance scholarships which will enable women to qualify as teachers for posts under the Ministry of Health in connexion with public health work and to afford a small number of carefully selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine, dentistry, and the law. (Schemes are also contemplated for enabling women to qualify in higher-grade cookery and higher clerical work.)

The committee do not at the present time propose to undertake industrial training for women, as this is being provided by the Women's Training Branch of the Ministry of Labour.

Apart from this restriction, it will be open to applicants to put forward suggestions in regard to any kind of training which they may wish to undertake, and each application will be considered by the committee on its merits.

The training provided is for the assistance of women whose capacity of earning a livelihood has been injured or handicapped by conditions produced by the war.

Local Interviewing Committees.

It is proposed to establish local interviewing committees in the following centres: London, Birmingham, Leeds, Manchester, Newcastle, Cardiff, and Bristol. Similar arrangements are under consideration for Scotland and Ireland.

In addition to holding meetings at their headquarters, local interviewing committees will also meet at any other centre where a number of applicants can be conveniently brought together for interview. The local interviewing committee will consist of:

Representative of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment will act as chairman;

Representative of the Local Education Authority. In addition a University representative or other expert will be asked to attend when necessary;

Representative of the Women's Training Branch of the Ministry of Labour;

Representative of the Employment Department of the Ministry of Labour.

Many Universities and education authorities have already appointed their representatives to serve on the local interviewing boards, and all have expressed their interest in the committee's schemes and their desire to do all in their power to assist.

The committee also have the sympathy and co-operation of the women's services, many societies interested in women's training, and the personal help and advice of numerous persons who have expert knowledge of various branches of education and training.

Forms of application for training can be obtained after Easter from any employment exchange, or the Professional Women's Registry, 99, Queen's-gate, London, S.W.1. The form will be filled in by the applicant, and will be made returnable to the most conveniently situated interviewing committee.

The forms will be dealt with by the interviewing committee, and in suitable cases the applicant will be invited to interview the committee, who will discuss with her the career for which she proposes to train, and the possibilities of finding employment after training. The applicant will subsequently be informed as to the result of her application by the Central Committee on Women's training and Employment, St. Ermin's, Westminster, S.W.1, who will consider each case, and all correspondence in connexion with the place of training, payment of fees, maintenance, &c., will be conducted direct between the central committee and the applicant.

Manchester Guardian
31. 3. 20

TRAINING GRANTS FOR WOMEN.

WHERE AND HOW TO APPLY.

(From a Woman Correspondent.)

LONDON, TUESDAY.

It will be remembered that some time ago a newly formed Central Committee on Women's Employment was empowertd to expend the residue of the "Quen's Work for Women" Fund on a scheme for the training of women, and that to this sum a grant of £500,000 was added by the Executive of tthe National Relief Fund. The Minister of Labour put the machinery of the department at the disposal of the Committee of which Lady Crewe is chairman, Miss Mary Macarthur hon. secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant hon. treasurer. This afternoon a meeting of the Committee was held to discuss its work, a scheme of co-operation, and method of dealing with applications.

The scheme will cover a wide scope of training, and it is hoped to provide for a number of maintenance scholarships which will enable women to qualify as teachers, for posts under the inistry of Health in connection with public health work, and to afford a small number of carefully selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine, dentistry, and the law. Schemes are also contemplated for enabling women to qualify in higher grade cookery and higher clerical work, while applicants may also make inquiries about other kinds of training which they may wish to undertake.

The Qualification.

The training provided was for the assistance of women whose capacity of earning a livelihood has been injured or handicapped by conditions produced by the war. Women and girls who are entitled to apply for assistance in training should obtain a form of application from an employment exchange and fill it in. This will be dealt with by the Interviewing Committee, and in suitable cases the applicant will be invited to interview the Committee, who will discuss with her the career for which she proposes to train and the possibilities of employment.

Local interviewing committees, with whom education authorities and many women's societies will co-operate, will be set up in London, Birmingham, Leeds, Cardiff, Manchester, and other towns, and a committee will also meet at any other centre where a large number of applicants can be conveniently brought together.

A great number of applications have already been received, and are being attended to by the Committee.

652 I 7

Star.
31.3.20
652
I

Unavoidable Profits.

Miss Mary Macarthur, explaining the new training scheme for women yesterday, said: "We've got half a million of money, and to add to it we have a little nest-egg of £10,000 we made out of War Office contracts. We tried not to make any money, but we couldn't help it."

This nest-egg was made on 4 million shirts, 2 million socks, and 1 million other garments. If £10,000 is the result of not trying to make a profit, what happens when you really try?

Birmingham Gazette
1.4.20.

PICKING IT UP.

Miss Mary Macarthur, explaining the new training scheme for women said: "We've got half a million of money, and to add to it we have a little nest-egg of £10,000 we made out of War Office contracts. We tried not to make any money, but we couldn't help it." The nest-egg was made on four million shirts, two million socks, and one million other garments. If £10,000 is the result of not trying to make a profit, what happens when you really try? It reminds one of Mr. Punch's picture of the Yorkshireman, "We don't make money in Bradford, we joost pick it oop."

Pall Mall Gazette
31. 3. 20.

TALK OF THE TOWN

By DAMARIS.

Dover-street, Wednesday,

Tea at a Ministry.

Tea and cakes at the Ministry of Labour seems something of a contradiction, but it was significant yesterday, I think, of a determination to do away as far as possible with red tape—a determination held by the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment which, through the medium of the hon. secretary, Miss Mary MacArthur, and Miss Lilian Barker, set out to tell us all about their scheme.

* * *

Briefly, it is to train for various professions ex-Service girls of special ability whose intention to enter various professions has been rendered impossible by the war. A typical "emergency" case was that of a girl who had passed her intermediate at the Royal College of Science, but threw up her work to join one of the women's services. Her parents belong to the New Poor now, and she is anxious to study agricultural insect pests, so the Committee is paying her fees and maintenance until she passes her final examination.

* * *

They hope to get a number of girls up to the standard at which the Board of Education will step in and train them for teachers, and every applicant for training can put forward her own ideas of what she wants to do and it will be carefully considered.

Rather Funny.

The Committee is a very representative body, ranging from Lady Londonderry to Miss Margaret Bondfield, and from Mrs. Austen Chamberlain to Miss Susan Lawrence, so you see there is not one political party predominant—at least it will be the fault of the moderates if they leave all the work to the others, and thus allow them all the power. What I thought awfully funny was that Scotland is up in arms against affairs being administered down here, although the chairwoman is the Marchioness of Crewe, the hon. secretary, Miss MacArthur, and the hon. treasurer, Mrs. H. J. Tennant—all of them more Scotch than English.

Birmingham Gazette
31. 3. 20.

SCHOLARSHIP PLAN.

Helping Women Hit by the War.

£500,000 IN GRANTS.

As everybody knows, thousands of young women voluntarily cut short their University education during the war to go into munition works or join one or other of the women's Army corps. Others with a University training in prospect now find themselves unable to attain to it because their parents' income will no longer allow of that expenditure.

To help such women as these the Central Committee of Women's Training and Employment, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairman and Miss Mary Macarthur, the secretary, have planned a maintenance scholarship scheme that is to be financed out of the £500,000 allocated to them by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund.

To Enter the Professions.

These scholarships are to help women to enter the professions of medicine, dentistry, and the law, and to qualify as teachers for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work. Possibly too they may be available for women who wish to train as cooks and housekeepers for big schools or hospitals, but the point to bear in mind is that the applicants for such scholarships must have been war "hit."

Influence and letters of recommendation from, say, members of Parliament and highly-placed personages will not count with the Selection Committee. The scheme is for the assistance of those women without money and influence whose capacity of earning a livelihood has been injured or handicapped by conditions produced by the war.

How to Get the Grant.

As to the procedure to follow in getting one of these maintenance scholarships, the first thing is to fill up a form to be obtained from the Professional Women's Registry, 99, Queen's Gate, London, S.W.1, or from the nearest Unemployment Exchange. After that an applicant must wait until requested to appear before an Interviewing Board, but she is not likely to have to wait long or to travel far.

Immediately after Easter these Interviewing Boards are to be set up in several big cities—Birmingham, Leeds, Manchester, Newcastle, Cardiff and Bristol are among the places mentioned. But if it is found that there is a bigger group of applicants, say, at Dudley than at Birmingham then the Interviewing Board will travel to Dudley to meet the convenience of the majority.

The Possibilities.

The scheme, which is the first of its kind for women, is one of splendid possibilities, chiefly for the reason that it will not be bound with red tape. Each case will be considered individually, and while it may be necessary in some instances to make a bigger grant to free such applicants from monetary worries during training the Committee has no intention of squandering the half-million lavishly and recklessly.

No person so trained will be expected to pay back the scholarship grant. That would be to hang a millstone of debt round the neck of a woman at the very beginning of her professional career which would nullify the value of the training. But every woman will be expected to make a success of her training and justify the scholarship by her future work.

Evening Standard
1. 4. '20

How to Apply.

Forms are now ready at the Divisional Offices of the Ministry of Labour, and interviewing committees will soon be at work at various centres. Lady Londonderry will represent the North of Ireland, and in Scotland—well, Miss Macarthur and Miss Lilian Barker are proceeding thither to explain that with a chairman (the Marchioness of Crewe), a secretary and a treasurer all of Scottish birth there need be no fear that its claims will be overlooked. Some very interesting "emergency cases" have already received attention—but do not suspect "jobbery." The very mixed committee forbids that.

Star
31. 3. 20.

TRAINING FOR WAR WOMEN.

Spurt to Fit the Eligible For Professions.

"We are out to train the right women for the right job," said Miss Mary Macarthur, speaking at a private meeting of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment yesterday. "Millions are being spent on the training of ex-service men, but so far nothing is being done for the women."

Half a Million to Start With.

"The committee, which is largely the same as that which was responsible for the administration of the money collected by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund during the war, has had £500,000 allotted to it by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund, and has also the machinery of the Ministry of Labour behind it.

It is intended to provide a number of maintenance scholarships for women whose positions have been injuriously affected by the war, to enable them to train for various professions, to appoint interviewing boards throughout Great Britain and Ireland, so as to enable selected women to qualify in the higher professions, such as medicine, dentistry, and the law.

Making Teachers.

Miss Lilian Barker, answering questions, said: "We want to cater for women who wish to become chefs, sanitary inspectors, and dispensers, and who wis hto enter the legal and medical professions.

"We also aim at doing something to ease the present urgent need of teachers, but I may say, unofficially, of course, that the profession is not sufficiently well paid to be attractive."

In an interview afterwards, Miss Barker explained that it was intended to arrange a series of intensive courses for women who desired to become teachers, in order to bring them up to the matriculation standard, and qualify them for a training college under the Board of Education.

The Unpopular Occupations.

"I am afraid," she concluded, "that the teaching profession is at present even more unpopular than domestic service!"

Forms of application can be obtained after Easter from any Employment Exchange or from the Professional Women's Registry, 99, Queen's Gate, London, S.W.1.

Yorkshire Observer
31. 3. '20.

LONDON LETTER.

How many professional women whose earning capacity has been impaired by the war, young women whose training for a profession has been interrupted by the same circumstances) know that there is a fund of over £500,000 for their assistance, provided they possess the necessary qualification? Miss Mary Macarthur, the hon. secretary of the fund, which is known as the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment, told me to-day that the committee is empowered to dispense with the residue of the "Queen's Work for Women" Fund, together with £500,000 allocated by the National Relief Fund.

The committee does not at the present time propose to undertake industrial training for women, but applicants may put forward suggestions as to the kind of work they want to take up, and local interviewing committees are being established in London and the provinces. A centre at Leeds will deal with applications from Yorkshire. Miss Macarthur gave me two instances of the sort of help the committee has already offered. One was that of a girl who had taken an intermediate examination at the Royal College of Science in 1915. She was recently demobilised and found herself in great difficulties, and the committee provided an emergency grant to enable her to continue at college for two years with a view to taking an honours degree in botany.

The other case was that of a girl who wished to qualify as a solicitor. A firm of solicitors had agreed to dispense with a premium, but the committee is supplementing her finances for maintenance during study, and is also paying her stamp fees for articles.

Scotsman
31. 3. 20.

652
I

The claim which has been put forward by certain Scottish organisations for autonomy in the administration of the funds at the disposal of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment is, I understand, holding up to some extent the completion of the arrangements in connection with the Scottish part of the training scheme. The amount of money at present available for the United Kingdom is only about £600,000, including the money collected by the Queen's Work for Women Fund during the war, and it is obvious that if this money is to be used to the best advantage it is essential there should be one central body in charge of the purse strings. The presence of Miss Mary Macarthur on the Committee is guarantee enough, if any be required, that Scotland will get its fair share of the money. Miss Macarthur, who is the hon. secretary of the Committee, has arranged a conference in Glasgow next Tuesday with those who claim separate administration for Scotland, and she is hopeful of smoothing out the difficulties which have arisen. In the meantime arrangements are progressing for the establishment of local interviewing committees in Scotland, the places selected being Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Aberdeen. These Committees will be peripatetic, and will be ready to proceed to any other centre where numbers of applicants can be conveniently brought together for interview. I am told that the Scottish Universities have entered into the scheme with enthusiasm, and have promised their full support. It is necessary to emphasise the fact that the training to be provided is solely for the assistance of women who now find their earning capacity injured or handicapped as a result of their employment on war service. Those who at the end of their training may find themselves in a position to repay the cost will be encouraged to do so, but this will not be compulsory, as the Committee decline to tie a millstone of debt round the necks of those whose efforts may gain them an entrance to any of the professions and callings for which training is provided. They are to be asked rather to repay the debt by usefulness to the community.

It is well to understand the real reason for the intervention of a Sinn Fein candidate at an English by-election. Sinn Feiners do not conceal their object. They have no false hopes about Alderman O'Brien's chances, but his candidature will have fulfilled its mission to their entire satisfaction if the votes cast for Sinn Fein succeed in keeping out one or both of the official Labour candidates. Sinn Fein Ireland has clear and pronounced views on the British Labour party, which are thus summed up by one of its best known organs:—"Labour is palming itself on the Irish voters in England with soft words and lip sympathy such as we were accustomed to get from the old political trickster, Asquith." It is plain enough, according to Sinn Fein, that if the Labour party—"this parcel of cowardly sycophants"—got into power to-morrow with the help of the Irish vote, "they would turn as deaf an ear to Ireland as the capitalists at whose coat-tails they are miserable imitators."

Evening Standard
Ap. 14. 20.

WOMEN'S TRAINING SCHEME.

OPPORTUNITY TO ENTER VARIOUS PROFESSIONS.

The £500,000 training scheme of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment will be formally inaugurated to-day, when application forms will be available at any employment exchange.

Only those women and girls whose capacity for earning a livelihood has been injured or handicapped by conditions produced by the war can take advantage of the training scheme, but girls who would have had a better education, and so improved chances in professional or business life, are eligible.

"We hope to train about 5000 women," explained Miss Mary R. Macarthur, the hon. secretary of the committee, which has now completed its preliminary plans, to a "Daily Express" representative yesterday. "This gives an average of £100 for each trainee, but, of course, the cost of training will vary greatly with the calling chosen.

"We intend to train women for the legal and medical professions, as health visitors, dentists, sanitary inspectors, chefs for hotels and schools, teachers, and domestic science workers."

652-I/9

652 I

Daily Telegraph 3.4.'20.

TRAINING FOR WAR WORKERS

BIG OFFICIAL SCHEME.

"Millions have been spent on training ex-service men, but so far nothing has been done to meet the needs of women whose capacity for earning a livelihood had been injured or handicapped through conditions produced by the war," said Miss Mary Macarthur at a meeting at St. Ermin's called together earlier in the week to hear details of a big scheme approved by the Ministry of Labour for the instruction of women. The Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund has allocated a sum of half a million to be used in this way, and to that can be added the balance—about £100,000—left from the Queen's Work for Women Fund, while another £10,000 profit was earned in fair and open competition over Army contracts for about 4,000,000 shirts and 2,000,000 pairs of socks made by Leedy workers in areas which suffered severely through being prohibited ground for excursionists and visitors, such as the East Coast, the Isle of Wight, and the Isle of Man.

In connection with the disbursement of a sum so large, it was of course necessary first to appoint a thoroughly representative committee. Practically this includes all those who rendered such good and ungrudging service to the Queen's Fund, but strengthened yet further by others of special qualifications. The Marchioness of Crewe, as before, occupies the chair, and Miss Macarthur is honorary secretary. For the rest it will consist of:

Mrs. H. J. Tennant (honorary treasurer), Lady Askwith, Miss Lilian Barker, Miss Margaret G. Bondfield, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, Mrs. Gasson (Women's Co-operative Guild), Miss R. E. Lawrence, Miss A. Susan Lawrence, L.C.C., the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Miss Violet Markham, Lady Midleton, the Hon. Lily Montagu, Dr. Marion Phillips, Lady Roxburgh (secretary, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund), Miss Squire, the Marchioness of Londonderry (to represent the North of Ireland), Miss F. H. Durham (Princial Woman Officer, Ministry of Labour), Miss Adelaide Anderson (his Majesty's Principal Lady Inspector of Factories), and Miss Gertrude Tuckwell, J.P. (Women's Trades Unions).

All the machinery of the Ministry of Labour will be at the disposal of this committee, so far as it may be useful in carrying out the work to be done, and Mr. F. G. Bowers, the Accountant-General of the Ministry, will act as its financial adviser.

PREPARATION FOR THE PROFESSIONS.

Where this scheme differs from anything yet attempted is that it will not touch industrial training. That, it should be said, has its own branch at the Ministry, and has been at work for some months. The aim of this new endeavour will be to fit those women—and there were thousands of them—who willingly interrupted their own educational courses to enter one or other of the women's auxiliary services, or to make munitions. Miss Lilian Barker, who so ably directed the women's work at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, was able, in the course of her brief address at the meeting, to bear testimony to the fact that girls had come out of the secondary schools, the leading private schools, and the universities to take up hard, heavy, exacting work at the lathes or in the filling of shells with high explosives. In the meantime many parental incomes have diminished, and it would be an extremely difficult matter for such girls to resume, without financial assistance, the studies that would qualify them for the careers they had hoped to follow.

Here is a specific illustration of a typical case. A young lady had passed the intermediate examination at the College of Science, South Kensington, but felt it her duty to join Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps. She rendered exceptionally useful service, winning the highest commendations from those over her in authority, until she was demobilised. She desired keenly to return to the college, which was willing to receive her back, but the payment of the fees and the cost of maintenance seemed to present insuperable difficulties. Her case was laid before the committee as it began to be formed, and it was decided that an emergency grant must be made to meet it, inasmuch as she proposed to devote special research work to dealing with the insect pests of agriculture.

Such cases as this are exceptional. The country needs something like 9,000 more teachers, and the Committee propose to establish the intensive courses through which they could present themselves for matriculation. For health visitors, sanitary inspectors, and as midwives, all coming under the Ministry of Health, there will be a huge demand. Miss Macarthur mentioned that communal kitchens are being more and more widely established, and there will be good openings as directors and chefs in these for competent women; while a far higher standard is now asked from those who would be matrons of large institutions for children. Forms of application for those who think they would be eligible for training will be available immediately after Easter, and can be obtained at the nearest Labour Exchange or from the Professional Women's Registry, 99, Queen's-gate, S.W. Local interviewing committees are being formed, and those deemed suitable will be referred to the one for her own town or district for further and personal discussion.

Morning Post 22.4.20

A public meeting in support of the League of Nations will be held at the Central Cinema Hall, Watford, to-morrow evening. The meeting will be addressed by Lord Robert Cecil, M.P., and Miss Mary Macarthur, the chair being taken by the Earl of Clarendon.

Daily Telegraph 5.4.'20.

SHOP ASSISTANTS' WAGES.

GLASGOW CONFERENCE.

When the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the National Amalgamated Union of Shop Assistants, Warehousemen, and Clerks opened yesterday at the Central Hall, Glasgow, a lady occupied the presidential chair, probably for the first time in the history of trade unionism. The president is Miss Mabel A. Talbot, a native of Plymouth, who now represents the employees of a large London firm.

In her presidential address Miss Talbot said the year 1919 would stand out in the history of their union as one of the most remarkable ever known for the increase of membership and wages and general trade union activity from one end of the country to the other. The financial position of the union was also satisfactory, the total funds standing at £102,916. The increased wages for their members during 1919 amounted to the magnificent sum of over two and a half millions, exceeding by over £1,000,000 the amount won in 1918. A striking recognition of the growing power of their organisation was the readiness shown by employers' associations to meet and discuss with them the conditions of employment. The distributing trade was in a more flourishing position now than ever before. Large profits continued to be made, and higher dividends paid; yet in spite of this and the increase of wages, the position of those working in the trade was far from satisfactory. The conference would have before it proposals to raise the national wage scale to bring it more in accord with the ever-increasing cost of living. The position of women in the distributing trade to-day was that there was a larger number employed than ever before, and women were filling higher and more responsible positions than hitherto. Some women were well paid, but generally the wages of women were still far below those paid to men. Equal pay for equal work was their national policy, and in their trade of all trades women should be able to compete equally with men and to obtain equal wages; but it had been much more difficult to establish the rates for women than it had been for men. As president, she welcomed any movement which made for a higher status for women, believing it to be for the benefit of men as well as women. They were on the threshold of greater developments, moving forward to the establishment of one union for distributive workers. (Cheers.) There appeared to be a growing desire on the part of the members for greater political activity. (Hear, hear.) It was undoubtedly to the disadvantage of their movement that they had not a direct representative who understood the condition of their trade to champion their cause in Parliament. Over 1,000,000 people were employed as distributive workers. To organise such a vast army was a task of great magnitude, and with the complete organisation of their trade they would rank as the most powerful trade union in the country.

In the discussion on the report, Mr. John Turner, general secretary, said they were still pressing on the multiple shop proprietors' association that while they would always be pleased to negotiate they could not hold up indefinitely any negotiations with individual firms. It would not do to abandon their right to strike because they had been referred to some association merely for the sake of gaining time.

Mr. J. A. Leslie, chairman of the Minimum Wage Committee, moved that the new national minimum scale, giving at least 125 per cent. increase on pre-war wages, be adopted.

Mr. Dunlop, Paisley, moved an amendment that a flat rate be established for men and women at the age of 21, namely, 80s for men and 64s for women. A long discussion followed. The opponents of the flat rate argued that it was impracticable, the jump being too great at 21 years of age. Some women delegates were opposed to both schemes, insisting upon equal pay for equal work. Mr. Leslie, replying, said it had been very difficult to get women to stand for even the four-fifths. He said the time was not ripe for a flat rate. Should, however, any branch feel strong enough to enforce better terms it might take action after placing all the facts before the executive for advice.

On a show of hands the Paisley flate rate was defeated by ninety-eight to thirty-nine, and the report of the executive, containing the recommendation of the National Minimum Wage Committee, was adopted.

The conference adjourned till this morning.

Yorkshire Post 1.4.20

The Standing Committee which was appointed a few weeks ago by the Ministry of Labour to devise and carry out special schemes of work and training for women, has now made its plans, and is ready to go ahead with them immediately after Easter. It will be remembered that the Government allocated £500,000 with the object of giving the scheme a practical start. In addition to this sum, the Committee is empowered to dispose of the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Names on the committee, of which Lady Crewe is chairman, include those of Miss Lilian Barker, Lady Askwith, Miss Mary Macarthur, Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Lady Londonderry, and Dr. Marion Phillips.

Glasgow Herald 31.3.20.

652 I

Training of Women

Further details of the projected activities of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment are available to-day. The committee, which includes the Marchioness of Crewe, Miss Mary Macarthur, Lady Askwith, Miss Margaret Bondfield, and others, is empowered to dispense the residue of the "Queen's" Work for Women" Fund and a further sum of £500,000 which has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund, the money to be devoted to the promotion of an ambitious scheme for the training of those women whose education has been interrupted or whose earning capacity has been diminished by the war. The Minister of Labour has placed the machinery of his Department at the disposal of the committee. The courses, which will include those of such professions as medicine, dentistry, law, domestic science, teaching, cooking, and higher clerical work, will be open only to those who give reasonable promise of achieving success in their particular vocations. Although the limited sum of money at the disposal of the committee renders it impossible to provide courses of a comparatively expensive character, save to those applicants endowed with exceptional abilities, neither is it at present proposed to undertake industrial training for women, as this is being provided by the Women's Training Branch of the Ministry of Labour. Apart from this restriction, it will be open to applicants to put forward suggestions in regard to any kind of training which they may wish to undertake. Forms of application will be available to-morrow at any Employment Exchange, and will have to be returned to the local interviewing committees, which will be set up after Easter in various towns in the United Kingdom.

The Scottish Aspect

The application of the scheme to Scotland presented no small difficulty to the Committee in view of the demand for "Home Rule," but Miss Macarthur, the secretary, is, I understand, leaving London for Glasgow to-morrow night to attend a conference on Tuesday of all those interested in the matter of extending the scheme to Scotland. Miss Macarthur told me to-day that Scotland need have no fear that a portion of the funds will not be made available to her, while the Hon. Lady Hope and Miss M. M. Paterson have been asked to represent Scotland on the Central Committee. The proposal at present is that interviewing committees will be established at Glasgow, Edinburgh, Perth, Aberdeen, and other big centres. Three committees, it is understood, will, in consideration of their importance, be set up at Edinburgh and Glasgow, to sit in rotation, and these committees will be left entirely in Scottish hands. Promises of ardent support have been received from women's societies, as well as universities and other educational institutions, which will be represented on the local interviewing committees. It may be pointed out that there is no obligation on the part of those to whom grants are allocated to refund any of this money to the Committee. All the reward the Committee desires is that the beneficiaries will make the scheme such a success that further grants for the fund will be forthcoming.

Westminster Gazette 21.4.20

Miss Lilian Barker.

Miss Lilian Barker, who had the extraordinary task during the war of supervising the welfare of about 27,000 women workers at Woolwich Arsenal, has, I hear, just been transferred to a new position. She has been appointed Executive Officer to the Central Committee for Women's Training and Employment, which is undertaking the training of women war-workers for civil positions. This Committee has in hand over half a million pounds, allocated from the Relief Fund and other war funds; and the wise expenditure of the money is a matter of national importance. The Committee is to be congratulated on obtaining the help of one so peculiarly competent for the task.

Evening News. Edinburgh 7.4.20

WOMEN'S TRAINING.

£600,000 for Sufferers by the War.

EDUCATIONAL SCHEME.

Miss Mary Macarthur, hon. secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment, speaking at a meeting of the Committee at the Ministry of Labour yesterday afternoon, announced that the work of providing training and employment for women would be put in hand at once.

To-day every Unemployment Exchange throughout the United Kingdom will be supplied with printed forms of application for educational or professional training, and immediately after Easter these applications will be dealt with by Interviewing Committees in London, Birmingham, Leeds, Manchester, Newcastle, Cardiff, Bristol, and other provincial centres, as well as in the principal towns in Wales, Scotland, and Ireland.

These forms may be used by any woman who desires educational or professional training, "who is unemployed and whose earning capacity or opportunities have been injuriously affected as a result of conditions arising out of the war," but it is expressly stated that the Committee "do not at present propose to undertake industrial training for women, as this is being provided by the Women's Training Branch of the Ministry of Labour." Apart from this restriction, it will be open to applicants to put forward suggestions in regard to any kind of training which they may wish to undertake, and each application will be considered by the Committee on its merits.

Maintenance Scholarships.

The scheme will cover a wide scope of training and it is hoped to provide a number of maintenance scholarships which will enable women to qualify as teachers for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work and to afford a small number of carefully selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine, dentistry, and the law. Schemes are also contemplated for enabling women to qualify in higher grade cookery and higher clerical work.

The Committee, which is largely the same as that which was responsible for the administration of the money collected by the Queen's "Work for Women Fund" during the war, is empowered to dispense the residue of that Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated to it by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund. Miss Macarthur stated yesterday that the funds which the Committee would have at its immediate disposal would amount to approximately £600,000.

The Ministry of Labour has put the machinery of the Department at the disposal of the Committee, and has appointed Mr. F. G. Bowers, the Accountant-General of the Ministry of Labour, to be financial adviser to the Committee, but it was explicitly stated yesterday that it is not a Government-controlled body. It is working in co-operation with the Universities and other educational and training institutions, and also with all the principal women's war service organisations.

It is calculated that the Fund at the disposal of the Committee will enable about 5,000 approved applicants to receive assistance to the amount of about £100 each on the average.

Glasgow Evening Times 7.4.20

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN.

The proposed Scottish Executive of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and Training will be discussed on Friday afternoon, when Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, and Miss Lilian Basher, executive officer, will attend at the board-room of the Employment Exchange, 222 Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow, at 3 p.m., to meet representatives of women's organisations or others interested in the provision of training grants for women whose earning capacities or opportunities have been diminished through the war.

Glasgow Herald 4.3.20.

TRAINING OF WOMEN

Miss Mary Macarthur, honorary secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment, is at present in Glasgow. The committee has been entrusted with the duty of dispensing the residue of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 which has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund, for the training of women whose prospects and earning capacity have been injured as a result of the war. Much dissatisfaction has been expressed in Scotland, in view of the fact that a considerable proportion of the money was subscribed here, that an allocation of funds was not made specifically for Scotland, and that no separate organisation was set up in Scotland to deal with Scottish applicants. Already a number of applications from Scottish women for assistance in training have been received by the Central Committee, who, Miss Macarthur states, are extremely anxious that there should not be any unnecessary delay in dealing with them, but who feel that it is desirable that the selection of Scottish applicants and the methods to be adopted in dealing with them should be in Scottish hands. The proposal of the Central Committee, to which Lady Hope and Miss M. M. Paterson have been appointed as Scottish representatives, is that selection boards should be set up in large centres, and the formation of a Scottish executive, composed of the chairman of those boards is being considered. Miss Macarthur is making arrangements for a conference of those interested in the scheme in Scotland, which will probably be held this week.

Glasgow Herald 7.4.20

TRAINING OF WOMEN

Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, and Miss Lilian Basher, executive officer of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and Training, will be in attendance in the board-room of the Employment Exchange, 222 Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow, at 3 p.m. on Friday afternoon to meet representatives of women's organisations or others interested in the work of the committee and the participation of Scotland in the scheme to provide maintenance scholarships for women who are unemployed or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been diminished as a result of the war or conditions arising out of it. The question of the Scottish executive and its composition and powers will be fully discussed.

Glasgow Bulletin. 7.4.20.

WAR SUFFERERS

Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, and Miss Lilian Basher, executive officer of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and Training, will be in attendance in the board-room of the Employment Exchange, 222 Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow, at 3 p.m. on Friday afternoon to meet representatives of women's organisations or others interested in the work of the committee and the participation of Scotland in the scheme to provide maintenance scholarships for women who are unemployed, or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been diminished as a result of the war or conditions arising out of it. The question of the Scottish Executive and its composition and powers will be fully discussed.

Glasgow Evening News 7.4.20.

WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

On Friday afternoon Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, and Miss Lilian Basher, executive officer of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and Training, will be in attendance in the board room of the Employment Exchange, 222 Sauchiehall Street, to meet representatives of women's organisations or others interested in the work of the Committee, and the participation of Scotland in the scheme to provide maintenance scholarships for women who are unemployed, or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been diminished, as a result of the war or conditions arising from it. The question of the Scottish executive and its composition and powers will be fully discussed.

Daily Mirror 31.3.20.

"COULDN'T HELP MAKING £10,000."

That the Central Committee for the training and employment of women had to their credit £10,000, "which they could not help making out of Government contracts during the war," was stated last night by Miss Mary Macarthur.

The committee has just launched a scheme of training and employment on a wide scale, embracing posts under the Ministry of Health, professions such as medicine, dentistry and the law, chefs, school matrons and teachers, housekeepers, etc., for which purpose the residue of the Queen's Work for Women Fund has been placed at their disposal and £500,000 allocated by the National Relief Fund Committee.

Globe 7.4.20.

ROUND THE TOWN.

The King and Queen will hold their first formal after-war Courts during the first and third weeks in June. These will doubtless be very brilliant functions, and already there is a great deal of surmise as to who will be among the fortunate debutantes.

The Royal circle will be very much larger than of old, for Princess Mary, Prince Albert, and Prince Henry are all likely to make their debut at a function of this character; while the Princess Royal is again expected to be present with her daughters, Princess Arthur of Connaugh and Princess Maud.

* * *

Lady Astor's Pamphlet.

Under the heading "A Problem for Women," Lady Astor, M.P., has published in pamphlet form her maiden speech on the subject of the Drink Problem. Forewords have been written by many notable women, including Miss Margaret Bondfield, Lady Henry Somerset, Dr. Jane Walker, and Mrs. Lloyd George, J.P.

The question is of vital importance to women as wives and mothers and women workers, writes Miss Mary Macarthur; and now we share with our husbands and sons the powers, privileges, and responsibilities of citizenship it behoves us to examine the problem in all its bearings, to make it the subject of our most earnest consideration, and, having decided upon our policy, to back that policy by every ounce of legitimate influence we are able to exert.

* * *

Middle Classes Union Action.

After survey of the composition of the committee appointed under the presidency of the Marchioness of Crewe to consider women's training, the Middle Classes Union have come to the conclusion that this committee, which is to have the administration of the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund and other sums allocatedfor this purpose, is far from representative of all sections of the community, and more especially of the middle classes, in whose interests such professional training should be organised.

In consequence of this, representations have been made by the M.C.U. to the Ministry of Labour to the effect that they are entitled to representation on this committee.

A reply has been received by the Union from the Minister of Labour, and steps are now being taken for a deputation of women delegates, representative of the branches of the Union, to wait upon the Ministry with a view to obtaining representation on the committee for the Middle Classes Union, in the interests of the middle classes.

* * *

Women and the Home.

In spite of every discouragement, people's minds still dwell on dreams of the ideal home. First there were the Ideal Homes Exhibitions, now the builders hold sway at Olympia, and on Wednesday of this week the London Society for Women's Service is organising a conference on Women and Housing at the Central Hall, Westminster.

Lady Emmott, formerly chairman of the Women's Housing Committee of the Ministry of Reconstruction, is announced to take the chair, and among the speakers will be Miss Cochrane, of the Rural Housing Association; Mr. H. M. Fletcher, F.R.I.B.A., Miss Hall, and Miss Sutherland, all authorities having practical knowledge of their subject.

652 E/10

The Outlook
Apr. 10. 1920.

TRAINING THE WOMEN.

By Lilian Barker, C.B.E.

IT is something like six years since women came forward in their thousands to aid by every means in their power the great work for which their men were giving all they had to give. And of these women who rose instantly to the sense of their own individual responsibility, very few stopped to count the cost to themselves, in the future, of that generous, impulsive answer to the call for V.A.D.'s, munition workers, W.R.A.F.'s, W.R.E.N.'s, or W.A.A.C.'s, and workers of every kind.

As the years passed on, and the terrible debts of toil and sorrow had to be paid, these women met each fresh demand as it was made with the same energy and courage. They made few speculations as to their own future, and were content to centre their hopes on the successful conclusion of the war.

The war ended, and their work came abruptly to an end also. Large numbers of factories and industries were closed to them, and these workers, together with the girls who would have entered domestic service had it not been for their war work, found themselves discharged with no future occupation before them. Thousands of girls were thrown on the industrial market with no training for any sort of career, and as industrially disabled as many of their men were physically disabled by their war service.

The scheme for training women, started by the Ministry of Labour, was able to a small degree to contend with this situation, but as their terms of reference were so definite they were only able to assist unemployed women who were willing to enter for industrial training. This meant that thousands of girls were left without help or direction as to any possible careers.

Before the war large numbers of these girls could have been trained by their parents for one of the professions, but owing to loss of income from one cause or another connected with the war, they were now unable to help them. Men who had suffered through the war were able to get assistance through various schemes, but no such assistance was available for women.

As far back as the autumn of last year, the Central Committee on Women's Employment (which worked so magnificently in organising the Queen Mary Needlework Rooms and attendant industries) resolved, with the assistance of Miss Mary Macarthur, their Hon. Secretary, to take up the position of champion for these thousands of women. Their efforts culminated in a grant of £500,000 from the National Relief Fund, with the specific terms of reference that this money was to be expended on training women who were unemployed and whose earning capacity had been reduced as a direct result of the war.

It is intended that any girl who comes within these terms should make a careful survey of her capabilities so that she may be trained for the right career. The Committee desires that she should then get as good training as possible, and should be kept in comfort—though not, of course, in luxury—during her training course; also that she should not feel hampered by financial loans, but that she should understand that she can best repay her training by the services which she will be enabled to render to the community by doing good work when she has been properly equipped for it.

It is not proposed to take responsibility from parents or relatives, and careful enquiries will be made as to the applicant's financial position, so that the grant given shall cover full maintenance, or a part only, as required. Interviewing Boards will be set up immediately all over the country, and these will enquire, not merely into the suitability of an applicant for a certain kind of training, but will also make sure that the best training available shall be given.

Such an opportunity has never before been given to women, and though the sum granted is very inadequate to meet the present great demands, it is a fine beginning, and one which we hope and believe will lead to the granting of further sums to carry on the work.

Woman Leader
A. 4. 20.

652
I

TRAGEDY AND COMEDY.

The bitter farce of it! Regard it from the standpoint of the average party man, the diligent reader of the "correct" party newspaper, it is simply another of "those troublesome Irish crises always recurring, needs to be firmly dealt with, sir." Looked at from the standpoint of the detached Gallio-like observer of men and things it is excruciatingly funny. This is to be the long-expected "settlement," self-government for the section of the country which has proclaimed on housetop, at street corner, on its very china imprinted with the mystic legend "We will not have Home Rule" that the last thing it desires is self-government. For the rest of the country the status quo, until it shall decide to accept a measure which it has declared with equal emphasis it will never accept, until it has abandoned a dream for the sake of which it is risking its own soul. The Northern section, safe in its commercial prosperity, proclaims its willingness to accept the hated Partition Parliament, in the hope that it "may give an example to the rest of Ireland which may provoke to imitation and possibly emulation." A delightful vision of a docile Ireland sitting at the feet of Ulster, which could only be conjured up by a true born native of the Northern province. And yet they say politics are depressing. So much for the farce. For the tragedy of it, ask any of those who are striving to do something to remove those fundamental causes of Irish unrest of which so little heed is taken, and who find their difficult work rendered well nigh impossible by the general ferment, the recklessness, the cynicism, born of what was described last week as a state of war, without any of the heroisms or nobilities which do something to relieve its horrors. Last week a small deputation from a Mothers' Pensions Committee went to ask for some mitigation of the sufferings which inadequate relief imposes on the woman whom the Treasury cannot afford to assist. The deputation could do nothing, as the Board had just adjourned, "as a sign of disapproval" of never mind which of the daily happenings that have made life intolerable of late. The widow must starve for a little longer, if indeed she will persist in living, a most unreasonable course on her part, when, if she were dead, her children would be cared for in very costly institutions, maintained for the purpose by a truly economically minded State. Another day another deputation met to ask for some definite steps to be taken with regard to the neglected or uncontrolled children who roam the streets, selling the endless Stop Press editions for which there is such a splendid market, or begging from the ever-charitable public, one small specimen having raised 3s. 6d. by midday on one occasion, which shows how industry and perseverance in your trade are rewarded even south of the Boyne. The deputation could do nothing, as no quorum was present at the particular Committee, two-thirds of whose members were—well, let us call it absent for change of air.

So it goes on. The Central Committee for Women's Employment was dismissed last summer, leaving behind it a balance of over £2,000, the testimony of the official auditor as to the excellence of the business position, and the knowledge that the girls from the workrooms were almost the only ones who did not try to take advantage of the out-of-work donation. Recently a Committee was formed to elaborate schemes of training for women in connection with the Work for Women Fund, and the Irish part of the work is entrusted to two ladies with every capacity except knowledge of Irish industrial conditions, of course neither possessed the disqualification of being Irish. This kind of thing is perfectly normal; no one is even surprised, and is of course conducive to the desired settlement of the Irish question. Again, how much of the Red Cross surplus funds have been allotted to Ireland, in proportion to what was raised in the country? Mere trivialities these, not to be mentioned in comparison with the guilt of open assassination and open cowardly condonation of assassination. True. A bitter harvest is being reaped, and the reapers often were not guilty of the sowing. But do not think that there can ever be settlement without justice, justice to the utmost.

Meanwhile, as foretold, emigration is beginning again in full force, the girls being among the most eager to take advantage of every available boat. The sickness rate is still twice that in Great Britain, the Health Council has neither money nor power. The Executive, intolerably harassed and driven, has no leisure to deal with such problems. A mad world.

D. M.

Glasgow Herald
10. 4. 20.

TRAINING OF WOMEN

SCOTTISH CLAIM FOR LOCAL CONTROL

The position of Scotland in relation to the scheme of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and Training, to provide maintenance scholarships for women who are unemployed or whose earning capacities or opportunities have been diminished as a result of the war or conditions arising out of it, was discussed yesterday afternoon at a conference between Miss Mary R. Macarthur, honorary secretary of the committee; Miss Lilian Barker, executive officer, and representatives of a number of women's organisations in Scotland and others interested in the scheme. The meeting was held in the Employment Exchange at 222 Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow, and was attended by a representative number of Scottish women, including Lady Leslie Mackenzie, Lady Salvesen, Mrs J. E. Hannay, Mrs W. L. M'Kerrow, Miss Eunice G. Murray, and Miss Margaret H. Irwin. Representatives of a number of Labour organisations were also present, among them Mr William Shaw, chairman of the Parliamentary Committee of the Scottish Trade Unions Congress and secretary of the Glasgow Trades and Labour Council.

The Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund have allocated a sum of £500,000 for the promotion of the scheme of training for women undertaken by the committee, who are also empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's Work for Women Fund. The Central Committee on Women's Employment and Training is a departmental committee of the Ministry of Labour, but Sir Robert Horne stated some time ago that that Department could not be held responsible for the administration of the money allocated from the National Relief Fund, which was not a Government fund. Strong representations were made from Scotland to the Secretary for Scotland and the Ministry of Labour that a specific sum should be allocated for the training of Scottish women to be administered entirely in Scotland by a Scottish committee.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE'S PROPOSALS

Miss Macarthur explained at the meeting in Glasgow yesterday that Miss Barker and she had not been sent in any official capacity by a Government Department to discuss the matter, but that they had arranged the conference "on their own" to find out what would be considered by those chiefly interested the best machinery to set up for the application of the scheme to Scotland, and to clear up if possible any misunderstanding that might have arisen. Miss Macarthur sketched the origin and development of the Central Committee, which she said was appointed in 1914, as a standing committee of the Local Government Board to consider and report upon schemes for the provision of work for women and girls unemployed on account of the war. The work of the committee developed, and it was later transferred to the Ministry of Labour. In addition to the allocation of £500,000 from the National Relief Fund, the committee had at its disposal about £70,000 remaining in the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and about £10,000 accumulated during the war from contracts undertaken by the committee. In securing the allocation from the National Relief Fund they had not in mind any geographical or national limits to its application, but that it should be used to assist women of brains whose position or prospects had suffered as the result of the war. They proposed that in the chief centres throughout the country there should be set up selection boards consisting of one representative of the Central Committee, one representative of the Training Department of the Ministry of Labour and one of the Employment Department, and one representative of the local education authority, with power to add experts. It was suggested that special boards, with a considerable degree of autonomy, should be established in London, Glasgow, and Edinburgh: and that in Scotland the chairmen of the Scottish selection boards should form a Scottish Central Committee. As a Scotswoman she appreciated and sympathised with the desire for "Home Rule" in this matter, but it took the Central Committee about nine months to get their allocation from the National Relief Fund, and what they were concerned about was that there should be no unavoidable delay in dealing with a number of applications—about 50 so far—which had already been received from Scottish women. A certain amount of co-ordination of the activities of the committees throughout the country was necessary. They wanted to train at least 5000 women, and they aimed at doing so at an average cost per head of £100. After that meeting they proposed to set up the boards and go ahead at least on a temporary basis, whatever might happen later on. The machinery of the Ministry of Labour throughout the country had been placed at the disposal of the committee.

SCOTTISH AUTONOMY WANTED

Mrs Hannay, who is vice-convener of the Standing Committee of the Scottish Branches of the National Council of Women, said the scheme outlined by Miss Macarthur was no doubt easier for administrative purposes, but there was a strong feeling in Scotland that the proposed boards would have no real voice in laying down the conditions under which scholarships would be granted, and they had already experience of cases in connection with other work in which conditions quite inapplicable to Scotland had been made in London. What they wanted was a special Scottish Committee, with separate funds to administer.

Mr Wm. Shaw said that the strong feeling on the matter in Scotland was partly due to the fact that a large portion of the fund had been collected in Scotland, but the ladies would not prejudice their claim for a Scottish committee and a Scottish fund by agreeing to work with the existing machinery meantime.

After further discussion, a motion proposing to set up boards on the lines proposed was made. Lady Leslie Mackenzie expressed the view that those who had made representations to the Secretary for Scotland should wait until they received his reply. The previous question was proposed, and on a vote, in which less than half of those present took part, was carried against the motion.

Aberdeen Free Press
10. 4. 20

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR WOMEN.

HELP FOR THOSE WHO SUFFERED THROUGH THE WAR.

The application to Scotland of the scheme of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and Training for the provision of maintenance scholarships for women whose prospects and position have suffered as the result of the war, was discussed at a conference in Glasgow yesterday. There was a large attendance of representatives of various women's organisations, including Lady Leslie Mackenzie, Lady Salvesen, and others

Mrs Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary of the Committee, said it was proposed to set up selection boards in various centres and that the chairman of those boards should form a Scottish Executive. A sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund for the purposes of the scheme. Strong representations have been made to the Secretary for Scotland for the establishment of a special Scottish Committee and the allocation of a sum of money for Scottish women to be administered entirely in Scotland.

Dundee Advertiser
10. 4. 20

Scholarships for Women

SCOTLAND AND EMPLOYMENT QUESTION.

The application to Scotland of the scheme of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and Training for the provision of maintenance scholarships for women whose prospects and position have suffered as the result of the war was discussed at a conference in Glasgow yesterday. There was a large attendance of representatives of various women's organisations, including Lady Leslie Mackenzie, Lady Salvesen, and others.

Miss Mary R. MacArthur, Hon. Secretary of the Committee, said it was proposed to set up Selection Boards in various centres, and that the Chairmen of those Boards should form a Scottish Executive. A sum of £500,000 has been allotted by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund for the purposes of the scheme. Strong representations have been made to the Secretary for Scotland for the establishment of a Special Scottish Committee, and the allocation of a sum of money for Scottish women, to be administered entirely in Scotland.

Evening Standard
1. 4. 20.

For ex-Service Women.

Miss Mary Macarthur and Miss Lilian Barker explained to me yesterday exactly what the Central Committee on Woman's Training and Employment intend to do with the half a million pounds they have been given from the National Relief Fund. They are dispensing as far as possible with red tape, and taking each ex-Service woman's case on its merits—the only provision being that the war has caused some disability. Many girls gave up training for professions to take up war work regardless of the consequences to themselves, and are now among the New Poor class. These are the girls they wish to help.

Globe
1-4-20

ROUND THE TOWN.

News comes from New York of the marriage of Mrs. Nelz Sprague Stitness, the granddaughter of a former Governor Sprague of Rhode Island, to an Italian marchese. This engagement is said to be the culmination of a romance which had its beginning at a fashionable Parisian party where the tango was being danced.

Mrs. Stitness has lived for many years in Paris; but, after the wedding, the bridegroom will take the bride to his twelfth-century castle in Italy. No one will ever say after this that the tango is not worth dancing.

* * *

Women's Unemployment.

With the idea of helping women whose capacity of earning a livelihood has been injured or handicapped by conditions induced by the war an important Committee has been formed for the administration of the money collected by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

Members include the Marchioness of Crewe, as chairman; Miss Mary Macarthur, as honorary secretary; and Miss H. Tennant, as hon. treasurer.

Miss Margaret Bondfield, Miss Susan Lawrence, Miss Violet Markham, and Dr. Marion Phillips are some of the members of the Central Committee.

The Committee is empowered to dispense the residue of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and a further sum of £500,000 has been allocated by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund.

* * *

For Girls.
With Brains.

The scheme will cover a wide scope of training, and it is hoped to provide a number of maintenance scholarships which will enable women to qualify as teachers for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work, and to afford a small number of carefully-selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such high professions as medicine, dentistry, and the law.

Apart from this restriction, it will be open to applicants to put forward suggestions in regard to any kind of training which they may wish to undertake, and each application will be considered by the Committee on its merits.

Forms of application for training can be obtained after Easter from any Employment Exchange or the Professional Women's Registry, 99, Queen's Gate, S.W.1.

Dundee Advertiser
31. 3. 20.

Training Schemes for Women.

The Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment, which was appointed by the Minister of Labour a short time ago to devise special schemes of training for women unemployed or whose earning capacities have been affected as a result of the war, have now completed their scheme of organisation. The Committee will dispense the remainder of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, as well as the £500,000 allocated to them by the Executive Committee of the National Relief Fund. I am informed by Miss Mary Macarthur, the Hon. Secretary, that a few emergency cases have been dealt with, but it is only now that the machinery of the scheme is in full working order. About 5000 women are likely to profit by the training offered. The scheme will cover a wide scope of training, and it is hoped to provide a number of maintenance scholarships, which will enable women to qualify as teachers for posts under the Ministry of Health in connection with public health work, and to afford a small number of carefully selected women the opportunity of qualifying in such higher professions as medicine, dentistry, and the law. It is not proposed to undertake industrial training for women, as this is being provided by the Women's Training Branch of the Ministry of Labour.

652 I

9521/12

653/1

653

Evening Standard & St. James's Gazette, Oct. 28th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

SUNDAY SCHOOL COLLECTIONS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

The Ecclesiastical authorities of the principal religious bodies in the British Isles have approved of a Sunday School collection being made in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

Expressions of opinion approving the scheme are as follows:—

The Archbishop of Canterbury:—

"Any wise endeavour to enlist the sympathy and interest of children in the men of our Forces, and in the cause in which their King and Country have sent them, has my warm approval. I hope it will be found that they too can bear their share in lightening some of the burden which presses upon us all at this momentous time."

(Signed) Randall Cantuar.

His Eminence Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster and Metropolitan:—

"We trust that the children in our schools, notwithstanding their small means and the very many claims upon them, will do their best to assist the good work which her Majesty the Queen so earnestly commends to all the children of the country."

The Queen's Committee, in their letter of instruction for the guidance of the many officers and teachers throughout the country, state that her Majesty the Queen wishes it clearly understood that such collections are to be entirely a free-will offering, undertaken by the scholars themselves without coercion or persuasion. There is, of course, no idea of interference with the usual collections for other objects, but it is suggested that the scholars might like to devote at least one Sunday's general collection to the fund, apart from private collections which they may care to make among themselves.

A letter from the Chief Rabbi to the Jewish children is as follows:—

'My dear Children,—I am sending you an appeal issued by her Majesty Queen Mary on behalf of the 'Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund.'

"Jewish boys and girls are, I am sure, as anxious as anyone can be to help our good Queen in this noble cause. If you are not in a position to contribute much, you can, perhaps, give a few pence. But even if you only give a halfpenny, you will prove your goodness of heart and your sympathy with those who are suffering through the war."—I am, my dear children, Your sincere friend,

(Signed) J. H. Hertz,
Chief Rabbi.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

Oldham Evening Chronicle, Oct. 29th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND

SUNDAY SCHOOL COLLECTION.

The ecclesiastical authorities of the principal religious bodies in the British Isles have approved of a Sunday school collection being made in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Many expressions of opinion approving the scheme have been received from representative men, including the following:—

The Archbishop of Canterbury: Any wise endeavour to enlist the sympathy and interest of children in the men of our forces, and in the cause in which their King and country have sent them, has my warm approval. I hope it will be found that they, too, can bear their share in lightening some of the burden which presses upon us all at this momentous time.

The Rev. Chevy Rouse, general secretary to the Sunday School Union: The officers of the Sunday School Union most cordially commend to all [illegible] the appeal for the Queen's Fund [illegible] the same effect.

Sheffield Telegraph, Oct. 28th. 1914.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS

BY THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

One of the most interesting experiments which owes its origin to the outbreak of the war is that of taking factory girls from the dismal, overcrowded conditions of industrial towns to the fresh air and vigorous life of the country. In the far west of England a factory is being created in which the working women of surrounding districts find a new employment in all forms of fruit-pulping, in drying vegetables, in bottling new unsweetened fruit preserves. By means of this work hundreds of tons of fruit which would otherwise have been wasted have been dealt with, supplies for the Army and other public sources provided, and a trade hitherto centred in Germany, developed in this country. It is hoped that within a short time this industry will be established on a paying basis, and probably 100 girls will be enjoying the healthy life of the country.

Closer at hand, at Radlett, in Herts., East London girls will soon be hard at work developing a good acreage of land with fruit and vegetables and flowers. Here the girls will be under the direction of two lady gardeners, who will train them in this work with a view to establishing them as skilled market gardeners and fruit growers in the future.

The Central Committee for Women's Employment is for a limited time paying the wages of the workers until they shall be ready for good employment elsewhere, and their work shall give them a livelihood without further assistance. The care of the committee does not end with the payment of wages, but they keep careful supervision as to the comfort and well-being of these young women, many of them between 18 and 20, who are necessarily away from their homes.—The Common Cause.

Bath Herald, October 28th. 1914.

Unemployment among the women of London, however, is serious and widespread. The local committees are bestirring themselves, and many have submitted schemes for providing work in connection with the Queen's "Work for Women Fund." Camberwell, where live the dressmakers who depend on the prosperity of the West-End establishments, is naturally suffering severely, and so is Battersea, with its tailoring and dressmaking population. Bermondsey, Bethnal Green (where the distress among cabinet makers is acute), Shoreditch, Deptford, and Hoxton, in each of which there are armies of out-of-work charwomen, kitchen hands, box-makers, and poorly-paid factory workers, are in urgent need of assistance. The same story comes from Islington, Finsbury, Holborn, and Chelsea, and in this time of distress among the women of the London industrial boroughs it is true indeed that he who gives quickly to the Queen's Fund for providing work gives twice. Every effort is being made to extend the schemes for providing it, but urgency is the keynote of all the appeals which are pouring in upon the Central Committee. In the various districts the inhabitants are doing their share nobly, and the committee gratefully acknowledges the fact that in no single instance has rent had to be paid for workrooms, which in some cases have also been furnished through local generosity, and often with the help of those to whom such assistance has meant considerable sacrifice.

The North Mail, October 29th. 1914.

WORK FOR GATESHEAD WOMEN

In connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund, the Gateshead committee appeal to residents in the borough to send old clothing for repair and subscriptions to the fund. These should be forwarded to Mrs F. J. Lambert, the hon. secretary, at the Town Hall, Gateshead.

The committee have been allowed the use of a workroom by the vicar and churchwardens of Holy Trinity Church, and it is pointed out that the lowest rate of payment enables a woman to earn 10s per week.

Nottingham Guardian, Oct. 28th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

USEFULNESS OF QUEEN'S FUND.

By providing employment the Queen's Work for Women Fund is playing a most useful part in the relief of distress in Nottingham. Apart from very small working charges, the only extra expense to the city in giving self-respecting women and girls work instead of offering them monetary relief is the outlay on material, and the poor of the city are the gainers by the garments made. There is no interference with legitimate trade.

Amount previously acknowledged	£458	10	0
Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Bromley	2	2	0
Miss R. Hudson	1	0	0
Miss E. F. Haywood	2	0	0
A. O. Anon.	0	1	0
W. C. S. H.	2	2	0
Mr. C. Underwood	1	0	0
	466	15	0

Anyone who can lend hand or treadle machines or chairs is asked to write to the Hon. Secretary, Mrs. W. E. Dowson, at the offices, 14, Sherwood-street South. Office hours, 11 to 1.

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund.

Sunday School Chronicle, Oct., 29th. 1914.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is rendering excellent service. Among its operations is the establishment of a new factory in the West of England where women are engaged in all forms of fruit-pulping, in drying vegetables, and in bottling new unsweetened fruit preserves. By means of this work hundreds of tons of fruit which would otherwise have been wasted have been dealt with. At Radlett, in Herts, East London girls will soon be at work developing a good acreage of land with fruit, vegetables, and flowers. The girls will be under the direction of two lady gardeners, who will train them in this work with a view to establishing them as skilled market gardeners and fruit growers. Good work is also being done by the Domestic Economy Training College for Working Women at Bethnal Green. Two more Colleges, one at Islington and one at Finsbury, will be opened in the course of a week or so. About fifty women will be trained at each of the new centres. The subjects to be taught are cooking, cleaning, washing and needlework. There will also be talks and discussions on hygiene and infant care. In addition to the Colleges two training kitchens have been opened, where women are trained to cook while they are preparing threepenny dinners for the women in the workrooms, who are employed in making baby clothes and making new clothes from old. The offices of the Committee are at 33, Portland-place, London, W.

The Christian, Oct. 29th. 1914.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.—Lady Crewe writes to say that the committee of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has decided to make an appeal to Sunday-school scholars throughout the kingdom, for this branch of the National Relief Fund. "This can best be done by asking your officers and teachers to take the earliest opportunity of explaining the scheme to the scholars." A leaflet has been sanctioned by her Majesty for distribution to each child. Communications should be addressed to the Marchioness of Crewe, 33, Portland-pl., W., with "W.S.S." marked in the left-hand top corner of the envelope.

"We trust that the children in our schools, notwithstanding their small means and the very many claims upon them, will do their best to assist the good work which her Majesty the Queen so earnestly commends to all the children of the country."

The Queen's Committee, in their letter of instruction for the guidance of the many officers and teachers throughout the country, state that her Majesty the Queen wishes it clearly understood that such collections are to be entirely a free-will offering, undertaken by the scholars themselves without coercion or persuasion. There is, of course, no idea of interference with the usual collections for other objects, but it is suggested that the scholars might like to devote at least one Sunday's general collection to the fund, apart from private collections which they may care to make among themselves.

A letter from the Chief Rabbi to the Jewish children is as follows:—

'My dear Children,—I am sending you an appeal issued by her Majesty Queen Mary on behalf of the 'Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund.'

"Jewish boys and girls are, I am sure, as anxious as anyone can be to help our good Queen in this noble cause. If you are not in a position to contribute much, you can, perhaps, give a few pence. But even if you only give a halfpenny, you will prove your goodness of heart and your sympathy with those who are suffering through the war."—I am, my dear children, Your sincere friend,

(Signed) J. H. Hertz,
Chief Rabbi.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

Oldham Evening Chronicle,
Oct. 29th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND

SUNDAY SCHOOL COLLECTION.

The ecclesiastical authorities of the principal religious bodies in the British Isles have approved of a Sunday school collection being made in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Many expressions of opinion approving the scheme have been received from representative men, including the following:—

The Archbishop of Canterbury: Any wise endeavour to enlist the sympathy and interest of children in the men of our forces, and in the cause in which their King and country have sent them, has my warm approval. I hope it will be found that they, too, can bear their share in lightening some of the burden which presses upon us all at this momentous time.

The Rev. Carey Bonner, general secretary to the Sunday School Union: The officers of the Sunday School Union most cordially commend to all affiliated unions the appeal for the Queen's Fund, believing that, notwithstanding the many efforts being made by Sunday schools, there will be a general desire on the part of Sunday school leaders to respond. The appeal has been taken up very thoroughly by the various denominational Sunday school organisations, but there is no doubt that the unions as such can render genuine service by co-operating with the denominations and promoting the gathering in of funds in the various districts concerned.

growers in the future.

The Central Committee for Women's Employment is for a limited time paying the wages of the workers until they shall be ready for good employment elsewhere, and their work shall give them a livelihood without further assistance. The care of the committee does not end with the payment of wages, but they keep careful supervision as to the comfort and well-being of these young women, many of them between 18 and 20, who are necessarily away from their homes.—The Common Cause.

Bath Herald,
October 28th. 1914.

Unemployment among the women of London, however, is serious and widespread. The local committees are bestirring themselves, and many have submitted schemes for providing work in connection with the Queen's "Work for Women Fund." Camberwell, where live the dressmakers who depend on the prosperity of the West-End establishments, is naturally suffering severely, and so is Battersea, with its tailoring and dressmaking population. Bermondsey, Bethnal Green (where the distress among cabinet makers is acute), Shoreditch, Deptford, and Hoxton, in each of which there are armies of out-of-work charwomen, kitchen hands, box-makers, and poorly-paid factory workers, are in urgent need of assistance. The same story comes from Islington, Finsbury, Holborn, and Chelsea, and in this time of distress among the women of the London industrial boroughs it is true indeed that he who gives quickly to the Queen's Fund for providing work gives twice. Every effort is being made to extend the schemes for providing it, but urgency is the keynote of all the appeals which are pouring in upon the Central Committee. In the various districts the inhabitants are doing their share nobly, and the committee gratefully acknowledges the fact that in no single instance has rent had to be paid for workrooms, which in some cases have also been furnished through local generosity, and often with the help of those to whom such assistance has meant considerable sacrifice.

The North Mail,
October 29th. 1914.

WORK FOR GATESHEAD WOMEN

In connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund, the Gateshead committee appeal to residents in the borough to send old clothing for repair and subscriptions to the fund. These should be forwarded to Mrs F. J. Lambert, the hon. secretary, at the Town Hall, Gateshead.

The committee have been allowed the use of a workroom by the vicar and churchwardens of Holy Trinity Church, and it is pointed out that the lowest rate of payment enables a woman to earn 10s per week.

[illegible] Office hours, 11 to 1.

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund.

Sunday School Chronicle,
Oct. 29th. 1914.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is rendering excellent service. Among its operations is the establishment of a new factory in the West of England where women are engaged in all forms of fruit-pulping, in drying vegetables, and in bottling new unsweetened fruit preserves. By means of this work hundreds of tons of fruit which would otherwise have been wasted have been dealt with. At Radlett, in Herts, East London girls will soon be at work developing a good acreage of land with fruit, vegetables, and flowers. The girls will be under the direction of two lady gardeners, who will train them in this work with a view to establishing them as skilled market gardeners and fruit growers. Good work is also being done by the Domestic Economy Training College for Working Women at Bethnal Green. Two more Colleges, one at Islington and one at Finsbury, will be opened in the course of a week or so. About fifty women will be trained at each of the new centres. The subjects to be taught are cooking, cleaning, washing and needlework. There will also be talks and discussions on hygiene and infant care. In addition to the Colleges two training kitchens have been opened, where women are trained to cook while they are preparing threepenny dinners for the women in the workrooms, who are employed in making baby clothes and making new clothes from old. The offices of the Committee are at 33, Portland-place, London, W.

The Christian,
Oct. 29th. 1914.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.—Lady Crewe writes to say that the committee of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has decided to make an appeal to Sunday-school scholars throughout the kingdom, for this branch of the National Relief Fund. "This can best be done by asking your officers and teachers to take the earliest opportunity of explaining the scheme to the scholars." A leaflet has been sanctioned by her Majesty for distribution to each child. Communications should be addressed to the Marchioness of Crewe, 33, Portland-pl., W., with "W.S.S." marked in the left-hand top corner of the envelope.

The Times,
October 30th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

"PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK."

In aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton are about to publish "Princess Mary's Gift Book." All the profits of this book are to be devoted to the Fund. It will be issued at half a crown, and the contributors include the most eminent authors of the day, while famous artists have made special drawings and paintings to illustrate its pages.

The following subscriptions to the Fund were received yesterday:—

	£	s.	d.
Second Contribution from the Scottish Branch, per the Marchioness of Linlithgow, including the Scottish Teachers' Fund for War Relief, per Mr. H. McCallum, £200; Mr. R. M. Stevenson, £50; the Hon. Mrs. Stirling, £30..	288	2	0
National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, being one half of Collection at Kingsway Hall on October 20, without deductions for expenses..	94	0	8
Collected by the Mayoress of Ramsgate, further instalment, including Sale of Flowers, £36 15s. 3d.	39	2	3
Collected by the Urban District Council of Milnrow	39	0	4
Collected by the Mayoress of Shrewsbury, including Mr. Alfred Darby, £10	33	8	6
£20 EACH.—Australian Branch of the British Red Cross Society, per Lady Helen Munro-Ferguson; Collected by Mrs. Joicey, including personal donation, £13 1s. 6d.; Miss Jessie K. Bonnar.
Half Proceeds of a Concert held in the Village of Newbiggin-by-the-Sea, per the Chairman..	15	15	0
£10 EACH.—The Misses Mullins, Miss Gordon. Collected by the Urban District Council of Finedon, Messrs. Macmillan and Co. (Limited).
OTHER SUBSCRIPTIONS ..	92	14	0
TO-DAY'S TOTAL	702	2	9
PREVIOUSLY ACKNOWLEDGED	79,543	1	0
TOTAL TO DATE	£80,245	3	9

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W.

Lancashire Post,
Oct. 30th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

PRESTON CONCERT IN AID OF QUEEN'S FUND.

The Preston Music Appreciation Society keeps to its old programme of giving nothing but the best music—that which is universally appreciated and established. The concert given last night at the Harris Free Library, before a large audience, was not marked by any martial rhythms. There was quite a serene musical atmosphere. To adopt a popular expression "Business as usual" seemed to be the motto. An invincible catholicity of taste was manifested in the selection of the items.

Mr. J. T. Whiteside presented a sheaf of songs by Mozart, Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, and R. Strauss—songs which have been selected as test pieces mostly at the various northern festivals, and calling for great variety of interpretation and much vocal resource generally. Mr. Whiteside had a difficult task, but he accomplished it with great credit to himself.

The most lively impression one would carry away from the concert would be that of the violin performance of Miss Beatrice Woods. She displayed great technical skill in her treatment of Saint Saëns' "Rondo Capriccioso," and there was an exquisite restful feeling and a beautiful suavity of tone in her rendering of Schumann's "Traumerei," which was one of the pieces she gave in response to a double encore.

A well-equipped string orchestra, under the conductorship of Mr. W Pritt, opened the concert with a bright and engaging performance of Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik." There was a fine breadth of tone manifested in the slow movement of Elgar's Serenade (Op. 20), and the characteristic motives of the Grieg selections were well brought out. The rest of the orchestral work consisted of Boccherini's Minuet and Percy Grainger's "Mock Morris." Miss E. Smith and Miss Woods accompanied the soloists.

The proceeds of the concert were devoted to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, as were also the proceeds of a stall of home-made jams and pickles.

Cambridge Independent Press,
Oct. 31st.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Viscountess Clifden Appeals for Cambridge's Help.

We have received the following communication from Lady Clifden:—

TO THE EDITOR.

Sir,—In response to my appeal for the Queen's Work for Women Fund I have received several donations, a list of which, as the first instalment, accompanies this letter. More subscriptions are urgently needed to enable the Fund to carry on its useful work of providing employment for women who have been thrown out of work by the war.

Since the Fund was started it has widened its scope, and centres of work have been opened to give employment to skilled as well as unskilled workers. Contract work has been placed with nearly one hundred firms whose workers are out of employment, and amongst the many centres of work already started, or in process of being started, I may mention training kitchens, cradle making, fruit preserving, domestic economy training, market gardening training, and fruit and flower growing, and a large number of schemes submitted to local representative committees have been considered and approved.

May I appeal through your columns for further assistance? Subscriptions may be sent to the following ladies who have most kindly consented to collect and receive subscriptions in their various petty sessional districts:

Arrington and Melbourn—Lady Fordham, Odsey, Ashwell, Baldock, Herts.

Bottisham—Mrs. Jenyns, Bottisham Hall, Cambridge.

Linton—The Lady Marjory Binney, Pampisford Hall, Cambridge.

Caxton—Mrs. Newton, Croxton Park, St. Neots.

Littleport (town only)—Mrs. Tansley Ludditington, Plantation House, Littleport.

Chatteris—Lady Clarke, Thelema House, Chatteris.

Or to myself.

I have not been able to obtain representatives for Newmarket, Ely, March, Whittlesea, and Wisbech, but I hope to do so before long.—Believe me, yours faithfully,

MARY CLIFDEN.

Wimpole Hall, Royston, Cambs.
October 27th, 1914.

	£	s.	d.
Lord and Lady Clifden	50	0	0
Hon. A. Peckover, per Lady Clifden	10	10	0
Mr. and Lady Marjorie Binney, per Lady Clifden	6	0	0
Sir George Fordham, per Lady Clifden	2	2	0
Lady Fordham, per Lady Clifden ..	2	2	0
Hon. Mrs. Thornton, per Lady Clifden	1	1	0
Hon. Mary Jane Rebbeck, per

Surrey Mercury,
Oct. 31st. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

To-morrow (Saturday) ladies will be at work in the streets of the Borough making a collection for the Queen's Work for Women Fund. This has been undertaken by a committee formed by the Mayoress (Mrs. G. A. R. Ince) in response to a pressing invitation received from the Queen, who is anxious that every town in the country should do something to ensure that the women of Great Britain do not stand unemployed to-day through stress of the war. There is a real and great danger of unemployment among the women of the country and it was a happy thought on the part of the Queen to open this fund. The idea is to see that every woman has an opportunity of earning her living and surely this is better than having to resort to doles from charitable funds. It is a noble effort and we hope to find the residents of Reigate and Redhill rising to the occasion. We know they have many calls upon their generosity at this juncture, but there is always room to do something more and to-morrow, everybody will have the chance of doing that something more.

The work will be done on lines similar to those which proved so successful in the case of the Hospital. Indeed, the same ladies have been asked to undertake this collection and have liberally responded to the call of the Mayoress. They will take up the same positions as on Hospital Saturday and will offer red, white and blue flowers in exchange for copper or silver coins. Indeed, gold will not be refused if one is so generously-minded and we hope to find that a noble sum has been sent up to the Queen's Fund as a result of the efforts of the ladies of the Borough.

The flowers, baskets and collecting boxes will be ready for distribution this (Friday) morning. At Reigate, Mr. J. W. H. Northover, Bell-street, has kindly placed premises at the disposal of the committee for the purpose, and at Redhill Mr. F. G. Pyne has granted the use of a room at the Conservative and Unionist Offices, Station-road. The latter will also be used as a centre on Saturday and in the evening the money will be counted there and paid into the bank the same night.

653.
Pullens Kent Argus,
Oct. 31st. 1914.

QUEEN MARY'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

On Tuesday, the Mayoress (Mrs. G. G. Cook) and a number of willing lady workers indulged in a "Favour day," and hardly a passer-by escaped the ubiquitous sellers, the little red, white and blue flowers being seen everywhere. The favours were made by crippled children, and although the selling price was only a penny, a good many ladies used their persuasive powers on their friends to part with more valuable coins of the realm. The organisation work was carried out by the Mayoress, assisted by Mrs. Blasdale Clarke and Miss Cook as joint hon. secretaries. The nett result was £36 15s. 9½d.—a splendid effort considering the prevailing conditions. The results are as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
Mrs. Eastes, Thanet-road	3	17	10½
Mrs. Clarke, East Cliff	2	5	2½
Mrs. D'Eath and Mrs. Jenkinson, West Cliff	1	7	6
Mrs. Boulter, County School.....	3	2	9½
Mrs. Stock and Mrs. Baillie, Market	6	9	5½
Miss Solly, Harbour-parade	2	0	11½
Mrs. Hickmore and Miss Child, Town Station	7	13	10½
Mrs. Woodhall, Chapel-place	2	17	4
Mrs. Chayney, Chapel-place.....		10	5
Miss Dowling, Grange-road	1	4	9
Misses Russen, Queen-street..... ...	1	19	0½
Mrs. Sanders, Pegwell	1	18	1½
Miss Crow, St. Lawrence	1	7	11½
	£36	15	9½

The names of the helpers are as follows:—

Mrs. Boulter, County School, assisted by Mrs. Norman, Misses Boulter and Norman.

Mrs. Clarke, East Cliff, assisted by Mdlle. Fournier, Misses Taylor and J. Clarke, and Master J. Clarke.

The Misses Russen, Queen-street.

Miss Crow, St. Lawrence, assisted by Misses Vinson, Thomson, Finch and Holiday.

Miss Dowling, Grange-road, assisted by Misses Knight, Harnett and Lawrence.

Mrs. Hickmore and Miss Child, Town Station, assisted by Mrs. Denman and Miss Daly.

Mrs. Stock and Mrs. Baillie, Market, assisted by Misses Dye, Scott, Schofield and Acock.

Mrs. Eastes, Thanet-road, assisted by Mrs. Ellicott, Misses Martin, Russell, Henniker, Aldridge, White, Coveney, G. Louf, J. Louf and Pownell.

Mrs. D'Eath and Mrs. Jenkinson, West Cliff, assisted by Mrs. Reynolds, Misses Standley and Burgess.

Miss Solly, Harbour-parade, assisted by Misses Schooling, White, Sutton and Mack.

Mrs. Sanders, Pegwell, assisted by Mrs. Kenward, Mrs. Tapsell, Miss Sanders and Master J. Sanders.

Mrs. Woodhall, Chapel-place, assisted by Mrs. Piggott, Miss Knight and Master Fuggles.

Mrs. Chayney.

COLLECTIONS.

	£	s.	d.
Miss Salamons	3	9	0
Miss Harnett	1	0	0
Mrs. Davies.....		14	0
Miss Newman.....		7	0
Mrs. Mees		11	0
Collection from the Congregational Church, per the Rev. Duxbury Woods	6	7	5
Mrs. Bath.....		7	0
Mrs. Hodgkinson		17	7
Mrs. Dickenson		5	0
Miss Cook		10	0
Miss Caswell's Bible Class	2	13	9
Miss Enid Hayes	1	1	6
Christ Church Vicarage and friends	2	8	0
Mrs. Howe and Bible Class.....		11	6
Mrs. Langley, Holy Trinity Rectory	1	5	0
Miss Stokes.....		7	6
Collected on cards from shops.....	2	7	0
The Mayoress	1	1	0
	£36	3	3

The Mayoress (Mrs. G. G. Cook) and Miss Cook desire through the medium of this paper to record their sincere and grateful thanks to all who assisted in the event, and which has turned out financially so successful.

653/2

Previously Acknowledged	79,543	1 0
Total to Date	£80,245	3 9

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W.

Surrey Advertiser, Oct. 31st, 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

To-morrow (Saturday) ladies will be at work in the streets of the Borough making a collection for the Queen's Work for Women Fund. This has been undertaken by a committee formed by the Mayoress (Mrs. G. A. R. Ince) in response to a pressing invitation received from the Queen, who is anxious that every town in the country should do something to ensure that the women of Great Britain do not stand unemployed to-day through stress of the war. There is a real and great danger of unemployment among the women of the country and it was a happy thought on the part of the Queen to open this fund. The idea is to see that every woman has an opportunity of earning her living and surely this is better than having to resort to doles from charitable funds. It is a noble effort and we hope to find the residents of Reigate and Redhill rising to the occasion. We know they have many calls upon their generosity at this juncture, but there is always room to do something more and to-morrow, everybody will have the chance of doing that something more.

The work will be done on lines similar to those which proved so successful in the case of the Hospital. Indeed, the same ladies have been asked to undertake this collection and have liberally responded to the call of the Mayoress. They will take up the same positions as on Hospital Saturday and will offer red, white and blue flowers in exchange for copper or silver coins. Indeed, gold will not be refused if one is so generously-minded and we hope to find that a noble sum has been sent up to the Queen's Fund as a result of the efforts of the ladies of the Borough.

The flowers, baskets and collecting boxes will be ready for distribution this (Friday) morning. At Reigate, Mr. J. W. B. Northover, Bell-street, has kindly placed premises at the disposal of the committee for the purpose, and at Redhill Mr. F. G. Pyne has granted the use of a room at the Conservative and Unionist Offices, Station-road. The latter will also be used as a centre on Saturday, and in the evening the money will be counted there and paid into the bank the same night.

selections were well brought out. The rest of motives of the Grieg the orchestral work consisted of Boccherini's Minuet and Percy Grainger's "Mock Morris." Miss E. Smith and Miss Woods accompanied the soloists.

The proceeds of the concert were devoted to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, as were also the proceeds of a stall of home-made jams and pickles.

Cambridge Independent Press, Oct. 31st.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Viscountess Clifden Appeals for Cambridge's Help.

We have received the following communication from Lady Clifden:—

TO THE EDITOR.

Sir,—In response to my appeal for the Queen's Work for Women Fund I have received several donations, a list of which, as the first instalment, accompanies this letter. More subscriptions are urgently needed to enable the Fund to carry on its useful work of providing employment for women who have been thrown out of work by the war.

Since the Fund was started it has widened its scope, and centres of work have been opened to give employment to skilled as well as unskilled workers. Contract work has been placed with nearly one hundred firms whose workers are out of employment, and amongst the many centres of work already started, or in process of being started, I may mention training kitchens, cradle making, fruit preserving, domestic economy training, market gardening training, and fruit and flower growing, and a large number of schemes submitted to local representative committees have been considered and approved.

May I appeal through your columns for further assistance? Subscriptions may be sent to the following ladies who have most kindly consented to collect and receive subscriptions in their various petty sessional districts:

Arrington and Melbourn—Lady Fordham, Odsey, Ashwell, Baldock, Herts.

Bottisham—Mrs. Jenyns, Bottisham Hall, Cambridge.

Linton—The Lady Marjory Binney, Pampisford Hall, Cambridge.

Caxton—Mrs. Newton, Croxton Park, St. Neots.

Littleport (town only)—Mrs. Tansley Luddington, Plantation House, Littleport.

Chatteris—Lady Clarke, Thelema House, Chatteris.

Or to myself.

I have not been able to obtain representatives for Newmarket, Ely, March, Whittlesea, and Wisbech, but I hope to do so before long.—Believe me, yours faithfully,

MARY CLIFDEN.

Wimpole Hall, Royston, Cambs.
October 27th, 1914.

	£	s.	d.
Lord and Lady Clifden	50	0	0
Hon. A. Peckover, per Lady Clifden	10	10	0
Mr. and Lady Marjorie Binney, per Lady Clifden	6	0	0
Sir George Fordham, per Lady Clifden	2	2	0
Lady Fordham, per Lady Clifden	2	2	0
Hon. Mrs. Thornton, per Lady Clifden	1	1	0
Hon. Mary Vere Agar Robartes, per Lady Clifden	1	1	0
Hon. Everilda Agar Robartes, per Lady Clifden	1	1	0
Hon. Violet Agar Robartes, per Lady Clifden	1	1	0
Mr. John Gilbert, per Lady Clifden	1	0	0
Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Newton	10	0	0
Mrs. W. Briscoe, per Mrs. Newton	5	0	0
Miss Cochrane, per Mrs. Newton	0	10	0
Miss F. Cochrane, per Mrs. Newton	0	10	0
Miss M. Newton, per Mrs. Newton	0	10	0
Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Dinsdale	1	0	0
Mrs. Harding, per Mrs. Marcus Dinsdale	10	0	0
Collection Landbrook Church, per Rev. Canon Bone	3	13	7
	£107	1	7

Mrs. Sanders, Pegwell	1	18	1½
Miss Crow, St. Lawrence	1	7	11½
	£36	15	9½

The names of the helpers are as follows:—

Mrs. Boulter, County School, assisted by Mrs. Norman, Misses Boulter and Norman.

Mrs. Clarke, East Cliff, assisted by Mdlle. Fournier, Misses Taylor and J. Clarke, and Master J. Clarke.

The Misses Russen, Queen-street.

Miss Crow, St. Lawrence, assisted by Misses Vinson, Thomson, Finch and Hobday.

Miss Dowling, Grange-road, assisted by Misses Knight, Harnett and Lawrence.

Mrs. Hickmore and Miss Child, Town Station, assisted by Mrs. Denman and Miss Daly.

Mrs. Stock and Mrs. Baillie, Market, assisted by Misses Dye, Scott, Schofield and Acock.

Mrs. Eastes, Thanet-road, assisted by Mrs. Ellicott, Misses Martin, Russell, Henniker, Aldridge, White, Coveney, G. Louf, J. Louf and Fousell.

Mrs. D'Eath and Mrs. Jenkinson, West Cliff, assisted by Mrs. Reynolds, Misses Standley and Burgess.

Miss Solly, Harbour-parade, assisted by Misses Schooling, White, Sutton and Mack.

Mrs. Sanders, Pegwell, assisted by Mrs. Kenward, Mrs. Tapsell, Miss Sanders and Master J. Sanders.

Mrs. Woodhall, Chapel-place, assisted by Mrs. Piggott, Miss Knight and Master Fuggles.

Mrs. Chayney.

COLLECTIONS.

	£	s.	d.
Miss Salamons	3	9	0
Miss Harnett	1	0	0
Mrs. Davies		14	0
Miss Newman		7	0
Mrs. Mees		11	0
Collection from the Congregational Church, per the Rev. Duxbury Woods	6	7	5
Mrs. Bath		7	0
Mrs. Hodgkinson		17	7
Mrs. Dickenson		5	0
Miss Cook		10	0
Miss Caswell's Bible Class	2	13	9
Miss Enid Hayes	1	1	6
Christ Church Vicarage and friends	2	8	0
Mrs. Howe and Bible Class		11	6
Mrs. Langley, Holy Trinity Rectory	1	5	0
Miss Stokes		7	6
Collected on cards from shops	2	7	0
The Mayoress	1	1	0
	£25	3	3

The Mayoress (Mrs. G. G. Cook) and Miss Cook desire through the medium of this paper to record their sincere and grateful thanks to all who assisted in the event, and which has turned out financially so successful.

653/2

653/3

The Rugby Advertiser, Oct. 31st 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

SCHEME EXPLAINED BY LADY ROXBURGH.

A well-attended meeting was held at the New Big School on Tuesday afternoon, when Lady Roxburgh (hon secretary) gave an interesting speech on the reasons which led to the formation of the above fund by Queen Mary and the means by which these objects were to be obtained. Dr A A David presided, and he was supported on the platform by Lady Roxburgh, Mrs Arthur James (a member of the Queen's Council), and Mr J J McKinnell (chairman of the Urban District Council). Others present were Mr Arthur James, Mrs David, Rev C M and Mrs Blagden, Rev W O and Mrs Assheton, Rev P M Herbert, Rev R S Mitchison, Rev H G Waters, Miss Townsend (Kings Newnham), Mrs St Hill, Mrs Simey, Mrs W S Stokes, Mrs Kennedy, Miss Colebrook, Mr E L D Cole, and many others.

The CHAIRMAN explained that they had not called them together that afternoon to appeal to their feelings; that sort of appeal was wholesome at most times and necessary at some times; but he did not think that it was necessary now. Those in Rugby, at any rate, might claim to have shown that they were fully alive to the need for sacrifice—for individual, as well as corporate, sacrifice on a great and an unprecedented scale during the next few months, and possibly longer than that. But while their hearts were already stirred, and while they had lent a ready ear to many calls to sacrifice, they might, perhaps, feel that they had not yet clearly enough grasped the method, principle and scope of the great central fund to which their contributions were remitted. He always thought that it was as important to at these times as it was to give with liberality. The general policy of the central fund in these various cases was, of course, decided for them. They might, or they might not, approve of it; personally he did. He was always for co-operation on the widest possible scale, and he thought that the alternative to the scheme, which was now being perfected, as they hoped, would have been something which would have landed them into confusion, which would soon have been really intolerable. There was no doubt that a national danger could only be met by a nationally-organised safeguard; and whatever they might think of the policy, there it was, and it was their duty to support that policy, not only financially—that they had done and would continue to do—but also by avoiding, even in their thoughts, hostile criticism of the methods and results already achieved. A great machine like that of the Queen's Fund, and still more like that of the National Fund, could not possibly run smoothly and quickly at first. They had to listen with great reserve to any criticism—whether in the Press or elsewhere—which complained that nothing was being done. The difficulties both in principle and detail were enormous and innumerable. Their duty, also, was to support it with understanding and to learn what they could about it, and by giving as much sympathy as possible to the people who were working extremely hard—much harder than the critics—to get it to work smoothly. On their part, too, they might claim that these people should take them into their confidence, and that was the first part of what Lady Roxburgh was going to do for them, to explain the methods and actual working of the machine which was going to avert a great national danger of unemployment amongst women. The second object was to take counsel together to try to discover the best and most business-like way in which the people of Rugby could play their part in that great machine. Taking heart at the way in which the National Fund had been organised in Rugby, he thought, without injuring themselves or anyone else, they could give to Lady Roxburgh a response worthy of the town and district and worthy of the great cause she had come to appeal for and to explain to them (applause).

GIVE WITH UNDERSTANDING

LADY ROXBURGH EXPLAINS.

In the course of an interesting speech, enlivened with several amusing anecdotes, Lady ROXBURGH explained the scheme she was there to advocate. An old writer had said: "Men talk, men will talk, let them talk" (laughter). She quite agreed with the writer, who knew the sex well, and also probably knew an ancestor of Dr David, and knew what a gift of speech he had. She had never advocated a cause so near to her heart as this Queen's Work for Women Fund. There were two classes of people—those who did something and those who sat at home and asked incessantly why it was not done some other way. The Queen was very anxious to relieve the distress among women and to remove the temptations which would beset young girls if they were without money and in want of food and lodgings, and so she decided to call the Queen's Council to endeavour to mitigate that evil. One of the first ladies asked to serve on that committee was Mrs Arthur James, and a splendid worker the Queen had found in her. They raised the sum of £11,000 privately, but quickly discovered that this would be very inadequate to deal with the question of unemployment among women, which was already getting serious in many trades and places. Lady Roxburgh explained that in some centres there had never been so little unemployment, but that was due to the orders for boots, uniform, and underclothing for the army. They had endeavoured to spread these orders all over the United Kingdom, but owing to the fact that in many districts the necessary machinery did not exist, this work was inevitably of a local character. They were endeavouring, where possible, to keep factories open, and many dressmakers' rooms had been placed at their disposal, so that girls could be kept at work making shirts, etc. required for the army. These girls were not being paid quite so much as when they were in ordinary employment, because they had been advised by the wise heads of the permanent officials of the various departments that this would prevent the girls from trying to get back to their ordinary work, and would thus interfere with trade and do more harm than good. Thus, except in the case of young girls who were only receiving barely sufficient to keep themselves, they were paying the workers 1s or so per week less than their regular wages. Lady Roxburgh outlined the negotiations which had taken place between the Queen's Fund and the Chairman of the National Relief Fund, and stated that as the result of the Queen's appeal, whereby they had raised £76,000, they had received a definite promise from the National Relief Fund that in the event of their fund becoming exhausted, and any scheme that they had set up was doing well, they would make them a grant equivalent to what they themselves collected, and even more if there was any money left.

WHAT THE FUND IS DOING.

Dealing with the work which was being carried out, Lady Roxburgh stated that they were teaching women and girls the art of canning fruit and vegetables, a trade which had been entirely in the hands of the Germans heretofore, and had never been properly understood in England, and by this means they were also meeting the demands for tinned fruit, etc, for the army and navy, and preventing the great waste of fruit which annually occurred in England. They were also training girls for sick room helps, so that they could relieve nurses of a good deal of the drudgery of their work, thus enabling them to devote themselves more thoroughly to the surgical and medical side. Efforts were also being made to provide employment for the large numbers of typists, governesses, and secretaries, who had lost their employment in consequence of the war, while others were being taught cooking and domestic duties, and both sexes would, in the future, reap the benefit of this training, which was being satisfactorily carried out. Numbers of girls typists were by no means proficient in their duties, and these were being taught other trades, which so far had not been practised in England, and which would be of incalculable advantage when the war was over, and the men came back to the various industries, and the women, who were at present, in some cases, filling their places, had to give way to them. It was thus important that they should utilise the months which were before them, to find new trades and professions, which would make for the happiness, instead of the misery of all classes, because one class could not endure to see another class suffering. She personally knew a good deal of the conditions in the South of London, and how after a visit it haunted one to think of the people who had to live from hand to mouth. Some people said they should save, and this had almost made her loathe the word. How could people save on 10s per week (applause). She was as much in favour of thrift as anyone, but people who said these persons ought to save had no conception of how the poor women and girls had to live in South London (applause).

EVERYONE CAN HELP.

The speaker then went on to show how it was possible for everyone to help with their pence. They could not all afford to give shillings or half-crowns, but most of them could afford their pence, and small sums very quickly mounted up. The smallest contribution was acknowledged by a royal receipt, if it was only 1d or £10,000, which was equally welcome (laughter). She urged them all to do their part and help in this work, which was a work that would live. A man of old had said:—

"Lay sure foundations deep,
Lay them strongly, lay them true;
So they'll rise when you do sleep,
Builders building after you."

She knew that so they were laying the foundations of the Work for Women, and future generations would bless them for what they did.

Dr DAVID announced that, among other amounts, they had already received the following:—Mr Arthur James £30, Mrs James £10, Mrs Fenwick £5, Dr David £5, and Mr J J McKinnell £1.

Mrs ARTHUR JAMES then proposed a vote of thanks to Dr and Mrs David for the use of the room, and also for kindly inviting the company to tea (which was partaken of after the meeting), and to Lady Roxburgh for addressing them. If they knew how truly busy her Ladyship was, they would realise the sacrifice she was making by coming to Rugby that afternoon. She appealed to all present to take a collecting card, and return it to her (Mrs James), addressed to the Town Buildings, about the middle of November.—Mr J J McKINNELL seconded.

In reply, Lady ROXBURGH alluded to the fact that the Tsar was called the "Little father of his people," and she believed that the Queen would go down to history as "The little mother of her people" (applause). She then read the Queen's letter as follows:—"In the firm belief that prevention of distress is better than its relief and that employment is better than charity, I have inaugurated the Queen's Work for Women Fund. Its object is to provide employment for as many as possible of the women of this country who have been thrown out of work by the war. I appeal to the women of Great Britain to help their less fortunate sisters through this fund."—Dr DAVID also responded.

Nottingham Guardian, Oct. 31st. 1914.

653

WORK FOR WOMEN.

USEFULNESS OF QUEEN'S FUND.

By providing employment the Queen's Work for Women Fund is playing a most useful part in the relief of distress in Nottingham. Apart from very small working charges, the only expense which is involved in giving self-respecting women and girls work instead of offering them monetary relief is the outlay on material, and the poor of the city are the gainers by the garments made. There is no interference with legitimate trade.

	£	s.	d.
Amount previously acknowledged	2471	3	6
Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Boyd	1	1	0
Messrs. Derry and Sons, Ltd.	1	1	0
Mr. William Odery	1	1	0
Miss E. M. Cowen	3	0	0
F. B. S.	0	10	0
	2477	16	6

Anyone who can lend hand or treadle machines or chairs is asked to write to the Hon. Secretary, Mrs. W E. Dowson, at the offices, 14, Sherwood-street South. Office hours, 11 to 1.

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund.

Kensington News, Oct. 31st

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

HAMMERSMITH SUB-COMMITTEE.

Mayoress of Hammersmith (Mrs. L. R. Foreman)
President and Hon. Treasurer.

Dear Sir,—As your readers are aware a certain quantity of material for the making of garments for the Queen Mary's Needlework Guild was purchased a little time ago out of funds raised in the Borough for that purpose. A gratifying response to my appeal for help in the making of the garments has resulted in all the material being utilised for that object.

Before distributing the garments it is proposed to exhibit the same in the Council Chamber of the Town Hall, and this will be done on Tuesday, the 3rd November next.

The Local Committee and myself will be glad to welcome all who so willingly helped in the making of the garments, at the Town Hall on that day between the hours of 10.30 and 12.30 and 3 and 5 p.m. to inspect the same.

To all who have contributed either money or labour in connection with this admirable work I tender my sincere thanks.—Yours faithfully,

LUCY R. FOREMAN,
Mayoress.

Mayor's Parlour,
Town Hall, Hammersmith, W.
29th October, 1914.

LIST No. 5.

	£	s.	d.
Mrs. Hanson	3	1	0
St. Thomas' Church	3	15	0
Mrs. C. Wilson	1	1	0
Mr. G. P. Mantle's Employees .. .. —	0	4	0
Already acknowledged	232	3	6
List as above	9	0	0
	232	3	6

Caerphilly Herald, Oct. 31st. 1914.

Miss Mapplebeck, hon. treasurer to the Mayoress's Queen's Work for Women Fund has sent up to headquarters the sum of £243 13s. 9d. The local fund amounts to £70 19s. 8d. A sub-committee has been formed for the purpose of cutting out and distributing needlework to those dressmakers and seamstresses who are thrown out of employment by the war. The work takes the form of shirts for soldiers, clothing for Belgian refugees, and maternity bags. The local fund will be used, as far as it goes, for buying material and paying the women employed. The work, when finished, will be given away.

Daily Mail, Oct. 31st. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

£250 FROM "THE DAILY MAIL" RECRUIT SONG SALES.

The Daily Mail recruiting song, "Your King and Country Want You," by Mr. Paul A. Rubens, besides helping to fill the ranks of Lord Kitchener's new Army, is swelling the Queen's Work for Women Fund, which was established to find employment for women thrown out of work by the war.

This fund yesterday amounted to £80,875 19s. 11d., and included in the latest subscriptions is £250, the first instalment of the profits derived from "Your King and Country Want You." Published by Messrs. Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street, W., the song can be obtained (price 1s.) from music-dealers, booksellers, or newsagents all over the country.

Among other subscriptions to the Queen's Fund yesterday were:

£108 13s. 1d.—Collected by Mayoress of Maidenhead, including Lady Desborough.
£62 1s.—Collected by Urban Council, Ashton-in-Makerfield, including Mary Lady Gerard £10.
£54 4s. 4d.—Collected by Mayoress of Blackburn, further instalment, including £45 1s. 1d. collected by women teachers of Blackburn.
£20 13s. 9d.—Collected by Mayoress of Conway.
£19 18s.—Collected by Mayoress of Dover, including box collections in shops.
£19 11s. 6d.—Collected by Mayoress of St. Helens, further instalment.
£13 17s.—Catholic Women's Suffrage Society, collection at lecture on Belgium at Kensington Town Hall.
£11.—Collected by Urban Council, Aylesbury, further instalment.
£10.—S. C. and A. C.

Contributions should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

WOMEN'S GIFT TO TROOPS.

So swift and generous a response has been made by the women of the Empire to the Queen's appeal for 300,000 body belts and 300,000 pairs of socks for the men of the Expeditionary Force that it has been found possible to close the fund.

The Lady-in-Waiting to the Queen states that no new gifts are required, but it is asked that those who have promised gifts shall redeem their promises at the earliest possible date, and that those who are making body belts and socks will finish and send in their gifts as soon as possible.

The money gifts to the fund have been used to provide wages and materials for unemployed women.

Daily Mail, Nov. 11th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

£81,972 FOR WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund, established to find employment for women and girls thrown out of work by the war, now amounts to £81,972 16s. 5d. Yesterday's subscriptions included:

£108 0s. 2d.—Sixth contribution from Sale of "Gifts in Kind" by the Work for Women Fund department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., Oxford-street, W.
£100.—Miss Houldsworth.
£50.—Miss Stancombe-Wills, monthly contribution.
£45 5s.—Collected by Mayoress of Scarborough (including Mr. Oscar Wilkinson, £25).
£34.—Collected from the women of parish of Melksham (per Mr. H. W. Taylor, chairman of Urban District Council).

Contributions should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund yesterday reached £3,604,000. This week another allocation of sums for distribution for the relief of civil and military distress will be made by the executive committee.

Princess Mary's Christmas Gift Fund for the sailors and soldiers now amounts to £38,354, and the Indian Soldiers' Fund to £72,150.

Birmingham Post, 2nd. November 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WOMEN WORKERS' FUND.

AN APPEAL BY COUNTESS BEAUCHAMP.

A meeting of the Gloucestershire War Relief Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Gloucester, on Saturday, Mr. M. W. Colchester-Wemyss presiding over a large attendance.

The Chairman reported that the Duchess of Beaufort had been extremely successful in her appeal for the provision of a motor ambulance by the county. One ambulance had gone to the front, another was nearly ready, and a further sum had been contributed for the conversion of an ordinary car into an ambulance suitable for service with the Yeomanry. Beyond that, the Duchess of Beaufort had almost sufficient money in hand for the running expenses of these three motors.

Permission to describe the relief fund of the Lord Lieutenant of the county (Earl Beauchamp) as one administered in co-operation with the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund was reported.

The Lord Lieutenant had intended being present to introduce the question of a grant by way of assistance to the Queen's Women Workers' Fund, but Earl Beauchamp telegraphed that owing to the critical nature of relations between the Allies and Turkey a meeting of the Privy Council might become necessary at any moment, and consequently as Lord President, it was impossible for him to leave London.

Mr. F. A. Hyett stated that this item had been placed on the agenda at the instance of the Lord Lieutenant, Countess Beauchamp having been approached by the Queen with a request to use her influence with the county to obtain financial assistance for that very desirable fund Lord Beauchamp wished, if it were possible, that a grant in aid should be made from the Lord Lieutenant's fund, and he mentioned that the Mayoress of Gloucester (Mrs. James Bruton) had also issued an appeal on behalf of the fund. Mr. Hyett pointed out that the application for a grant did not quite fall within the four corners of the resolution on which the Lord Lieutenant's fund was initiated, its purpose being the mitigation of distress arising in the county. The work of the Queen's Fund was very admirable, and if the committee did not think a grant towards it fell within the scope of the objects of the Lord Lieutenant's fund, no doubt members who were in sympathy with the Queen's appeal would forward individual subscriptions to Lady Beauchamp.

The Duchess of Beaufort mentioned that a month ago, having been approached in the matter, she collected £250 in Gloucestershire and sent the amount to the Queen.

Viscount St. Aldwyn urged that it would be better in every way to provide by a separate subscription rather than impose a charge on a fund raised for other and distinct purposes.

Sir Lionel Darell, Bart., concurred, and no action was taken in the matter

The Times, 2nd Nov. 1914.

TECHNICAL TRAINING FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen has sent the following letter to Madame Clara Butt :—

Buckingham Palace,
29th October, 1914.

My dear Mrs. Rumford,—I have handed to the Queen the cheque for £1,500 which you have sent to her Majesty as a result of a series of concerts so kindly given by you and Mr. Kennerley Rumford in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

Her Majesty is much touched by the generous thought which prompted you and your husband to give these concerts, and it is a great satisfaction to the Queen to know you have been able to arrange further concerts for the benefit of other war relief funds, at the same time giving employment to artists in the musical profession, who, through the war, have lost their sole means of livelihood.

Her Majesty is deeply grateful to you and Mr. Rumford for all the trouble you have taken to augment her fund, and the Queen is greatly interested to know what liberal support you receive from the people in connexion with your concerts.

As I have already explained, her Majesty much regrets that she was prevented from attending your first concert at the Albert Hall on the 10th instant.—Yours sincerely,

E. W. WALLINGTON, Private Secretary.

Special trade instruction is to be given, where possible, in the workrooms opened through the agency of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. This is to meet the need of industrial workers who otherwise might lose their skill through want of practice, and to give training to others likely to benefit by the opportunity. Unmarried girls over the age of 16 and apparently teachable are to be chosen for the training in preference to older women.

The experiment is to be started almost immediately in the committee's own experimental workrooms in London. Inquiries are now being made in the workrooms as to the previous occupations of the workers with a view to forming classes accordingly.

The following subscriptions to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund were received yesterday:—

Collected by Mrs. Benyon, Mrs. Leslie Wilson, Mrs. Alfred Palmer, and other ladies in the Reading district, including Mr. J. D. Mayne, £25	£72 10 1
Collected by the Mayoress of Nottingham, further instalment, including Mrs. James Forman, £10	53 2 6
£50 EACH.—Mr. Samuel Insull, Chicago; Mrs. Macleod, Bombay.
Collected by the Urban District Council of Barrington	30 0 0
Collected in Rugby by Mrs. Arthur James, first instalment	26 4 9
Collected by the Urban District Council of Redcar, proceeds from a concert	24 13 0
Collected by the Mayoress of Plymouth, further instalment	20 9 9
£20 EACH.—Collected by the Countess of Pembroke and Montgomery, including Capt. Harold Brassey, £10; collected by the Mayoress of St. Albans; Miss Bodkin.
Lady St. Davids	15 15 0
Collected by the Urban District Council of Newport Pagnell	15 0 0
Miss Hoyle	10 10 0
Collected by Mrs. Riddoch in the Town of Putsey, per the Town Clerk	10 3 0
£10 EACH.—Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Low, Mr. Decimus Curme, Messrs. Grimsdale and Sons, Ltd., collected by the people of Nantglyn (North Wales)
OTHER SUBSCRIPTIONS	9 12 2
TO-DAY'S TOTAL	3 0 3
PREVIOUSLY ACKNOWLEDGED	80,989 14 5
TOTAL TO DATE	£81,527 14 8

In addition to the above, Mrs. Hunter of Epping, sent a donation of £297 3s. 4d. to provide boots, mittens, and scarfs for the troops.

CORRECTION.—The £[illegible] 18s. 6½d. given as collected by the Urban District Council of Middlewich on Thursday last should have been acknowledged as collected by the Middlewich Ladies Sub-Committee.

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

"Gifts in Kind," exhibited in Messrs. D. H. Evans's island window for the benefit of the fund, are attracting much attention. The cameo necklace, by Thorwaldsen, which belonged to the Princess Pauline Bonaparte, sister of Napoleon I., sold for £35.

653/4

653/5

653.

Eastbourne Gazette, Nov. 4th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

"PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK."

Every home in England has heard of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and it is believed every home in England is anxious to help the excellent work the fund is doing on behalf of workless women.

An opportunity will be given to all desirous of contributing indirectly to the fund, to purchase a copy of "Princess Mary's Gift Book" which the well-known publishers, Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton, of London, are issuing shortly.

All the profits of this book are to be devoted to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

The book is a most excellent production for the small outlay of half-a-crown, and every member of the household will read its stories and poems.

The most eminent authors of the day are contributors, and famous artists have made special drawings and paintings to illustrate its pages.

Sodaman, Nov. 5th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Last evening the Queen's Work for Women Fund had reached a total of £82,155.

As one of the methods of raising money for this fund, the resolve certificates of the Entente Trade League are on sale through the Committees formed in the various cities, boroughs, and urban centres. A letter has been addressed by Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary of the Fund, to the local Committees, inviting their support for the League on patriotic grounds, and to assist in giving immediate relief to women unemployed owing to the war.

Sunday School Times, November 6th. 1914.

AN APPEAL.

THE Committee of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has decided to make an appeal to Sunday-school scholars throughout the kingdom for this branch of the National Relief Fund. The Marchioness of Crewe, as chairman of the Queen's Committee, suggests that officers and teachers should take the earliest opportunity of explaining the scheme to the scholars, and distributing literature for teachers and scholars, which may be had from the various denominational secretaries. Teachers may supervise collections among the scholars, or, if preferable, scholars can form their own committees for collection. The Queen wishes it clearly understood that such collections are to be entirely a freewill offering, undertaken by the scholars themselves without coercion or persuasion. There is, of course, no idea of interference with the usual collections for other objects, but it is suggested that scholars might like to devote at least one Sunday's general collection to the Fund, apart from private collections which they may care to make among themselves.

A personal acknowledgment from Buckingham Palace will be sent to each Sunday School sending up its contributions in this manner.

All communications should be addressed to the Marchioness of Crewe, 33, Portland-place, W. The Sunday School Union and the various denominational unions heartily support this appeal.

Morning Post, November 5th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Last evening the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund had reached a total of £82,155 3s. 7d. The day's subscribers included:

Colonel R. T. M. Lang	£20	0	0
The Scriveners' Company	15	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Paddington (further instalment)	14	7	6
Collected by the Mayoress of Islington (further instalment, including matinée held at Highgate Empire, per Mr. W. Williams, £11 16s. 6d.)	14	3	7
Half proceeds of entertainment given by the Brondesbury and Kilburn High School Dramatic Club on October 28 and 29	13	14	6
The Countess of Kenmare	10	0	0
The Ladies' Executive of the "Mayor's War Funds," Newcastle, Natal	10	0	0

The £20 acknowledged as from the Mitcham Parish Committee of the Lord Lieutenant of Surrey's Fund on October 17 should have read "The Mickleham Parish Committee."

All communications relating to the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London; and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Scottish subscriptions are to be sent to the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, Linlithgow.

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

WORKROOM IN BATTERSEA.

The urgency of their work is brought daily home to the Central Committee on Women's Employment. A workroom is to be opened in Battersea this week, and close upon 300 women have applied to be admitted. A young mother came to the Town Hall, Battersea, yesterday with her little boy of four and was promised work. She had had nothing but bread to eat since Sunday, and very little of that. Her husband deserted her fifteen months ago, but she has been a skirt hand in a West End firm for seven years, and until the war began was able to keep her children, one of which is a baby. Since the second week in August she has had nothing to do. In cases such as this, which is not exceptional, the work initiated by the Committee comes as a relief from despair.

Wellington Times, Nov. 7th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

A letter was read from Countess Roxburgh, on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, asking the Council to form a local collecting committee to assist this fund.

The Chairman remarked that not many weeks ago they made a great pull upon the town for the Prince of Wales' Fund, and last week for the Belgian Relief fund, and he did not see how they could expect to keep on doing it. Westbury was not a rich town.

Mr. Angell: There is also a collection for the Red Cross Fund going on.

The Chairman: We have collected £400 for the Prince of Wales' Fund, £100 for clothing for the Red Cross work, and we have promised to get £8 or £10 a week towards the Belgian Fund.

It was decided to reply to the Countess Roxburgh to this effect.

Jewish Chronicle, 6 Nov. 1914.

I have very good reason to know that Queen Mary's "Work for Women" scheme was originally suggested by a Jewish lady, whose absence from the communal arena has been unusually protracted. It appears that at the time when the Queen or her helpers were busily engaged in the making of articles for Red Cross and other purposes, this lady suggested to Her Majesty that were the needlework placed for completion with deserving women, at least some of the distress then prevalent would automatically disappear. The suggestion was acknowledged in a most charming letter, with the contents of which I have been made acquainted, and it was not long after its receipt that London heard of Queen Mary's intention. The project has become of enormous economic importance within these last few weeks, not the least encouraging feature being the employment of numbers of Jewish young women in the East End workrooms. The headquarters of the scheme are within the shadow of Buckingham Palace, and it was here that I learned of the participation of Jewish girls in a highly interesting occupation, which centres mainly round the production of maternity outfits for those otherwise unable to purchase them. The whole scheme is a happy one, free from the suggestion of charity, providing work that is at once interesting and congenial.

Methodist Recorder, Nov. 5th. 1914.

I want to draw especial attention to the circular that has been sent out by the Committee that administers the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. We in our schools must not be deterred just now by the plea of "So many appeals." Of course there are many appeals. Britain has long lived in comfortable ease, and now that ease is threatened. Those who are fighting for our liberties, or who are dependent upon the actual fighters, must not be allowed to suffer, and in many ways our scholars must not only hear, but must be urged to respond to the appeals that make such small sacrifices as children can make.

Morning Post, November 6th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £83,889 0s. 10d. The day's subscribers included:

	£	s.	d.
Proceeds of Concerts given by Madame Clara Butt and Mr. Kennerley Rumford	1,500	0	0
Jays (Limited)	21	0	0
Collected by Viscountess Clifden (second instalment, including Mrs. Gray £10 10s.)	20	17	0
Amount realised at a Matinée held at the Alexandra Theatre, Derby, October 27	20	14	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Huddersfield (further instalment)	20	2	0
Marchioness of Zetland	15	0	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Farsley	14	4	2
Proceeds of Entertainment given by the Employees and Staff of the Maybury Laundry, Woking (per Miss D. F. Hayward)	14	0	0
Jones and Higgins (Ltd.)	10	10	0
C. Mellier and Co.	10	10	0
E. and T. Pink (Ltd.)	10	0	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Aylesbury (further instalment)	10	0	0

All communications relating to the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

The Domestic Economy Training Centres for unemployed working women established by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are proving very popular in East London.

LAND SCHEME FOR WOMEN.

The Women's Emergency Corps, Old Bedford College, Baker-street, have, in co-operation with existing Horticultural and Agricultural Associations, formed a committee to consider the practical possibilities of training women to take up the work of intensive poultry farming and market gardening, with a view of opening a new means of livelihood to unemployed middle-class women and to increase the home produce of the country. Through the kindness of friends, who have given land and money for the initial experiment, the Women's Emergency Corps are now in the position to offer a gratuitous preliminary training, with maintenance, for six months or a year, to suitable applicants.

Surrey Mirror, Nov. 7th. 1914.

I most heartily congratulate the Mayoress upon the wonderful success which attended her efforts last Saturday for the Queen's Work for Women Fund. It was a noble response to a noble object, and I am sure all who took any part in the movement will feel amply repaid by the result. It was, of course, fortunate that there was such an organisation as that of the Hospital Saturday to fall back upon. It enabled the ground to be covered in the very short time at the disposal of the Mayoress and the committee she had formed, and the manner in which the ladies of the Borough rallied to the support of those actively engaged testified to the generosity and patriotism which actuates them.

653

653/6

Scotsman
23-11-14

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

This fund has now reached a total of £91,188, 0s. 9d. The treasurer for Scotland is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, to whom subscriptions should be sent.

Scotsman Edinburgh
4-12-14

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund last night reached a total of £95,614, 4s. 7d.

The Scottish subscriptions amount to £1608, 15s. 6d., last week's receipts including a donation of £100 from Mrs Mackintosh of Mackintosh, Moy Hall, Inverness, and a second contribution of £200 from the Scottish Teachers' Fund for War Relief.

The Scottish treasurer of the Fund, to whom subscriptions should be sent, is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry. Communications regarding the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

Sussex Daily News 21-11-14

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Sir,—The following sums have been received this week:—Profits of concert, per Miss Walsham, £10 5s. 9d.; profits of concert held at Circus-street School Hall by Order of the Star in the East, per Miss Pullar, £2 14s. 8½d.—Yours, &c., AUDREY OTTER, Mayoress.

Brighton, 20th November.

Scotsman Edinburgh.
4-11-14.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Further Scottish subscriptions to this Fund have been received to the amount of £173, 4s. 4d. With subscriptions already acknowledged, amounting to £456, 13s. 8d., this makes a total up to date of £629, 18s. The Scottish subscriptions are received by the Marchioness of Linlithgow, and are then forwarded to London.

The Star
24-12-14

PRINCESS MARY'S BOOK.

A £10.000 Cheque for Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Messrs Hodder and Stoughton, publishers of "The Princess Mary's Gift Book," are able to announce the contribution of the sum of £10,000 to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

This handsome sum, which represents the first instalment of the profits on the publication, has been sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer of the fund

The publishers of this remarkable book announce that half a million copies have been sold Within three weeks from publication over 400,000 copies were delivered to the trade

Surrey Gazette, Nov: 7th. 1914.

653/7

653.

FLOWER SATURDAY.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

SUCCESS OF THE MAYORESS'S EFFORT.

On Saturday the Borough of Reigate was provided with an opportunity to help one of the most deserving funds which have arisen owing to the war. The Queen's Work for Women Fund recognises that prevention of distress is better than relief, and employment better than charity, and its object is to provide employment for as many women as possible who through the war have been thrown out of work. The Mayoress of Reigate (Mrs. G. A. R. Ince) was asked by Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary and acting treasurer of the fund, to become the local president, and to take steps to bring the matter before the residents. With enthusiasm and ability she at once decided upon a "Flower Day," and obtained the assistance of a number of ladies, who formed a committee. The committee was composed as follows:—Mrs. Hull, Miss Hull, Mrs. Purchase, Miss Whitley, Mrs. J. Powell, Mrs. J. Auerbach, Mrs. Priest, Miss Marion H. Greenhow, Mrs. F. Morrison, Miss Wilkinson, Mrs. Durrant, Mrs. F. E. Barnes, Miss Scott, Mrs. Freeman, Mrs. Julius and Mrs. Tucker. The Mayoress was also fortunate in enlisting the practical help of the organisation of the Hospital Saturday Committee, and the invaluable assistance they were able to render considerably augmented the efforts which resulted in the magnificent success obtained. The Hospital Saturday Committee placed at the disposal of the Mayoress and her committee the collecting tins and baskets for holding the flowers, used on Hospital Saturday, whilst the headquarters of the Queen's Work for Women Fund supplied the flowers which the collectors sold. The flowers were of dainty appearance, and represented patriotic favours.

Fortunately the day was fine on Saturday, so that the young lady collectors, who started their work as early as eight o'clock, were not called upon to suffer adverse weather. The lady collectors proved themselves enthusiastic, and very few people were successful in refusing their appeal to subscribe, however small. A battalion of soldiers passing through the Borough were also appealed to, and they gave to a man. During the day the Mayoress visited every collecting station at both ends of the Borough. It was soon evident that the number of flowers would be exhausted, but a fresh supply was obtained, and at the end of the day very few of these remained unsold. Of course, many of the pretty little flowers were sold for a few coppers, but quite a number were sold for a sovereign or more. The most striking feature of the collection was the fact that of the grand total of £126 odd, no less than £64 13s. was in pence, thus proving the popularity of the Fund among the poorer section of the community The townspeople, in fact, liberally responded to the appeal made to them, whilst there were innumerable instances of assistance so as to help forward the good cause at heart. The majority of the collectors ceased their labours soon after five o'clock, but a few boxes remained out during Saturday evening, when members of the Working Men's Committee took over the work from the ladies.

Mr. J. W. B. Northover kindly lent an office at Reigate as a depot, and the Conservative and Unionist Association, through Mr. F. G. Pyne, lent their offices at Redhill for counting the money. Mr. H. Little, the hon. secretary of the Working Men's Hospital Committee, rendered much valuable assistance both before and on the day, his help and that of other members of the committee being much appreciated. Mr. A. H. Jones kindly supplied the calico for the armlets for the collectors, the Holmesdale Press, Ltd., supplied the printing, and Mr. G. Linter and Mr. J. W. B. Northover lent their motors for collecting the boxes, and Mr. W. E. Bartlett helped in the distribution of the boxes, whilst Messrs. J. H. Aspin and Co. lent a trolley for the conveyance to the London County and Westminster Bank of the trunk in which the money, when counted, was placed. Those who assisted in the counting of the money at the Conservative and Unionist Offices in the evening were Messrs. C. Kent, J. Priest, G. Pook, C. J. Wilkinson, H. Little, W. E. Bartlett, C. Bartlett, C. V. Wade, J. Homewood and T. Halfpenny.

The names of those who collected, with their helpers and the amounts collected, are as follows:—

REIGATE.

Deerings-road.—The Mayoress (Mrs. G. A. R. Ince), assisted by Miss Grace Silcock, Miss May Foster, Miss Frances Knight, Miss M. Duncalfe, Miss H. Hooton, Miss P. Hooton, Master K. Ince and Master G. Knight—£8 8s. 4½d.

Blackborough-road.—Mrs. P. Fenning, assisted by Miss Rachel Miller, Miss Ansell and Master Ewart Fenning—£1 18s. 5½d.

Reigate Station (up side).—Miss Apted, assisted by Miss Marjorie Apted, Miss Kathleen Calvert, Miss Dubell, Miss Westcott, Miss A. Parkin and the Misses Shillingford—£5 11s. 4d.

Reigate Heath.—Miss Clifton, assisted by Miss Freda Counsell, Miss Lilian Capel, Miss Mary Wainwright, and Master Bertie Truelove—£2 1s. 8½d.

Market-square.—Mrs. Furnival and Mrs. Rogers, assisted by Miss Humphrey, Miss D. Foster, Miss Furnivall, Miss Peat, Miss Harding and Miss Buckland—£7 1s. 6½d.

West-street.—Miss Marjorie Lucas, assisted by Mrs. Nimrod Walter, Miss Birdie Lucas, Miss Dorothy Spencer and Master Cecil Walby—£2 10s. 4½d.

Somers-road.—Mrs. Frank Morrison, assisted by Miss Clare Finlayson, Miss Ella Finlayson and Miss Joan Hartley—£3 19s. 11½d.

Reigate Station (down side).—Mrs. J. R. Handscomb, assisted by Miss Muriel Handscomb, Miss Ivy Handscomb, Miss Molly Handscomb, Miss Duncalfe, Miss Marjorie Allingham, Miss May Barry, Miss Dora Cottle, Miss Gladys Pyne, Miss Miriam Knight, Miss Vera Richens and Masters Jack Handscomb, Howard Pyne, David Barry and David Knight—£7 15s. 6d.

"The Wilderness."—Mrs. Squair, assisted by the Misses Squair, the Misses Smith and the Misses Bache—£3 1s. 11d.

Wray Common.—Mrs. Durrant, assisted by Miss Durrant, Miss Annie Johns and Miss C. Stedman—17s. 5d.

Nutley-lane.—Miss Kathleen Skinner, assisted by Miss Gladys Cape and Master Churchill Dale—£1 14s. 11½d.

Croydon-road and Holmesdale-road.—Miss Hood, assisted by Miss M. Berry, Miss W. Berry, Miss M. Bull, Miss G. Davies, Miss H. Hood, Miss J. Standing and Miss I. Taylor—£4 9s. 2d.

Cockshott-road.—Miss Miles, assisted by Mrs. Stebbing, Mrs. Jupp, Miss L. Jupp, Miss M. Stebbing, Miss E. Carpenter, Miss E. Marchant, Miss N. Jacob and Master H. Henry—£4 11s. 9d.

Bell-street.—Mrs. Northover, assisted by H. Jeal, C. Risbridger, D. Howe, A. Green, W. Peskett, R. Risbridger, H. Pilbeam, E. Robbins and M. Northover—£2 14s. 5½d.

Total: £55 16s. 11½d.

REDHILL.

Linkfield-corner.—Mrs. Arthur Wood, assisted by Miss Marguerite Wood, Mrs. Case-Green, Miss Dorothy Green, Miss Mildred Kneale and Miss Winifred Burton—£5 10s.

Earlswood Station.—Miss Dulake, assisted by Mrs. Berry, Miss Dartnell, Miss Riddett, Miss Norah Charlwood, Miss Violet Berry, Miss M. P. Berry, Miss A. Dulake, Miss Margery Hurdle and two lads—£3 7s. 8½d.

Brighton-road.—Mrs. Homewood, assisted by Miss Grace Homewood, Miss Watts, Master Rix Homewood—£2 6s. 3½d.

Meadvale.—Mrs. Sargent, assisted by Miss D. M. Sargent, Miss B. Lambert, Miss C. Straight, Miss E. Cosens, and the Misses D. H. and L. Grady—£3 4s. 1½d.

London-road.—Mrs. Kent, assisted by Miss Simmons, Miss Ison and the Misses Ambrose—£2 13s.

Station-road.—Mrs. Priest, assisted by Mrs. King, Miss Muriel Priest, Miss Tyrer, Miss W. Apted, Miss Gorringe, Mrs. Langran, Miss M. Middleton, Miss D. Pyne, Miss H. Ryder, and Miss Gracie Catt—£11 12s. 8d.

The Pavement.—Miss May, assisted by Miss Hoare, Miss Hocken and Miss Cree—£2 16s. 2d.

Brook-road.—Miss Eden, assisted by Miss W. Lyle, Miss M. Denyer, Miss N. Stroud, and Miss E. Lyle—£4 9s. 7d.

Frenches-road.—Miss Wicking, assisted by Mrs. Roper, Miss Pakeman, and Miss Marsh—£1 16s. 4d.

Shaw's Corner.—Miss Ida Mayers and Miss Rice, assisted by Miss May Cree, Miss Ethel Frost, and Miss Mayers—£5 1s. 5d.

Market Square.—Mrs. Quinton, assisted by Mrs. Powell, Miss Palmer, Miss Hilda Porter, Miss Marjorie Dancy, and Miss B. Arnold—£4 16s. 3½d.

Redhill Station, Up Side.—Mrs. Champ, assisted by Miss Malcomson, Miss Nellie Learner, the Misses G. and D. Cook, and Master C. Malcomson—£6 11s. 11½d.

Redhill Station, Down Side.—The Misses E. and M. Laker, assisted by Mrs. W. H. Fowler and the Misses and Masters Fowler—£4 5s. 5½d.

High-street.—Mrs. Bartlett, assisted by Mrs. G. Allen, Mrs. W. Allen, Miss Quinton, Miss Steer, Miss Terry, Miss Hall, Miss Longney, and Miss R. King—£9 12s. 4½d.

Mr. H. Whitmore—15s. 8½d.
Mr. A. Edwards—9s. 4d.
Mr. Harold Pyne—10s.
Total—£69 18s. 5d.

Kensington News, Nov: 7th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

APPEAL TO SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

The Committee of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has decided to make an appeal to Sunday School scholars throughout the kingdom, for this branch of the National Relief Fund.

The Marchioness of Crewe, on behalf of the committee, states in a letter of instruction for the guidance of officers and teachers, says:—

"As chairman of the Queen's Committee I shall be most grateful if you will give us your kind help and co-operation. This can best be done in the following ways: By asking your officers and teachers to take the earliest opportunity of explaining the scheme to the scholars. For this purpose I enclose sample of literature which I suggest sending to them. I also enclose a leaflet sanctioned by Her Majesty for distribution to each child. Your denominational secretary would know how many copies you would require: (a) Of literature for teachers. (b) Of leaflets for scholars.

"I would suggest that the teachers should kindly undertake to supervise collections among the scholars, or, if preferable, that the scholars form their own committees for collection.

"The Queen wishes it clearly understood that such collections are to be entirely a free-will offering, undertaken by the scholars themselves without coercion or persuasion. There is, of course, no idea of interference with the usual collections for other objects, but it is suggested that the scholars might like to devote at least one Sunday's general collection to the fund, apart from private collections which they may care to make among themselves.

"The committee is willing to receive the collections separately at the above address, but it is preferable, when possible, that small contributions should be amalgamated at the local centres and forwarded together.

"A personal acknowledgment from Buckingham Palace will be sent to each Sunday School sending up its contributions in this manner.

"I should like to add that this scheme has the approval of Her Majesty, who has, herself, seen the leaflet, and permitted its reproduction together with that of her photograph and letter."

Morning Post, Nov: 7th 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund last night reached a total of £84,634. The day's subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Collected by the Mayoress of Camberwell (including collection by Mr. A. T. Dyer £52 14s. 3d., proceeds of Drumhead Service, Peckham Rye £50 5s. 1d., by Mr. W. T. Moss £29 7s. 10d., Officers of the South London Naval Brigade £10 10s., Father A. P. Flanagan on account of Children's Concert £10)	225	1	0
The Merchant Taylors' Company	105	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Chester (further instalment, including Miss Maglor £25, per Miss Octavia Ward £20 4s. 6d.)	75	6	0
By the Urban District Council of Kenilworth	61	1	0
The County of Pembroke War Fund (per the Lord Lieutenant)	50	0	0
The Town and County of Haverfordwest (per the Mayoress)	50	0	0
By the Mayoress of Kensington	36	16	8
Slaithwaite War Distress Committee (per Mr. Edwin Cledhill)	25	0	0
By the Mayoress of Southwold	10	1	0

The amount collected by the Mayoress of Brighton's Branch, of which the sixth instalment was received yesterday, now reaches a total of £53 18s.

All communications concerning the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

Work-rooms for the girls employed through the agency of the Central Committee on Women's Employment have in almost every case been lent. In one district the provision is a public-house which has never been licensed, and Westminster's unemployed girls are given the hospitality of a private house in South Audley-street. In Westminster it is the middle-aged women who live alone that have suffered most. They are waistcoat workers, theatrical dressers, and small dressmakers.

Whitby Gazette, November 7th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Sunday School Collection.

The Ecclesiastical Authorities of the principal religious bodies in the British Isles have approved of a Sunday school collection being made in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Expressions of opinion approving the scheme are as follow:—

The Archbishop of Canterbury:—"Any wise endeavour to enlist the sympathy and interest of children in the men of our forces, and in the cause in which their King and country have sent them, has my warm approval. I hope it will be found that they, too, can bear their share in lightening some of the burden which presses upon us all at this momentous time. (Signed) Randall Cantuar.

His Eminence the Most Rev. Francis Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster and Metropolitan:—"We trust that the children in our schools, notwithstanding their small means and the very many claims upon them, will do their best to assist the good work which Her Majesty the Queen so earnestly commends to all the children of the country."

The Rev. J. Williams Butcher has been specially consulted about this scheme, and has written the following message:—"1.—I very cordially commend this to our schools for the following reasons:—(a) It is a national fund under the auspices of Her Majesty the Queen, and, as such, every British boy and girl ought to do their part to make it a success; (b) It will save many women workers from destitution by providing them with remunerative employment, and thus prevent homes from being broken up; (c) The distribution of the goods made will bring relief to many a soldier's home, and add to the comfort—and therefore the efficiency—of many of our men at the front. 2.—I suggest that the following will be the best way to work the fund in our own schools:—(a) That the leaflets be distributed and explained on the one Sunday, and an appeal made in each class (not from the desk) to the scholars to bring a contribution, however small, on the following Sunday; (b) Let the collection be taken either in November or February. This will not interfere with the earnest and necessary work for the Children's Home or the Juvenile Missionary Fund."

Mr. W. Melville Harris, Secretary of the Young People's Department, the Congregational Union of England and Wales:—"As the representative of our Congregational Sunday Schools at Headquarters, I heartily endorse the accompanying appeal for the fund now being raised by Her Majesty the Queen. You will see that its object is to alleviate distress by providing work for women thrown out of employment owing to the war. We all wish to aid our country in some way at this crisis, and many young men nurtured in our schools are already at the front. Our scholars at home may share by denying themselves something for the sake of others less fortunate than themselves. It will greatly rejoice my heart as I see them fulfilling the law of Christ by bearing one another's burdens."

The Rev. J. H. Shakespeare:—"I hope that every Baptist boy and girl in our congregations and Sunday schools will give something to this fund. While our soldiers are fighting in the trenches, we all, both old and young, must make sacrifices ourselves."

The Rev. Carey Bonner, General Secretary to the Sunday School Union:—"The officers of the Sunday School Union most cordially commend to all affiliated Unions the appeal for the Queen's Fund, believing that, notwithstanding the many efforts being made by Sunday schools, there will be a general desire on the part of Sunday school leaders to respond. The appeal has been taken up very thoroughly by the various Denominational Sunday School Organisations, but there is no doubt that the Unions as such can render genuine service by co-operating with the denominations and promoting the gathering in of funds in the various districts concerned."

Mr. Ion Pritchard, President of the Sunday School Association:—"I am sure that our superintendents and teachers will be willing that their schools should take part in this national effort, and will give what assistance they can."

The Rev. S. C. Challenger, Secretary to the United Methodist Church Young People's and Temperance League Department:—"This is a very worthy effort, and the appeal for help will, I hope, have a very favourable consideration."

Mr. George A. Metcalfe:—"As Secretary of the Young People's Department of the Wesleyan Reform Union, I most heartily commend the foregoing worthy object—with its earnest appeal to all that is best in human hearts—to the prayerful and practical attention of all who work amongst our young. This case of the war-wounded mother is essentially the case of the children who are weeping in the playtime of the others in the country of the free. Our hearts bleed for these who suffer, whose case is all the more poignant by reason of their inability to help themselves. May the response of our scholars be worthy of this great occasion, and equal to the sorest need."

The Right Rev. Bishop Hasse, D.D.:—"Your scheme for enlisting the help of the Sunday school scholars of our land on behalf of the families of our soldiers and sailors is most excellent, and has my strong approval. I will do all in my power to further it. When once the purpose is understood, I feel sure willing support will be forthcoming from every Moravian Sunday school in this country."

Mr. D. H. Maconachie (Convenor of the General Assembly's Sabbath School Committee), and Mr. James Maconaghie and Mr. T. M. Hamill (Honorary Secretaries Sabbath School Society for Ireland):—"The Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund will, we are sure, awaken the sympathy of our Sabbath school teachers and scholars for two reasons: First, it proposes to give assistance in the best way by helping those who want to help themselves; secondly, it has been inaugurated, and is specially commended, by our gracious Queen. Many of our schools are already doing something to relieve the distress occasioned by the war. We trust this will not prevent them from responding generously to Her Majesty's appeal."

Mr. Frederick Taylor, Secretary, Friends' First-Day School Association:—"In this time of strain and actual suffering we shall be very glad if you can do something to help those who are in sore need."

The Queen's Committee, in their letter of instruction for the guidance of the many officers and teachers throughout the country, state that Her Majesty the Queen wishes it clearly understood that such collections are to be entirely a free-will offering, undertaken by the scholars themselves without coercion or persuasion. There is, of course, no idea of interference with the usual collections for other objects, but it is suggested that the scholars might like to devote at least one Sunday's general collection to the Fund, apart from private collections which they may care to make among themselves.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland Place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor Place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W.

Goole Times, Nov. 7th.

THE "QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Some time ago a meeting, convened by the Chairman of the Goole Urban District Council, was held at Goole, to organise collections for this fund, the object of which is to find suitable employment for many women in this country who have been thrown out of work by the war. Mrs. R. Tyson was appointed hon. secretary, and a number of ladies were asked to make collections for the fund. The following amounts collected by the ladies named have been received:—

	£	s.	d.
Mrs. Armes	0	17	0
Mrs. Best	0	5	0
Mrs. Cass	0	5	0
Mrs. W. P. Dougherty	3	0	6
Mrs. Eardley	0	13	3
Mrs. Erskine	0	6	0
Per "Goole Times"	0	10	6
Girls' Friendly Society Concert...	1	0	0
Mrs. G. E. Hill	3	3	0
Mrs. Lea	0	8	0
Mrs. Lea, jun.	1	2	0
Mrs. Matthews	0	3	6
Mrs. G. W. Mobbs	2	5	0
Mrs. Milnthorpe	1	7	6
Mrs. Ogden	1	1	0
Mrs. Owen	0	7	0
Mrs. Rawson	0	2	6
Mrs. J. Richardson	0	17	0
Mrs Richardson (New Bridge Hotel)	1	1	0
Mrs. T. Shelton	1	5	0
Mrs. Sinker	0	5	0
Miss A. Smith	0	2	6
Mrs. H. Spink	0	5	0
Mrs. Tye	1	10	6
Mrs. Tyson	1	3	0
Mrs. Watson	1	2	6
	£24	7	3

653/8 653.

Camberwell & Peckham Times, Nov. 7th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN—THE MAYORESS AND OURSELVES.

To the Editor of the Camberwell and Peckham Times.

Sir,—I felt very grieved when I read an article on the rate of wages paid to the workers in the workroom working under the auspices of the Work for Women Fund in your last issue.

The rate of wages is fixed at headquarters and is out of the hands of the Camberwell Committee. You speak of sleek men growing fat out of the sweated wages of the workers. What utter nonsense!

I'll just tell you the idea of the workrooms—it is to enable workers now out of work (no matter what kind of work they are used to) to keep going until their original work or some other is available. Ten shillings a week will enable this to be done. You will realise that some of the workers not being used to needlework have to be taught, so they are paid to learn. Because a woman wears a petticoat, it does not follow she can make it! Another thing, everything in the workroom is given away to accredited deserving cases, so no commercial interests are hurt and no profits accrue to anyone but those in need. The materials are sent down from headquarters well cut out and the forewoman and assistant forewoman are both workers.

Excuse my troubling you, you mistook the intent of the workroom.

Sincerely yours,

GRACE E. KNIGHTS.

Mayor's Parlour, Camberwell,

November 4, 1914.

Evesham Journal, Nov. 7th 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

In connection with the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, a street and house-to-house collection will be taken in Evesham to-day (Saturday) if the weather permits; if the weather should be wet the collection will be taken next Saturday. The collection is being organised by Mrs. Rudge, at the request of Lady Beauchamp and Lady Deerhurst, who, as members of the Queen's Council of the Work for Women Fund, have been commanded by her Majesty the Queen to appoint a committee of ladies to collect money in their own districts. As her Majesty points out in a letter which is being circulated, the object of the fund is to provide employment for as many as possible of the women of this country who have been thrown out of work by the war. The money collected forms part of the Prince of Wales's Fund, but the executive committee have arranged that it shall be applied exclusively to the assistance of schemes promoted by the Central Committee on Women's Employment and approved by the Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress.

The Herald, Nov. 7th. 1914.

IT is officially announced ... the Queen's "Work ... trade instruction to meet t... wise might lose their ski... training to others." So ... when it is added that "... apparently teachable are t... to older women." That i... to be shown. The trai... L.C.C., and if that body ... relieve some of the pressu... as an excuse for paying t...

...and mental marring ... be still more intere... the wage-slaves wer... and consequent ills ... prefer as yet to mak... and their families.

BURTON is no... Ostend, altho... that region is as ve... and the new school ... schoolmistress, Mr. ... Now it appears that 653.

Morning Post, November 9th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached by noon on Saturday a total of £85,057 13s. 9d. The day's subscribers included:

The Salters' Company	£52	10	0
Collected in the district of Reading (further instalment, including Mrs. Morton, £50)	50	10	0
E. H. M. Denny	50	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Stafford	47	3	2
Collected by Lady Hollenden and Mrs. Cazalet in the district of Tonbridge	42	6	0
Mrs. R. Trubshawe	25	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Durham (further instalment)	17	2	0
Proceeds of a whist drive organised by Churchwardens of St. Catherine's, Hatcham	11	10	0
Marchioness of Graham	10	0	0
Mr. R. H. Thorpe	10	0	0
Mrs. Ogle	10	0	0
Mrs. Shalless	10	0	0

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT-BOOK.

Her Royal Highness the Princess Mary honoured Mr. J. J. Shannon, R.A., with special sittings for a picture which is to form the frontispiece of her gift-book. Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, who will issue the book in a few days, will devote all the profits from the sale to the Queen's Work for Women Fund. The book contains stories and poems by the most eminent authors of the day, and will be sold for half-a-crown. Mr. Ralph Connor has contributed a stirring poem entitled "Canada's Word." Mr. Connor is about to leave the Dominion to act as chaplain in one of the Canadian regiments going to the front.

The Irving-Toole ring sent to the Fund has been sold for £11 by Messrs. D. H. Evans (Limited), Oxford-street. On the inside it is inscribed "From H. I. to J. J. T., July, 1874," and on the outside it is decorated with the signs of the Zodiac.

All communications relating to the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Glasgow Herald, Nov: 9th. 1914.

QUEEN AND WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £85,057 13s 9d. Work for about 1000 dressmakers and workers of a similar character, which should last for many months to come, has just been placed with the Central Committee on Women's Employment. A plan which has been adopted by a wealthy Glasgow lady for helping distressed dressmakers may offer suggestions to others. She has given orders for garments for Belgian refugees, herself supplying the material, to a high-class dressmaker who is suffering from lack of orders.

Aberdeen Daily Journal, Nov: 12th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Since the last intimation, the subscriptions received in Scotland for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund total £16 16s, which, in addition to the sum of £629 18s already subscribed, brings the gross receipts to date to £646 14s.

Subscriptions from Scotland are received by the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, and are forwarded by her to Buckingham Palace.

The Times, Nov. 10th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

A RECRUIT'S PRACTICAL GRATITUDE.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund last night reached a total of £85,758 19s. 10d. The day's subscribers included:—

Collected by the Mayoress of Plymouth, further instalment, including—collected by Mrs. Flitsall and ladies of Devonport, £103 12s. 9d.	£122	8	2
Mr. Edwin Tate	100	0	0
Mr. F. Lane	100	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Woldingham	96	0	0
Mr. H. M. Lyon	50	0	0
Collected by Urban District Council of Whitstable	26	5	4
Sir Henry Lopes, Bt.	25	0	0
Collected by the Urban District Council of Goole	24	7	9
Mrs. Archdale	20	0	0

£10 10s. EACH.—Collected by the Duchess of Sutherland: Anonymous, Mr. E. F. Jowers.

£10 EACH.—Mr. Lewis G. Fry, Mr. T. C. Macnaghten, Miss A. M. Chambers.

Mrs. Arthur Sassoon opens an exhibition and sale of arts, crafts, and industries in aid of the Queen's Fund, to which the Queen has given her patronage, at the Portland Rooms, Baker-street, on November 17.

The headmistress of the Wimbledon-hill School, Marsell-road, forwards a cheque for £1 7s. 5d. as part of the weekly collection made in the school.

A recruit, signing himself "Tommy Atkins," sends his full pay from the day he enlisted with the remark that the Queen's Work for Women Fund found his wife employment which she had lost owing to the war, and thus enabled him to go to the front.

Mrs. Catherine Cra'ster, Mid Lothian, contributes a shawl which once belonged to a princess of the harem of the late Khedive of Egypt, Tewfik Pasha.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

Morning Post Nov. 11th.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £86,551 10s. 5d. The day's subscriptions were:

Sale of jewellery presented by Dr. R. Hamilton Russell, of Melbourne	£363	0	0
By the Mayoress of Nottingham (further instalment, including Lord Henry Cavendish Bentinck £50)	65	3	0
By the Mayoress of Margate (first instalment)	48	6	2
By the U.D.C. of Exmouth	43	10	3
By the Mayoress of King's Lynn (further instalment)	25	0	0
Mr. William Isaac Greaves	20	0	0
Mrs. Cunliffe Smith	20	0	0
The Women's Social and Political Union (further donation collected at Bradford meeting)	18	0	0
By the Ladies' Committee in the Ware Urban District	17	7	9
Lady Wentworth Fitzwilliam	15	0	0
Staff of Messrs. Jones and Higgins, Ltd.	13	15	5
By the U.D.C. of Kempston	13	13	9
Gabriel, Sons, and Burtons	10	10	0
Thomas D. Weir, of Nigeria	10	10	0
By the Mayoress of Greenwich (further instalment)	10	0	0
Anonymous	10	0	0
Mrs. C. L. Temple, of Nigeria	10	0	0
Staff of the New Tabernacle Approved Society, per Miss Crefield (first instalment)	10	0	0

Mrs. Ingram Keir sends a contribution of £34 from the women of Melksham, Wilts. The popularity of the Fund in Melksham is marked by the fact that Mrs. Keir's collection was made by 700 contributors and averaged about 1s. a head.

All communications relating to the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK.

All the profits of the Princess Mary's Gift

Daily Mail Nov: 12th. 1914

653

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund established to find employment for women and girls thrown out of work by the war now amounts to £87,083. Yesterday's subscriptions included:

£100.—Proceeds of concert at Grand Stand, Ascot, organised by Lady Keppel and Miss Hermione Yorke.
£100.—Sir Francis Trippel, third donation.
£39 12s. 9d.—Collected by ex-Mayoress of Haverfordwest, further instalment, including concert arranged by Mrs. W. J. Jones £28 2s. 3d., Flower Day arranged by Mrs. Wheatley and Mrs. Hugh Thomas £12 11s. 1d.
£25 each.—Lord Fitzhardinge, Mr. Fred Whinney.
£20.—Students and staff of Pitman's Schools.
£19 4s. 11d.—Mayoress of Islington's Branch, further instalment, collected by Mayoress.
£15 15s.—Messrs. Coode, Matthews, Fitzmaurice, and Wilson.

Contributions should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

Devon & Exeter Gazette Nov: 12th. 1914.

Women's EMPLOYMENT FUND.

SALE AT OTTERY.

The movement at Ottery St. Mary, in connexion with the raising of money for Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund materialised yesterday, when there was held at the Church Institute a sale of work, which had the effect of obtaining a good sum and gathering together a useful collection of articles. The Committee responsible for the collection comprised Mesdames Badcock, Hawkins, H G Lurton, Metcalfe, Houghton, Jeffrey, Nightingale, and Thomson, the Misses Follett and Lansdown. Mr. H. D. Badcock acted as Chairman, while Messrs R. Hawkins and H. Pares were the hon. secretaries. The Sale Committee included Mesdames Hawkins, Pares, Metcalfe, Lurton, and Godfrey, and Miss Worn. Goods which remained unsold were sent to the Headquarters Depot.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has reached a total of £86,551 10s 5d. The contributions recently received comprise £43 10s 3d from Exmouth, including Mrs. Galsworthy, £10. All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland Place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor Place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or urban district offices, in the locality in which they reside.

Aberdeen Daily Journal, Nov: 12th. 1914.

PRINCESS MARY'S "GIFT BOOK."

Princess Mary's "Gift Book," the profits of which are to be devoted to the Queen's "Work for Women Fund," is a most excellent production, and is exceedingly good value for the modest half-crown at which it is priced. The most eminent authors of the day are contributors, and a most interesting feature of the volume is a capitally printed frontispiece of the Princess, from the painting by Mr J. J. Shannon, R.A. To enumerate the names of the authors who are contributing specimens of their work to the book is enough. They include Sir J. M. Barrie, Canon Hannay, Mr Hall Caine, "Ralph Connor," Sir A. Conan Doyle, Mr Rudyard Kipling, Mr J. N. Faber, Mr Charles Garvice, Sir H. Rider Haggard, Mr A. E. W. Mason, Mr Alfred Noyes, Mr John Oxenham, Mr W. Pett Ridge, the Bishop of London; Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, Beatrice Harraden, Baroness Orczy, Annie S. Swan, Kate Douglas Wiggin, and Lady Sybil Grant, the talented daughter of the Earl of Rosebery. The stories and poems are illustrated by the leading black and white artists of the day.

653/9

Marchioness of Graham	10	0	0
Mr. R. H. Thorpe	10	0	0
Mrs. Ogle	10	0	0
Mrs. Shalless	10	0	0

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT-BOOK.

Her Royal Highness the Princess Mary honoured Mr. J. J. Shannon, R.A., with special sittings for a picture which is to form the frontispiece of her gift-book. Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, who will issue the book in a few days, will devote all the profits from the sale to the Queen's Work for Women Fund. The book contains stories and poems by the most eminent authors of the day, and will be sold for half-a-crown. Mr. Ralph Connor has contributed a stirring poem entitled "Canada's Word." Mr. Connor is about to leave the Dominion to act as chaplain in one of the Canadian regiments going to the front.

The Irving-Toole ring sent to the Fund has been sold for £11 by Messrs. D. H. Evans (Limited), Oxford-street. On the inside it is inscribed "From H. I. to J. J. T., July, 1874," and on the outside it is decorated with the signs of the Zodiac.

All communications relating to the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Glasgow Herald,
Nov: 9th. 1914.

QUEEN AND WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £85,057 13s 9d. Work for about 1000 dressmakers and workers of a similar character, which should last for many months to come, has just been placed with the Central Committee on Women's Employment. A plan which has been adopted by a wealthy Glasgow lady for helping distressed dressmakers may offer suggestions to others. She has given orders for garments for Belgian refugees, herself supplying the material, to a high-class dressmaker who is suffering from lack of orders.

Aberdeen Daily Journal,
Nov: 12th 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Since the last intimation, the subscriptions received in Scotland for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund total £16 16s, which, in addition to the sum of £629 15s already subscribed, brings the gross receipts to date to £646 14s.

Subscriptions from Scotland are received by the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, and are forwarded by her to Buckingham Palace.

A. M. Chambers.

Mrs. Arthur Sassoon opens an exhibition and sale of arts, crafts, and industries in aid of the Queen's Fund, to which the Queen has given her patronage, at the Portland Rooms, Baker-street, on November 17.

The headmistress of the Wimbledon-hill School, Mansell-road, forwards a cheque for £1 7s. 5d. as part of the weekly collection made in the school.

A recruit, signing himself "Tommy Atkins," sends his full pay from the day he enlisted with the remark that the Queen's Work for Women Fund found his wife employment which she had lost owing to the war, and thus enabled him to go to the front.

Mrs. Catherine Cra'ster, Mid Lothian, contributes a shawl which once belonged to a princess of the harem of the late Khedive of Egypt, Tewfik Pasha.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

Morning Post Nov. 11th.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £86,551 10s. 5d. The day's subscriptions were:

Sale of jewellery presented by Dr. R. Hamilton Russell, of Melbourne	£363	0	0
By the Mayoress of Nottingham (further instalment, including Lord Henry Cavendish Bentinck £50)	65	3	0
By the Mayoress of Margate (first instalment)	48	6	2
By the U.D.C. of Exmouth	43	10	3
By the Mayoress of King's Lynn (further instalment)	25	0	0
Mr. William Isaac Greaves	20	0	0
Mrs. Cunliffe Smith	20	0	0
The Women's Social and Political Union (further donation collected at Bradford meeting)	18	0	0
By the Ladies' Committee in the Ware Urban District	17	7	9
Lady Wentworth Fitzwilliam	15	0	0
Staff of Messrs. Jones and Higgins, Ltd.	13	15	5
By the U.D.C. of Kempston	13	13	9
Gabriel, Sons, and Burtons	10	10	0
Thomas D. Weir, of Nigeria	10	10	0
By the Mayoress of Greenwich (further instalment)	10	0	0
Anonymous	10	0	0
Mrs. C. L. Temple, of Nigeria	10	0	0
Staff of the New Tabernacle Approved Society, per Miss Crefield (first instalment)	10	0	0

Mrs. Ingram Keir sends a contribution of £34 from the women of Melksham, Wilts. The popularity of the Fund in Melksham is marked by the fact that Mrs. Keir's collection was made by 700 contributors and averaged about 1s. a head.

All communications relating to the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK.

All the profits of the Princess Mary's Gift Book are to go to the Queen's Work for Women Fund. The frontispiece is a new portrait of Princess Mary, by J. J. Shannon, R.A. J. M. Barrie is represented by "A Holiday in Bed," which has never before been published in book form. Mr. Napier Hemy, R.A., contributes a painting illustrating "Charlie, the Cox," a Life Poem, by Hall Caine. The Baroness Orczy has written a new tale of the Scarlet Pimpernel for the Gift Book, while Mr. Arthur Rackham contributes a series of drawings and a painting illustrating "The Land of Let's Pretend," by Lady Sybil Grant. Rudyard Kipling is represented in the book by his poem, entitled "Big Steamers," for which Mr. Norman Wilkinson, R.I., has painted a remarkable illustration.

Nearly 150 women and girls are being employed at St. Margaret's Hall, High-road, Kilburn, where Mrs. Acworth opened emergency work-rooms eight weeks ago. The majority of the persons helped are dressmakers, including some who have had good businesses of their own. Shirts and warm comforts are being made for Willesden Territorials and recruits. Garments required for Belgian refugees accommodated in the neighbourhood have been supplied free at short notice. Emergency and hæmorrhage shirts, pyjamas, bed jackets, sheets and pillows, and a quantity of carpet slippers, including specially large ones for bandaged feet, have been made for St. John Ambulance Association Hospitals, opened in Willesden.

EMPLOYMENT FUND.

SALE AT OTTERY.

The movement at Ottery St. Mary, in connexion with the raising of money for Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund materialised yesterday, when there was held at the Church Institute a sale of work, which had the effect of obtaining a good sum and gathering together a useful collection of articles. The Committee responsible for the collection comprised Mesdames Badcock, Hawkins, H G Luxton, Metcalfe, Houghton, Jeffrey, Nightingale, and Thomson, the Misses Follett and Lansdown. Mr. H. D. Badcock acted as Chairman, while Messrs R. Hawkins and H. Pares were the hon. secretaries. The Sale Committee included Mesdames Hawkins, Pares, Metcalfe, Luxton, and Godfrey, and Miss Worn. Goods which remained unsold were sent to the Headquarters Depot.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has reached a total of £86,551 10s 5d. The contributions recently received comprise £43 10s 3d from Exmouth, including Mrs. Galsworthy, £10. All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland Place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor Place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or urban district offices, in the locality in which they reside.

Aberdeen Daily Journal,
Nov: 12th. 1914.

PRINCESS MARY'S "GIFT BOOK."

Princess Mary's "Gift Book," the profits of which are to be devoted to the Queen's "Work for Women Fund," is a most excellent production, and is exceedingly good value for the modest half-crown at which it is priced. The most eminent authors of the day are contributors, and a most interesting feature of the volume is a capitally printed frontispiece of the Princess, from the painting by Mr J. J. Shenson, R.A. To enumerate the names of the authors who are contributing specimens of their work to the book is enough. They include Sir J. M. Barrie, Canon Hannay, Mr Hall Caine, "Ralph Connor," Sir A. Conan Doyle, Mr Rudyard Kipling, Mr J. N. Faber, Mr Charles Garvice, Sir H. Rider Haggard, Mr A. E. W. Mason, Mr Alfred Boyes, Mr John Oxenham, Mr W. Pett Ridge, the Bishop of London; Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, Beatrice Harraden, Baroness Orczy, Annie S. Swan, Kate Douglas Wiggin, and Lady Sybil Grant, the talented daughter of the Earl of Rosebery. The stories and poems are illustrated by the leading black and white artists of the day.

653/9

Evening Express, Nov. 13th. 1914.

The Queen's Employment of Women Fund.

Lady Clinton, having been requested by the Queen to organise subscriptions being made for the above fund in Kincardineshire, has asked me to receive those in this immediate district. Any sum from one penny upwards will be gratefully received.

MARY E. BURNETT.

The Scotsman, Nov. 13th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £87,982.

The further list of subscriptions includes the following:—

Third contribution from the Scottish branch (per Marchioness of Linlithgow)	£173
Masters of the Bench of the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn	150
Collected by the Mayoress of Hackney (further instalment)	105

The Daily Graphic, Nov. 14th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S APPEAL TO MAYORESSES.

Lady Roxburgh, hon. secretary to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland Place, London, W., has issued the following message to the new Mayoresses in England:—

"Her Majesty the Queen has commanded me to invite your kind co-operation in the Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund by arranging the formation of a representative collecting committee of ladies in your borough."

In cities and boroughs where local collecting committees are already existing, the new Mayoresses have been invited to carry on the excellent work inaugurated by the ex-Mayoress for the benefit of the Queen's Fund.

Daily Telegraph, 14.11.14.

Women's Social and Political Union has now arranged meetings for Mrs. Pankhurst at Plymouth, Exeter, and the Kingsway Hall, London. All these meetings will be held for the purpose of urging a response to Lord Kitchener's appeal for Army recruits, and the proceeds will be given respectively to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund and the War Refugees' Committee.

Newcastle Chronicle, November 16th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £88,536.

Eighty thousand knitted belts for the Queen's Present, to be sent to the troops at the Front, have been procured through the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Work has been found by this means for large numbers of women in Kidderminster, Stroud, Belfast, London, and other places.

The demand for "Princess Mary's Gift Book," issued on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women Fund," is so great that the printers are working night and day on the first enormous edition. Quite apart from the object for which it is published, it is a book which appeals to all, for it represents probably the most wonderful value ever offered to the great public of book lovers. For the sum of half-a-crown you can obtain in one beautifully bound volume a unique collection of stories and poems by the most famous authors of the day. Nearly every page is decorated by a line drawing by a well-known black and white artist, and in addition the volume is embellished by a series of new paintings, specially contributed by the most famous painters of the day, beautifully reproduced in colour, each plate being separately mounted.

The Morning Post, Nov. 12th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

AMOUNT SUBSCRIBED, £88,241.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £88,241 17s. 1d. The day's subscribers included:

Mrs. R. A. Yerburgh	£100	0	0
Collected by the Broadstairs and Peter's Emergency Committee	33	3	0
The Women, Tonyrefail Parish Church	25	0	0
Mrs. Hitchcock	20	0	0
Mrs. Niblett	10	0	0
Mrs. J. S. Porter	10	0	0

Note.—The donation of £20 sent by Mrs. Hitchcock constitutes the first instalment from the sale of foreign coins sent her for the benefit of the Fund. She will be pleased to receive and acknowledge any coins or foreign money sent to her at Springfield, Taplow.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London; and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women" Fund Account.

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

Lady Roxburgh, hon. secretary of the Fund, has by the Queen's command issued a message to the new mayoresses in England inviting their co-operation by arranging the formation of a representative collecting committee of ladies in each borough. In cities and boroughs where local collecting committees are already existing the new mayoresses have been invited to carry on the work inaugurated by the ex-mayoresses for the benefit of the Queen's Fund.

Morning Post, Nov. 16th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached by noon on Saturday a total of £88,536 10s. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by the Mayoress of Reigate (including Proceeds of Flower day, £124 10s.)	£150	10	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Marlow	50	0	0
Collected by the Viscountess Clifden (3rd instalment, including Mr. and Mrs. Peters, £10)	43	10	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Nantyglo and Blaina	32	8	3
H. P. Duval (Calcutta)	15	0	0
Anonymous	10	10	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Wantage	10	2	10
"R. P."	10	0	0

The sum of £72 3s., "part of street collection on October 17th," acknowledged on Friday last, was sent by the Mayoress of Hackney to this Fund in error, and has been returned.

All communications relating to the Fund should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications relating to the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

A Jumble Sale Agency has been opened with the object of helping the Queen's Work for Women Fund. All gifts, which will be most thankfully received, should be sent as soon as possible to the Hon. Secretary, the Jumble Sale Agency, 39A, Charing Cross-road, London, and a Royal acknowledgment will be sent from Buckingham Palace.

653.

Nottingham Express, Nov. 14th. 1914.

LOCAL QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND

The announcement is made officially that at a general committee meeting held yesterday of the above fund it was stated that the Queen's Distributive Committee in London, with Miss Mary MacArthur as its hon. secretary, was the Distributive Committee for the whole country for the Queen's Fund, and the local Queen's Fund Committee, which had also been doing a great deal of executive work, must come under the Prince of Wales' Fund Committee before it could get a grant from Miss Mary MacArthur. The Advisory Committee of the local branch having the wages for the workroom at Short-hill, Nottingham, on their hands, felt that they must immediately get into line and secure the grant; they therefore accepted the invitation of the Relief Fund Committee to be a sub-committee of that fund. The committee meeting yesterday was held to separate the two branches of the work. The War Fund Employment of Women Sub-Committee, with Mrs. Ball as treasurer and Mrs. W. E. Dowson as hon. secretary, will now go on with the work of finding employment for women thrown out of work through the war. The Queen's Fund Committee with Mrs. Atkey as hon. secretary and Mrs. McCraith as treasurer, will carry on the work of collecting from the city and county of Nottingham.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

Appeal on Behalf of Local Branch of Queen's Fund.

There are now a hundred Nottingham girls employed at the workroom at 12, Short-hill, in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund. The garments made are not sold, but are distributed by a sub-committee formed of the religious and larger philanthropic organisations in the city. The garments are supplied each week to those who apply through organisations only. The Belgian Relief Committee is represented.

Much of the material of which the garments are made is given, and the committee appeal for gifts of calico, flannel, non-inflammable flannelette, or other material for the girls to make up.

Inquiries should be addressed to the hon secretary, Mrs. W. E. Dowson, at the offices, 14, Sherwood-street South. Office hours, 11.0 to 1.0.

Donations may be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank; to the treasurer, Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham; or to any of the ladies signing the appeal.

	£	s.	d.
Amount previously acknowledged	651	16	3
Lady Yoxall	2	2	0
Mrs. W. E. Tyler (Bridge-drive)	5	5	0

Daily Mail, Nov. 17th.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund, established to find employment for women and girls thrown out of work by the war, reached last night a total of £89,313 9s. 5d. The day's subscribers included:

£185 7s. 3d.—Collected by Mayoress of Dartford, further instalment, Flower Day.
£100.—Mrs. Shaw of Welburn.
£78.—Collected by East Barnet Valley Urban District Council.
£60.—Collected by Urban District Council of Braintree.
£50.—Sir Edward Grey.
£50.—Collected by Urban District Council of New Quay.
£20 each.—Earl Spencer, "W.," Mr. Frank Vernon.
£15 9s.—Collected by Mayoress of Dunbar, further instalment.
£11 10s. 3d.—Collected by Mayoress of Eastbourne, further instalment.
£11 10s.—Collected by Urban District Council of Prudhoe-on-Tyne, Flower Day.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all contributions and cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund yesterday reached £3,820,000.

Princess Mary's Christmas Fund for the Sailors and Soldiers now amounts to £75,200.

The young girls attending the school known as The Limes, Park-road, Chiswick, decided by vote to forgo their usual Christmas examination prizes and send the money equivalent, £5 5s., to Princess Mary's Fund, writes a correspondent.

The total of the Indian Soldiers' Fund is now £86,829.

653/10

Walsall Advertiser,
Nov: 14th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The committee of the Walsall Branch of the National Union of Women Workers desire to offer their best thanks to the following firms for their kindness in allowing a collection to be taken from their women workers in aid of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and also to express their gratitude to the women and girls who so generously responded to the appeal. The total amount collected up to date is £7. Further collections will be announced later:—Messrs. J. Birch and Sons, J. Carver, Jabez Cliff and Co., D. Evans and Co., Eyland and Sons, Fairbanks, Lavender and Co., Frost Limited, Harwood, Hathaways, Hawley Bros., E. Jeffries and Sons, T. Kirby and Sons, Leckie and Sons, Middlemore, H. Moseley and Sons, Norton and Proffitt, W. Overton, Ltd., F. R. Pardow and Co., E. J. Parkes and Co., D. Power and Sons, G. Power and Son, Sheldon and Sons, Shannon and Sons, Walsall Hardware Co., Whitehouse, Cox and Co., Whitehouse, Hartley and Co., and C. Wincer and Co.

Daily Mail,
Nov: 18th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund, established to find employment for women and girls thrown out of work by the war, reached last night a total of £89,784 10s. 6d. The day's subscribers included:

£124 14s. 3d.—Collected by Lady Magdalen Bulkeley (£50 collected by Mr. J. G. Bacon; £10, Miss Cox).

£100.—Miss A. H. Combes, of Australia. Proceeds of sale of her water-colour drawings.

£62 13s.—Collected by the Mayoress of Nottingham. (Further instalment. Including the Mayor and Mayoress, £10.)

£46.—Collected by Brentwood Urban District Council, proceeds of a concert, per Mrs. Percy Scott.

£16 1s. 6d.—Collected by the Mayoress of Deptford. (Further instalment.)

£15.—The Mathilde Verne Pianoforte School.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all contributions and cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

Beckenham Journal,
Nov: 21st 1914.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK.

By command of Her Majesty the Queen, and in aid of her Work for Women Fund, "Princess Mary's Gift Book," will shortly be published. This will consist of some 140 pages of letterpress by the most famous authors of the day, illustrated in colour and black and white, by famous artists, among whom are included the following:

AUTHORS.	ARTISTS.
J. M. Barrie.	E. J. Detmold
G. A. Birmingham	Edmund Dulac.
Hall Caine.	H. M. Brock.
Ralph O'Connor.	Ethel Gray.
Conan Doyle.	Russell Flint.
Henri Fabre.	Talbot Kelly.
Ellen T. Fowler.	Seymour Lucas.
Lady Sybil Grant.	Lewis Baumer.
Charles Garvice	A. C. Michael.
Beatrice Harraden.	Fred Pegram.
Rider Haggard.	Arthur Rackham.
Rudyard Kipling.	Heath Robinson.
Bishop of London.	T. H. Robinson.
A. E. W. Mason.	J. J. Shannon.
John Oxenham	Byam Shaw.
Baroness Orczy.	Claude Shepperson.
W. Pett Ridge.	Lawson Wood.
Annie S. Swan.	Norman Wilkinson.
Kate Douglas Wiggin.

The sale is expected to reach hundreds of thousands of copies and orders should be sent to the local booksellers at once to secure a copy of the first edition. By special arrangements all orders sent direct to the publishers will be sent back to the local bookseller to execute so that much time will be saved by ordering locally. The book is published at half-a-crown net. Among the many special ingredients we may mention a new Scarlet Pimpernel story and new Kipling poems.

Morning Post,
Nov: 18th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£89,784 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £89,784 10s. 6d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by Lady Magdalen Bulkeley (including Mr. J. G. Bacon's collection of £50 and Miss Cox's of £10)	£124	14	3
Miss A. H. Combes, of Australia (proceeds of sale of her water-colour drawings of Australia, Canada, India, Switzerland, England, and Scotland, at Walker's Galleries)	100	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Nottingham (further instalment, including £10 from the Mayor and Mayoress)	62	13	0
Collected by the Urban District Council of Brentwood (proceeds of a concert, per Mrs. Percy Scott)	46	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Deptford (further instalment)	16	1	6
The Mathilde Verne Pianoforte School	15	0	0
Proceeds of entertainment given by Miss Norah Porter and School Friends	10	6	8
The Misses Cross	10	0	0
The Prescot Parish Church and Sunday School Scholars, per the Rev. Canon Mitchell	10	0	0

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

A patriotic souvenir has been designed for the Fund. It has been approved and purchased by the Queen, and the profits on the sales go to the Fund. In design, it forms a cross of the Allies' flags, and is beautifully enamelled in correct colours on hallmarked silver gilt. The words on the circle surround are "One Standard—Honour—1914." Every purchaser becomes a contributor to the Fund. It is obtainable at the price of half-a-guinea at the headquarters of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, 33, Portland-place.

Sussex Daily News,
Nov: 25th. 1914.

"WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

MEETING AT HOVE.

At a meeting held at the Hove Town Hall on Monday, at which the Mayoress (Mrs. A. E. Sargeant) presided, a Collecting Committee for Hove consisting of ladies well known in the town was formed to obtain contributions for and arouse interest in the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It was explained that her Majesty the Queen had inaugurated this fund at the commencement of the war to provide employment for as many as possible of the women of this country who have been thrown out of work by the war. Money subscribed to the fund is devoted to assist schemes of employment for women, and which are devised by the Central Committee on Women's Employment or approved by them. The management of local schemes is in the hands of the local representative Committee and the Women's Employment Sub-Committees appointed by them. The Hove Committee, of which the Mayoress is the President, and Miss Sowell is the Hon. Secretary, will be glad to receive any sums, small or large, from those who have not already subscribed to the Fund, and they may be sent to the Mayoress at the Hove Town Hall.

653/11 653.

The Daily Telegraph,
Nov: 18th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN

A patriotic pendant designed for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has been approved by her Majesty the Queen and by the collecting committee. In design it forms a cross of the Allies' flags, and is beautifully enamelled in correct colours on hall-marked silver gilt. It is obtainable at the price of half-a-guinea at the headquarters of the fund, 33, Portland-place, W., or at the Fund Department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co. (Ltd.), Oxford-street. The profits on the sales will go to the fund.

Mrs. Arthur Sassoon, supported by Lady Roxburgh, opened the Annual Exhibition and Sale of Arts, Crafts, and Industries, at the Portman Rooms, Baker-street, yesterday. The exhibition is thoroughly representative of the best British work, and marks a revival of special industries. The Queen's Fund benefits to the extent of 75 per cent. of the entrance money.

The total of the fund is now £89.784

The Daily Graphic,
Nov: 27th. 1914.

GILT-EDGED SECURITY.

PRINCESS MARY'S SUMPTUOUS GIFT BOOK.

A RECORD "RECEIPT."

(PUBLISHED TO-DAY.)

Those who pay half-a-crown for Princess Mary's gift-book, published to-day by the house of Hodder and Stoughton, are not merely subscribing to the Queen's Work for Women, but are getting the most sumptuous receipt for their money that literary and artistic skill can devise.

The receipt is a hundred and forty small quarto pages long, handsomely bound in cloth, graciously autographed by a Princess—by the Princess. Though of such unusual length, the receipt can be read at one sitting. In fact, many people will not lay it down till they have read through it, for it is written by, among others, Sir J. M. Barrie, Sir A. Conan Doyle, Mr. Hall Caine, Sir Rider Haggard, Mr. A. E. W. Mason, Mr. W. Pett Ridge, and Mr. Rudyard Kipling. When read, portions of the receipt can be easily committed to heart. For example, Mr. Kipling's rhyme of the Big Steamers:—

"Then what can I do for you, all you big steamers, Oh, what can I do for your comfort and good?"—
Send out your big warships to watch your big waters,
That no one may stop us from bringing you food.
"For the bread that you eat and the biscuits you nibble,
The sweets that you suck and the joints that you carve,
They are brought to you daily by all us Big Steamers,
And if anyone hinders our coming you'll starve."

It will be grasped by anyone who has read thus far that Princess Mary's receipt takes the form of stories and sketches and verses by the most brilliant of British writers. We must add that they are illustrated by some of the most original and spirited drawings that ever adorned a Christmas gift-book. What could be better, for example, than the life and colour of Mr. Norman Wilkinson's picture of the "Big Steamers" breasting the waves; what more delightful in its fancy than "The Spell for a Fairy" with which Mr. Claude Shepperson illustrates the poem of

The Daily Telegraph, Nov: 17th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN

A jumble sale agency has been opened with the object of helping the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It appeals for articles of every kind and variety—personal belongings, trinkets, household effects, discarded clothing, &c. The agency also appeals to wholesale and retail firms and manufacturers to send everything that can be spared out of old stock and samples.

All gifts, which will be most thankfully received, should be sent as soon as possible to the hon. secretary, the Jumble Sale Agency, 39a, Charing-cross-road, W.C. Acknowledgments will be sent from Buckingham Palace.

To-day the fund amounts to £89,313.

Nottingham Guardian, Nov: 18th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO QUEEN'S FUND.

Amount previously acknowledged	£665	7	3
Mrs. Broadhead, whist drive	4	0	0
Mrs. Aldworth	1	1	0
M. E. F.	1	1	0
	£671	9	3

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund. Gifts of material should be sent to 14, Sherwood-street, or to the workroom at 12, Short-hill.

Nottingham Guardian, Nov. 19th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO QUEEN'S FUND.

Amount previously acknowledged	£671	9	3
Mrs. W. Bradwell	2	0	0
Mrs. H. A. Dowson	1	1	0
	£674	10	3

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund. Gifts of materia' should be sent to 14, Sherwood-street, or to the workroom at 12, Short-hill.

Aberdeen Free Press, Nov: 19th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN FUND.

At the request of Lady Clinton, who has been asked by the Queen to organise the receipt of subscriptions for the Queen's Employment of Women Fund in Kincardineshire, Lady Burnett, Crathes Castle, Crathes, appeals for subscriptions to the fund from the district. Any sums, from one penny upwards, will be gratefully received.

Daily Telegraph, Nov. 20th.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

The original paintings and drawings contributed by the most famous artists of the day to Princess Mary's Gift Book, which is being published immediately by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, at the popular price of 2s 6d net, will be exhibited at the Leicester Galleries, Leicester-square, W.C.

There will be considerable competition among art lovers to secure the originals of these paintings and drawings, which are being sold on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It has been suggested that the beautiful portrait which forms the frontispiece of the Gift Book, for which Princess Mary gave special sittings to Mr. J. J. Shannon, R.A., should be added to a public collection. The picture is now at 33, Portland-place, W., the headquarters of the Fund.

Yesterday the Fund reached a total of £90,449.

Jewish World, Nov. 18th. 1914.

DONCASTER.

The members of the Doncaster United Hebrew Congregation have contributed £15 to the local relief fund, and £10 10s. to the Prince of Wales' Fund. The children of the congregational classes have sent to the Chief Rabbi the sum of £1 19s., their first collection for the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

GREENOCK.

A meeting was held at the synagogue last week, at which a Committee was formed to aid the Belgian refugees. The sum of £2 7s. 6d. was collected, and promises were made by members of the congregation of weekly contributions. The pupils of the Hebrew School are also making a weekly collection for the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Daily Mail, Nov: 19th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

£90,194 FOR WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund, established to find employment for women and girls thrown out of work by the war, reached last night a total of £90,194 19s. 7d. The day's subscribers included:

£200.—Imperial Tobacco Co., of Great Britain and Ireland.

£41 13s. 7d.—Eighth contribution from sale of "gifts in kind" by Work for Women Fund Department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., Oxford-street, W.

£39 8s.—Collected by Mayoress of Leeds, further instalment, including Lady Dorothy Wood, £15.

£25.—Lady Aberdare.

£17 15s.—Collected by Mayoress of Hammersmith, further instalment, including Ravenscourt Park Bowling Club, £16.

£13 3s.—Lady typists and staff officers of Gas Light and Coke Co.

£10.—Mrs. Cloudsley D. B. Marsham.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all contributions and cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

With the addition of £28,000 yesterday, the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund has reached £3,859,000. Princess Mary's Christmas Fund for the sailors and soldiers amounts to £81,750.

Cork Examiner, Nov: 19th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

MESSAGE FROM THE QUEEN.

Mr Edmond J. Quinlan, J.P., Chairman of the Fermoy Urban Council, has received the following telegram in connection with the Work for Women Fund:—

"Buckingham Palace, 17th Nov., 1914.

"To the Chairman Urban District Council, Fermoy.

"Her Majesty the Queen has commanded me to invite your kind co-operation in the Queen's Work for Women Fund by arranging for the formation of a rperesentative collection committee of ladies in your town. On receiving acquiescence suggestions for working the committee and literature address will be forwarded. Please address reply to Lady Roxburgh, Hon. Sec., 33 Portland Place, W."

In reply to this invitation, Mr. Quinlan has written to Lady Roxburgh stating that he will be only too happy to co-operate and do everything in order to make the fund a success. He is sure that the ladies of the town and district would give every help in making the fund here a respectable one.

Scotsman, Nov: 19th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £90,194.

Further Scottish contributions to the fund have been received to the amount of £79, 16s. 9d., making, with the sum previously intimated, a total of £726, 10s. 9d. from Scotland. In addition to individual subscriptions varying from 10s. to £20, the contributions represent a donation from Oakbank Employees' Relief Fund, proceeds of a Glasgow sale of work, and a sum forwarded by a Highland Parish Church Women's Guild.

Daily Call, November 20th. 1914.

LADIES' GOLF UNION.

At the council meeting of the Ladies' Golf Union on December 4, it will be recommended that the union shall give £50 from the funds to the Queen's Work for Women Fund; that the Ladies' Golf Union shall not organise any competitions until the war is over; and that the affiliated clubs shall pay only half the annual subscription during the progress of hostilities. It will further be proposed that those clubs who wish it shall continue to play for silver and bronze medals, but that no final medals shall be given until the war is ended.

Nottingham Guardian, Nov. 21st. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO QUEEN'S FUND.

Previously acknowledged	£677	18	9
Mrs. Dowson, Upper Broughton	2	0	0
Mrs. F. Huskinson	1	0	0
	£680	18	9

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund. Gifts of material should be sent to 14, Sherwood-street, or to the workroom at 12, Short-hill.

Nottingham Post, Nov: 20th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

TOTAL OF £90,499.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £90,499 18s. 9d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by the Urban District Council of Burnham (including £14 18s. 9d. gathered by Miss L. H. Churchill and £13 11s. 10d. proceeds of Flower Day)	£27	7	0
Baroness Gray	25	0	0
Mrs. Simmons (proceeds of Matinée Musicale held at the Lockers)	22	10	0
Collected by the Viscountess Clifden (4th instalment)	21	1	0
"L. J. F."	20	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Greenwich (further instalment) (including collection by the Suffrage Society of Blackheath and Greenwich, £19 1s. 6d.)	20	0	0
Collected by the Urban District Council of Ambleside	17	11	6
Collected in the Chippenham Works of the Nestlé and Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Company (including Mr. F. Rogers, £10)	13	10	6
Collected by Lady Joan Legge (including Captain and Lady Dorothy Meynell, £10)	13	10	0
The Ladies' Golf Union, proceeds of Golf Competitions for Lady George Nevill's Original Silver Queen's Work for Women Medal (first instalment), per Mrs. Bird, hon. treasurer	11	10	0
Collected by the Duchess of Wellington	11	1	0
By Mrs. Eric Hambro	10	5	0
By the Urban District Council of Wirksworth, proceeds of Flower Day	10	0	0
Mr. F. H. Spry	10	0	0

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's Work for Women" Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

Application has been made to the Central Committee on Women's Employment by the City of London Committee of the National Relief Fund for supplies of Nottingham Guardian, Nov. 19th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO QUEEN'S FUND.

Amount previously acknowledged	£671	9	3
Mrs. W. Bradwell	2	0	0
Mrs. H. A. Dowson	1	1	0
	£674	10	3

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund. Gifts of materia' should be sent to 14, Sherwood-street, or to the workroom at 12, Short-hill.

Aberdeen Free Press, Nov. 19th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN FUND.

At the request of Lady Clinton, who has been asked by the Queen to organise the receipt of subscriptions for the Queen's Employment of Women Fund in Kincardineshire, Lady Burnett, Crathes Castle, Crathes, appeals for subscriptions to the fund from the district. Any sums, from one penny upwards, will be gratefully received.

Daily Telegraph, Nov. 20th.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

The original paintings and drawings contributed by the most famous artists of the day to Princess Mary's Gift Book, which is being published immediately by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, at the popular price of 2s 6d net, will be exhibited at the Leicester Galleries, Leicester-square, W.C.

There will be considerable competition among art lovers to secure the originals of these paintings and drawings, which are being sold on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It has been suggested that the beautiful portrait which forms the frontispiece of the Gift Book, for which Princess Mary gave special sittings to Mr. J. J. Shannon, R.A., should be added to a public collection. The picture is now at 33, Portland-place, W., the headquarters of the Fund.

Yesterday the Fund reached a total of £90,449.

be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

With the addition of £28,000 yesterday, the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund has reached £3,859,000. Princess Mary's Christmas Fund for the sailors and soldiers amounts to £81,750.

Scotsman, Nov. 19th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £90,194.

Further Scottish contributions to the fund have been received to the amount of £79, 16s. 9d., making, with the sum previously intimated, a total of £726, 10s. 9d. from Scotland. In addition to individual subscriptions varying from 10s. to £20, the contributions represent a donation from Oakbank Employees' Relief Fund, proceeds of a Glasgow sale of work, and a sum forwarded by a Highland Parish Church Women's Guild.

Daily Call, November 20th. 1914

LADIES' GOLF UNION.

At the council meeting of the Ladies' Golf Union on December 4, it will be recommended that the union shall give £50 from the funds to the Queen's Work for Women Fund; that the Ladies' Golf Union shall not organise any competitions until the war is over; and that the affiliated clubs shall pay only half the annual subscription during the progress of hostilities. It will further be proposed that those clubs who wish it shall continue to play for silver and bronze medals, but that no final medals shall be given until the war is ended.

Nottingham Guardian, Nov. 21st. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO QUEEN'S FUND.

Previously acknowledged	£677	18	9
Mrs. Dowson, Upper Broughton	2	0	0
Mrs. P. Huskinson	1	0	0
	£680	18	9

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund. Gifts of material should be sent to 14, Sherwood-street, or to the workroom at 12, Short-hill.

written to Lady Roxburgh stating that he will be only too happy to co-operate and do everything in order to make the fund a success. He is sure that the ladies of the town and district would give every help in making the fund here a respectable one.

Morning Post, Nov. 20th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

TOTAL OF £90,499.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £90,499 18s. 9d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by the Urban District Council of Burnham (including £14 18s. 9d. gathered by Miss L. H. Churchill and £13 11s. 10d. proceeds of Flower Day)	£67	7	0
Baroness Gray	25	0	0
Mrs. Simmons (proceeds of Matinée Musicale held at the Lockers)	22	10	0
Collected by the Viscountess Clifden (4th instalment)	21	1	0
"L. J. F."	20	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Greenwich (further instalment) (including collection by the Suffrage Society of Blackheath and Greenwich, £19 1s. 6d.)	20	0	0
Collected by the Urban District Council of Ambleside	17	11	6
Collected in the Chippenham Works of the Nestlé and Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Company (including Mr. F. Rogers, £10)	13	10	6
Collected by Lady Joan Legge (including Captain and Lady Dorothy Meynell, £10)	13	10	0
The Ladies' Golf Union, proceeds of Golf Competitions for Lady George Nevill's Original Silver Queen's Work for Women Medal (first instalment), per Mrs. Bird, hon. treasurer	11	19	0
Collected by the Duchess of Wellington	11	1	0
By Mrs. Eric Hambro	10	5	0
By the Urban District Council of Wirksworth, proceeds of Flower Day	10	0	0
Mr. T. H. Spry	10	0	0

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

Application has been made to the Central Committee on Women's Employment by the City of London Committee of the National Relief Fund for approval of schemes which they desire to put in hand in connection with the employment of women shorthand-typists and others now out of employment. It is also proposed to proceed with a scheme for "Home Helps" The free temporary use of large vacant premises in Bridewell-place has been kindly placed at the disposal of the Committee by the Corporation of London, and it is hoped with the approval of the Central Committee named to set up something in the nature of a workroom for quite a large number of women.

The Times,
Nov: 21st. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

DRAWINGS FOR PRINCESS MARY'S BOOK.

The original paintings and drawings contributed by distinguished artists to Princess Mary's Gift Book, which is being published immediately by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton at 2s. 6d. net., will be exhibited at the Leicester Galleries, Leicester-square, W.C. It has been suggested that the portrait from the frontispiece of the book, and for which Princess Mary has given special sittings to Mr. J. J. Shannon, R.A., should be added to a public collection.

It is now at 33, Portland-place, W., the headquarters of the Fund.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund yesterday reached a total of £90,923 0s. 8d. The day's subscribers included :—

£100.—Collected by the Lady Mayoress of Birmingham.

£75 12s. 2d.—Collected by the Mayoress of Durham, further instalment, including—Collected on Flower Day, £74 16s. 8d.

£58 18s. 6d.—Collected by the Mayoress of Finsbury.

£53 0s. 10d.—Collected by Urban District Council of Sale and Ashton.

£22 4s.—Collected by the Hon. Mrs. Reginald Coventry.

£13 0s. 5d.—Collected by the Mayoress of Brighton, further instalment, including—profits of concert held at Circus-street School Hall, £10 5s. 9d.

£10 11s. 3d.—Collected by the Mayoress of Maidenhead, further instalment.

£10 10s.—Collected by Urban District Council of Knighton, proceeds from concert given by Knighton Ladies Choir.

£10 Each.—Miss Crawley, Miss C. N. Colville, Mr. R. C. Gosling, staff and workmen of Messrs. Howell and Co. (Limited), Sheffield.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

The Times
Nov: 23rd. 1914.

THE WAR RELIEF FUNDS.

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund reached by noon on Saturday a total of £91,188 0s. 9d. The day's subscribers included:—

The Skinners' Company	£105	0	0
Collected by Eastwood (Notts) U.D.C., including half proceeds of a concert, per Mrs. Burrow, £14 0s. 9d.; half proceeds of a concert, per Mrs. Robey, £14 0s. 9d...	44	16	0
Collected by Felixstowe U.D.C.	32	12	0
Collected by Greasborough U.D.C.	12	10	0
Mr. James Cordery	10	10	0
Mr. Frank W. Humphery	10	10	0

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Peasson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

Hampshire Telegraph,
November 21st. 1914.

Queen's Work for Women's Fund.

The second whist drive of a series arranged by the tramway employes to aid the efforts of the Mayoress of Portsmouth (Mrs. J. H. Corke) towards the above fund took place on Tuesday evening in the tramway recreation room at North End. A company of 96 were present, and the proceedings were carried out in a successful manner. The prizes were presented to the winners by Mrs. Spaven, wife of the general manager, as follows:—Ladies: 1, Mrs. Anderson; 2, Mrs. Lapthorn, highest interval, Miss Spaven; consolation, Miss Phillips. Gentlemen: 1, Mr. Russell; 2, Mr. Croswell; highest interval, Mr. Rouse; consolation, Mr. Buckett. The Mayor regrets that through pressure of public business he has been unable to attend the two drives already held, but it is his intention to be present with the Mayoress at the next on Tuesday, December 15th, when it is hoped the Mayoress will present the prizes.

Western Mail,
Nov: 21st. 1914.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK.

CHARMING VOLUME FOR THE YULETIDE.

CONTRIBUTIONS BY WELL-KNOWN AUTHORS.

It is safe to assert that this coming Yuletide there will be no seasonable publication more acceptable to every home than Princess Mary's Gift Book, which will be ready for sale about November 26. It is comparable with Queen Alexandra's Christmas Gift Book brought out six years ago, but it is entirely a different compilation. Briefly, it consists of a number of short stories by the best authors of to-day, with meritorious illustrations in colours and in black and white.

As in the case of Queen Alexandra's Christmas Gift Book, Princess Mary's Gift Book will be published by the proprietors of the Western Mail and Evening Express, who have been honoured with the appointment of sole agents for the whole of South Wales and Monmouthshire.

There are three features about this publication which cannot fail to strike everybody who examines it.

In the first place, the quality of the book is remarkable. Of quarto size, both the illustrations and the letterpress are admirably produced, reflecting the highest credit upon the chief publishers, Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, London.

Secondly, the low price of 2s. 6d. places it within the reach of all classes, and, in consequence, it should find an entrance into every home, from palace to cottage, while many people who are wondering what can take the place of the usual gifts and Christmas cards at a season when the usual rejoicings must be curtailed will find this book an excellent medium for the conveyance of their wishes for joy on earth, peace, and goodwill among men.

In the third place, Princess Mary's Gift Book is most suitable for family consumption. The stories and pictures appeal to old and young, and the publication is full of interest from cover to cover. In this respect the compilers of the book deserve to be highly complimented. Other publications at this season are brought out to please grown-up people, and there are plenty of books for the children, but there is no other production which combines both qualities.

It is unnecessary to ask for the recommendation of a book to which J. M. Barrie, Hall Caine, Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling, Baroness Orczy, W. Pett Ridge, Annie S. Swan, J. J. Shannon, Lawson Wood, Talbot Kelly, Arthur Rackham, and Fred Pegram contribute. One may as well attempt to paint the lily as to praise these writers, whose efforts in the divine cause of charity will be generally appreciated.

But to the pleasure of perusal every reader will be able to add the joy of reflection that the half-crown (for which the fullest value is given) spent will be devoted entirely to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, which is operating in conjunction with the National Relief Fund.

Bound in cream cloth, with Princess Mary's monogram on the cover, the publication is strikingly dainty in appearance, but bound strongly with a view to general family use.

The frontispiece contains a charming study in colours of Princess Mary by J. J. Shannon, R.A., and is worth detaching for framing purposes. The remainder of the book is in keeping with this beautiful first page, other plates of a similar quality also being separately mounted.

J. M. Barrie's finest humour can be tasted in "A Holiday in Bed." "The Spy" is G. A. Birmingham's appropriate contribution, and Hall Caine gives the life of "Charlie the Cox." Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, displays his versatility in "Bimbashi Joyce," and Ralph Connor breathes of the New World in "Canada's Word." J. H. Fabre is both interesting and informative in "The Ant-Lion," while Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler is characteristic in "An Angel of God." Charles Garvice gives a popular military air to the publication with "A Model Soldier," and Lady Sybil Grant in "The Land of Let's Pretend" sings to the children after this style:

"Supposing one had been
Shut up in Noah's Ark
(During the flood, I mean),
It would have been a lark."

Rider Haggard tells of dusky wonders in "Magepa the Black," and Beatrice Harra 653.

Freemans Journal,
Nov: 21st. 1914.

QUEEN AND WOMEN'S FUND.

The various public bodies in Ireland have received a message from the Queen inviting co-operation in the work for the Women's Fund by arranging for the formation of a representative collection committee of ladies in the various towns. Mr. J. P. Shaw, Co.C., Chairman of the Mullingar Town Commissioners, received a similar message, and is taking the necessary steps to carry out the suggestion.

Sunday Times,
November 22nd 1914

WORK FOR WOMEN.

TOTAL: £91,188.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund reached by noon yesterday a total of £91,188 0s. 9d. The day's subscribers included:

The Worshipful Company of Skinners, £105; collected by the Urban District Council of Eastwood, Notts (including half proceeds of a concert per Mrs. Burrow, £14 0s. 9d., half proceeds of a concert per Mrs. Robey, £14 0s. 9d.), £44 16s.; collected by the Urban District Council of Felixstowe, £32 12s.; collected by the Urban District Council of Greasbro', £12 10s.

A patriotic pendant has been designed for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It has been approved and purchased by the Queen and by the Collecting Committee. The profits on the sales go to the fund. In design it forms a cross of the Allies' flags, and is beautifully enamelled in correct colours on hall-marked silver gilt. The words on the circle surrounding are "One Standard—Honour—1914."

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

The Observer,
November 22nd 1914.

"Work for Women."

The original paintings and drawings contributed by famous artists to Princess Mary's Gift Book, which is being published immediately by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton at 2s. 6d. in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, will be exhibited at the Leicester Galleries, Leicester-square, W.C. A patriotic pendant has also been designed for the fund in the form of a cross of the Allies' flags, enamelled in correct colours on hall-marked silver gilt. It is obtainable for 10s. 6d. at the headquarters of the fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W., or the branch at D. H. Evans and Co., Ltd., Oxford-street. A Jumble Sale Agency has been opened to help the fund and appeal for articles of every kind to be sent to the Jumble Sale Agency, 39a, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C. A Royal acknowledgement will be sent from Buckingham Palace.

News of the World,
November 22nd 1914.

Mrs. Bird, hon. treasurer of the Ladies' Golf Union, has forwarded £11 19s. to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, as a first instalment from the proceeds of competitions for Lady George Neville's Queen's Work for Women silver medal, sanctioned by Her Majesty. Many golf clubs are arranging competitions for this medal, as a result of which the L.G.U. hope to receive large sums from Lady George Neville. The L.G.U. have received a considerable sum through the subscription organised amongst their affiliated clubs, and hope to be able to send several hundreds of pounds to their president, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, who is also vice-president of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

653/13

THE WAR RELIEF FUNDS.

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund reached by noon on Saturday a total of £91,188 0s. 9d. The day's subscribers included:—

The Skinners' Company	£105	0	0
Collected by Eastwood (Notts) U.D.C., including half proceeds of a concert, per Mrs. Burrow, £14 0s. 9d.; half proceeds of a concert, per Mrs. Robey, £14 0s. 9d... ..	44	16	0
Collected by Felixstowe U.D.C.	32	12	0
Collected by Greasborough U.D.C.	12	10	0
Mr. James Cordery	10	10	0
Mr. Frank W. Humphery	10	10	0

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Peasson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

Hampshire Telegraph, November 21st 1914.

Queen's Work for Women's Fund.

The second whist drive of a series arranged by the tramway employes to aid the efforts of the Mayoress of Portsmouth (Mrs. J. H. Corke) towards the above fund took place on Tuesday evening in the tramway recreation room at North End. A company of 96 were present, and the proceedings were carried out in a successful manner. The prizes were presented to the winners by Mrs. Spaven, wife of the general manager, as follows:—Ladies: 1, Mrs. Anderson; 2, Mrs. Lapthorn, highest interval, Miss Spaven; consolation, Miss Phillips. Gentlemen: 1, Mr. Russell; 2, Mr. Crosswell; highest interval, Mr. Rouse; consolation, Mr. Buckett. The Mayor regrets that through pressure of public business he has been unable to attend the two drives already held, but it is his intention to be present with the Mayoress at the next on Tuesday, December 15th, when it is hoped the Mayoress will present the prizes.

it within the reach of all classes, and, in consequence, it should find an entrance into every home, from palace to cottage, while many people who are wondering what can take the place of the usual gifts and Christmas cards at a season when the usual rejoicings must be curtailed will find this book an excellent medium for the conveyance of their wishes for joy on earth, peace, and goodwill among men.

In the third place, Princess Mary's Gift Book is most suitable for family consumption. The stories and pictures appeal to old and young, and the publication is full of interest from cover to cover. In this respect the compilers of the book deserve to be highly complimented. Other publications at this season are brought out to please grown-up people, and there are plenty of books for the children, but there is no other production which combines both qualities.

It is unnecessary to ask for the recommendation of a book to which J. M. Barrie, Hall Caine, Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling, Baroness Orczy, W. Pett Ridge, Annie S. Swan, J. J. Shannon, Lawson Wood, Talbot Kelly, Arthur Rackham, and Fred Pegram contribute. One may as well attempt to paint the lily as to praise these writers, whose efforts in the divine cause of charity will be generally appreciated.

But to the pleasure of perusal every reader will be able to add the joy of reflection that the half-crown (for which the fullest value is given) spent will be devoted entirely to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, which is operating in conjunction with the National Relief Fund.

Bound in cream cloth, with Princess Mary's monogram on the cover, the publication is strikingly dainty in appearance, but bound strongly with a view to general family use.

The frontispiece contains a charming study in colours of Princess Mary by J. J. Shannon, R.A., and is worth detaching for framing purposes. The remainder of the book is in keeping with this beautiful first page, other plates of a similar quality also being separately mounted.

J. M. Barrie's finest humour can be tasted in "A Holiday in Bed." "The Spy" is G. A. Birmingham's appropriate contribution, and Hall Caine gives the life of "Charlie the Cox." Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, displays his versatility in "Bimbashi Joyce," and Ralph Connor breathes of the New World in "Canada's Word." J. H. Fabre is both interesting and informative in "The Ant-Lion," while Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler is characteristic in "An Angel of God." Charles Garvice gives a popular military air to the publication with "A Model Soldier," and Lady Sybil Grant in "The Land of Let's Pretend" sings to the children after this style:

> "Supposing one had been
> Shut up in Noah's Ark
> (During the flood, I mean)—
> It would have been a lark."

Rider Haggard tells of dusky wonders in "Magepa the Buck," and Beatrice Harraden's contribution is "True Spartan Hearts." Rudyard Kipling deals with characteristic vigour with "Big Steamers," and the Bishop of London gives "A True Story from Camp." A. E. W. Mason is at his most exciting with "The Ebony Box," including a Prussian officer, and the song by Alfred Noyes is "A Spell for a Fairy." Baroness Orczy supplies one of her famous Scarlet Pimpernel stories, and John Oxenham asks, in rhyme, "What can a little chap do?" W. Pett Ridge will amuse (as usual) with "Altogether Different," and Annie Swan writes of "The Escape." Kate Douglas Wiggin contributes "Fleur-de-Lis," and the whole collection of stories is most gratifying.

There is bound to be a great demand for Princess Mary's Gift Book, and to avoid disappointment orders should at once be placed with the Western Mail Limited at the head office, St. Mary-street, Cardiff, or at the branch offices at Newport, Swansea, Merthyr, or Brecon. Those who send their orders by post should remember to enclose an extra 4d. (2s. 10d. altogether) to cover the cost of carriage. The importance of ordering early may be emphasised by the fact that all orders will be executed strictly in rotation.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

The Observer, November 22nd 1914.

"Work for Women."

The original paintings and drawings contributed by famous artists to Princess Mary's Gift Book, which is being published immediately by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton at 2s. 6d. in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, will be exhibited at the Leicester Galleries, Leicester-square, W.C. A patriotic pendant has also been designed for the fund in the form of a cross of the Allies' flags, enamelled in correct colours on hall-marked silver gilt. It is obtainable for 10s. 6d. at the headquarters of the fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W., or the branch at D. H. Evans and Co., Ltd., Oxford-street. A Jumble Sale Agency has been opened to help the fund and appeal for articles of every kind to be sent to the Jumble Sale Agency, 39a, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C. A Royal acknowledgement will be sent from Buckingham Palace.

News of the World, November 22nd 1914.

Mrs. Bird, hon. treasurer of the Ladies' Golf Union, has forwarded £11 19s. to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, as a first instalment from the proceeds of competitions for Lady George Nevill's Queen's Work for Women silver medal, sanctioned by Her Majesty. Many golf clubs are arranging competitions for this medal, as a result of which the L.G.U. hope to receive large sums from Lady George Nevill. The L.G.U. have received a considerable sum through the subscription organised amongst their affiliated clubs, and hope to be able to send several hundreds of pounds to their president, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, who is also vice-president of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

653/13

Glasgow Herald, Nov: 23rd. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £91,188 0s 9d. A number of water-colour pictures have been presented to the fund by Mr G. Flemwell, the well-known artist, who has made a study of the scenes of Europe's playground. They are now on exhibition at the Doré Galleries, 35 Bond Street, London. The treasurer for Scotland is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, to whom subscriptions should be sent.

Nottingham Guardian, Nov: 23rd. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO QUEEN'S FUND.

Amount previously acknowledged	£580	18	9
Mrs. Kipping, Bridge Party	6	0	0
Mapperley Plains Church Sunday School, per Mr. J. W. Leafe	0	9	2
	£587	7	11

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund. Gifts of material should be sent to 14, Sherwood-street, or to the workroom at 12, Short-hill.

Aberdeen Free Press, Nov: 24th. 1914.

KEITH.

The collection for the Queen's Work for Women Fund in the burgh of Keith realised £60 7s 1d. Provost Taylor, Ugie House, Keith, has received from Lady Roxburgh, the honorary secretary, the following letter:—33 Portland Place, W., November 20, 1914.—Dear Provost—I thank you for your kind letter of the 16th inst., and for the interest you have taken in this good work. I congratulate you on the generous response given to this fund in your burgh. Will you kindly convey the best thanks of my committee to all those who so readily assisted you.—Yours, etc., Eleanor Roxburgh, honorary secretary.

Islington Gazette, Nov: 26th. 1914.

Ding-dong—Bravo, Islington! Self praise is no recommendation, but I feel impelled to take a leaf from the book of the Mayor of Islington in congratulating the borough upon the splendid service it has rendered in the cause of charity. We have raised nearly £3,000 for the Prince of Wales's Relief Fund, something like £250 for Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund; we have housed and are maintaining something like 200 Belgian refugees in the borough; we have established a splendid workroom for women and girls at Canonbury; and now to-day we are going to do our best for the Belgian orphans. I congratulate the Mayoress upon having exercised that magnetic influence of which she is the mistress by drawing together a band of energetic and sympathetic ladies who have worked indefatigably to secure the excellent result achieved. We are all being hit by the war, but never before has Islington risen so magnificatly in the name of charity.

Aberdeen Daily Journal, Nov: 27th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

The Scottish subscriptions to the above fund amounted at the end of last week to £831 7s 9d. The Scottish treasurer, to whom subscriptions should be sent, is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry.

All communications respecting the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

The Times, Nov: 25th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

NOTABLE GIFTS FOR SALE.

A water-colour of "The Holy Family"—Italian school—dated 1696, by Gilbert Angus, has been sent to the Queen's Work for Women Fund; also a copy of a sixteenth century Bible with memoirs of Myles Coverdale. The original was printed in Swiss or German type in 1535. There are very few copies to be obtained—one can be seen in the British Museum, another in the public library at Cambridge. Since the sale of gifts in kind was started Messrs. D. H. Evans consider the approximate total of goods sold reaches about £600.

The Fund reached last night a total of £91,871 17s. The day's subscribers included:—

Collected by the Countess of Craven (including Mrs. Bradley Martin, £20)	£40	0	0
Ninth contribution from Sale of Gifts in Kind by Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., Ltd., Oxford-street, W... ..	29	12	5
Margaret M. Paterson	25	0	0
Collected by U.D.C. of Mynyddislwyn (further instalment, including Social and Dance held at the Rink, £23 16s. 10d.)	24	14	8
Entrance Money at Annual Exhibition and Sale of Arts, Crafts, and Industries	17	10	0
Collected by Mayoress of St. Helens (further instalment)	12	1	7
Entertainment given by Residents of Walton-on-Hill, per Mr. H. Mellowdew	10	16	9
Women of Trefeglwys	10	10	0
Thames Paper Co., Ltd.	10	0	0

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W.

The Morning Post, Nov: 26th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£92,208 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £92,208 1s. 11d. Yesterday's subscribers include:

Collected by Lady Rothschild (including Mrs. Charles Rothschild £10 10s., Mrs. E. L. Samuel £10, Anonymous £10)	£81	1	0
By the Urban District Council of Redditch	72	7	8
Messrs. Kynoch-Arklow (Limited) ...	20	0	0
Messrs. Robinson, Fleming, and Co.	20	0	0

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

The Daily Telegraph, November 27th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

It is suggested that the red, white, and blue flower favours chosen by her Majesty the Queen to be sold for the benefit of the "Work for Women" Fund, would make very effective decorations for Christmas. By ordering a gross box the purchaser would indirectly benefit the fund and help to give employment to a large number of girls in the artificial flower trade. The flowers are to be obtained at the headquarters, 33, Portland-place, W.

Yesterday the fund reached a total of £92,559, the day's subscriptions including £150 collected by the Mayoress of Poplar.

Dundee Advertiser, Nov: 25th. 1914.

NO DISTRESS IN CUPAR DISTRICT.

It is satisfactory to learn that so far as Cupar district is concerned there is as yet no distress consequent upon the war. This was made clear at a meeting in connection with Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund, convened by Miss Margaret Marshall, Lochmalony, and held in the Town Hall, Cupar, yesterday.

Miss Marshall presided, and explained that the object of the meeting was to ascertain whether there was any distress amongst the women of Cupar district consequent on the war, and to form a Committee for dealing with any such distress that might arise.

Mr J. Methven Mitchell stated that so far as Cupar was concerned full time was being worked. At Russell Mills, however, the workers were only employed for four days a week.

Lady Nairn, Rankeilleour, stated that so far as she had been able to ascertain there was so far no distress existing in the district.

In the circumstances it was felt that there was no need in the meantime to do anything in the way of providing work for those out of regular employment, but a Committee, consisting of Mrs Sharp, Hill of Tarvit; Mrs Anstruther-Duncan of Naughton; Mrs Crichton, Luthrie Bank; Mrs Douglas, Winthank, Cupar; Mrs Lumsden, Freuchie; and Miss Gilroy, Clatto, with Miss Marshall, Lochmalony, as Secretary, was appointed to deal with any need that might arise.

British Weekly, Nov: 26th. 1914.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK.

Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton will publish to-morrow a marvellous illustrated volume which is already in universal demand. Princess Mary's Gift Book, which costs only half a crown net, contains literary contributions, full-page coloured illustrations and many smaller drawings, from the most distinguished authors and artists of the day. All profits from the sale are to be given to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, which is acting in conjunction with the National Relief Fund. The frontispiece is a singularly beautiful portrait of Princess Mary by Mr. J. J. Shannon, R.A., and on the opposite page the young Princess expresses her "very best thanks to the authors and artists who have so generously contributed to my Gift Book." Among the famous writers and artists whose work appears in the volume we may mention Sir J. M. Barrie, "G. A. Birmingham," Hall Caine, Ralph Connor, Sir A. Conan Doyle, J. H. Fabre, Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, Charles Garvice, Lady Sybil Grant, Sir H. Rider Haggard, Beatrice Harraden, and Rudyard Kipling. "A True Story from Camp" is by the Bishop of London. "The Ebony Box" is an excellent tale by Mr. A. E. W. Mason. Admirers of Mr. Pett Ridge, Mr John Oxenham, Baroness Orczy, Mr. Alfred Noyes, Annie S. Swan, and Kate Douglas Wiggin will find that these favourite writers are included. The artists, whose exquisite work is reproduced, include many famous names. One full-page picture, for instance, has been painted for the book by Mr. Arthur Rackham, R.W.S. Among the publications of the autumn Princess Mary's Gift Book stands supreme.

653/14

Daily Sketch,
Nov. 27th 1914.

A "Mixed Grill."

THE CHARITY gift-book is sometimes a pretty deplorable affair, but I have just been glancing at Princess Mary's Gift Book; and I find it one of the most interesting compilations of that kind that I have seen for a long time. It is published by Hodder and Stoughton for half a crown, and the profits from its sale will be devoted to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Princess Mary desires to express "her very best thanks to the authors and artists who have so generously contributed to my Gift Book." Clearly there is but one thing left for you and me. That is—to buy the book. You will not regret the purchase, since it contains articles by (among others) Sir J. M. Barrie, Sir Rider Haggard, Mr. Kipling, the Bishop of London, and the Baroness Orczy, and pictures (also among others—and very clever "others") by Arthur Rackham, J. J. Shannon, Byam Shaw and Joseph Simpson.

—Photo: Brooks.

Morning Post,
Nov. 27th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached a total of £92,559 yesterday. The day's subscriptions included:

Collected by the Mayoress of Poplar	£150	0	0
Mrs. Fairhurst	50	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Monmouth	49	16	3
Countess of Wemyss	25	0	0
Collected by Viscountess Clifden (further instalment)	20	0	0
Employees of Messrs. Lever Bros., Ltd.	20	0	0

It has been suggested by a correspondent that the red, white, and blue flower favours chosen by the Queen to be sold for the benefit of the Fund would make very effective decorations for Christmas. By ordering a box the purchaser would indirectly benefit the Fund and help to give employment to a large number of girls in the artificial flower trade. The flowers are to be obtained at the Headquarters of the Fund, 33, Portland-place.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

OFFER FROM AUSTRALIA.

Australia has offered to help the Queen in finding work for her unemployed women. New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and Western Australia have promised to find employment as home helps and domestic servants not only for girls trained in this work but for typists, dressmakers, and other business girls. New South Wales also invites young widows with not more than two children. The girls will be taken to Australia for £1 down, the rest of the greatly reduced passage money to be paid in monthly instalments after arrival. This would be £2 in the case of three States and £4 for those going to New South Wales. The only condition is that the girls remain in domestic work for one year.

Her Majesty has been greatly interested in this offer, herself appointing a sub-committee of the Queen Mary's Work for Women Collecting Committee to see what advantage can be taken of it. The Central Committee have obtained a grant of £1,100 from the Queen's Fund, which will pay the registration fee of £1 for 550 girls and give each one £1 in cash on landing. In addition complete outfits are to be provided for the emigrants. These are being made in the women's workrooms, or given out to firms which need work for their employees.

Girls who want to go should apply to the British Women's Emigration Association (Imperial Institute), who with the Central Unemployed Body is making the selection. The age is fixed at 18 to 35 for three States and 17 to 35 for Queensland. For girls who have not been in domestic service before, New South Wales makes an age limit of 24, and Victoria of 21.

Liverpool Courier,
Nov. 27th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Australia's Offer to Unemployed Women.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £92,559.

Australia has offered to help the Queen in finding work for her unemployed women. Four States—New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and Western Australia—have promised to find employment as home helps and domestic servants not only for girls trained in this work, but for typists, dressmakers, and other business girls. New South Wales also invites young widows with not more than two children. The girls will be taken to Australia for £1 down, the rest of the greatly reduced passage to be paid in monthly instalments after arrival. The Queen has been greatly interested in this offer, herself appointing a sub-committee to see what advantage could be taken of it.

The Central Committee have obtained a grant of £1,100 from the Queen's Fund, which will pay the registration fee of £1 for 550 girls and give each girl £1 in cash on landing. In addition, complete outfits are to be provided also for the emigrants. These are being made in the women's workrooms, or given out to firms which need work for their women employes.

Girls who want to go should apply to the British Women's Emigration Association (Imperial Institute), who with the Central Unemployed Body is making the selection. The age is fixed at 18 to 35 for three States and 17 to 35 for Queensland. For girls who have not been in domestic service before, New South Wales makes an age limit of 24, and Victoria of 21.

Glasgow Evg. Citizen,
Nov. 27th 1914.

A UNIQUE SOUVENIR.

Princess Mary's Gift-Book Out To-Day.

Princess Mary's Gift-Book, published to-day by Messrs Hodder & Stoughton, Warwick Square, London, is a beautiful publication, full of interest and charm. The price is 2s 6d. and all the profits from the sales go to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, which is acting in conjunction with the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund.

Over a quarter of a million copies have been disposed of before publication, and now that the book is on the market, and its exceptional merits become known, there is sure to be an enormous demand for it. Everyone will wish to help our youthful Princess in her enterprise and her kindly desire to relieve distress by her active interest in getting up this really wonderful volume. As a Christmas gift book it is certain to be the favourite of the season.

One of its most delightful features is the frontispiece portrait of the Princess, specially painted for the Gift Book by J. J. Shannon. This is a new and very charming picture of Her Royal Highness, and it faces the autographed expression of "My very best thanks to those authors and artists who have so generously contributed to my Gift Book." These contributors are all distinguished in art and letters.

Among the writers are Sir J. M. Barrie, G. A. Birmingham, Hall Caine, Sir A. Conan Doyle, J. H. Fabre (the French naturalist), Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, Charles Garvice, Sir H. Rider Haggard, Beatrice Harraden, the Bishop of London, A. E. W. Mason, W. Pett Ridge, Annie S. Swan, Kate Douglas Wiggin, Ralph Connor, Lady Sybil Grant, Rudyard Kipling, and John Oxenham.

The illustrations will be greatly admired. The colour plates, which are artistically mounted on khaki colour, and include two fine sea pieces by Napier Henry and Norman Wilkinson, and the numerous black and white drawings, have all been specially executed. They provide quite a unique art souvenir.

The volume is daintily bound in cream colour, with Princess Mary's coronet and monogram surmounting the title. It is a book that will be treasured by every one who becomes its possessor.

Evening Standard,
November 27th 1914.

653.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK.

FAMOUS AUTHORS AND ARTISTS AID POPULAR CAUSE.

The demand for Princess Mary's Gift Book, which is published by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, of Warwick-square, E.C., has been so great that over a quarter of a million copies were disposed of to the booksellers and newsagents before publication. All profits from the sale are going to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, which is acting in conjunction with the National Relief Fund.

At the price of 2s. 6d. net this is probably the most wonderful volume ever placed on the market. From the frontispiece portrait of Princess Mary, specially painted for the book, facing her Royal Highness's thanks to "those authors and artists who have so generously contributed to my gift book," to the last page, the book is full of beauty and charm.

Princess Mary's Gift Book contains new stories and articles by some of the most famous living authors, including Sir J. M. Barrie, Mr. Hall Caine, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sir H. Rider Haggard, M. J. H. Fabre ("The Insect's Homer"), Baroness Orczy, Mr. Charles Garvice, Mr. W. Pett Ridge, etc.

The Bishop of London recounts his experiences in camp, and there are poems by Mr. Rudyard Kipling, Mr. Alfred Noyes, Mr. Ralph Connor, Lady Sybil Grant, and Mr. John Oxenham.

Paintings and drawings have been specially executed for the work, which is elaborately illustrated throughout by some of the best-known artists of the day.

The Scotsman,
November 27th. 1914.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT-BOOK.

AN IMPOSING ARRAY OF TALENT.

There is published to-day by Messrs Hodder & Stoughton, London, Princess Mary's Gift-Book, a volume which is issued in a good cause, and which many of our foremost authors and artists have collaborated to produce. All the profits from the sale of the book are to go to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, which is acting in conjunction with the National Relief Fund, and on this account alone it should be assured of a good sale. But on its merits the book deserves a wide circulation, for both on the literary and artistic side it is a volume of unusual attractions, and at the price of 2s. 6d. it is certainly exceptionally good value.

As frontispiece, the work has a reproduction in colours of the portrait of Princess Mary, specially painted for the book by Mr J. J. Shannon, R.A. The portrait must rank among Mr Shannon's happiest efforts, and none of its finer points are lost in the reproduction. The other illustrations include fourteen plates in colour, and many more in line. Their quality may best be indicated by mentioning that they come from the brushes and pencils of men occupying so high a position in the art of book illustration as (among others) W. Russell Flint, E. J. Detmold, Arthur Rackham, Gordon Browne, Lewis Baumer, Edmund J. Sullivan, Edmund Dulac, Claude A Shepperson, A. C. Michael, Charles Napier Hemy, and J. Byam Shaw. These gentlemen have given of their most finished work.

The literary contents are on an equal level of excellence. Sir J. M. Barrie contributes a characteristically humorous story entitled "A Day in Bed"; the ever-popular Irishman who writes under the nom de plume of "George Birmingham" gives us a choice specimen of his work in "The Spy"; Hall Caine is represented by a "life poem" of the sea, "Charlie Cox"; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle writes a thrilling story of Egypt in "Bimbashi Joyce"; and Sir H. Rider Haggard contributes in "Magepa the Buck" one of his inimitable tales of South Africa and its heroes. The other contributors of prose and verse include J. H. Fabre, the great French natural history writer, Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, Beatrice Harraden, Annie Swan, Kate Douglas Wiggin, Lady Sybil Grant, Rudyard Kipling, John Oxenham, Alfred Noyes, W. Pett Ridge, A. E. Mason, and

A "Mixed Grill."

THE CHARITY gift-book is sometimes a pretty deplorable affair, but I have just been glancing at Princess Mary's Gift Book; and I find it one of the most interesting compilations of that kind that I have seen for a long time. It is published by Hodder and Stoughton for half a crown, and the profits from its sale will be devoted to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Princess Mary desires to express "her very best thanks to the authors and artists who have so generously contributed to my Gift Book." Clearly there is but one thing left for you and me. That is—to buy the book. You will not regret the purchase, since it contains articles by (among others) Sir J. M. Barrie, Sir Rider Haggard, Mr. Kipling, the Bishop of London, and the Baroness Orczy, and pictures (also among others—and very clever "others") by Arthur Rackham, J. J. Shannon, Byam Shaw and Joseph Simpson.

—Photo: Brooks.

Morning Post,
Nov. 27th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached a total of £92,559 yesterday. The day's subscriptions included:

Collected by the Mayoress of Poplar	£150	0	0
Mrs. Fairhurst	50	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Monmouth	49	16	3
Countess of Wemyss	25	0	0
Collected by Viscountess Clifden (further instalment)	20	0	0
Employees of Messrs. Lever Bros., Ltd.	20	0	0

It has been suggested by a correspondent that the red, white, and blue flower favours chosen by the Queen to be sold for the benefit of the Fund would make very effective decorations for Christmas. By ordering a box the purchaser would indirectly benefit the Fund and help to give employment to a large number of girls in the artificial flower trade. The flowers are to be obtained at the Headquarters of the Fund, 33, Portland-place.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

OFFER FROM AUSTRALIA.

Australia has offered to help the Queen in finding work for her unemployed women. New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and Western Australia have promised to find employment as home helps and domestic servants not only for girls trained in this work but for typists, dressmakers, and other business girls. New South Wales also invites young widows with not more than two children. The girls will be taken to Australia for £1 down, the rest of the greatly reduced passage money to be paid in monthly instalments after arrival. This would be £2 in the case of three States and £4 for those going to New South Wales. The only condition is that the girls remain in domestic work for one year.

Her Majesty has been greatly interested in this offer, herself appointing a sub-committee of the Queen Mary's Work for Women Collecting Committee to see what advantage can be taken of it. The Central Committee have obtained a grant of £1,100 from the Queen's Fund, which will pay the registration fee of £1 for 550 girls and give each one £1 in cash on landing. In addition complete outfits are to be provided for the emigrants. These are being made in the women's workrooms or given out to firms which need work for their women employees.

Thirty girls have already made up their minds to go, and as soon as ships can be found to take them they will sail. Others who want to accept the offer should apply to the British Women's Emigration Association (Imperial Institute), which, with the Central (Unemployed) Body, is making the selection. The age is fixed at eighteen to thirty-five by three States and seventeen to thirty-five by Queensland. A tea party is being arranged by the Council of the Association for typists, dressmakers, and other business girls at the Imperial Institute to-morrow so that the offer to the Queen may be discussed.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Australia's Offer to Unemployed Women.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £92,559.

Australia has offered to help the Queen in finding work for her unemployed women. Four States—New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and Western Australia—have promised to find employment as home helps and domestic servants not only for girls trained in this work, but for typists, dressmakers, and other business girls. New South Wales also invites young widows with not more than two children. The girls will be taken to Australia for £1 down, the rest of the greatly reduced passage to be paid in monthly instalments after arrival. The Queen has been greatly interested in this offer, herself appointing a sub-committee to see what advantage could be taken of it.

The Central Committee have obtained a grant of £1,100 from the Queen's Fund, which will pay the registration fee of £1 for 550 girls and give each girl £1 in cash on landing. In addition, complete outfits are to be provided also for the emigrants. These are being made in the women's workrooms, or given out to firms which need work for their women employes.

Girls who want to go should apply to the British Women's Emigration Association (Imperial Institute), who with the Central Unemployed Body is making the selection. The age is fixed at 18 to 35 for three States and 17 to 35 for Queensland. For girls who have not been in domestic service before, New South Wales makes an age limit of 24, and Victoria of 21.

Glasgow Evg. Citizen,
Nov. 27th 1914.

A UNIQUE SOUVENIR.

Princess Mary's Gift-Book Out To-Day.

Princess Mary's Gift-Book, published to-day by Messrs Hodder & Stoughton, Warwick Square, London, is a beautiful publication, full of interest and charm. The price is 2s 6d. and all the profits from the sales go to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, which is acting in conjunction with the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund.

Over a quarter of a million copies have been disposed of before publication, and now that the book is on the market, and its exceptional merits become known, there is sure to be an enormous demand for it. Everyone will wish to help our youthful Princess in her enterprise and her kindly desire to relieve distress by her active interest in getting up this really wonderful volume. As a Christmas gift book it is certain to be the favourite of the season.

One of its most delightful features is the frontispiece portrait of the Princess, specially painted for the Gift Book by J. J. Shannon. This is a new and very charming picture of Her Royal Highness, and it faces the autographed expression of "My very best thanks to those authors and artists who have so generously contributed to my Gift Book." These contributors are all distinguished in art and letters.

Among the writers are Sir J. M. Barrie, G. A. Birmingham, Hall Caine, Sir A. Conan Doyle, J. H. Fabre (the French naturalist), Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, Charles Garvice, Sir H. Rider Haggard, Beatrice Harraden, the Bishop of London, A. E. W. Mason, W. Pett Ridge, Annie S. Swan, Kate Douglas Wiggin, Ralph Connor, Lady Sybil Grant, Rudyard Kipling, and John Oxenham.

The illustrations will be greatly admired. The colour plates, which are artistically mounted on khaki colour, and include two fine sea pieces by Napier Henry and Norman Wilkinson, and the numerous black and white drawings, have all been specially executed. They provide quite a unique art souvenir.

The volume is daintily bound in cream colour, with Princess Mary's coronet and monogram surmounting the title. It is a book that will be treasured by every one who becomes its possessor.

November 27th 1914.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK.

FAMOUS AUTHORS AND ARTISTS AID POPULAR CAUSE.

The demand for Princess Mary's Gift Book, which is published by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, of Warwick-square, E.C., has been so great that over a quarter of a million copies were disposed of to the booksellers and newsagents before publication. All profits from the sale are going to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, which is acting in conjunction with the National Relief Fund.

At the price of 2s. 6d. net this is probably the most wonderful volume ever placed on the market. From the frontispiece portrait of Princess Mary, specially painted for the book, facing her Royal Highness's thanks to "those authors and artists who have so generously contributed to my gift book," to the last page, the book is full of beauty and charm.

Princess Mary's Gift Book contains new stories and articles by some of the most famous living authors, including Sir J. M. Barrie, Mr. Hall Caine, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sir H. Rider Haggard, M. J. H. Fabre ("The Insect's Homer"), Baroness Orczy, Mr. Charles Garvice, Mr. W. Pett Ridge, etc.

The Bishop of London recounts his experiences in camp, and there are poems by Mr. Rudyard Kipling, Mr. Alfred Noyes, Mr. Ralph Connor, Lady Sybil Grant, and Mr. John Oxenham.

Paintings and drawings have been specially executed for the work, which is elaborately illustrated throughout by some of the best-known artists of the day.

The Scotsman,
November 27th. 1914.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT-BOOK.

AN IMPOSING ARRAY OF TALENT.

There is published to-day by Messrs Hodder & Stoughton, London, Princess Mary's Gift-Book, a volume which is issued in a good cause, and which many of our foremost authors and artists have collaborated to produce. All the profits from the sale of the book are to go to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, which is acting in conjunction with the National Relief Fund, and on this account alone it should be assured of a good sale. But on its merits the book deserves a wide circulation, for both on the literary and artistic side it is a volume of unusual attractions, and at the price of 2s. 6d. it is certainly exceptionally good value.

As frontispiece, the work has a reproduction in colours of the portrait of Princess Mary, specially painted for the book by Mr J. J. Shannon, R.A. The portrait must rank among Mr Shannon's happiest efforts, and none of its finer points are lost in the reproduction. The other illustrations include fourteen plates in colour, and many more in line. Their quality may best be indicated by mentioning that they come from the brushes and pencils of men occupying so high a position in the art of book illustration as (among others) W. Russell Flint, E. J. Detmold, Arthur Rackham, Gordon Browne, Lewis Baumer, Edmund J. Sullivan, Edmund Dulac, Claude A Shepperson, A. C. Michael, Charles Napier Hemy, and J. Byam Shaw. These gentlemen have given of their most finished work.

The literary contents are on an equal level of excellence. Sir J. M. Barrie contributes a characteristically humorous story entitled "A Day in Bed"; the ever-popular Irishman who writes under the nom de plume of "George Birmingham" gives us a choice specimen of his work in "The Spy"; Hall Caine is represented by a "life poem" of the sea, "Charlie Cox"; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle writes a thrilling story of Egypt in "Bimbashi Joyce"; and Sir H. Rider Haggard contributes in "Magepa the Buck" one of his inimitable tales of South Africa and its heroes. The other contributors of prose and verse include J. H. Fabre, the great French natural history writer, Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, Beatrice Harraden, Annie Swan, Kate Douglas Wiggin, Lady Sybil Grant, Rudyard Kipling, John Oxenham, Alfred Noyes, W. Pett Ridge, A. E. Mason, and Charles Garvice. Such an array of talent is sufficiently imposing, and the authors have in each case written up to their reputations.

Newcastle Chronicle, November 28th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Australia's Handsome Offer.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund on Thursday reached a total of £92,559 13s. 11d. It has been suggested by a correspondent that the "red, white and blue" flower favours chosen by her Majesty the Queen to be sold for the benefit of the "Work for Women" Fund, would make very effective decorations for Christmas. By ordering a gross box, the purchaser would indirectly benefit the fund and help to give employment to a large number of girls in the artificial flower trade. The flowers are to be obtained at the headquarters of the fund, 33, Portland Place, W. All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh. 33, Portland Place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor Place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Australia has offered to help the Queen in finding work for her unemployed women. Four States—New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and Western Australia—have promised to find employment as home helps and domestic servants not only for girls trained in this work, but for typists, dressmakers, and other business girls. New South Wales also invites young widows with not more than two children. The girls will be taken to Australia for £1 down, the rest of the greatly reduced passage to be paid in monthly instalments after arrival. This would be £2 in the case of three States and £4 for those going to New South Wales. The only condition is that the girls remain in domestic work for one year. The Queen has been greatly interested in this offer, herself appointing a sub-committee of the Queen Mary's Work for Women Collecting Committee to see what advantage could be taken of it.

The following conditions laid down by the Central Committee on Women's Employment will apply:—That in no case should the refusal to emigrate affect the individual's right to receive relief of any other kind. That for women and girls who agree to go to Australia, arrangements should be made in Australia at convenient centres for homes to which the girls might go when out of employment. This is of the utmost importance in order that the girls may not, from lack of a home, be forced to stay in any undesirable situation. That all women and girls should be employed at not less than the rates of pay current in the district to which they go.

The Central Committee have obtained a grant of £1,100 from the Queen's Fund which will pay the registration fee of £1 for 550 girls, and give each one £1 in cash on landing. In addition complete outfits are to be provided also for the emigrants. These are being made in the Women's workrooms or given out to firms which need work for their women employes. The girls emigrating would be paid a minimum wage of 8s. to 10s. per week with board and lodging, if untrained, and as much as 18s. to 20s. if a competent household worker. Then the chances in life are so much greater in Australia than they can be here. With only a population of 5 millions in comparison to the 7 millions of London alone, it is possible for every one to have a "place in the sun." The climate too, and the temperament of the people makes life infinitely brighter and happier.

Girls who want to go should apply to the British Women's Emigration Association (Imperial Institute), who with the Central Unemployed Body is making the selection. The age is fixed at 18 to 35 by three States and 17 to 35 by Queensland. For girls who have not been in domestic service before, New South Wales makes an age limit of 24 and Victoria of 21. Two good references are required as to character, health, and capability for domestic service. A medical certificate is necessary, and the parents' consent if the girls are under 21 years.

The Observer, Nov. 29th. 1914.

"PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK."

"I desire to express my very best thanks to those authors and artists who have so generously contributed to my gift-book" is the first sentence that faces one in opening the dainty pages of what bids fair to be a most popular gift-book for the season. It faces a beautiful frontispiece in colour reproducing Mr. J. J. Shannon's special portrait of Princess Mary, painted for the book in question. And this portrait alone should ensure the appeal and success of "Princess Mary's Gift-Book," to hand from Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton at the popular figure of half-a-crown net.

Emulation in one good cause or another has worked up this kind of album to a far higher pitch of perfection than was ever attained by the "Keepsakes" and "Friendship's Offerings" of our grandmothers' days, with all their costly steel engravings and languishing verses on "Inconstancy" by "A Lady of Quality." Nowadays we demand something of everything—travel, romance, poesy and art all in one, done by the most eminent hands, and blent with appropriateness and fine workmanship. All these we certainly get in profusion in the present volume, with this advantage, that nothing in it conflicts in any way with the benevolence which is at once the motive and the magical charm of the book—the fact that all the proceeds go to swell the receipts of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

To begin with, Sir J. M. Barrie opens the ball with a delicious essay, in his best vein of homely humour, entitled "A Holiday in Bed," and this, like all other contributions, enlists the service of the best artists of the day—in this case Mr. Russell Flint, with a fine colour plate and dainty black and white vignettes from the pen of Mr. C. E. Brock. Then come stories thick and fast from Sir Rider Haggard, Sir Conan Doyle, Miss Thorneycroft Fowler, Baroness Orczy, Miss Beatrice Harraden, Miss Annie S. Swan, the Bishop of London, Messrs. Hall Caine, "G. A. Birmingham," Charles Garvice, A. E. W. Mason and W. Pett Ridge. We get poetry from Lady Sybil Grant, Mr. Rudyard Kipling, Mr. Alfred Noyes and Mr. John Oxenham; and a whole gallery of beautiful illustrations in colour and otherwise from Messrs. Dulac, Rackham, Byam Shaw, Napier Hemy, Talbot Kelly, Norman Wilkinson, Claude Shepperson, E. J. Sullivan, Lewis Baumer, W. B. Wollen, Jos. Simpson, Gordon Browne, H. R. Millar and H. M. Brock and Miss M. E. Gray—a plate which will recommend the book to all child-lovers at the season when, above everything, the children must not be forgotten even in a troubled year like this.

Islington Gazette, November 30th. 1914.

ACTIVITY OF THE MAYORESS.

We congratulate the Mayoress of Islington on the success of the Belgian Flag Day in our borough—a success which was chiefly due to her interest and that of the ladies with whom she has been associated. Ever since the war broke out the Mayoress has been indefatigable and has shown exceptional activity on behalf of the various relief funds that have been organised. On Friday she presided at the meeting held under the auspices of the League of Honour at the Northern Polytechnic, and made a neat speech endorsing the objects of the movement. The Mayoress has been responsible for the collection of £19 4s. 11d. which she sent direct to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, receiving an acknowledgment from the Queen.

BARNSBURY PRIMROSES.

The whist drive recently held at Mornington House, under the auspices of the Barnsbury and South Islington Habitation of the Primrose League, resulted (without any deduction for expenses) in the realisation of the splendid sum of £16 16s. A cheque for £8 8s. has been forwarded to the Mayoress for Queen Mary's Fund, and one for a similar amount to the South Islington Unionist Women's Special Fund. "My Executive Council" (writes Mr. F. E. Southgate) "desire me to express their regret to those friends who, owing to lack of accommodation, were unable to take part in the 'drive,' and to thank all those who by their kind support and help enabled them to bring this function to such a successful issue."

Sunday Times, Nov. 29th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

NEARING £100,000.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £93,158 5s.

The day's subscribers included the following: Collected by the Mayoress of Kidderminster (further instalment), £133 8s. 2d.; collected by the Mayoress of Doncaster (further instalment), £69 1s. 3d.; Messrs. John Walker and Sons, Ltd., £50; Girton College, Cambridge (part proceeds of concert given by Girton College Suffrage Society), £10 10s. The gifts in kind sold for the Fund yesterday realised £10.

The Morning Post, November 30th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

AMOUNT SUBSCRIBED £93,158.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached by noon on Saturday a total of £93,158 9s. Saturday's subscriptions included:

Collected by the Mayoress of Kidderminster (further instalment)...	£133	8	2
By the Mayoress of Doncaster (further instalment)	69	1	3
Messrs. John Walker and Sons, Ltd.	50	0	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Glasgow Herald, Nov. 30th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached on Saturday a total of £93,158 9s. The Scottish treasurer is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, to whom subscriptions should be addressed. All communications respecting the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

Nottingham Express, November 30th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WOMEN'S FUND

For Organising Employment & Securing Wages for Women Suffering Through the War.

	£	s.	d.
Amount previously acknowledged...	699	14	5
M.D. ...	2	0	0
Miss Majorie Brown by the sale of fancy articles...	10	0
A Friend, per Sneinton Branch Bank	5	0
Mrs. Chandley	4	0

Donations can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, hon. treasurer of the Queen's Fund.

653/16

Surrey Mirror, Oct. 24th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

THE QUEEN'S MOVEMENT.

COMMITTEE FORMED FOR THE BOROUGH.

The Mayoress (Mrs. G. A. R. Ince) has been invited to form a committee to work in connection with the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. A meeting for the purpose of taking into consideration the communications received was held at the Municipal Buildings on Tuesday, when there were present the Mayoress (Mrs. G. A. R. Ince), who presided, Mrs. E. C. P. Hull, Miss Hull, Mrs. Purchase, Mrs. Frank Morrison, Mrs. Ive, Miss J. M. Wilkinson, Miss Marion Greenhow, Mrs. Priest, Miss Whitley, Mrs. J. Powell, Mrs. Auerbach, Mrs. Durrant, and Mrs. F. E. Barnes.

The following telegram from the Marchioness of Crewe, addressed to the Mayoress, was read:—"Her Majesty the Queen has approved formation of sub-committee in your town under your direction for the Queen's Work for Women Fund. I am requested to ask your loyal and strong support in forming suitable committee. On receiving acquiescence literature will follow." A letter was also read from Lady Roxburgh, the hon. sec. and acting treasurer of the Fund, putting two suggestions forward as the best means of affording assistance in the work, namely, a Pound Day and a Flower Day. In the event of the latter idea being adopted it was pointed out that the committee in London was prepared to supply the flowers free. After consideration the meeting decided to adopt the Flower Day, and next Saturday week, Oct. 31st, is the day set apart for the purpose.

The committee are working on the lines which proved so successful in the borough in connection with the Hospital Saturday movement, and all the ladies who carried out that work are to be invited to act on this occasion and thus add to the fund for the employment of the women of the country at this trying time in our national history. We are sure the scheme will commend itself to all our readers, and we bespeak for it the most generous support. The collecting boxes and flower baskets of the Hospital Saturday Committee will be used, and if the day's collection approaches in any degree that of Hospital Saturday there will be abundant cause for congratulation. The flowers are very appropriate. They are threefold, one red, one white, and one blue, and make a very effective badge to show the interest awakened by this most practical movement for the relief of distress among women arising from the war.

Sunday Times, Oct. 25th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

TOTAL OF £78,201.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £78,201 7s. 11d.

Yesterday's list of subscriptions included the following: Scottish donations are now augmented by the first contribution of the Scotland branch, per the Marchioness of Linlithgow, hon. treasurer of the branch (including Mrs. Chalmers, Bathgate, £100; Mrs. Moubray, £20; Mr. James L. Anderson, £10), £168 11s. 8d.; Mrs. Paget, £30; collected by the Mayoress of Leeds, £14 9s.; collected by the Countess of Lonsdale, £14 2s. 6d.; collected by the Mayoress of Totnes, £13 9s.; collected by the Urban District Council of Little Crosby, £11 12s.; Mr. Brodie Henderson, £10 10s.

Princess Marie Louise of Schleswig-Holstein, accompanied by Miss Collin, of the "Friends of the Poor," visited the headquarters of the Central Committee yesterday.

A beginning has been made with the propaganda work of the newly formed Entente Trade League. The certificates, by which the public is asked to pledge itself to "trade with friends," primarily with the British Empire, will be offered, at sixpence each, at railway bookstalls and many of the leading stores for the benefit of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Mr. Oswald Stoll has sent to Lady Roxburghe a cheque for £426 12s. 10d., being the proceeds, without any deduction whatsoever for expenses, of the War Concert held on Sunday last at the Coliseum in aid of the Work for Women Fund.

Nursing Times, Oct. 24th.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

SPLENDID work is being done by this organisation in several directions. Among its activities we may mention the opening of experimental workrooms, the securing of contracts for over ninety workshops which were closing down, and the investigation of new trades for women. In the experimental workrooms women are receiving training in the domestic arts. Some are making baby clothes, while others are preparing dinners for the women in the workrooms, at the same time receiving practical lessons in cookery. The Queen's interest in the work is very keen and she made a very thorough examination of the work done on her recent visit. The headquarters are at Foley House, Portland Place, W.

Edenbridge Chronicle, Oct. 24th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The following is a copy of an appeal which is being issued privately by the signatories in the interests of the above fund:—

"As members of the Council of The Queen's Work for Women Fund, we have been specially requested by Her Majesty to make a collection in this district, and we shall be extremely grateful for any sum of money, no matter how small, which can be sent to either of us c/o Union of London and Smith's Bank, Tonbridge.

Contributions will be acknowledged in the local newspapers, and when the collection is complete the money will be sent direct to Her Majesty, with names of all contributors.

MINNIE HOLLENDEN.
MAUD CAZALET."

Scotsman, Oct. 24th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Yesterday's subscriptions amounted to £288, bringing up the total to £77,868. The first consignment of finished baby garments has arrived from the relief workrooms, containing 30 or 40 complete baby sets. These will be distributed through the local representative Committees to poor mothers. Material which was supplied to the National Organisation of Girls' Clubs has also been made up, and seven great bundles of clothing returned. In London alone over 3000 women, thrown out of work owing to the war, have been found employment.

Nottingham Guardian, Oct. 27th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

USEFULNESS OF QUEEN'S FUND.

By providing employment for self-respecting women and girls the Queen's Work for Women Fund is playing a most useful part in the relief of distress in Nottingham. Apart from very small working expenses, the only extra expense to the city in giving self-respecting women and girls work instead of offering them monetary relief is the outlay on material, and the poor of the city are the gainers by the garments made. There is no interference with legitimate trade.

Amount previously acknowledged	£452	4	0
Mrs. Shapeero	1	1	0
Mr. W. H. Armstrong	0	5	0
Mrs. W. Norton Hicking	5	0	0
Total	£458	10	0

Anyone who can lend hand or treadle machines or chairs is asked to write to the Hon. Secretary Mrs. W. E. Dowson, at the offices, 14, Sherwood-street South. Office hours, 11 to 1.

Donations will be announced in our columns, and can be paid to the Nottingham and Notts. Bank, or sent direct to one of the ladies signing the appeal at the Guildhall, or to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, treasurer of the Queen's Fund.

653.

653/17

City Press Oct. 24th. 1914

WORK FOR WOMEN.

Lady Rothermere and Mr. F. Brinsley-Harper, C.C., J.P. (Chairman of the Central Unemployed Body for London) were speakers on Thursday at a meeting held by the Mayor and Mayoress of Deptford in the interests of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Collections for the Work for Women Fund will be made at St. Paul's Cathedral to-morrow. In the afternoon Canon Alexander will preach for the Fund.

The pupils of St. Paul's School for Girls have sent £11 to the Work for Women Fund.

The Times, Oct. 26th.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

HELPING DRESSMAKERS IN DISTRESS.

The help which the Queen's Work for Women Fund is rendering to dressmakers in distress is shown by reports from the Paddington area, where 300 women are registered as unemployed, the majority being skilled dressmakers and good class tailoresses. Every case is investigated by the woman investigator for the district, and 50 per cent. are reported by her to be in urgent distress. Several ladies in the district have turned their dining-rooms into workrooms and employed 10 or so of those distressed dressmakers. For the last three weeks the Mayoress also has had a workroom which has now received a grant from the National Relief Fund. To-day another workroom is to be opened, and 50 women will be given work. The number will be increased up to 100. They are all to be employed making blue serge dresses for children. The clothes are to be given to the distressed middle-class poor in the neighbourhood.

The following subscriptions to the Fund were received on Saturday:—

Scottish donations are now augmented by the first contribution of the Scottish Branch (recently formed) per the Marchioness of Linlithgow (Hon. Treasurer of the Branch) (including—Mrs. Chalmers (Bathgate), £100; Mrs. Moubray, £20; Mr. James L. Anderson, £10)	£168	11	8
Mrs. Paget	30	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Leeds (further instalment)	14	9	0
Collected by the Countess of Lonsdale	14	2	6
Collected by the Mayoress of Totnes	13	9	0
Collected by the Urban District Council of Little Crosby	11	12	0
Mr. Brodie Henderson	10	10	0
OTHER SUBSCRIPTIONS	70	18	4
SATURDAY'S TOTAL	£333	12	6
PREVIOUSLY ACKNOWLEDGED	77,867	15	5
TOTAL OF CONTRIBUTIONS TO DATE	£78,201	7	11

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and al cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

The Daily Telegraph, October 24th 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

The Queen's Work for Women Fund now totals £78,201. The fund is doing excellent work among the large number of dressmakers in London, some of whom are in great distress.

Standard, Oct. 27th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

The contributions to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund brought the total yesterday to £78,653 5s. 9d.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to the Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner.

The Morning Post, Dec: 2nd. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£94,017 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £94,017 0s. 3d. Yesterday's subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Fifth Contribution from the Scottish Branch, per the Marchioness of Linlithgow (including proceeds of a Scottish Flag Day in Clydebank, &c.)	379	3	7
First Instalment from the Ladies' Golf Club Competitions for the Queen's Work for Women Fund brooch-badge presented by the Gentlewoman	100	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Islington (further instalment)	35	6	0
The Hon. Mrs. Behrens, per Lady Rothschild	25	0	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on women's employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Morning Post, Dec: 3rd. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£94,337 CONTRIBUTED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £94,337 17s. 6d. The day's subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Miss Stancomb Wills (monthly donation)	50	0	0
Collection at meetings held under the auspices of the Women's Social and Political Union at Plymouth and Kingsway Hall	42	3	2
Tenth contribution from proceeds of the sale of gifts in kind by the Work for Women Fund Department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., Ltd.	31	3	11
The Sabbath School Society of Ireland: Subscriptions received up to and including November 30	26	17	1
Mr. C. C. Brown Douglas	25	0	0
Miss Florence Ward (first monthly donation)	25	0	0

Through the generosity of Mr. S. Ernest Palmer the Fund will publish on Monday a stirring song entitled "Children of Britain," the music for which is by Mr. Hubert Bath, and the words by Mr. Alfred Noyes. Madame Clara Butt has promised to sing the song.

All communications regarding the Fund and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

MASONS AND THE WAR FUNDS.

The Grand Lodge of English Freemasons held a quarterly communication at the Freemasons' Hall, London, last evening, under the presidency of Mr. T. F. Halsey, Deputy Grand Master, when £540 was apportioned to the National Relief Fund, £150 to the Red Cross Society, £150 to the Belgian Relief Fund, and £75 to the Queen's Work for Women Fund. These sums were in addition to £6,000 voted at the last meeting. Other votes were 50 guineas to the Princess Mary's Fund and 50 guineas to the French Ambassador's Fund for the Wives and Children of French Soldiers in this country. The Duke of Connaught was nominated as Grand Master for next year.

Daily Telegraph, Dec: 3rd. 1914.

COLNAGHI GALLERY.

EXHIBITION FOR TWO WAR CHARITIES.

By SIR CLAUDE PHILLIPS.

A most charming exhibition, consisting of three distinct sections, has been arranged by Messrs. P. and D. Colnaghi and Obach, at their fine galleries in New Bond-street. This is in aid (1) of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund (president her Majesty the Queen), and (2) of the Australian Contingent Association. As no statement to the contrary is made, we assume that the two charities will take in equal shares the proceeds of the show. The piece de résistance is an exhibition of Old Masters, limited in extent, but of very high quality. The side-shows—to use an appropriate if somewhat disrespectful mode of description for two very delicate and attractive exhibitions housed in small galleries on either side of the great hall—are Fans and Drawings on Silk by Conder and Mrs. Mary Davis, and a Collection of Old Fans lent by Mrs. Frank Gibson.

Of splendid quality, and a very characteristic work of Rembrandt's latest and in many respects greatest time, is a little-known "Portrait of a Young Man," signed and dated 1662. This is lent by Mr. O. Gutekunst. Mr. Otto Beit has sent to the exhibition two magnificent Metsus, "The Letter Received" and "The Letter Writer"; companion pictures, these, from Lord Francis Hope's now dispersed collection at Deepdene. There are no finer examples of the great Dutch genre painter in existence than this wonderful pair of pictures. In both, but especially in "The Letter Received"—an interior all bathed in a pale, bright light—we find Metsu strongly under the influence of a still greater master—Vermeer, of Delft. In an allegro key somewhat unusual in this unsmiling and rather grumpy follower of Rembrandt is Van den Eckhout's conversation-piece "The Garden of Love." A rarity is the winter-scene, "A Frozen River and Ice-fair," by Solomon van Ruisdael. It has all his characteristic dryness and crispness of touch. In Jacob van Ruisdael's best manner is the dramatic and finely worked out sea-piece, "View on the Coast on a Stormy Day." Then there are good average examples of Philips Wouvermans and David Teniers the younger.

By no means a good example of Chardin is the character-study, "Le jeune dessinateur." It has little of his ingenious charm or silveriness of tone; qualities which made so delightful the fine examples of his art shown last year at the Burlington Fine Arts Club. Still less to our taste is the coarsely-painted Venetian conversation-piece, "The Card Party," a work of the school of Pietro Longhi, but assuredly not (as the catalogue assumes) from his own brush. We need not go to Venice to convince ourselves that the name of the chef d'école is here taken in vain, since we have delightful specimens of Pietro Longhi's naïve and fascinating art at the National Gallery. An over-exuberant and too obviously artificial Venetian scene, "Regatta on the Grand Canal," is in the latest and least convincing style of Francesco Guardi. Paintings very similar in execution were comprised in the Cohen bequest to the National Gallery. Guardi in his most complete and masterly style is best to be studied in the Louvre; less solid if more brilliant and fascinating are the examples of his later time in the Wallace Collection.

Among the British pictures may be mentioned the spontaneous and irresistibly attractive sketch in oils by Romney, entitled "The Coy Child"—a thing infinitely superior in artistic quality to his modish portraits of ladies of high degree. Then there is a superb Raeburn, "Anne Boswell, wife of Alexander Carre," with its less interesting pendant, "Alexander Carre of Caverse." In unusually fine preservation, for a picture of this period, is the brilliantly effective if too scenic Turner, "Venice, Campo Santo," exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1842.

The collection of fans and drawings in silk by Conder show the much-lamented artist in his daintiest and most fanciful phase. His designs are marked by a seemingly effortless beauty of rhythm, his colouring has the texture and the tints of the iridescent dust on the moth's wings. A sensuous delight in the beauty of woman, in gaiety of spirit, in radiance of colour, in harmony of movement, is breathed forth deliciously in these caprices of the brush. Later on in Conder's all-too-short career a certain grossness, a certain excess in the expression of passion that is of the earth earthy, forcing its way to the surface, makes itself disagreeably felt. But this phase is in the present exhibition very sparingly represented. The collection of old fans, chiefly of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, calls up visions of splendid pomp of stately coquetry and subtle intrigue, of an unconquerable gaiety that pulsated and scintillated even to the very verge of the abyss. The examples chosen for exhibition illustrate in characteristic phases the French, Italian, Spanish, and English schools.

The North Mail, 653. Dec: 3rd. 1914.

WORK FOR POOR WOMEN.

Lady Mayoress Appeals For Further Support.

Miss Isabella Fitzgerald, the Lady Mayoress of Newcastle, in a letter calling attention to the scheme for the Work for Women Depot, at the Wesley Orphan House, Northumberland Street, Newcastle, says: "It is perhaps not generally realised that at this depot there are about 30 women employed, who would otherwise be added to the list of the unemployed in the city.

"The work which they carry out is the repairing and making fit for wear all cast-off clothing sent to the depot by the general public for that purpose. Since the establishing of the depot a considerable quantity of clothing has been dealt with in this way, and much of it has been distributed amongst the necessitous poor.

"As the winter develops the need for further clothing will become accentuated, and, of course, the women who are at present engaged in this scheme can only continue in employment provided an adequate supply of clothing, to be thus dealt with, is forthcoming.

"I therefore venture to again appeal to the kindly disposed citizens of Newcastle who may have clothing with which they can dispense, to be good enough to send it addressed to me at the Ladies' Workroom, Wesley Orphan House, Northumberland Street.

"It seems to me that it cannot be too frequently emphasised that by co-operating in this way, the public achieve the two objects of providing winter garments for the necessitous poor, and finding employment for those out of work.

Shields Gazette, Dec: 3rd. 1914.

AN APPEAL TO WOMEN.

Never in the history of the town have a Mayor and Mayoress found more momentous and varied duties awaiting them than is the case to-day. They are duties, too, of both local and national importance, and have their origin, of course, in the appalling war crisis this Empire is passing through. South Shields will be asked to bear its share of the burdens of the day, and will not fail. In this connection I have to commend to the inhabitants of the town the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund in the assisting of which the good offices of our Mayoress have been requisitioned through the instrumentality of the secretary, Lady Roxburgh. Her Majesty's message to the women of England conveys practically all that is to be said:

"In the firm belief that prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity, I have inaugurated the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Its object is to provide employment for as many as possible of the women of this country who have been thrown out of work by the war. I appeal to the women of Great Britain to help their less fortunate sisters through this fund."

The Mayoress has for distribution a number of collecting books, and herself will gladly receive and acknowledge donations. As a town we are not large employers of women, and it is not proposed to do what is done in many other towns where women fill the mills and factories, that is, to establish local works for female labour. Our province is purely that of a collecting agency, and not an administrative body. The funds provided here will go to the Central Committee, which is a body that works in co-operation with the Government Committee and with local committees in the promotion of schemes that, while avoiding any interference with ordinary trade, will provide work for women and girls whom the war has thrown out of employment. It aims not at the relief of distress, but at its prevention. It offers not charity but work, and surely everybody can afford a little for extending the beneficent scope of a fund of that kind.

653/18

Glasgow Herald,
December 4th 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The amount received to date for the Queen's Fund for providing work for unemployed women is £94.447 9s 7d. The Scottish treasurer is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, to whom subscriptions should be addressed. All communications respecting the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

Liverpool Post,
Dec: 4th 1914.

A BOOK IN GREAT REQUEST.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK.

ASTONISHING FACTS AND FIGURES.

A few facts about the making of Princess Mary's Gift Book, should help to dispel the illusion that the making of books is the cult of the few instead of the life-work of a multitude. Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, the publishers of this remarkable half-a-crown book which, as everyone knows, is issued by Royal consent and approval in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, send us the following astonishing particulars of production.

The actual production of Princess Mary's Gift Book has given employment to over 2,500 men and women. The copies printed consist of three-and-a-half million (3,500,000) sheets to fold, gather, and sew, and no less than four million nine hundred thousand (4,900,000) pictures to paste on and mount. Twenty-five printing machines have been at work day and far into the night for four weeks on the illustrations alone. Even the ink for these colour pictures must have weighed over a ton. The binding is another huge item. Forty-nine thousand (49,000) yards of cloth 36-in. wide will be required to bind the whole edition, in addition to sixty-five (65) tons of straw boards which are used as backing for the cloth. The total weight of the whole edition when bound will be over two hundred and thirty (230) tons. Here are a few more particulars for those who are fond of comparisons. If the books comprising this great edition were placed on the ground end to end they would reach nearly from London to Oxford. If they could be piled up one on top of each other they would make a mountain over six times as high as Snowdon, and if the pages of these books were placed end to end they would reach over 5,000 miles.

It is gratifying to learn from Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton that the public demand for Princess Mary's Gift Book, although it was only published last Friday, is so enormous that they expect to beat every known record of book publication with it between now and Christmas.

The "Daily Post" and "Echo" are the sole publishers for Lancashire, Cheshire, and North Wales, and the book can be had from all their offices or through all booksellers and stationers.

Glasgow Herald,
Dec: 5th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND

The object of the Queen's Work for Women Fund is to provide work for the many women thrown out of employment by the war. The Scottish Treasurer, to whom subscriptions should be sent, is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry. Communications respecting the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the Hon. Secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh, reports that the Queen's Fund for providing work for unemployed women now amounts to £94,573. The Scottish treasurer is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, to whom subscriptions should be addressed. All communications respecting the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

The Times,
December 3rd. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund yesterday reached a total of £94,337.

The portrait of Princess Mary, painted by Mr. J. J. Shannon, R.A., for "Princess Mary's Gift Book," is on view at the Leicester Galleries, Leicester-square, where there are also other originals of pictures by well-known artists reproduced in the book—all for sale on behalf the Queen's Fund.

Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton state that the public demand for Princess Mary's Gift Book, issued last Friday in aid of the "Work for Women" Fund, is already very great. The actual production of the book has given employment to over 2,500 men and women. The copies printed consist of 3,500,000 sheets to fold, gather, and sew, and 4,900,000 pictures to paste on and mount. Twenty-five printing machines have been at work by day and far into the night for four weeks on the illustrations alone.

The Universe, Dec: 4th 1914.

Australia is responding nobly to the call of the dear Homeland. In addition to freeing the seas of the Emden and sending over hundreds of her stalwart sons, with more to follow, she has come forward to help the Queen in her beneficent "Work for Women" scheme, with an offer to find employment as home helps and domestic servants, not only for girls trained to those duties, but for typists, dressmakers, etc. The terms are £1 down as part payment of the greatly reduced fare, the balance to be paid in monthly instalments, the only condition laid down being that the girls remain in domestic service for one year after arrival.

* * *

The Central Committee of the Queen's Fund has made a grant of £1,100 towards this very practical scheme, which will enable 550 girls to pay the £1 deposit and receive £1 on arrival in Australia. Each girl will also be given an excellently comprehensive outfit. Certainly the Queen and the Committee assisting her are developing their fund on sound and sane lines—with neither offensive Bumbledom nor poke-your-nose-into-other-people's-business inquisitiveness—which the administrators of the Prince of Wales's Fund might well envy, and—better still—imitate.

Morning Post,
December 5th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

TOTAL SUBSCRIBED £94,573.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £94,573 2s. 11d. Yesterday's subscriptions included:

Collected by the Viscountess Clifden (further instalment)	£38	9	10
By the Urban District Council of Buckfastleigh (including part proceeds of a concert given by Mrs. W. Hamlyn)	20	0	0
By the Mayoress of Wilton	20	0	0

How to employ girl wage-earners under sixteen years of age who have been thrown out of work by the war has been under the consideration of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Thousands of these girls in London alone, who have been bread-winners in their families, are now displaced. It has been decided that local representatives shall be asked to co-operate with the local education authorities in looking after these young people. It is proposed that training should be undertaken wherever possible by the local education authority, and a maintenance grant coming from the Queen's Fund be given to girls who have been wage-earners, through the local relief authority.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

653/19 1053.
Hampstead Express,
Dec: 5th 1914.

QUEEN VISITS WORKROOMS.

THE Queen's great interest in her "Work for Women" Fund was again made evident on Monday, when Her Majesty, attended by Lady Bertha Dawkins and Mr. E. Wallington, visited three of the mayoral workrooms.

At the rooms at the St. Pancras Baths, Prince of Wales-road, the Queen was received by Mrs. H. J. Tennant and Miss Mary R. Macarthur on behalf of the committee, and by the Mayor and Town Clerk of the borough. Amongst those who were presented to Her Majesty were the Right Hon. W. H. Dickinson, M.P. for North St. Pancras, and Mrs. Dickinson, Lady Helen Cassel, Alderman C. W. Matthews, leader of the Reform Party of the St. Pancras Borough Council, Alderman J. H. Harley, leader of the Progressive Party, and Mr. T. Collins, ex-Mayor of the borough. One hundred and fifty women were at work making clothes, which will be given away to the very poor.

The Queen stopped every now and then to speak to a worker. Her Majesty told a girl who was embroidering a dress that it was good to train the eye, and a woman who was knitting was complimented on her speed.

"Don't you drop the stitches?" Her Majesty asked.

In the little shoes which had been made out of men's old silk hats, the Queen took a particular interest, and she delighted everybody by signing her name in the visitors' book. "It's like leaving us a bit of herself," remarked one worker to another.

At Islington the domestic economy training scheme claimed the Queen's first attention. When Her Majesty saw the banana crate cradles, she inquired if the crates could still be obtained. "I remember that there was a danger of the supply running short, and that would have been a pity," she said.

At the Holborn workroom Her Majesty was shown piles of little garments made for the Belgian children.

Kentish Mercury
Dec: 5th 1914.

HER MAJESTY AT GREENWICH.

INSPECTION OF THE WOMEN'S WORK ROOM.

Yesterday afternoon the Queen, who was accompanied by Princess Alexander of Teck, and attended by Mr. E. W. Wallington, C.M.G., paid an informal visit to Queen Mary's Work Room for Women at the Borough Hall, Royal-hill, Greenwich. Her Majesty, who arrived by motor car from Poplar via Blackwall Tunnel, and was dressed in a Saxe blue costume with black toque, was received by the Mayor and Mayoress of Greenwich, the Town Clerk (Mr. Francis Robinson), and the Deputy Town Clerk (Mr. F. J. Simpson), and in the corridor of the Borough Hall she was presented, on behalf of the staff, by Mr. F. G. Skinner (with whom was Mr. R. N. Goddard), with a bouquet of carnations tied with the colours of the Allied Forces. Her Majesty, conducted by the Mayor (who wore his robe and chain of office), the Mayoress, and Miss Mary McArthur, made a close inspection of the work done by the women, some 50 in number, and expressed great gratification with all she saw. Mrs. Furrell (hon. secretary of the fund), Mrs. Nelson (hon. treasurer), Mrs. Clare (supervisor), and Mrs. Bryan Owen had the honour of being presented by the Mayor to the Queen, who on leaving after a visit of a quarter of an hour motored to Southwark Town Hall for a similar purpose. Among those present were Mrs. F. W. Alexander, Mrs. Johnson Smith, Mrs. Leonard Miller, Mrs. Tysoe, Mrs. McDougall, Miss McCall, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. East, Mrs. Parkes, Miss Janette Scarr, Miss Pamela Lovibond, Miss Ommanney, the Rev. Thomas Morgan, and Councillor Hunt. Mr. F. W. Thornton was in attendance on the Mayor and Mayoress. The Queen was enthusiastically cheered by a small crowd which gathered outside the gates of the Borough Hall. The police arrangements were in charge of Sub-divisional Inspector Garner and Inspector Challenger.

653/20

The Queen, December 5th. 1914.

1.A.9

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK.

NOBODY BUT A PRINTER can appreciate the extraordinary value of the Gift Book, published by Messrs Hodder and Stoughton with the sanction and under the patronage of the Princess Mary for the benefit of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.* It is no exaggeration to say that, from the point of view of mere production, the book, with its wonderful illustrations, is not worth less than 10s. 6d., and if full market price had been paid to the famous artists and authors for the copyright of the drawings and stories, freely contributed, another half-guinea would have to be added before the public could secure such a treasure. There is scarcely any doubt that an enormous number of people in this country will require such a memento of Christmas during these times of trouble, both for the sake of the book itself, and for the pleasure of being able to make some small contribution to those who are suffering in this terrible winter. But what we would specially like to impress on our readers is the unique chance of sending this wonderful production as a gift book to friends living in the Colonies or America, or anywhere in the world. Never will they have such an opportunity again of sending a gift that is fully worth a guinea and will only cost half-a-crown.

The frontispiece of the volume is a portrait by Mr J. J. Shannon, R.A., of Princess Mary herself, of which an illustration is given elsewhere in the Queen. Sir J. M. Barrie contributes a deliciously humorous story entitled "A Holiday in Bed;" G. A. Birmingham, the famous author of General John Regan, is represented by a characteristic Irish story entitled "The Spy;" Hall Caine has written a wonderful "life poem" of the sea entitled "Charlie the Cox;" Sir Arthur Conan Doyle contributes "Bimbashi Joyce," a story of Egypt which will thrill every reader; J. H. Fabre, the veteran French author known as "The Insects' Homer;" Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, the famous author of Concerning Isabel Carnaby, who, in "An Angel of God," tells of the way eyes are opened to see the angel hosts; Charles Garvice, whose "Model Soldier" is a charming love story of the present war; Sir H. Rider Haggard tells a glorious story of heroism in South Africa in "Magepa the Buck"; Beatrice Harraden contributes a story of ancient times with a lesson for to-day; the Bishop of London recounts his experiences in camp; A. E. W. Mason pictures the days of the Siege of Paris; the Baroness Orczy, author of the world-famous Scarlet Pimpernel, gives us an entirely new Scarlet Pimpernel story; W. Pett Ridge a charmingly humorous and tender story of a girl who wanted "everything different;" Annie S. Swann a tale of gallant Belgium; Kate Douglas Wiggin, author of Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, a gem of a story in "Fleur-de-Lis."

In addition to these stories there are poems by Ralph Connor, the famous Canadian novelist, who has contributed a thrilling war poem entitled "Canada's Word"; Lady Sybil Grant, whose delightful series entitled "Let's Pretend" is most characteristically illustrated by Arthur Rackham, the famous illustrator of "Peter Pan;" Rudyard Kipling, who has given permission for the inclusion in this volume of his famous poem "Big Steamers;" Alfred Noyes, whose "Spell for a Fairy" is a most moving and delicate piece of work; and John Oxenham, who is represented by a poem entitled "What Can a Little Chap Do?" which will undoubtedly be quoted far and wide.

All these stories and poems are illustrated in the most elaborate manner. There are in all fourteen plates in colour R.W.S.; Edmund Dulac; Norman Wilkinson, R.I.; W. B. Wollen, R.I.; Claude A. Shepperson, A.R.W.S.; A. C. Michael; Eugene Hastain; M. E. Gray; Carlton A. son, R.I.; Joseph Simpson, R.B.A.; W. B. Wollen, R.I.; Claude A. Shepperson, A.R.W.S.; H. M. Brock, R.I.; Gordon Browne, R.I.; Lewis Baumer; Harold Earnshaw; Edmund J. Sullivan, A.R.W.S.

To give our readers some idea of the charm and delight which they will get from this wonderful volume we would wish, but must refrain from quoting any of the tales or verses mentioned above, but we think there can be no harm in

Portrait of Princess Mary, by J. J. Shannon, R.A.
(The frontispiece of Princess Mary's Gift Book. Hodder and Stoughton.)

N appreciate the extraordinary value of the Gift Book, published by Messrs Hodder and Stoughton with the sanction and under the patronage of the Princess Mary for the benefit of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.* It is no exaggeration to say that, from the point of view of mere production, the book, with its wonderful illustrations, is not worth less than 10s. 6d., and if full market price had been paid to the famous artists and authors for the copyright of the drawings and stories, freely contributed, another half-guinea would have to be added before the public could secure such a treasure. There is scarcely any doubt that an enormous number of people in this country will require such a memento of Christmas during these times of trouble, both for the sake of the book itself, and for the pleasure of being able to make some small contribution to those who are suffering in this terrible winter. But what we would specially like to impress on our readers is the unique chance of sending this wonderful production as a gift book to friends living in the Colonies or America, or anywhere in the world. Never will they have such an opportunity again of sending a gift that is fully worth a guinea and will only cost half-a-crown.

The frontispiece of the volume is a portrait by Mr J. J. Shannon, R.A., of Princess Mary herself, of which an illustration is given elsewhere in the Queen. Sir J. M. Barrie contributes a deliciously humorous story entitled "A Holiday in Bed;" G. A. Birmingham, the famous author of General John Regan, is represented by a characteristic Irish story entitled "The Spy;" Hall Caine has written a wonderful "life poem" of the sea entitled "Charlie the Cox;" Sir Arthur Conan Doyle contributes "Bimbashi Joyce," a story of Egypt which will thrill every reader; J. H. Fabre, the veteran French author known as "The Insects' Homer;" Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, the famous author of Concerning Isabel Carnaby, who, in "An Angel of God," tells of the way eyes are opened to see the angel hosts; Charles Garvice, whose "Model Soldier" is a charming love story of the present war; Sir H. Rider Haggard tells a glorious story of heroism in South Africa in "Magepa the Buck"; Beatrice Harraden contributes a story of ancient times with a lesson for to-day; the Bishop of London recounts his experiences in camp; A. E. W. Mason pictures the days of the Siege of Paris; the Baroness Orczy, author of the world-famous Scarlet Pimpernel, gives us an entirely new Scarlet Pimpernel story; W. Pett Ridge a charmingly humorous and tender story of a girl who wanted "everything different;" Annie S. Swann a tale of gallant Belgium; Kate Douglas Wiggin, author of Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, a gem of a story in "Fleur-de-Lis."

In addition to these stories there are poems by Ralph Connor, the famous Canadian novelist, who has contributed a thrilling war poem entitled "Canada's Word"; Lady Sybil Grant, whose delightful series entitled "Let's Pretend" is most characteristically illustrated by Arthur Rackham, the famous illustrator of "Peter Pan;" Rudyard Kipling, who has given permission for the inclusion in this volume of his famous poem "Big Steamers;" Alfred Noyes, whose "Spell for a Fairy" is a most moving and delicate piece of work; and John Oxenham, who is represented by a poem entitled "What Can a Little Chap Do?" which will undoubtedly be quoted far and wide.

All these stories and poems are illustrated in the most elaborate manner. There are in all fourteen plates in colour by the following world famous artists: J. J. Shannon, R.A.; W. Russell Flint, A.R.W.S.; Charles Napier Hemy, R.A.; R. Talbot Kelly, R.I.; E. J. Detmold; Arthur Rackham, R.W.S.; Edmund Dulac; Norman Wilkinson, R.I.; W. B. Wollen, R.I.; Claude A. Shepperson, A.R.W.S.; A. C. Michael; Eugene Hastain; M. E. Gray; Carlton A. Smith, R.I.; and over one hundred other illustrations by C. E. Brock, H. R. Millar, Arch Webb, A. J. Gough; R. Talbot Kelly, R.I.; E. J. Detmold; Steven Spurrier, R.I.; R. J. Hartley; Arthur Rackham, R.W.S.; J. Ryam Shaw, A.

hold matters. Gravely, with the mathematical accuracy of an engineer tracing the foundation of a well-planned building, the ant-lion walks backwards, with his body dug into the sand; he turns and turns, and in this way hollows out a groove shaped like a perfect circle. Then, still moving backwards and still digging deeper and deeper into the sand, he repeats the circuit many times over, but gradually coming nearer the centre, where he arrives in the end. If any obstacle, such as a large bit of gravel, which would spoil the work, makes its appearance, the ant-lion takes it on his flat head, and, with a vigorous jerk of his neck, flings it to a distance over the edge of the hole. We should use a shovel in exactly the same way to throw out the rubbish when digging.

"The result of this labour is a sort of funnel, two inches wide and a little less in depth. For that matter, each ant-lion scoops himself out one proportioned to his size; the larger ones, the giants of the family, produce one almost big enough to hold an orange; the younger and smaller ones are content with a hollow which a walnut would fill. But, whether great funnels or modest dents, all these cavities are constructed on one and the same principle; the slope is very steep and formed of extremely loose sand; nothing, however light, can set foot upon it without producing a landslip, followed by a headlong fall.

One of Mr Claude A. Shepperson's drawings for "A Spell for a Fairy" Princess Mary's Gift Book. (Hodder and Stoughton.)

"When the work is finished, the scoundrel buries himself in the sand, right at the bottom of the funnel; his pincers alone appear outside, ever ready to snap, but nevertheless hidden as far as possible. And now the ant-lion remains completely motionless and waits; he waits for hours, for days, for weeks, if necessary, for his patience is unequalled; he waits for his dinner to come to him, as he cannot go after his dinner himself.

"Let us do as he does, and wait, very attentively. What will happen? See, an ant comes trotting along, suspecting no harm, bringing a little honey in her crop for her mates, who are working at a distance, just as the goodwife, on the stroke of noon, brings the reaper his midday meal in the fields. In her hurry, or perhaps in her heedlessness, she has not seen the precipice. She steps upon it, but only just on the edge. It makes no difference; as soon as her foot is on the perfidious slope, the sand gives way and the poor thing is dragged down. If our eyes were sharp enough, we should see signs of fierce delight betrayed by the formidable jaws at the bottom.

"Thank goodness! A microscopic bit of straw has interfered with the landslide. The fall ends in the middle of the slope; and the ant, recovering her balance, tries to scramble back to the top. The sand trickles under her feet; no matter; she goes to work with so much prudence, she so skilfully makes use of the smallest solid support, she is so careful to move sideways instead of going straight up the slope, that it looks as though the climb ought to be achieved without fresh impediment. Her knees, her delicate feelers seem atremble with excitement. One more effort, only a little effort, and the thing is done. The edge is there, close by; the ant must reach it.

"Alas, she does not reach it! Suddenly from the sky there falls upon the poor wretch, thick as hailstones, a rain of grains of sand, which, for the tiny ant, is as bad as a regular rain of pebbles. Who is the brute that takes delight in thus stoning the distressed ant, who clings in her despair now to this side, now to that, as best she may, so as not to roll to the bottom of the precipice? The brute is the ant-lion, the ruffian, lying in ambush down in his funnel. See what he is doing. He takes on his flat head a load, a shovelful of sand, and flings it in the air towards the ant, with a sudden, quick jerk of the neck, like the movement of a spring. The shovelfuls follow rapidly, one after the other.

"What can the ant do, I ask you, on the slope of that terrible trap, where the ground falls from under her in a rushing torrent, while a hail of pebbles dashes down from above? In vain she struggles, with all the pluck of despair; for each step forward she takes three back, coming nearer and nearer to the dreadful jaws that are waiting for her at the bottom of the funnel. Bruised and dazed with the stoning, she rolls over and over, right into the jaws. The jaws seize her and everything disappears in the sand; not a trace remains of the recent tragedy."

Our Special Christmas Offer for the Soldiers (see p. 687).

653/21

Ashton-under-Lyne Reporter, December 5th. 1914.

"QUEEN MARY" WORK ROOM.

New Scheme to Aid Distressed Women in Ashton.

There are plenty of people who are actually in need of help owing to the war who will not seek the aid of the Relief Committee. They are eager and willing to work, but their spirit of independence is such that they would rather starve than accept relief.

To many women, therefore, the Ashton Queen Mary Workroom, which will be run essentially on "work for wages lines," will appeal strongly. It will enable them to earn a little money honestly and industriously to tide them over a crisis in their affairs without their having to apply for relief.

Lady Aitken, who is at the head of the local scheme, has received a grant from the Queen Mary Fund to commence the work, and rooms have been taken in the United Methodist Schools, Stamford-street, and it is hoped to commence the work on Monday week, December 14th.

The work will mainly consist of remodelling and renovating old garments, which will be afterwards sent to the Ladies' Relief Committee for distribution amongst the necessitous. There will be a lady superintendent and assistant appointed, and the work will be largely educational. The total number of workers that can be employed to start with is fifty. No one under the age of 18 can be employed, or anyone in receipt of relief. All applications for employment should be made at the women's department at the Ashton Labour Exchange, on Mondays and Tuesdays (commencing next week), between the hours of 11 to 12 a.m. and 3 to 4 p.m.

It need hardly be intimated that gifts of old clothing, suitable for remodelling and renovating, will be gratefully received any afternoon at the United Methodist Schools.

Evening News, Dec: 7th. 1914.

MONEY MEANS WORK.

"Prevention of Unemployment Better Than the Cure."

"The war has hit everybody," Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer of the fund, explained to a representative of The Evening News, "but I do not think the majority of women — who, though they have had to curtail their expenses, of course, but are still able to get along fairly comfortably—realise the havoc that the war has caused in the ranks of women workers. In London alone there were as many as 40,000 unemployed at one time.

"Now, too, is the season of loosened purse-strings, and, even though there may not be very much in the purse, I feel quite sure that there is at any rate one shilling to spare."

"I should not dream, especially at the present moment, of accusing my fellow-women of carelessness, but, at the same time, there must be millions of unconsidered shillings spent on inconsiderable trifles every day; those are the shillings which we want to gather into Queen Mary's Fund for the next week."

This appeal which is being made to women for shillings to help other women is perhaps the most splendid of all the appeals to which the war has given rise. There is the full and pleasant satisfaction of knowing that not a penny will go astray or be wasted. It was Queen Mary's axiom when she inaugurated her Fund on behalf of out-of-work women that "the prevention of unemployment was better than the cure."

HOW WORK IS FOUND.

Dressmakers thrown out of employment have been set to work making shirts, orders for which factories could not cope with, and it is gratifying to know that employers of labour have, in hundreds of cases, lent their premises for such industries in order to keep their staffs together. Many experimental workrooms have been opened in London to give employment in the metoroplitan area; 350 local committees, scattered up and down the country, work in conjunction with the properly constituted authorities.

Where work on actual commercial lines cannot be found, grants are made to enable the employment of women in the manufacture of such articles as cradles, clothing and maternity outfits for poor mothers who would otherwise have to go without such necessary things.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Honorary Treasurer, The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W.

An official acknowledgment will be sent to each subscriber from Buckingham Palace.

Sunday Times, December 6th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

PRINCESS'S GIFT BOOK.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached by noon yesterday a total of £94,927.

There has been a great demand all over the country to secure early copies of the first edition of the Princess Mary's Gift Book. Over 300,000 have been sold in seven days, which represents an average of 43,000 copies a day.

Mr. James Douglas, the well-known author and journalist, writes the following appreciation of the Gift Book: "One young officer—my son—now seriously ill, is enjoying its good things. It is the first book we could persuade him to be interested in."

The actual production of the "Princess Mary's Gift Book" has given employment to over 2,500 men and women.

Through the generosity of Mr. S. Ernest Palmer, founder of the Patron's Fund Royal College of Music, the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund will publish to-morrow a stirring song entitled "Children of Britain," music by Mr. Hubert Bath, words by Mr. Alfred Noyes. Mme. Clara Butt has promised to sing it.

Daily Citizen, Dec: 7th. 1914.

WOMEN'S SHILLING WEEK

SPARE COINS FOR SISTERS OUT OF WORK.

For one week, starting from to-day, an appeal is made to every woman in the land who can possibly spare it to send one shilling to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

It is not fully realised as yet that in London alone 40,000 women were rendered workless by the war. To these and their sisters in the country the fund has come as a shining ray of hope. The schemes already approved involve an annual expenditure of over £250,000. Over 60 workrooms have been established, and many thousands of women who must otherwise have become destitute have been happily employed at fair wages.

The special appeal this week is to be in the nature of a New Year gift from women to women. It is hoped that the shillings will roll in by next Saturday, in order that the grand total may be announced by January 1.

"Every woman," writes the hon. secretry (Lady Roxburgh) and the hon. treasurer (Mrs. C. A. Pearson), "can augment this great New Year's offering to the less fortunate of her sisters, for those who feel that they are unable to afford a shilling can easily collect this sum, and, may we add, those who are able to afford more can make up for the deficiencies of others by sending several shillings."

The shillings should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, for "The Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund," at 33, Portland-place, W.

Dundee Advertiser, Dec: 7th. 1914.

THE MADAME CLARA BUTT CONCERT.

In addition to the items already announced for her programme to-morrow night Madame Clara Butt is, at the desire of Her Majesty the Queen, to sing for the first time a new song, "Children of Britain," a poem by Alfred Noyes, set to music by Hubert Bath. The song has been published with the gracious sanction of Her Majesty for the benefit of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and in order that the whole proceeds from its sale may go to that fund Mr S. Ernest Palmer (founder of the Patron's Fund, R.C.M.) has generously borne the entire cost of production of the song.

Scotsman, 7th Dec: 1914.

HER MAJESTY AND THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Her Majesty the Queen, in the midst of her many philanthropic activities, takes an especially warm interest in the work of the Queen's Work for Women Fund. A fresh proof of the Royal sympathy is afforded in the extension to the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, which administers the Queen's Fund in Scotland, of the privilege of using Her Majesty's Crown and initials upon articles turned out from the workrooms under the Committee's control.

Northern Daily Telegraph, Dec: 6th 1914. 653.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Sir,—May we, on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, make an appeal through the medium of your paper, to the women of the United Kingdom, inviting each one of them who is in a position to do so, to contribute a shilling as a New Year's offering to the fund. Over sixty workrooms have been started in various parts of the country, and in London alone employment or training is now available for several thousands of unemployed women and girls. The schemes of work and training throughout the country, and approved already, involve an annual expenditure of over £250,000. We are anxious to have all donations sent in by December 16, so as to enable us to announce the grand total in the press on New Year's Day. The knowledge that they are thereby helping to alleviate the hardships of women to whom the war has brought acute distress may tend to make those who subscribe feel that they are starting the new year well. Every woman can augment this great New Year's offering to the less fortunate of her sisters, for those who feel that they are unable to afford a shilling can easily collect this sum; and, may we add, those who are able to afford more, can make up for the deficiencies of others by sending several shillings.

ETHEL PEARSON, Hon. Treasurer.
ELEANOR ROXBURGH, Hon. Secretary.
The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.
33, Portland Place, W.

Daily Mail, Dec: 7th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached on Saturday a total of £94,927 11s. 4d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by Lady Carnarvon, £170; collected by Mayoress of Reigate, further instalment, £50; collected by Urban District Council of Ottery St. Mary, £33 16s. 2d.; Rajawella Produce Company, £26 5s.; collected by Urban District Council of Linslade, £22 19s. 5d.; "The Friends of Women's Suffrage" Department of Wolverhampton Women's Suffrage Society, per Mayor of Wolverhampton, £12 2s. 6d.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all contributions and cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund has now reached £4,042,000, and Princess Mary's Christmas Gifts Fund £120,009.

Irish Times, Dec: 7th. 1914.

QUEEN MARY'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

A series of six drawingroom concerts in aid of the above Fund will be held in Dublin during the months of December, January, and February, under the auspices of a large and influential Committee. At the first concert, to be held at Mrs. O'Carroll's, 43 Merrion square, on Wednesday evening next, Miss Mary Maguire, Miss Florence Marks, Mrs. MacMahon, Mrs. Bramble, and Mr. Percy French will be amongst the performers. The following ladies have lent their houses for the succeeding concerts:—Mrs. Maxwell Hutton, Mrs. Travers Smith, Mrs. Wisdom Hely, Lady Cowan, and Mrs. Charles Waters.

The Scotsman Dec: 8th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund last night reached a total of £95,161.

In connection with the working of the Fund, women and girls in the workrooms are required to register at the local Labour Exchange, but in future those who join a course of instruction will not be asked to re-register weekly until the training is nearly complete. Those in the workrooms who are not taking a course of lessons will now have first chance of the posts notified by the Labour Exchanges. The Committee has laid down a rule that only women unemployed as a consequence of the war may be admitted to cookery centres. The training is merely being given in place of employment. Only women who are considered suitable, and who are willing to pass through the whole course, are accepted. They are specially selected from the workrooms or from among applicants for relief.

Daily Telegraph, December 7th. 1914.

QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN

A NEW YEAR'S OFFERING.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—May we, on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, make an appeal through the medium of your paper to the women of the United Kingdom, inviting each one of them who is in a position to do so to contribute a shilling as a New Year's offering to the fund?

Over sixty work-rooms have been started in various parts of the country, and in London alone employment or training is now available for several thousands of unemployed women and girls. The schemes of work and training throughout the country, and approved already, involve an annual expenditure of over £250,000.

We are anxious to have all donations sent in by Dec. 16, so as to enable us to announce the grand total in the Press on New Year's Day.

The knowledge that they are thereby helping to alleviate the hardships of women to whom the war has brought acute distress may tend to make those who subscribe feel that they are starting the New Year well.

Every woman can augment this great New Year's offering to the less fortunate of her sisters, for those who feel that they are unable to afford a shilling can easily collect this sum; and, may we add, those who are able to afford more, can make up for the deficiencies of others by sending several shillings.—Yours faithfully,

ETHEL PEARSON, Hon. Treasurer.
ELEANOR ROXBURGH, Hon. Secretary.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund,
33, Portland-place, W., Dec. 5.

RELIEF OF SUFFERING.

As the above letter indicates, Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson and Lady Roxburgh are, for one week from to-day, making a special Christmas appeal to every woman throughout the country. They are asking every woman who has a shilling—or several shillings—to spare, to assist in carrying on the work of finding employment for those thousands of girls and women who have lost their occupation through the war.

This appeal, which is being made by women to women, for shillings to help other women, is one of the most touching to which the war has given rise. It is doubtful whether even now the general public realise the terrible amount of distress and actual want which the war has occasioned in homes which were maintained, or at any rate supported, by women workers.

When Queen Mary first inaugurated the fund the prospect was alarming. Immediately after the outbreak of war the economy which was practised even by the upper and middle classes had the result of throwing upwards of 40,000 women out of work in London alone, and this state of affairs was repeated on a proportionate scale throughout the provinces. The case of the women was pitiable, and the necessity of alleviating their distress urgent. It was met at once, and in a most practicable form, by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, which was founded, and has been steadily maintained, on the principle laid down by her Majesty, "that the prevention of unemployment is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity."

A SPECIALISED LABOUR EXCHANGE.

It was recognised from the outset that payment for work out of charitable funds would be economically wrong, and in reality produce no good effects, because it would simply displace other women workers. It was, therefore, determined that there should be no competitive work whatsoever. Instead, the situation was largely met by the institution of a highly-specialised form of labour exchange for women.

As a consequence, dressmakers thrown out of employment have been set to work making shirts, orders for which factories could not cope with, and it is gratifying to know that employers of labour have, in hundreds of cases, lent their premises for such industries in order to keep their staffs together.

The committee themselves have secured several contracts, which include 10,000 belts for the French army and 10,000 shirts weekly for the Government clothing works at Pimlico.

In addition, arrangements have been made to instruct typists out of work in the higher branches of the secretarial profession, such as accountancy and languages, a maintenance being paid while the training is in progress. Other women and girls are receiving instruction as sick-room helpers. Forewomen are being trained as cutters. A large number of factory girls have been sent to the West of England for the purpose of fruit pulping and vegetable drying, while an interesting "back to the land" experiment is being tried at Radlet for unemployed women from the East-end of London, who are now being trained in fruit-growing and horticulture.

Seven experimental work-rooms have been opened in London under the direct control of the fund as examples and illustrations to the local representative committees. These local committees have women representative sub-committees, and upon them lies the duty of providing occupation for unemployed women on lines approved by the central committee. There are already 350 local committees in various parts of the country, while sixteen of the London boroughs have already received grants from the Queen's Fund to enable them to carry on work either suggested or approved by the central committee.

SIXTY SCHEMES APPROVED.

Some estimate of the operations of the fund may be gathered from the fact that the central committee has already approved sixty schemes, which involve an expenditure of £250,000 a year.

Quite apart from these relief measures, the fund is carrying out a most useful work in the way of supervising and co-ordinating women's employment, which will be of the utmost value in days to come. Relief of distress is its main object, but where work, however non-competitive, cannot be carried on along strictly commercial lines, women are employed in the manufacture of such articles as cradles, layettes, and clothes to be distributed in homes far too poor to afford such necessaries. For instance, 1,500 cradles are being turned out in Bethnal-green.

Only those working on the central committee or the local committees can quite appreciate the terrible amount of privation which has to be met. Thousands of homes dependent on women workers are threatened with destitution this Christmas, and Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh feel that the true facts have only to be presented to those women who have still something over and above their actual needs, to secure an immediate and generous response to their appeal.

If every woman who could spare a shilling would only send it to the fund now, there would be millions of shillings to go towards bringing a little joy into thousands of stricken homes this Christmas time. Every penny goes direct, not as a charitable dole, but to provide work for some woman whereby she is enabled not only to maintain her home, but to keep her self-respect. Apart from sending a shilling herself, every woman who has time to spare is asked to collect from other women.

Subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, Queen's Work for Women Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W., who hopes that all donations may be sent in by Dec. 18, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund had reached at noon on Saturday a total of £94,927 11s 4d.

There has been a great scramble all over the country to secure early copies of the first edition of the Princess Mary's Gift Book. Over 300,000 have been sold to the reading public in seven days, which represents an average of 43,000 copies a day. The production has given employment to over 2,500 men and women.

653

The Daily Graphic, December 7th. 1914.

SHILLINGS FOR POOR SISTERS.

APPEAL BY WOMEN TO WOMEN FOR WOMEN.

QUEEN MARY'S FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY GRAPHIC.

Sir,—May we, on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, make an appeal through the medium of your paper to the women of the United Kingdom, inviting each one of them who is in a position to do so to contribute a shilling as a New Year's offering to the fund?

Over sixty work-rooms have been started in various parts of the country, and in London alone employment or training is now available for several thousands of unemployed women and girls. The schemes of work and training throughout the country, and approved already, involve an annual expenditure of over £250,000.

We are anxious to have all donations sent in by December 16th, so as to enable us to announce the grand total in the Press on New Year's Day. The knowledge that they are thereby helping to alleviate the hardships of women to whom the war has brought acute distress may tend to make those who subscribe feel that they are starting the New Year well.

Every woman can augment this great New Year's offering to the less fortunate of her sisters, for those who feel that they are unable to afford a shilling can easily collect this sum, and, we may add, those who are able to afford more can make up for the deficiencies of others by sending several shillings.—Yours faithfully,

ETHEL PEARSON, hon. treasurer.
ELEANOR ROXBURGH, hon. sec.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund,
33, Portland Place, W.

AN ALL-WOMAN MOVEMENT.

In the letter given above Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson and Lady Roxburgh, respectively hon. treasurer and hon. secretary of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, make a special Christmas appeal to every woman throughout the country. They are asking every woman who has a shilling—or several shillings—to spare to assist in carrying on the work of finding employment for those thousands of girls and women who have lost their occupation through the war. This appeal by women to women for shillings to help other women is one of the most noteworthy of all to which the war has given rise, and between now and Wednesday of next week—the date announced—Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh deserve the widest help of their sex in their charitable endeavour.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund was founded, and has been steadily maintained, on the principle laid down by Her Majesty, "that the prevention of unemployment is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity." Women's work—useful work—of all kinds is being organised and carried on by the Fund throughout the country. Thousands of homes dependent on women workers are threatened with destitution this Christmas, and Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh feel that the true facts have only to be presented to those women who have still something over and above their actual needs to secure an immediate and generous response to their appeal. All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, Queen's Work for Women Fund, 33, Portland Place, London, W.

653/22

Daily Call, December 7th. 1914.

653.

WHEN 40,000 WOMEN WERE OUT OF WORK.

ACUTE DISTRESS.

TOUCHING APPEAL TO OTHER WOMEN.

GREAT SHILLING FUND.

To the Editor, Daily Call.

Sir,—May we, on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, make an appeal through the medium of your paper to the women of the United Kingdom, inviting each one of them who is in a position to do so to contribute a shilling as a New Year's offering to the fund?

Over sixty workrooms have been started in various parts of the country, and in London alone employment or training is now available for several thousands of unemployed women and girls.

The schemes of work and training throughout the country, and approved already, involve an annual expenditure of over £250,000.

The knowledge that women would thereby help to alleviate the hardships of other women to whom the war has brought acute distress may tend to make those who subscribe feel that they are starting the New Year well.

ETHEL PEARSON, Hon. Treasurer.
ELEANOR ROXBURGH, Hon. Secretary.
The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund,
33, Portland-place, W.

AN ALARMING PROSPECT.

From to-day, for one week, it will be seen Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, are making a special Christmas appeal to every woman throughout the country.

The Daily Call desires to support this appeal in every possible way.

Every woman who has a shilling—or several shillings—to spare is asked to assist in carrying on the work of finding employment for those thousands of girls and women who have lost their occupation through the war.

This appeal, which is being made by women to women, for shillings to help other women is certainly the most touching, and, perhaps, the most splendid of all the appeals to which the war has given rise.

It is doubtful if even now the general public realise the terrible amount of distress and actual want which the war has occasioned in homes which were maintained, or at any rate supported, by women workers.

When Queen Mary, indeed, first inaugurated the fund the prospect was alarming.

Immediately after the outbreak of war the economy which was immediately practised even by the upper and middle classes had the immediate result of throwing upwards of 40,000 women out of work in London alone, and this was a state of affairs repeated on a proportionate scale throughout the provinces.

HOW SITUATION WAS MET.

But the situation was largely met by the institution of a highly specialised form of labour exchange for women.

As a consequence, dressmakers thrown out of employment have been set to work making shirts, orders for which factories could not cope with, and it is gratifying to know that employers of labour have in hundreds of cases lent their premises for such industries in order to keep their staffs together.

The committee themselves have secured several contracts, which include 10,000 belts for the French army and 10,000 shirts weekly for the Government Clothing Works at Pimlico.

In addition, arrangements have been made to instruct typists out of work in the higher branches of the secretarial profession, such as accountancy and languages, a maintenance allowance being paid while the training is in progress.

Other women and girls are receiving instruction as sick-room helpers; forewomen are being trained as cutters.

A large number of factory girls have been sent to the West of England for the purpose of fruit-pulping and vegetable drying, while a most interesting "back to the land" experiment is being tried at Radlett for unemployed women from the East-end of London, who are now being trained in fruit-growing and horticulture.

COMMITTEES ALL OVER COUNTRY.

There are already 350 local committees in various parts of the country, and some estimate of the operations of the fund may be gathered from the fact that the Central Committee has already approved sixty schemes which involve an expenditure of £250,000 a year.

Only those working on the Central Committee or the local committees can quite appreciate the terrible amount of privation which has to be met. Thousands of homes dependent on women workers are threatened with destitution this Christmas, and Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh feel that the true facts have only to be presented to those women who have still something over and above their actual needs to secure an immediate and generous response to their appeal.

If every woman who could spare a shilling would only send it to the fund now there would be millions of shillings to go towards bringing a little joy into thousands of stricken homes this Christmas time.

Apart from sending a shilling themselves, every woman who has time to spare is asked to collect shillings from other women.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, Queen's Work for Women Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W., who hopes that all donations may be sent in by December 18 in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

While the King by the tact shown so notably in the bestowal of the Garter on that modern Paladin, King Albert, has been so happily sealing the compact between the Allies, and disappointing for ever the vain German hopes of sowing dissension, Queen Mary has been pursuing at home the course of quiet usefulness that endears her to the hearts of the British people. In another part of our issue we draw attention to the needs of the Queen's "Work for Women Fund," of which Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson is the honorary treasurer. An appeal is being made for a special effort in view of the approach of Christmas. The object of the fund, as its name denotes, is to provide work for those hapless women who have been thrown out of employment through a war which inevitably hits hard and at once all those industries which supply the means of luxury.

o o o

Few people, especially few women—and it is women who are asked to make their poorer sisters' cause especially their own—realise the extent to which war has wrought havoc in the ranks of women workers. In London alone at one time there were as many as 40,000 unemployed. The Queen's practical sense at once led her to give her warm approval and support to a movement to mitigate as far as possible the terrible hardships suddenly facing a deserving and peculiarly helpless class. "Employment is better than charity," said her Majesty in a message that should be read and heeded by all. Employment on practical economic lines, free from any pauperising taint, is the object the Central Committee of the fund has had steadily in view. Already a vast amount of good has been effected, and fifty schemes have been approved which involve the expenditure of a quarter of a million a year.

o o o

If every woman who can squeeze a shilling out of her pin money or her household expenses allowance will send it to Mrs. Pearson, at 33, Portland-place, W., the result will be happiness and comfort in many homes where otherwise gloom undiluted would reign this Christmas. People are always asking what they can do to help their country in the hour of need, and it is not very easy to answer the question in most cases. But there is something everybody can do, and that is to think a little less of self and a little more of others. Giving money in any quantity does not, of course, rank with the higher kind of sacrifice

Daily News & Leader, Dec. 7th. 1914.

FOR UNEMPLOYED WOMEN.

Send a Shilling to the Queen's Fund.

WORKROOMS OPENED IN LONDON.

British women will have an opportunity this Christmas time of providing a great gift for their poorer sisters who have been thrown out of work owing to the war—the gift of employment. It will cost them very little either in time or money. All they are asked to do is to send a shilling to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, which has been inaugurated by the Queen with a view to finding employment for as many women and girls as possible.

A special appeal "from woman to woman" is being made for one week only. It is being issued by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer of the Fund, and Lady Roxburgh, hon. secretary. All donations should be forwarded to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson at 33, Portland-place, W.

The Queen's Advice.

"The motto of the Fund is 'Better than Charity,'" said Mrs. Pearson, in an interview with a "Daily News" representative. "Those were the Queen's words in making this appeal to the women of Great Britain to help their less fortunate sisters through this Fund.

"We want all women who can spare a shilling to help in this national work. Those who cannot afford a shilling should do their best to collect one, and send it along not later than Dec. 16, as we are anxious to announce the total in the Press on New Year's Day as a New Year's gift to poor working women. A shilling is suggested as a convenient sum, but there is no reason why anyone should not send more; in fact, the more money we receive the more employment we shall be able to provide. People have little idea of the distress which has been caused among women workers by the war.

"The Fund is now employing numbers of women in its special workrooms, and also keeping open some hundreds of other workrooms which would otherwise be closed. The case of each woman is investigated, and she is given the kind of work for which she is best suited. Some are being trained to cook and act as sick-room helps, while a number of factory girls are engaged in fruit-pulping, bottling unsweetened fruit, and drying vegetables.

London Workrooms.

"Many experimental workrooms have been opened in London to find work for women in the metropolitan area, and 350 local committees in various parts of the country work in conjunction with the central authority. Where work on commercial lines cannot be found efforts are made to provide employment in the manufacture of such articles as cradles, clothing, and maternity outfits for poor mothers who would otherwise have to go without such necessary things.

"I earnestly appeal to the women of England," added Mrs. Pearson, "to help us forward in this practical scheme for finding work for women this winter."

653/23

and girls.

The schemes of work and training throughout the country, and approved already, involve an annual expenditure of over £250,000.

The knowledge that women would thereby help to alleviate the hardships of other women to whom the war has brought acute distress may tend to make those who subscribe feel that they are starting the New Year well.

ETHEL PEARSON, Hon. Treasurer.
ELEANOR ROXBURGH, Hon. Secretary.
The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund,
33, Portland-place, W.

AN ALARMING PROSPECT.

From to-day, for one week, it will be seen Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, are making a special Christmas appeal to every woman throughout the country.

The Daily Call desires to support this appeal in every possible way.

Every woman who has a shilling—or several shillings—to spare is asked to assist in carrying on the work of finding employment for those thousands of girls and women who have lost their occupation through the war.

This appeal, which is being made by women to women, for shillings to help other women is certainly the most touching, and, perhaps, the most splendid of all the appeals to which the war has given rise.

It is doubtful if even now the general public realise the terrible amount of distress and actual want which the war has occasioned in homes which were maintained, or at any rate supported, by women workers.

When Queen Mary, indeed, first inaugurated the fund the prospect was alarming.

Immediately after the outbreak of war the economy which was immediately practised even by the upper and middle classes had the immediate result of throwing upwards of 40,000 women out of work in London alone, and this was a state of affairs repeated on a proportionate scale throughout the provinces.

HOW SITUATION WAS MET.

But the situation was largely met by the institution of a highly specialised form of labour exchange for women.

As a consequence, dressmakers thrown out of employment have been set to work making shirts, orders for which factories could not cope with, and it is gratifying to know that employers of labour have in hundreds of cases lent their premises for such industries in order to keep their staffs together.

The committee themselves have secured several contracts, which include 10,000 belts for the French army and 10,000 shirts weekly for the Government Clothing Works at Pimlico.

In addition, arrangements have been made to instruct typists out of work in the higher branches of the secretarial profession, such as accountancy and languages, a maintenance allowance being paid while the training is in progress.

bringing a little joy into thousands of stricken homes this Christmas time.

Apart from sending a shilling themselves, every woman who has time to spare is asked to collect shillings from other women.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, Queen's Work for Women Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W., who hopes that all donations may be sent in by December 18 in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

While the King by the tact shown so notably in the bestowal of the Garter on that modern Paladin, King Albert, has been so happily sealing the compact between the Allies, and disappointing for ever the vain German hopes of sowing dissension, Queen Mary has been pursuing at home the course of quiet usefulness that endears her to the hearts of the British people. In another part of our issue we draw attention to the needs of the Queen's "Work for Women Fund," of which Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson is the honorary treasurer. An appeal is being made for a special effort in view of the approach of Christmas. The object of the fund, as its name denotes, is to provide work for those hapless women who have been thrown out of employment through a war which inevitably hits hard and at once all those industries which supply the means of luxury.

o o o

Few people, especially few women—and it is women who are asked to make their poorer sisters' cause especially their own—realise the extent to which war has wrought havoc in the ranks of women workers. In London alone at one time there were as many as 40,000 unemployed. The Queen's practical sense at once led her to give her warm approval and support to a movement to mitigate as far as possible the terrible hardships suddenly facing a deserving and peculiarly helpless class. "Employment is better than charity," said her Majesty in a message that should be read and heeded by all. Employment on practical economic lines, free from any pauperising taint, is the object the Central Committee of the fund has had steadily in view. Already a vast amount of good has been effected, and fifty schemes have been approved which involve the expenditure of a quarter of a million a year.

o o o

If every woman who can squeeze a shilling out of her pin money or her household expenses allowance will send it to Mrs. Pearson, at 33, Portland-place, W., the result will be happiness and comfort in many homes where otherwise gloom undiluted would reign this Christmas. People are always asking what they can do to help their country in the hour of need, and it is not very easy to answer the question in most cases. But there is something everybody can do, and that is to think a little less of self and a little more of others. Giving money in any quantity does not, of course, rank with the higher kind of sacrifice the times call for. Those of us men who are too old, too fat, too feeble, too lazy, or too cowardly to give our own bodies have no right to plume ourselves on our patriotism on the ground of a few banknotes or a cheque sent to some fund. The best we can do in that line is only the minimum we ought to do. The more shame if we fail to do even that.

woman" is being made for one week only. It is being issued by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer of the Fund, and Lady Roxburgh, hon. secretary. All donations should be forwarded to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson at 33, Portland-place, W.

The Queen's Advice.

"The motto of the Fund is 'Better than Charity,'" said Mrs. Pearson, in an interview with a "Daily News" representative. "Those were the Queen's words in making this appeal to the women of Great Britain to help their less fortunate sisters through this Fund.

"We want all women who can spare a shilling to help in this national work. Those who cannot afford a shilling should do their best to collect one, and send it along not later than Dec. 16, as we are anxious to announce the total in the Press on New Year's Day as a New Year's gift to poor working women. A shilling is suggested as a convenient sum, but there is no reason why anyone should not send more; in fact, the more money we receive the more employment we shall be able to provide. People have little idea of the distress which has been caused among women workers by the war.

"The Fund is now employing numbers of women in its special workrooms, and also keeping open some hundreds of other workrooms which would otherwise be closed. The case of each woman is investigated, and she is given the kind of work for which she is best suited. Some are being trained to cook and act as sick-room helps, while a number of factory girls are engaged in fruit-pulping, bottling unsweetened fruit, and drying vegetables.

London Workrooms.

"Many experimental workrooms have been opened in London to find work for women in the metropolitan area, and 350 local committees in various parts of the country work in conjunction with the central authority. Where work on commercial lines cannot be found efforts are made to provide employment in the manufacture of such articles as cradles, clothing, and maternity outfits for poor mothers who would otherwise have to go without such necessary things.

"I earnestly appeal to the women of England," added Mrs. Pearson, "to help us forward in this practical scheme for finding work for women this winter."

653/23

Standard, Dec: 7th. 1914.

653/24 653

THE QUEEN'S APPEAL.

It is a pleasing as well as a bounden duty to draw special attention to the appeal made this morning on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. This benevolent and well-considered endeavour to bring solace and assistance to working women for whom the war might otherwise mean a long spell of bitterly hard times should command the warm sympathy of the nation. The class for whose benefit the fund was instituted found itself menaced, when the crisis burst on the country, with a stroke of evil fortune almost as hard to bear as any that might befall British womankind if the enemy landed on our shores. A sudden loss of employment, complete in many cases, would have deprived thousands of women and girls, dependent wholly or partly on their own industry for a livelihood, of their main safeguard against destitution in various degrees of intensity. It would be painful to dwell on the most deplorable consequences attendant on such an interruption of the sources to which so many of the weaker sex had learnt to look with increased confidence, some for the bare necessities of life and others for a slender addition to them. But unless something could be done it was inevitable that these sources of employment for women would be obstructed, if not altogether cut off. The stern economy imposed on the public at large at once lessened the demand for the produce of women's industry and skill. Working women of almost every description soon began to feel the pinch. Had this social peril been left to grow unchecked a vast number of deserving people would before long have been reduced to such a state of penury and affliction that only measures of relief on an heroic scale could avert a grievous reproach to the national conscience.

If all the various movements that have been started with the object of relieving distress caused by the war could show a report of progress as satisfactory and as promising as that already achieved by the organisers of the Queen's. "Work for Women" Fund the apprehension of a possible waste of energy through the duplication and overlapping of efforts might be comfortably dismissed. Nor should we in that case be at all afraid lest while some kinds of distress were receiving more than their share of attention others were overlooked. That in the organisation and administration of the Queen's Fund these mistakes have been avoided is manifest from the facts given in the appeal we have received from Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the honorary treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the honorary secretary. How urgent was the need for judicious but strenuous intervention may be inferred from the statement that in London alone upwards of 40,000 women were thrown out of work immediately after the outbreak of war. It was much the same in the provinces. There and in the capital of the Empire the case of the women was pitiable. But it was no less certain that indiscriminate or misapplied assistance would do almost as much harm as inadequate measures of relief. An attempt, again, to meet the difficulty by devising a system of purely pecuniary aid would have been a fatal blunder, however well intended. Largesse on a grand scale was out of the question. Charity in this form would be doubly objectionable. It would ask too much in these times of the giver, and it would as often as not be morally detrimental to the recipient. But the Queen, when she gave her name and patronage to the fund, laid down the sound principle that the prevention of unemployment is better than its relief, and employment is better than charity in the conventional sense of the term.

On this sane principle the Managing Committee have proceeded. A fair notion may be obtained of the magnitude of the machinery set in motion from the statement that three hundred and fifty local committees are working under the guiding eye of the central authorities and that sixty schemes, mainly for keeping women and girls employed, have been examined and approved. A sort of labour exchange for women has been established. Where certain classes, such as dressmakers, are in straits owing to the greater thrift practised by the well-to-do, other suitable employment is found for them. Technical instruction is given to those who would be helpless without it. Factory girls turned away from the machine-room have been sent to the West of England, where a probably healthier, if not as lucrative, occupation is open to them in the fruit and vegetable business. Not a few women have left the metropolis to try their hands at fruit growing and horticulture in Hertfordshire. But, of course, money is wanted. The sixty schemes spoken of alone involve an expenditure of £250,000 a year. In a touching, and what, we trust, will prove a successful, appeal, the secretary and treasurer ask for a shilling from every woman in the kingdom who can spare it, and they particularly beg that a few millions of shillings may be contributed between now and December 16, in time, that is, to bring a little light and hope into thousands of darkened homes at Christmas.

Daily Sketch, Dec: 8th. 1914.

FOR WOMEN OUT OF WORK.

How To Help The Shilling Week Of The Queen's Fund.

Women are the worst sufferers by war.

Not only, in this most appalling of all wars, are they losing their nearest and dearest, the family breadwinners—husbands or lovers, brothers or sons—but they are being thrown defenceless, oftentimes almost resourceless, upon the world.

In numerous cases women have been thrown cut of work and find it exceedingly difficult to secure a living through the extent to which the social and industrial life of the community has been thrown out of gear as an immediate consequence of the war.

Now, the object of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is to set up a practical organisation that may provide work for workless women and girls, so that these may fend for themselves without becoming recipients of charity.

Money subscribed to the Queen's Fund is devoted to assisting those schemes of employment for women which are devised or approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

There are also steadying influences at work, in addition to the schemes, costing money. The Central Committee on Women's Employment gives advice as to the placing of large contracts in the most needy districts, and sees that the contracts are distributed where the workers will be best benefited.

With a view to helping forward the Queen's Fund a "Shilling Week" Campaign has been evolved, so that everyone, however hard hit by the war, could contribute something. You may send a shilling, or, if you are one of the fortunate, many shillings; on the other hand, if you are a little young person whose pocket money is your all, just spare a penny or two of it, and collect the rest from your friends until you have a shilling, or several shillings.

Please send all subscriptions to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, who is the hon. treasurer for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, at 33, Portland place, W.

Star, Dec: 8th. 1914.

YOU CAN HELP TOO.

Postal Order Offerings for "Work for Women" Fund.

Mrs. Brownson went into a post-office the other morning and asked for a shilling postal order. As she waited for her change Mrs. Fitsmith, a friend of hers, came in.

Mrs. Fitsmith eyed the postal order, and her friend smiled.

"This is my little bit," she explained. "I have cut down the household expenses during this week as much as I can, and this morning I spent a shilling's worth less so that I might get this order to send along to one of these war funds that is doing specially good work."

"They are all doing that. Which one is getting your shilling?"

"It is Queen Mary's Fund. I know of a case personally where they practically saved a home. My housemaid's sister is a widow, with two children, and worked in a factory of some sort. When war broke out all the hands were discharged, and this poor little soul—a thoroughly hard-working and deserving creature—at the end of a week or two was practically starving. Somehow her case got looked into by this Queen Mary's "Work for Women" Fund, and within two days she was given employment which brings her in as much as she was earning before."

Mrs. Fitsmith raised her eyebrows, and said: "Yes, but who pays her wages?"

"They are paid out of the money collected by the fund. It doesn't believe in charity, and for every penny it spends in wages it gets a full return in work. That is the best of it. They are asking now for a shilling to be sent by December 16 next as a sort of New Year's offering. And this is my shilling."

She folded it up, and slipped it into an envelope already addressed and stamped. Her friend was impressed.

"That is the sort of work that is needed, Mrs. Brownson. I am going to follow your example. I will have a shilling postal order, too, please" (this to the girl behind the counter). "Will you let me copy down the address from your envelope?" and she wrote on a slip of paper—Honorary Treasurer, Queen Mary's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W.

Daily News & Leader, Dec: 8th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

Appeal to Schoolgirls to Give Their Pocket-money.

If every schoolgirl in the United Kingdom went without pocket-money for one week the amount saved would be a surprisingly large sum. There must be thousands of schools where the average is a shilling a head, and usually that shilling is spent on cakes or chocolates, or more or less useless trifles. This week a special "Shilling" appeal is being made for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Why, it is asked, should not the schoolgirls help?

Queen Mary inaugurated this fund to provide employment for women thrown out of work by the war. Where regular work cannot be found, women have been set to make cradles and warm clothes for babies whose mothers cannot afford such comforts, or in some other way they have been enabled to earn the money that means so much to them.

Many schoolgirls have contented themselves with grumbling because they are not men and cannot help—here is their chance to fight an enemy which is as real as Germany. Every shilling helps to kill unemployment, and it is unemployment that is killing thousands of women.

So this week the schoolgirls are asked to spend their pocket-money on postal orders—those who have less can club together to make up a shilling—and send them to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W.

Daily Chronicle, Dec: 8th. 1914.

SPECTRE OF WANT AT CHRISTMAS.

APPEAL TO WOMEN BY WOMEN FOR WOMEN.

SHILLING SCHEME TO FIND WORK FOR WORKLESS.

Throughout this week Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, are making a special Christmas appeal to every woman throughout the country.

They are asking every woman who has a shilling, or more, to spare to assist in carrying on the work of finding employ ment for thousands of girls and women who have lost their occupation owing to the war

This appeal, which is being made by women to women, for shillings to help other women, is certainly one of the most touching and most commendable of all the appeals to which the war has given rise. It is doubtful if even now the general public realise the terrible amount of distress and actual want which the war has occasioned in homes which were maintained, or, at any rate, supported, by women workers.

When Queen Mary inaugurated the fund the prospect was already alarming.

On the outbreak of war the economy which was immediately practised by the upper and middle classes had the result of throwing upwards of 40,000 women out of work in London alone; and this was a state of affairs repeated on a proportionate scale throughout the provinces.

The case of the women was pitiable and the necessity of alleviating their distress urgent. It was met at once, and in a most practical form, by the Queen's Work for Women Fund, which was founded, and has been steadily maintained, on the principle laid down by her Majesty, "that the pre vention of unemployment is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity"

NO COMPETITIVE WORK.

It was recognised from the outset that payment for work out of charitable funds would be economically wrong, and in reality produce no good effects, because it would simply displace other women workers. It was therefore determined that there should be no competitive work whatsoever.

Instead, the situation was largely met by the institution of a highly specialised form of labour exchange for women.

As a consequence, dressmakers thrown out of employment have been set to work making shirts—on orders with which factories could not cope—and it is gratify ing to know that employers of labour have, in hundreds of cases, lent their premises for such industries in order to keep their staffs together

The committee themselves have secured several contracts, which include 10,000 belts for the French army and 10,000 shirts weekly for the Government Clothing Works at Pimlico.

In addition, arrangements have been made to instruct typists out of work in the higher branches of the secretarial profession, such as accountancy and languages, a maintenance allowance being made while training is in progress. Other women and girls are receiving instruction as sick-room helpers. Forewomen are being trained as cutters.

A large number of factory girls have been sent to the West of England for the purpose of fruit pulping and vegetable drying, while a "back to the land" experiment is being tried at Redlett for unemployed women from the East-end of London, who are now being trained in fruit-growing and horticulture.

Seven experimental workrooms have been opened in London under the direct control of the fund, as examples and illustrations of the local representative committee.

There are already 350 local committees in various parts of the country, while sixteen of the London boroughs have already received grants from the Queen's fund to enable them to carry on work either suggested or approved by the central committee.

Some estimate of the operations of the fund may be gathered from the fact that the central committee has already approved 60 schemes, involving an expenditure of £250,000 a year.

Quite apart from these relief measures the fund is carrying out a most useful work in the way of supervising and co-ordinating women's employment, which will be of the utmost value in days to come.

Relief of distress, however, is its main object, but where work, however non-competitive, cannot be carried on on strictly commercial lines, women are employed in the manufacture of such articles as cradles, layettes and clothes to be distributed in homes far too poor to afford such necessaries.

As an instance, it may be stated that 1,500 cradles are being turned out in Bethnal Green.

Much privation has still to be met, however. Thousands of homes dependent on women workers are threatened with destitution this Christmas, and Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh feel that the true facts have only to be presented to those women who have still something over and above their actual needs, to secure an immediate and generous response to their appeal.

If every woman who could spare a shilling would send it to the fund now, there would be millions of shillings to go towards bringing a little joy into thousands of stricken homes.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. Pearson, at 33, Portland place, W. It is hoped that all donations may be sent in by December 18, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

Northern Daily Telegraph, Dec: 8th. 1914.

WOMEN IN DISTRESS.

The hardships of the war fall more heavily on women than on men. The men go out to fight, and run the risk of being killed; but while they are fighting they at least are fed well and clothed warmly. But the women who have been thrown out of employment have to starve and go about in rags, unless means are found to help them. There are tens of thousands of such women in this country at the moment, and their number is increasing daily. They do not want charity; they want work. Such work is being found for them by Queen Mary's "Work for Women" Fund, the aim of which is not only the relief of distress, but its prevention. When, upon careful investigation, a woman is found to have lost her employment on account of the war, she is given sewing or other work and paid for it at a fair rate of wages. Where the articles and garments are suitable for the purpose, they are, when finished, given away to those who really need them, but who are unable to pay for them. All donations should be forwarded to Mrs C. Arthur Pearson, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and should arrive not later than December 16, which will enable the Work for Women Fund to announce the grand total in the press on New Year's Day.

Monmouthshire Evg. Post, December 8th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

Subscriptions to Local Fund.

A sub committee has been formed under the chairmanship of the Mayoress of Newport to undertake the provision of work for women who may be out of employment in consequence of the war, and, as far as possible, to prevent unemployment among women.

Subscriptions towards the local fund are earnestly asked for to enable the work to be successfuly carried on, and may be sent to Mr. W. T. Duke Williams, National Provincial Bank of England, Newport, hon. treasurer; or to Mr. G. P. Mitchell Innes, Town Hall, Newport, hon. secretary.

Orders for work and gifts of material will be a great assistance in achieving the objects of the sub-committee, and may be sent to the hon. secretary. All subscriptions will be acknowledged in the Press.

	£	s.	d.
Total acknowledged	221	16	0

653/25 653.

Morning Post, Dec: 8th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£95,161 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £95,161 18s. 6d. Yesterday's subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Collected in Eton College (per Mr. E. C. Austin Leigh)	70	4	6
Result of Two Special Matinées given by Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay at the Little Theatre	40	0	0
Half proceeds of a Concert given by the Girls of the Nuneaton High School for Girls	18	13	6
Collections received from the United Methodist Church Sunday Schools in the Nottingham District	11	15	4
Meltham Local Distress Fund	10	0	0

For one week Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary of the Fund, are making a special Christmas appeal to every woman throughout the country. They are asking every woman who has a shilling—or several shillings—to spare to assist in carrying on the work of finding employment for those thousands of girls and women who have lost their occupation through the war. This appeal, which is being made by women to women, for shillings to help other women, is certainly of the most touching character. It is doubtful if even now the general public realise the amount of distress and actual want which the war has occasioned in homes maintained, or at any rate supported, by women workers. When the Queen inaugurated the Fund the prospect was alarming. Immediately after the outbreak of hostilities the economy which was immediately enforced, even by the upper and middle classes, had the immediate result of throwing upwards of 40,000 women out of work in London. Only those working on the Central Committee or the Local Committees can quite appreciate the amount of privation which has to be met. If every woman who can spare a shilling would only send it to the Fund now there would be millions of shillings to go towards bringing a little joy into thousands of stricken homes at Christmastide.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Morning Advertiser, Dec: 8th. 1914.

HELPING THE WOMAN WORKER.

AN APPEAL TO OTHER WOMEN.

The war has exacted its toll from the ranks of the women workers in a particularly cruel form; it has reduced thousands of homes dependent on women's work and energy not only to hardship, but to actual starvation. In London alone 40,000 women were thrown out of employment at the beginning of the war. This peculiarly sad form of distress has been met and dealt with by the splendid labours of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

It is worked entirely on the principle laid down by Her Majesty, that the "prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity." In the first place it has succeeded by a systematic distribution of work in keeping open many workshops which would otherwise be closed. Further, it has opened many more where the work is of such a nature that it cannot result in displacing women elsewhere. Some idea of the scope of the fund, indeed, may be gathered from the fact that the central body has already approved upwards of 50 schemes suggested by the branches scattered up and down the country, and that the outlay to be met during the coming twelve months already amounts to a quarter of a million.

Additional funds are, therefore, urgently needed, and Mrs. Pearson (the hon. treasurer) and Lady Roxburgh (the hon. secretary) have evolved the happy idea of appealing this week to all women throughout the country to help their fellow-women in distress. It is felt that if only those women who can still spare something realise the full extent of the hardship and privation there must be in thousands of homes supported by women workers this Christmas the response will be instantaneous and generous.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, W. This special appeal practically closes on Sunday next, December 13, and Mrs. Pearson expresses the hope that all subscriptions may be sent in not later than December 16 in order that the total may be announced on New Year's-day.

653/26

Sussex Daily News, December 8th. 1914.

Queen's Work for Women Fund.

The number of special funds that manage to reach very creditable proportions is amazing. It increases every day, and the figures of the aggregate of benevolent effort in connection with the war, if they could be obtained, would probably be staggering. Another "shilling week" opened to-day. The supply of shillings to be had for the asking appears to be illimitable, and now the Queen's Work for Women Fund is appealing for its share. Certainly no fund has a better claim. To deal with 40,000 women rendered workless in London alone was no small undertaking, and I am told that the annual expenditure works out at over £250,000. There are more than sixty workrooms now in hand. But the special idea of "shilling week" is that there shall be a New Year gift "from women to women." The mere man, therefore, will not be asked to part with any siller in this direction. He will not escape, though. The trade unionists are making a special effort on behalf of their comrades in Belgium. The plight of the refugee has made a direct appeal to the popular imagination, but there are seven million people destitute in the devastated country whose position is far worse.

Daily Telegraph, Dec: 8th. 1914.

QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL APPEAL.

Thousands of homes dependent on women's work and energy have been reduced by the war not only to hardship but to actual starvation. In London alone 40,000 women were thrown out of employment at the beginning of hostilities. This distress has been met and dealt with by the splendid labours of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

The Fund is worked entirely on the principle laid down by her Majesty, that the "prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity." In the first place, it has succeeded by a systematic distribution of work in keeping open many workshops which would otherwise be closed. Further, it has opened many more where the work is of such a nature that it cannot result in displacing women elsewhere.

Some idea of the scope of the Fund may be gathered from the fact that the central body has already approved upwards of fifty schemes suggested by the branches scattered up and down the country, and that the outlay to be met during the coming twelve months already amounts to a quarter of a million.

Additional funds are therefore urgently needed, and Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburghe, the hon. secretary, have evolved the happy idea of appealing this week to all women throughout the country to help their fellow-women in distress.

It is felt that if only these women who can still spare something realise the full extent of the hardship and privation there must be in thousands of homes supported by women workers this Christmas, the response will be instantaneous and generous. All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, W.

This special appeal practically closes on Sunday next, Dec. 13, and Mrs. Pearson expresses the hope that all subscriptions may be sent in not later than Dec. 16, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund reached last night a total of £95,161. Included in yesterday's contributions were:

Collected in Eton College (per Mr. E. C Austin Leigh), £70 4s 6d; Result of Two Special Matinées given by Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay at the Little Theatre, £40; Half Proceeds of a Concert given by the Girls of the Nuneaton High School for Girls, £18 13s 6d; Collections received from United Methodist Church Sunday Schools in the Nottingham District, £11 15s 4d; Meltham Local Distress Fund, £10.

Belfast News Letter, Dec: 8th. 1914.

When Queen Mary gave her name to the "Work for Women" movement it was because she had expert knowledge of the terrible amount of distress which the war was likely to produce among single women earning their own living in great cities like London. Accomplished women who have taken their degrees, specialists in one form of work or another, as well as any number of secretaries have lost their employment since the war. Their little savings quickly come to an end, and then they are face to face with starvation. Queen Mary, therefore, did good work when she identified herself with a movement to grapple with this social question. Training for the women where necessary is provided, and, in the Queen's words, "the object is not to relieve unemployment, but to prevent it." A Conservative Women's Society, working on parallel lines, is founding a hostel for the reception of necessitous professional women until they can get new work.

Daily Citizen, 8th. Dec: 1914

THE QUEEN'S 'SHILLING.'

SPECIAL WEEK OF HELP FOR WOMEN WORKERS.

From the women workers of Britain the war has exacted its toll in a particularly cruel form—it has reduced thousands of homes dependent on women's work and energy not only to hardship but to actual starvation. In London alone 40,000 women were thrown out of employment at the beginning of the war.

This peculiarly sad form of distress has been met and dealt with by the splendid labours of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, which has succeeded by a systematic distribution of work in keeping open many workshops which would otherwise be closed. Further, it has opened many more where the work is of such a nature that it cannot result in displacing women elsewhere. The central body has already approved upwards of 50 schemes suggested by the branches scattered up and down the country, and the outlay to be met during the coming 12 months already amounts to £250,000.

Additional funds are therefore urgently needed, and Mrs. Pearson, the honorary treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the honorary secretary, have evolved the happy idea of appealing this week to all women throughout the country to help their fellow women in distress with a minimum donation of one shilling each. All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, honorary treasurer, The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, W.

The special appeal closes on Sunday next, December 13, and Mrs. Pearson expresses the hope that all subscriptions may be sent in not later than December 16, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

Northern Daily Telegraph December 9th. 1914.

QUEEN MARY'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The disposition shown in some quarters to criticise the benevolent public because the Queen's Work for Women Fund has not yet reached the point of success originally anticipated is not quite fair to that very large section of the community. All who have had personal experience of the raising of the various special war funds are aware that the lack of enthusiasm in giving to the Queen's fund from the very beginning has largely been due to the idea that its organisers were obsessed by the notion that the only women workers seriously to be considered were employed in factories, workshops, and other large establishments. People of the middle class—and these accustomed to be the best givers in times of stress—were aware, however, that a very great deal of hardship would fall because of the war upon the daughters of tradesfolk and the less well-to-do professional men employed as governesses, private teachers, secretaries, and typists. Her Majesty, it is said, perceived this earlier than those associated with her in the movement, and matters are different now; but it will need effective whipping-up to overtake and dispel the earliest popular impression.

Birmingham Post, December 8th. 1914. 653.

Queen's Work for Women Fund.

The disposition shown in some quarters here to-day to criticise the benevolent public because the Queen's Work for Women Fund has not yet reacned the point of success originally anticipated is not quite fair to that very large section of the community. All who have had personal experience of the raising of the various special war funds are aware that the lack of enthusiasm in giving to the Queen's fund from the very beginning has largely been due to the idea that its organisers were obsessed by the notion that the only women workers seriously to be considered were employed in factories, workshops, and other large establishments. People of the middle-class—and these accustomed to be the best givers in times of stress—were aware, however, that a very great deal of hardship would fall because of the war upon the daughters of tradesfolk and the less well-to-do professional men employed as governesses, private teachers, secretaries, and typists. These are the most difficult to assist, not only because they are scattered units, but owing to their shrinking from asking aid; and if the organisers of the Queen's fund had made it clear from the beginning that they understood the middle-class problem as thoroughly as the working-class they would have met much greater success. Her Majesty, it is said, perceived this earlier than those associated with her in the movement, and matters are different now; but it will need effective whipping-up to overtake and dispel the earliest popular impression.

Daily Mirror. Dec: 8th. 1914.

Women's Silver Bullets.

Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson reminds me that to-day is the second day of the great shilling appeal for the Work for Women Fund. Every woman in the country is asked to send a shilling to the fund in order to provide work for the women of our soldiers who are left behind. Now, if every woman, every day of this week, would spare a shilling, our brave defenders on land and sea would have the satisfaction of knowing that the future welfare of their wives, sweethearts and little children was assured.

Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson.

The Best Gift.

We are all thinking what Christmas gifts we can send to our soldiers and sailors. This will be the best and greatest Christmas gift of all—the knowledge that their loved ones at home, instead of having to rely on charity, have good, honest, healthy work to do. Let the men know that their women are in no danger of suffering.

Fire a Shot.

You are not confined to one shilling a day. You can send as many shillings as you like. So every time you think of the brave fellows at the front go into the nearest post office and send a postal order for a shilling to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, 33, Portland-place, W. Every shilling is a shot fired at the enemy.

Dundee Courier, Dec: 9th. 1914.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund last night reached a total of £95,161. The Scottish subscriptions to the fund amount to £1608 13s 6d, last week's subscriptions including a donation of £300 from Mrs Mackintosh of Mackintosh, Moy Hall, Inverness, and a second contribution of £200 from the Scottish Teachers' Fund for War Relief.

Glasgow Record,
Dec: 8th. 1914.

SPARE SHILLINGS.

THE QUEENS "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND APPEAL.

The war has exacted its toll from the ranks of the women workers in a particularly cruel form. It has reduced thousands of homes dependent on woman's work and energy not only to hardships, but to actupal starvation. In London alone 40,000 women were thrown out of employment at the beginning of the war.

This peculiarly sad form of distress has been met and dealt with by the splendid labours of the Queens "Work for Women" Fund. It is worked entirely on the principle laid down by her Majesty, that the "prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity."

In the first place it has succeeded, by a systematic distribution of work, in keeping open many workshops which would otherwise be closed.

Further, it has opened many more where the work is of such a nature that it cannot result in displacing women elsewhere.

Some idea of the scope of the fund indeed may be gathered from the fact that the central body has already approved of upwards of 50 schemes suggested by the branches scattered up and down the country, and that the outlay to be met during the coming twelve months already amounts to a quarter of a million.

Additional funds are, therefore, urgently needed, and Mrs. Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary, have evolved the happy idea of appealing this week to all women throughout the country to help their fellow women in distress.

It is felt that if only these women, who can still spare something, realise the full extent of the hardship and privation there must be in thousands of homes, supported by women workers, this Christmas, the response will be instantaneous and generous.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, the Queens "Work for Women" Fund, 33 Portland Place, London W.

This special appeal practically closes on Sunday next, December 13, and Mrs. Pearson expresses the hope that all subscriptions may be sent in not later than December 16, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

Glasgow Record.
Dec: 9th. 1914

WORK, NOT CHARITY.

THE METHOD OF QUEEN MARY'S FUND.

On the principle that the "prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity," the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has already succeeded in bringing relief to thousands of women and girls thrown out of employment by the war.

So great, however, have the undertakings of the Fund become—already 50 schemes, involving an annual expenditure of a quarter of a million have been approved—that fresh funds are necessary.

Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the Hon. Treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the Hon. Secretary, are, therefore, making this week a special appeal to every woman in the country who can either spare a shilling or shillings or who can undertake the task of collecting shillings from others.

It is felt that this special appeal to women on behalf of women must have a marked effect at this season of the year, when it is realised that but for the labours of the Fund thousands of women and girls would otherwise be left penniless and starving at Christmas-time.

Moreover, it should be understood that the funds are not distributed in promiscuous charity, but are wholly devoted to paying for work of a non-competitive nature.

Much, too, has been done to relieve distress by a system of highly specialised labour exchange. Thus, for instance, contracts for shirts, and so on, with which the manufacturers who secured them could not cope, have been in part transferred to big dressmaking firms, who would otherwise have been compelled to dismiss their staffs.

Apart from this, women have been set to work at cradle-making and are being trained as cooks, sick-room helps, and so on.

All contributions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33 Portland Place, London. This special appeal practically closes on Sunday next, December 13, and subscriptions should be sent in not later than December 16 in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

Daily Mail,
Dec: 10th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

WHAT THE QUEEN'S FUND IS AND HOW IT OPERATES.

From many communications received there obviously exists a considerable misunderstanding about the Work for Women Fund.

Some weeks after the National Relief Fund was inaugurated by the Prince of Wales it became evident that the provision of work for women was an urgent necessity. For this reason the Queen started a special fund to be devoted to providing employment for women unemployed through the war.

The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which Lady Crewe is chairman and Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. secretary, was thereupon appointed by Mr. Herbert Samuel, with the approval of the Queen, to devise, initiate, and supervise the necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the Committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies the final responsibility for the expenditure rests.

All the money collected in her Majesty's name by the Queen's Work for Women Fund (and its council), of which Lady Roxburgh is the hon. secretary and Mrs. C. A. Pearson the hon. treasurer, is handed to the National Relief Fund, and can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women.

The Queen's co-operation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of the money to finance the schemes. All suggestions, therefore, for employing or helping women should be sent to the hon. secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment at 8, Grosvenor-place, S.W., and not to Buckingham Palace, while contributions should, as announced, be sent to the hon. treasurer of the Queen's Work for Women Fund at 33, Portland-place, W.

Applications for employment or for help for individual women should be addressed to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town Hall or Urban District Office in the locality in which the applicant resides.

Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the Secretary, Professional Classes Sub-Committee, Board of Education, Whitehall, S.W.

Glasgow Herald,
Dec: 11th 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Fund is administered in Scotland only through the agency of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment, as appointed by the Scottish Advisory Committee. The treasurer for Scotland is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, and communications regarding the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

A sale of work in aid of the Queen's Work for Women Fund was held yesterday in the Picture Gallery of Paxton House, Berwickshire, the residence of Colonel and Mrs Milne Home. Woollen goods and comforters had all been made by Mrs Tennant, wife of Mr Tennant, Under-Secretary for War and member for Berwickshire. Mrs Tennant said the scheme for providing employment for women and girls involved an expenditure of £200,000 annually. The administraters of the fund were supplying 10,000 shirts per week for the Army.

Monmouthshire Reg. Post. 11.12.14

WORK FOR WOMEN.

Subscriptions to Local Fund.

A sub committee has been formed under the chairmanship of the Mayoress of Newport to undertake the provision of work for women who may be out of employment in consequence of the war, and, as far as possible, to prevent unemployment among women.

Subscriptions towards the local fund are earnestly asked for to enable the work to be successfuly carried on, and may be sent to Mr. W. T. Duke Williams, National Provincial Bank of England, Newport, hon. treasurer; or to Mr. G. P. Mitchell Innes, Town Hall, Newport, hon. secretary.

Orders for work and gifts of material will be a great assistance in achieving the objects of the sub-committee, and may be sent to the hon. secretary. All subscriptions will be acknowledged in the Press.

	£ s. d.
Total acknowledged	291 16 0

653/27 653.

Glasgow Evening Citizen,
December 11th. 1914.

The situation for thousands of women since the war began has been a distressing one. They have been thrown idle through this or that industry having been brought to a standstill. Immediately after the outbreak of hostilities, upwards of 40,000 women workers in London alone found themselves without employment. Since then the numbers have greatly increased, not only in the Metropolis but generally throughout the country, and in some of the larger cities, the amount of poverty and actual want is scarcely realised by the public. In order to provide work for the workless, Her Majesty the Queen started a Work for Women Fund, the aim of which is not only the relief of distress, but its prevention. When, upon careful investigation, a woman is found to have lost her employment on account of the war, she is given sewing, or other work, and paid for it at a fair rate of wage. Where the articles or garments are suitable for the purpose, they are, when finished, given away to those who really need them, but who are unable to pay for them. Thus the fund serves a double purpose, both practical and patriotic. But more financial support is needed, and, with the approval of the Queen, a special appeal is being made to every woman throughout the country. It is asked that each woman who can afford it should send one shilling—and if any would like to send several shillings they will be most welcome—so that something may be done towards bringing a little joy into thousands of stricken homes at Christmastide. Donations should be forwarded to the secretary in London not later than the 16th inst., and though the appeals to public generosity have recently been abnormal, there is confidence that the more fortunate women of Great Britain, with warm firesides and well-filled larders, will see that the work of the Queen's Fund does not languish for want of their assistance.

Kentish Independent,
December 12th. 1914

QUEEN VISITS GREENWICH.

WOMEN'S WORKROOMS INSPECTED.

The Queen, who was accompanied by Princess Alexander of Teck, and attended by Mr. E. W. Wallington, C.M.G., paid an informal visit to Queen Mary's Work Room for Women at the Borough Hall, Royal Hill, Greenwich, on Thursday afternoon.

Her Majesty, who arrived by motor car from Poplar via Blackwall Tunnel, and was dressed in a Saxe blue costume with black toque, was received by the Mayor and Mayoress of Greenwich, the Town Clerk (Mr. Francis Robinson), and the Deputy Town Clerk (Mr. F. J. Simpson), and in the corridor of the Borough Hall she was presented, on behalf of the staff, by Mr. F. G. Skinner (with whom was Mr. R. N. Goddard), with a bouquet of carnations tied with the colours of the Allied Forces.

Conducted by the Mayor (who wore his robe and chain of office), the Mayoress, and Miss Mary MacArthur, her Majesty made a close inspection of the work done by the women, some fifty in number, and expressed great gratification with all she saw. Mrs. Furrell (hon. secretary of the fund), Mrs. Nelson (hon. treasurer), Mrs. Clare (supervisor), and Mrs. Bryan Owen had the honour of being presented by the Mayor to the Queen, who on leaving after a visit of a quarter-of-an-hour motored to Southwark Town Hall for a similar purpose.

Among those present were Mrs. F. W. Alexander, Mrs. Johnson Smith, Mrs. Leonard Miller, Mrs. Tyson, Mrs. McDougall, Miss McCall, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. East, Mrs. Parkes, Miss Janette Scarr, Miss Pamela Lovibond, Miss Ommanney, the Rev. Thomas Morgan, and Councillor Hunt. Mr. F. W. Thornton was in attendance on the Mayor and Mayoress.

The Queen was enthusiastically cheered by a small crowd which gathered outside the gates of the Borough Hall. The police arrangements were in charge of Sub-Divisional Inspector Garner and Inspector Challenger.

The Sketch, Dec: 9th. 1914.

A WORKER FOR OTHER WOMEN—AND AN APPEALER FOR SPARE SHILLINGS: MRS. C. ARTHUR PEARSON.

Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson is working indefatigably in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. An excellent new plan is that every woman with a superfluous shilling shall send it before Dec. 16 to form a great New Year's Offering to their less fortunate sisters. The shillings should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, 33, Portland Place, W., and the grand total will be announced in the Press on New Year's Day.

Daily Telegraph, Dec: 9th. 1914.

QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

WORK, NOT CHARITY.

On the principle that the "prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity," the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has already succeeded in bringing relief to thousands of women and girls thrown out of employment by the war. So great, however, have the undertakings of the Fund become—already fifty schemes, involving an annual expenditure of a quarter of a million, have been approved—that fresh funds are necessary.

Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary, are therefore making this week a special appeal to every woman in the country who can either spare a shilling or shillings or who can undertake the task of collecting shillings from others. It is felt that this special appeal to women on behalf of women must have a marked effect at this season of the year, when it is realised that but for the labours of the Fund thousands of women and girls would otherwise be left penniless and starving at Christmas-time. The funds are not distributed in promiscuous charity, but are wholly devoted to paying for work of a non-competitive nature.

Much, too, has been done to relieve distress by a system of highly specialised labour exchanges. For instance, contracts for shirts and so on, with which the manufacturers who secured them could not cope, have been in part transferred to big dressmaking firms, which would otherwise have been compelled to dismiss their staffs. Apart from this, women have been set to work at cradle-making, and are being trained as cooks, sick-room helps, and so on.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, honorary treasurer, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, W. This special appeal practically closes on Sunday next, and Mrs. Pearson expresses the hope that all subscriptions may be sent in not later than Dec. 16, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

Westminster Gazette, 9.12.14.

WOMEN IN DISTRESS.

The hardships of the war fall more heavily on women than on men. The men go out to fight, and run the risk of being killed; but while they are fighting they at least are fed well and clothed warmly. But the women who have been thrown out of employment have to starve and go about in rags—unless means are found to help them. There are tens of thousands of such women in this country at the moment, and their number is increasing daily. They do not want charity—they want work. Such work is being found for them by Queen Mary's "Work for Women" Fund, the aim of which is not only the relief of distress, but its prevention.

When, upon careful investigation, a woman is found to have lost her employment on account of the war, she is given sewing or other work, and paid for it at a fair rate of wages. Where the articles and garments are suitable for the purpose they are, when finished, given away to those who really need them, but who are unable to pay for them.

In order to carry on this work, subscriptions are needed, and Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the honorary treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the honorary secretary, are appealing to the women of the United Kingdom to send one shilling for the benefit of the Fund as a New Year's offering. Those who cannot afford a shilling can surely collect one. Those who can afford more are invited to send in several.

All donations should be forwarded to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and should arrive not later than December 16, which will enable the Work for Women Fund to announce the grand total in the Press on New Year's Day.

Evening Standard & St. James Gazette, December 9th. 1914.

SHILLINGS THAT BRING WORK.

METHOD OF HELPING TO SWELL THE QUEEN'S FUND.

"Women, your country needs you." This was the rallying call to the women of the country issued in the appeal on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, and the women of the country have answered the call in magnificent style. Since the appeal was issued shillings have continued to arrive at the offices of the fund, 33, Portland-place, W., in a steady flow from all parts of the country. Women of all classes are doing their best to provide work for their unfortunate sisters who were thrown out of employment owing to the war.

Every shilling subscribed goes towards providing a shilling's worth of work for some poor woman; it not merely helps her, but it also often helps her family.

Better than Charity.

"Better than charity" is the motto underlying the fund. Although the appeal is addressed mainly to women, everybody can help. Will you therefore send a shilling, or, if you can afford it, more than a shilling, to the Hon. Treasurer, Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, 33, Portland-place, London, W? The ordinary man or woman should be able to afford at least one shilling. There are many things on which a shilling is wasted, and one of these shillings can surely be spared to assist some working woman to gain employment. If you cannot afford a shilling, beg, borrow, or collect one in coppers.

If you think you can be of any assistance otherwise to the fund, write to Lady Roxburgh, the Hon. Secretary, at the same address. Whatever you do to help the fund you will be fulfilling the debt of honour you owe to our brave soldiers, many of whose wives, sisters, or sweethearts ask you to grant them the means of gaining employment.

653/28

The Globe, Dec: 9th. 1914.

653.

AN APPEAL TO WOMEN.

NEW YEAR SHILLINGS FOR QUEEN MARY'S FUND.

There are innumerable women out of employment in this country at the moment who do not want charity, but work. Such work is being found for them by Queen Mary's "Work for Women" Fund, the aim of which is not only the relief of distress, but its prevention.

When, upon careful investigation, a woman is found to have lost her employment on account of the war, she is given sewing or other work, and paid for it at a fair rate of wages. Where the articles and garments are suitable for the purpose they are, when finished, given away to those who really need them, but who are unable to pay for them.

In order to carry on this work, subscriptions are needed, and Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the honorary treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary, are appealing to the women of the United Kingdom to send one shilling for the benefit of the fund as a New Year's offering. All donations should be forwarded to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, 33, Portland-place, W., and should arrive not later than December 16th.

Daily Express, December 9th 1914.

GIFTS TO GIVE WORK.

WOMEN'S SHILLINGS FOR THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Have you answered the appeal on behalf of the women unemployed owing to the war?

The appeal is addressed mainly to women, but there is no reason why all should not subscribe towards the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

Thousands of women have sent their shillings to the hon. treasurer, Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, who, with Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary, is dealing with subscriptions at 33, Portland-place, W.

If you have no shillings to give, try to collect some in coppers from your friends. Each shilling sent to the fund will provide a shillingsworth of work for some poor woman.

If you can afford more than a shilling, by all means send more. Women all over the country are provided with employment through the fund, in blouse-making, dressmaking, cradle-making, and so forth, and the more money received the more work will be found.

Mrs. Pearson is anxious that all subscriptions should be received before December 16, in order that the grand total may be announced on New Year's-day.

Glasgow Herald, 9.12.14.

QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The portrait of Princess Mary, by J. J. Shannon, R.A., has provoked so much admiration amongst those who have visited the exhibition of the original pictures for "Princess Mary's Gift Book" at the Leicester Galleries, London, that there is a strong feeling prevalent that the portrait should find its way into some public collection. The proceeds of the sale of the Shannon picture and of the other works in the exhibition will be given to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund last night reached a total of £35,614. The Scottish subscriptions amount to £1608 15s 6d, last week's contributions including a donation of £100 from Mrs Mackintosh of Mackintosh, Moy Hall, Inverness, and a second contribution of £200 from the Scottish Teachers' Fund for War Relief. The treasurer of the Fund, to whom subscriptions should be sent, is the Marchioness of Lanlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, and communications regarding the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the honorary secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, Melville Street, Edinburgh.

Morning Post, Dec: 9th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

TOTAL CONTRIBUTED, £95,614.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £95,614 4s. 7d. The day's subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Sir Mark Sykes, M.P., per Lady Henry Bentinck	200	0	0
Mr. Henry Greaves	50	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Chester (further instalment) (the Chester Women's Unionist Association donation)	47	6	0
By Farming People of Chailey, Alberta, Canada (per Mr. W. A. Letson)	12	16	8
Mr. Alfred G. Bessemer	10	0	0
Miss Helen Denny	10	0	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Morning Post, Dec 10. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£95,802 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £95,802 13s. Yesterday's subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
The Ladies' Section of the Wandsworth Swimming Club (per Miss A. Campion, Hon. Sec.), "A quarter of a mile of pennies"	55	0	0
Eleventh Contribution from the proceeds of the sale of gifts in kind by the Work for Women Fund Department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., Ltd., Oxford-street	15	10	1
Mr. and the Misses Thomas (including Mr. Harry G. Thomas, £10)	12	2	0
Profits of an Arts and Craft Exhibition held by some of the Lady Clerks of the Savings Bank Department, Blythe-road	11	0	0

Yesterday afternoon the Queen paid a visit to 33, Portland-place, the headquarters of her Fund. After she had visited the staff and other rooms a visit was paid to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson's department, where the great Shilling Fund is sending out its appeal to women who can afford a shilling or more as the case may be to help their less fortunate sisters.

From many communications received there obviously exists a considerable misunderstanding about the Fund. Some weeks after the National Relief Fund was inaugurated by the Prince of Wales it became evident that the provision of work for women was an urgent necessity. For this reason the Queen started a special fund to be devoted to providing employment for women unemployed through the war. The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairman and Miss Mary R. Macarthur hon. secretary, was thereupon appointed by Mr. Herbert Samuel, with the approval of her Majesty, to devise, initiate, and supervise the necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the Committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies the final responsibility for the expenditure rests.

All the money collected in her Majesty's name by the Queen's Work for Women Fund (and its Council) is handed to the National Relief Fund, and can be spent only on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women. Her Majesty's co-operation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of the money to finance the schemes.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner.

Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside. Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the Secretary, Professional Classes Sub-Committee, Board of Education, Whitehall.

Daily Telegraph, Dec: 10th. 1914.

QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

THE APPEAL FOR SHILLINGS.

There has already been a magnificent response to the special appeal for shillings which is being made this week by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson and Lady Roxburgh for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Still more support, however, is most urgently needed.

Every shilling subscribed is devoted, not to charitable doles, but to providing employment for some woman or girl thrown out of work by the war, on the principle laid down by her Majesty, when she inaugurated the Fund, that the "prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity."

The problem which the Fund had at first to face was truly an appalling one. In London alone 40,000 women were thrown out of work, while acute distress immediately arose in the ranks of women workers throughout the country. By a most effective method of labour exchanges thousands have been provided with work which does not displace other women, and where they cannot be found employment on a strictly commercial basis, the products of their labour, such as cradles, layettes, and children's clothing, are distributed in homes where such necessaries could not possibly be obtained.

Already 300 branches of the fund have been established in the country, and these have been the means of keeping together thousands of homes supported by women which would otherwise have been broken up. The distress this Christmas, however, will nevertheless be acute, and funds are urgently needed, inasmuch as there are already schemes in progress which entail an expenditure of a quarter of a million of money. Mrs. Pearson, therefore, believes that every woman with a shilling to spare who realises the plight of her poorer sisters will spare that shilling gladly and collect further sums from others. All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, W.

This special appeal closes on Sunday next, Dec. 13, and Mrs. Pearson expresses the hope that all subscriptions may be sent in not later than Dec. 16 in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

The Polytechnic for unemployed City women workers at Bridewell House, E.C., approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and financed by the Queen's Fund, will be opened on Wednesday next. Already 690 unemployed women clerks have registered at the typists' registry at St. Bride's Institute. Of ninety-eight who have others dependent upon them, fifty have been chosen for free commercial training at Bridewell House.

They will be given a maintenance grant of 10s per week, and their fares will be paid up to 2s 6d per week. Only workers who were employed in the City before the war are eligible for the training. Unemployed City charwomen are also to be given a course of domestic economy, and twenty of their number are to be trained as home-helps, to give assistance in the homes of the sick poor.

Yesterday the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund reached a total of £95,802.

The Queen paid a visit during the afternoon to 33, Portland-place, London, W., the headquarters of her Work for Women Fund. Her Majesty was attended by the Lady Bertha Dawkins and Mr. E. W. Wallington, and was received by:

Lady Roxburghe, the hon. secretary, and Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer. Others present included the Hon. Mrs. Francis McLaren, the Hon. Marguerite Jolicy, Mrs. Heron Maxwell, Miss Lessing, Miss Gibson, Miss Fielden, Lord Blyth, Mr. Dudley Myers, and Mr. Valentin.

In the course of her tour the Queen spent some minutes in examining the Press cuttings, and expressed her satisfaction at the publicity given to her Fund by the newspapers and journals. An entertaining incident arose while the Queen was talking in Lady Roxburgh's room. Lord Blyth, whose town house it is the workers privilege to occupy, showed her Majesty the only disappearing wall in London. By touching a spring, the whole of the partition dividing the morning room from the dining room disappeared to the cellars. Her Majesty waved her hand in greeting to the typists and accountants employed in what was the other room, who were surprised at the sudden disappearance of the wall, while the Queen exclaimed, "Oh, how wonderful!"

653/29 653.
Daily News & Leader, Dec: 10th. 1914.

NEW YEAR SHILLINGS FOR QUEEN'S FUND.

School Girls & Poor Workers Generously Helping.

New Year gifts are coming in at a tremendous pace from women who want to contribute a special shilling as a New Year offering to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

"It is a good way to begin the year," said Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson (who is treasurer of this special fund) to a "Daily News" representative yesterday. "There are many who would like to help the Queen's fund who may have hesitated, thinking a shilling too small a contribution, but now they are sending in, perfectly delighted to help. Many have asked for collecting cards so that their friends and neighbours can add shillings without having the trouble of posting separately.

"Even some very poor women, those who know what it means to be out of work, have bought a few stamps when they could and later added more to make up the shilling.

"Girls in offices have sent shilling postal orders, in fact women of all classes want to give this New Year gift to the fund. Of course, the shilling can be multiplied by any number, the larger the better; it all means employment for more workers.

"Some who are very enthusiastic about this shilling from women for women," continued Mrs Pearson, "have sent cheques, one for fifty pounds, others for ten and twenty, and it looks as if there will be a great deal coming from girls' schools. These coming women are so glad of the opportunity to give something from their own pocket money. The head mistresses and teachers are forwarding the money from their scholars. Girls at home under the care of governesses are also sending up as schoolgirls.

"The Queen paid a visit this afternoon to 33, Portland-place, where all contributions are sent, and was particularly interested in this special appeal. It is only until the 16th of this month that I am appealing for these shillings, because we want to announce on New Year's Day how big a gift is offered by women and girls to benefit those who would otherwise be unemployed."

Daily Mail. Dec: 10th. 1914.

"SHILLING WEEK" GUESTS.

HOSTESS HELPING THE WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The very newest form of entertainment is the "Shilling Week" luncheon. A well-known hostess yesterday entertained a party of friends at a modest little restaurant in Soho. They had originally planned to meet at a fashionable hotel, but at the last moment the hostess had a happy idea and telephoned her guests to come instead to a wholly unexpected resort. The surroundings were, perhaps, less luxurious, the hors-d'œuvres less varied than some of her friends were accustomed to, but the cooking was excellent, while the slightly Bohemian atmosphere added the charm of novelty.

The gathering was a great success and the bill for six, including a tip for the waiter, came to less than a sovereign. Over coffee and cigarettes the hostess explained. Her apparent fit of economy had an object; she proposed to give the difference between what she had spent and what she would have spent—which amounted to at least £5—to Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund.

The guests were so pleased that they each added a sovereign of their own, and thus the special appeal which is being made this week by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, honorary treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, honorary secretary, in order to avoid distress among women workers caused by the war benefited by over £10.

Why should not you give a "Shilling Week" luncheon? The proceeds should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, honorary treasurer, The Queen's Work for Women Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W.

The Times, December 10th 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

Excellent work is being done by the borough of Holborn sub-committee on the principle laid down by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. At present 30 women are given employment in the room at 37, Russell-square, and though the majority were not experts with needle or sewing-machine, they have, under skilful guidance and cutting out, done some surprising work upon cast-off garments.

The results make an attractive exhibition. By adaptations, conversions, and assortment of most unlikely materials neat and even elegant costumes have been evolved such as might fetch good prices were the things for sale, which they are not; they go to the poor among our own people out of employment or destitute Belgian refugees. There are, of course, supplies of shirts and warm underclothes. Everything is in a clean condition; there is nothing of a frowsy, second-hand character about the display. There may be work for more women in the room should necessity arise and funds be forthcoming.

Daily Call, Dec: 11th 1914.

SHILLINGS, PLEASE!

URGENT APPEAL FOR THE QUEEN'S FUND.

A LARGE SUM REQUIRED.

So quietly and unostentatiously, if thoroughly and systematically, has the Queen's Fund for "Work for Women" set about its labours that the general public probably does not realise at present the amount of good work which it has already done in the way of finding employment for women and girls who have lost their occupations through the war.

Some idea, however, of what it has accomplished and what it hopes to achieve may be gathered from the fact that the Central Committee has already sanctioned 50 schemes which will involve an annual expenditure of £250,000.

By a judicious employment of Labour Exchange methods it has not only succeeded in keeping open hundreds of workshops which would otherwise be closed, but has already started a great number of new workshops where women are either found employment or are trained for posts which are immediately open to them.

FOR WORK AND COMFORTS.

In all cases the work given to the women is not competitive—that is to say, the work they do does not deprive any woman worker elsewhere. In circumstances, too, where it is impossible to run the work on strictly commercial lines the articles manufactured, such as clothing, etc., are distributed in homes where they are sadly needed, but cannot possibly be bought.

Fresh funds are urgently needed to cope with the distress which will unfortunately be only too prevalent in the homes of women workers this Christmas. That is the reason for the special appeal which is being made this week by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary, to other women throughout the country who have a shilling to spare.

There must be millions of shillings which might easily find their way to the fund without inconvenience to the donors, and on the receipt of these shillings depends the very smallest modicum of food and comfort in thousands of homes this Christmas time.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, London W. The fund closes on Sunday next, December 13, and Mrs. Pearson hopes that all subscriptions may be sent in by December 16 in order that it may be possible to announce the grand total on New Year's Day.

Sussex Daily News, Dec: 10th 1914.

Encouragement for Women Workers.

With the more rigorous winter days still to come, redoubled energies are being organised by the various institutions which have devoted themselves to social service. "A field day of encouragement to those women who are already doing their utmost and a recruiting day for the reinforcement of workers" is the description given of the dual object of the great rally to take place at Queen's Hall next Wednesday. I learn from the Secretary of the London Society for Women's Suffrage that the arrangements have now been completed for what certainly promises to be an interesting and inspiring gathering. Lady Frances Balfour is to preside over a public meeting in the evening, when the speakers will include Professor Gilbert Murray, Mrs. Fawcett, Dr. Florence Willey, Sir George Pragnell, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, whose emphatic attitude in regard to the employment of professional women in the administration of the fund has been the subject of so much discussion during the past week or two.

Daily Graphic, Dec: 11th. 1914.

"BETTER THAN CHARITY."

THE SHILLING APPEAL TO PROVIDE WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Central Committee of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has already sanctioned fifty schemes, involving an annual expenditure of £250,000—an item which gives some idea of the hardship and poverty which the war has brought into scores of thousands of homes supported by women workers throughout the country. By a judicious employment of labour exchange methods the committee has not only succeeded in keeping open hundreds of workshops which would otherwise be closed, but has already started a great number of new workshops where women are either found employment or are trained for posts which are immediately open to them.

Fresh funds are urgently needed to cope with the distress which is being thus in some measure alleviated, and it is for this reason that a special appeal to other women throughout the country who have a shilling to spare is being made this week by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson and Lady Roxburgh. There must be millions of shillings which might easily find their way to the Queen's Fund without inconvenience to the donors, and it is on receipt of these shillings that food and comfort in thousands of homes this Christmas time depends.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland Place, London, W. The fund closes on Sunday next, December 13th, and Mrs. Pearson hopes that all subscriptions may be sent in by December 18th in order that it may be possible to announce the grand total on New Year's Day.

Daily Express, Dec. 11th. 1914.

WOMEN'S ROLE IN THE WAR.

British women have the opportunity of playing an important part in the war by providing work for their poorer sisters who have lost their employment.

By subscribing to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund they—

- Enable working women to be useful in the manufacture of shirts for the soldiers, cradles for poor mothers, etc.
- Provide wages which will maintain a family and render it independent of charity.
- Prevent distress, which is better than relieving it.
- Answer the special appeal addressed to them by the Queen, and render a great service to womanhood and to the country.

Every woman is asked to send at least a shilling, with as many more shillings as she can collect, to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer of the fund, at 33, Portland-place, W., before December 16.

The Star, Dec: 10th 1914.

GIRL'S GRATITUDE.

Young Wife's Offering to the "Work for Women" Fund.

A pathetic note was struck the other day in connection with the scheme in which women are sending shillings to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund as a New Year's offering.

One of the girl workers in a factory who was thrown out of employment on account of the war, and who was practically starving, was given employment as a machinist by the committee of the fund.

Four weeks later her young man (who, by the way, could not pass the Army medical test) got a very good job, and they were married. Her gratitude to the "Work for Women" Fund was so profound that she took a shilling out of her small first week's housekeeping money and sent it as a New Year's offering.

We hear that there has been a splendid response to the appeal Every woman who has not yet done so, who can afford at least a shilling, should at once send a postal order to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, honorary treasurer, 33, Portland-place, London, W

The fund exists for the purpose of providing employment for women who have lost positions they held owing to the outbreak of war.

Evening News, Dec: 10.

TRAINING FOR CITY GIRLS.

Supported by the Queen's Work for Women Fund, a Polytechnic for unemployed City women is to be opened at Bridewell House, E.C.

Fifty girls now out of work are to be given free commercial training. They will be allowed 10s. a week for maintenance, and railway fares up to 2s. 6d. will be paid. Only girls who were employed in the City before the war are eligible for the training.

There is also a scheme for assisting City charwomen who have been thrown out of work through the war. A number are to be trained as helpers in the homes of the sick poor.

The City Corporation have lent Bridewell House for the purpose and given £100 towards the expenses.

Daily Mail, December 11th. 1914.

A SHILLING TO SPARE.

APPEAL TO WOMEN FOR WORK FOR WOMEN'S FUND.

"Business as Usual" is the motto of the nation during the war, and it is to help towards carrying on business as usual that every woman who has a shilling to spare is asked to respond to the special appeal which is being made this week on behalf of the Queen's Work for Women Fund by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary.

Many women have been thrown out of work owing to the war—over 40,000 in London alone—because the market for certain goods has practically ceased to exist. On the other hand, many firms specialising in goods for which there is an inordinate demand at the moment have more orders than they can cope with.

Obviously the remedy for this state of affairs lies in arranging for as many as possible of the surplus women to do the surplus work and in finding scope for the activities of the rest. This is just what the Queen's Work for Women Fund has set itself to do, and a special appeal is being made this week in the hope that every woman who can possibly do so will either contribute a shilling or collect one for the fund in order to secure a shilling's worth of work for some unhappy woman who would otherwise be without employment.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, the Queen's Work for Women Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W.

Mrs. Pearson hopes that all subscriptions may be sent in by December 16, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

653/30

653.

653/31

The Daily Mail,
Dec: 11th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £96,341 12s. 10d. The day's subscribers included:

Second instalment of profits of sale of Mr. Paul A. Rubens's song, "Your King and Country Want You," published by Messrs. Chappell and Co., through The Daily Mail, £250; Misses B. and M. F. Trollope, further instalment, £50; first instalment from Jumble Sale Agency, £50; collected by Lady Clifden, further instalment, £51 2s. 8d.; collected by Urban District Council of Orrell, £24 4s.; collected by Provost of Ar[illegible], £20; collected by Mayoress of Appleby, £18.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburghe, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all contributions and cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund yesterday reached £4,085,000, and Princess Mary's Christmas Gifts Fund £130,989.

The stores department of the Order of St. John has received an aggregate of 34,434 garments and 6,620 articles during the week, and 22,956 garments and 3,777 articles have been sent away, also 300lb. of chloroform and 25,000 cigarettes.

Morning Post, Dec: 12th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£96,588 CONTRIBUTED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund has now reached a total of £96,588 3s. 8d. Yesterday's subscriptions included:

Collected by the Mayoress of Nottingham (further instalment)	£103	9	8
By the Mayoress of Coventry (further instalment)	50	0	0
By the Countess Fitzwilliam	12	0	0
The Mothers' Meeting (St. Thomas's Church, Orchard-street) (per Lady Edith Cotes)	12	0	0
Members of the Unity Club	10	10	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall, or Urban District Offices, in the locality in which they reside.

Daily Telegraph,
Dec: 12th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

In Manchester the demand for women power machinists to complete the large Army clothing contracts has made possible an important experiment in trade transference. The benefit to the worker of giving her another trade when her own is liable to seasonal depression is obvious. The usual obstacles—training and the means of subsistence while in training—can now be overcome with the aid of the Queen's Fund.

As many as 31,169 women are employed in Manchester in the dressmaking trades, which suffer most seriously from seasonal slackness. A scheme has therefore been devised whereby skilled treadle machinists who are thrown out of employment through the war will be trained as power machinists. Promises have been made by several firms to employ the women when trained at a weekly wage of not less than 16s. During the training, which extends over a period of four weeks, they will receive instruction from a skilled forewoman, and will be paid 10s a week. Girls and women from 18 to 30 years are eligible.

Yesterday the Fund rose to £96,388, the day's contributions including £103 collected by the Mayoress of Nottingham and £50 collected by the Mayoress of Coventry.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Illustrated London News,
Dec: 12th. 1914.

THE Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, so wisely devoted to finding employment in preference to merely aiding those who have lost their work owing to the war, should be substantially benefited by the latest scheme for which Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson is working so assiduously, as it will bring contributors by tens of thousands. There must be countless women who at least have "spare shillings," and it is asked that they shall send them to the Fund and so help some bread-winner who has been plunged into misery by the war. The Fund is already spending £250,000 a year in finding employment for women, but much more can be usefully employed, and the arranging of the work is always approved by a committee of experts. Over sixty work-rooms have already been started. Every woman can augment this great New Year's Offering by sending one, or as many as she can, of her "waste" shillings, by Dec. 16, to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, 33, Portland Place, W. An official acknowledgment will be sent from Buckingham Palace, and the grand total produced by this novel effort will be announced in the Press on New Year's Day.

Ladies Field. Dec: 12th. 1914.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

IN the course of a recent interview, Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, explained the details of the shilling appeal which she and Lady Roxburghe, the hon. secretary, are now making to every woman throughout the country. Between December 7th and December 13th every woman who can afford it is asked to send a shilling to the fund, in order to secure a shillingsworth of work for some unhappy woman or girl who would otherwise be out of employment.

"We are asking for a shilling," Mrs. Pearson explained, "because it is such a convenient and simple little sum to give; and if every woman with a shilling to spare will give it us during this Appeal Week the result will be that joy and comfort will be brought into thousands and thousands of stricken homes this Christmas-time. The war has hit everybody, but the majority of women, even though they have had to curtail their expenses, do not realise the havoc that the war has caused in the ranks of women workers. In London alone there were as many as 40,000 unemployed at one time, to many of whom the Queen's Fund has brought relief."

Over sixty workrooms have been started in various parts of the country, and in London alone employment or training is now available for several thousands of unemployed women and girls. The schemes of work and training throughout the country, and approved already, involve an annual expenditure of over £250,000. The committee hope to have all donations sent in by December 16th, so as to enable them to announce the grand total in the Press on New Year's Day. The knowledge that they are thereby helping to alleviate the hardships of women to whom the war has brought acute distress may tend to make those who subscribe feel that they are starting the New Year well. Every woman can augment this great New Year's offering to the less fortunate of her sisters, for those who feel that they are unable to afford a shilling can easily collect this sum; and, may we add, that those who are able to afford more can make up for the deficiencies of others by sending several shillings? Its greatest recommendation is that it is thoroughly practical and that one can rest assured that every penny goes direct to some hard-pressed home. It is, indeed, a work of such a nature that one does not see how any woman who can afford it can resist this simple appeal for a shilling. All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland Place, London, W., who hopes that all donations may be sent in by December 16th in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

Sporting Times,
December 12th. 1914

The portrait of H.R.H. the Princess Mary, by J. J. Shannon, R.A., has provoked so much admiration amongst those who have visited the Exhibition of the original pictures for "Princess Mary's Gift Book," at the Leicester Galleries, Leicester Square, that there is a strong feeling prevalent that the portrait should find its way into some public collection. Before such an opportunity has gone by it is hoped that some generous benefactor will come forward and present this charming example of the famous portrait painter's art. It need hardly be added that the proceeds of the sale of the Shannon picture and of the other works in the Exhibition will be given to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

The Daily Mirror,
Dec. 12th. 1914.

THE QUEEN SEES DISAPPEARING WALL.

The wall, which can be made to disappear.

Lord Blyth receiving correspondence over the wall.

When the Queen visited Lord Blyth's town house, the headquarters of her Work for Women Fund, she saw the only disappearing wall in London. On a spring being touched it vanishes from view.—(Daily Mirror photographs.)

Daily News & Leader. 12.12.14.

"THE QUEEN'S SHILLING"

What an Army of 10,000,000 Women Can Do.

It is Queen Mary's desire to raise an army of ten million women, armed with "silver bullets," to come to the rescue of their less fortunate sisters who are fighting against unemployment.

Every woman who cannot afford to give a shilling can at least contrive to collect that small sum, and she will have the satisfaction of knowing that she has done her best. Her gift will really be worth far more than twelve pennies, because, through the medium of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, it will be transmuted into definite and well-paid employment for some poor woman who has been thrown out of work by the war.

Already fifty schemes have been evolved to provide an outlet for the activities of women workers, but to set them going successfully an annual expenditure of £250,000 is necessary. A special appeal is being made this week for shillings in order that the shadow of unemployment may be lifted from as many homes as possible before the New Year.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, W. Mrs. Pearson hopes that all subscriptions may be sent in by Dec. 16, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

Daily Telegraph, December 12th. 1914.

653.

WOMEN WORKERS' APPEAL.

THE CLOSING DAY.

The week set aside for the special appeal for shillings made by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon secretary, of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, comes to an end to-morrow. The success of this appeal direct to every woman with a shilling to spare has been considerable, but it is hoped that the last two days may bring in an even larger amount than has already been subscribed.

Mrs. Pearson is convinced that every woman with a shilling to spare will at once give it and persuade other women to give their shillings, if she will only realise the terrible havoc which the war has wrought in the ranks of women workers. Scores of thousands of homes throughout the country are depending on women's energy, and would long since have been broken up but for the Fund.

Forty thousand women were thrown out of work in London alone immediately after the war broke out, and the same state of things obtains on a similar scale in many of the great cities. By a systematic dealing with the problem, however, hundreds of workshops have been kept open which would otherwise have been closed, and thousands of women have been provided with employment which has not displaced other women. In addition, where work cannot be carried on along strictly commercial lines, the results of the women's labour—clothes and so on—are distributed to women even poorer than themselves.

Great efforts are still needed, as the Fund already stands committed to schemes for finding work for women which will entail an expenditure of a quarter of a million during the coming twelve months. Every contribution will provide at least a little work for some woman who would otherwise be without employment, and it is hoped that millions of shillings will be forthcoming when once the hardships which working women are enduring are thoroughly understood.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, W.

As has been stated, this special appeal closes to-morrow, and Mrs. Pearson expresses the hope that all subscriptions may be sent in not later than Dec. 16, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

653/32

East London Advertiser,
Dec: 12th. 1914.

QUEEN MARY'S WORKROOMS.

The visit of Queen Mary to the workroom for women at Poplar last week following as it did a similar visit to the Stepney workrooms a few weeks ago, draws attention to the splendid service which these rooms have rendered to hundreds of women and girls in the two East London boroughs. They were started as a means of alleviating distress among young women and girls arising from the war and they can be said to nobly fulfill their mission. There are some to be found who have advensely criticised the project, as there will ever be found carping critics of any work, no matter how beneficent its purpose. Those who criticise, though, ignore the fact that in these workrooms the wages are paid and the material supplied from the Queen's Workroom Fund, and no attempt is made to compete with ordinary industry. The workrooms are intended, as a well-known writer on social questions has pointed out, as nothing more than a temporary shelter and stop-gap. The aim of those who serve under Queen Mary is to give employment instead of doles to women who, though unable to obtain work owing to the war, are normally wage-earners; and, incidentally, to train them in the cutting-out and making-up of useful garments, as well as in plain cookery. The Workrooms, in fact, relieve women workers who, from causes outside their own control, are unable to obtain work. Their influence is educative because it gives definite training, and also in that it is felt in those things upon which the care and cheeriness of the home depends. It is, in short, a mistake to regard the workrooms as a permanent institution or to judge them by the normal tests applied to ordinary industrial concerns. Those who complain that a high wage is not paid have not apparently sufficient intelligence to see that the wage given is purposely fixed at a low figure, so that the women may not be tempted to stay at the workrooms rather than seek regular employment. Indeed, we happen to know that already cases have occurred where girls and women have actually refused other employment at a higher wage, preferring, perhaps naturally enough, the genial discipline and congenial surroundings of the workrooms. The critics alluded to are simply out to create strife and discontent, and it matters not to them that in so doing they are injuring those whom they profess a desire to serve. Those who have watched the scheme in operation are fully satisfied that the Queen's Workrooms are being carried on on the right lines and nothing but praise is due to those generous and kind-hearted people who have done so much for the young women and girls in East London in a time when, but for their timely aid, they would undoubtedly have suffered much privation.

Civil Service Gazette,
December 12th. 1914.

653/33 653.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

AN APPEAL FROM WOMAN TO WOMAN.

In the course of an interview, Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, explained the details of the remarkable Christmas-time appeal for spare shillings which she and Lady Roxburgh, the Hon. Secretary, are now making to every woman throughout the country. Between December 7 and December 13, every woman who can afford has been asked to send a shilling to the Fund, in order to secure a shillingsworth of work for some unhappy woman or girl who would otherwise be out of employment.

"We are asking for a shilling," Mrs. Pearson explained, "because it is such a convenient and simple little sum to give; and if every woman with a shilling to spare would give it us at the present moment, you cannot imagine the joy and comfort it would bring into thousands and thousands of stricken homes this Christmas-time. The War has hit everybody; but I do not think the majority of women—who, though they have had to curtail their expenses, of course, but are still able to get along fairly comfortably—realise the havoc that the War has caused in the ranks of women workers. In London alone, there were as many as 40,000 unemployed at one time. Now, too, is the season of loosened purse-strings, and, even though there may not be very much in the purse, I feel quite sure that there is, at any rate, one shilling to spare. I should not dream, especially at the present moment, of accusing my fellow-women of carelessness; but, at the same time, there must be millions of unconsidered shillings spent on inconsiderable trifles every day; those are the shillings which we want to gather into Queen Mary's Fund for the next week. I suppose every woman in England," Mrs. Pearson continued, "has someone she loves, or at any rate knows, at the front today, and feels the impotence of having to wait and hope for better times. But how much more terrible is that waiting when the means of one's livelihood has been swept away! How intense and agonising when, whatever one did happen to earn, went to the support of one's children or relatives, whom one was in honour bound to keep! And I assure you that thousands of women bread-winners have been plunged into misery by the War. Every woman must feel the pinch, and that is why we are appealing to those who feel the pinch least to help those who feel it most. We want every woman who can, to help another woman to the extent of one shilling."

This appeal which is being made to women for shillings to help other women is, perhaps, the most splendid of all the appeals to which the War has given rise. There is the full and pleasant satisfaction of knowing that not a penny will go astray or be wasted. It was Queen Mary's axiom, when she inaugurated her Fund on behalf of out-of-work women, that "the prevention of unemployment was better than the cure." And the labours of the Central Committee afford a magnificent illustration of how thoroughly practical, and soundly economic, women's efforts to help women can be. The Committee recognised at once that payment for work out of charitable funds would be economically wrong, because it would simply be robbing Peter to pay Paul; or, perhaps, one should say, robbing Mary Ann to pay Eliza Jane. So there has been no competitive work whatever. It might, indeed, be said that wherever possible the Central Committee perform the duties of a highly specialised Labour Exchange for women, run on humane lines.

Dressmakers thrown out of employment have been set to work making shirts, orders for which factories could not cope with, and it is gratifying to know that employers of labour have, in hundreds of cases, lent their premises for such industries, in order to keep their staffs together. Many experimental workrooms have been opened in London to give employment in the Metropolitan area; three hundred and fifty local committees, scattered up and down the country, work in conjunction with the properly-constituted authorities. Where work on actual commercial lines cannot be found, grants are made to enable the employment of women in the manufacture of such articles as cradles, clothing, and maternity outfits for poor mothers who would otherwise have to go without such necessary things. No money is expended on any scheme until it has been approved by a committee of experts; but already fifty schemes have been passed which involve the expenditure of £250,000 a year. It is therefore not surprising that further funds are needed for this most excellent work. Its greatest recommendation is that it is thoroughly practical, and that one can rest assured that every penny goes direct to some hard-pressed home. It is, indeed, a work of such a nature that one does not see how any woman, who can afford it, can resist this appeal for a shilling.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W., who hopes that all donations may be sent in by December 16, in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day. An official acknowledgment will be sent to each subscriber from Buckingham Palace.

Weekly Scotsman,
Dec: 12th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.—The Queen's Fund for providing work for women who, owing to the war, are suffering from unemployment or under-employment, reached on December 8th the total of £95,614, 4s. 7d. Out of that sum the subscriptions sent to the Scottish treasurer, the Marchioness of Linlithgow, only amounted to £1608, 15s. 6d., which means that the money expended in Scotland in connection with this scheme far exceeds the sum subscribed towards it by the Scottish people. Relief work-rooms and training schemes are being started in some of the principal towns of Scotland. These are financed by the Queen's Fund through the Scottish Committee, which has been constituted by the Scottish Advisory Committee, but all details of administration are left in the hands of each local committee. A feature is being made of the training in cookery and domestic economy, and in skilled trades where there is always a shortage of labour. In the Edinburgh work-rooms in Melville Street, a large number of women who have lost their regular employment are sewing and knitting garments for Belgian refugees, for hospitals, Red Cross, and for the destitute poor. One of the aims of the scheme is that no existing trade shall be interfered with, and therefore no garment made in the workrooms may be sold. A privilege which has just been granted by Royal permission is that Her Majesty's crown and initials may be placed on each article made throughout the country in the workrooms controlled by this Committee. In aid of the above fund a Thé chantant was held last Thursday afternoon in the Ladies' Club, 1 South Charlotte Street, when an excellent musical programme was submitted.

The Pall Mall Gazette,
Dec: 12th. 1914.

WORKGIRLS' THANK OFFERING.

Among those who have sent their shillings to the Queen's Work for Women Fund are a number of workgirls. These girls were unemployed when war broke out, like thousands of their sisters, but they have since gained employment through the medium of the fund, and the shillings which they have sent to the fund are given as a thank offering.

Shillings continue to arrive from all parts of the country and from all classes of men and women. Although the appeal is addressed mainly to women, everybody can help.

A shilling is suggested as a minimum subscription. It is a useful and convenient sum, but there are many people who can afford more than a shilling, and, whatever it is, they should send it to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the honorary treasurer of the fund, at 33, Portland-place, London, W.

The Daily Herald,
Dec: 12 th. 1914.

653/34

THE disgraceful manner in which women are underpaid and overworked is illustrated by an incident in Glasgow. Some middle-class women have formed themselves into a committee, and appealed to a workgirl to subscribe each week towards the "Queen's Work for Women Fund to Help Our Unfortunate Sisters." The Queen's workrooms pay 10s. a week, which is little enough to put it mildly, for forty hours' work. The girl who is asked to subscribe receives 11s. for 54 hours, and some girls beside her receive less. The contemptible meanness of the rich beggars description. It is noteworthy that the fund for Christmas presents for the soldiers amounts to over £120,000; the fund for providing work for women out of work through the war does not yet reach £100,000, largely subscribed by people not well to do. What parched peas of souls the rich have to be sure. Still, perhaps they are worrying over the investment of the extra profits obtainable from Army contracts and armament manufactures.

The Sunday Times,
December 13 th. 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

Shillings for the Queen's Fund

CHRISTMAS-TIME APPEAL TO FIND WORK FOR WOMEN.

Among the numerous appeals to which the war has given rise the Queen's Work for Women Fund is certainly the most noble in conception and probably the most practical in its ideal.

It was inaugurated by Her Majesty to meet the terrible crisis for women workers which came immediately after the outbreak of the war. Then 40,000 women and girls were thrown out of employment in London alone and a similar distressing state of affairs prevailed throughout the country.

The disaster, however, which threatened scores of thousands of homes maintained or supported by women throughout the country was met by prompt and businesslike means.

By highly specialised labour exchange methods work was diverted from factories already too busy to cope with their orders to workrooms which would otherwise have been closed.

Not only that, but many new workrooms of an experimental and instructive kind have been opened for training women in various industries.

So energetic indeed has the Central Committee proved itself that upwards of fifty schemes have been approved and sanctioned. But the completion of these schemes entails an outlay of £250,000 the first year. And though the response of the public has already been generous additional funds are needed.

Hence the special Christmas-time appeal which has been made by Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary of the fund. It was an appeal first issued on Monday last and was addressed in particular to women. Every woman in the country indeed who could afford it was asked to send a shilling during the week.

This special appeal closes to-day, but even to-day it is not too late very considerably to augment the success of this enterprise. Every woman who contributes can have the full satisfaction of knowing that her subscription will not be wasted in charitable doles; every shilling provides a shillingsworth of work for some woman or girl who is struggling either to maintain or to assist to maintain her home in the midst of adversity. Mrs. Pearson believes that every woman will gladly spare something, if it is only realised what every shilling means in the way of comfort and hope.

All subscriptions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, The Queen's Work for Women Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, W., who hopes that all donations may be sent in by December 16 in order that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

The Scotsman,
Dec: 13 th. 1914.

653.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Edinburgh, December 10, 1914.

SIR,—As one of the Queen's Council, I have been commanded by Her Majesty to collect for the "Queen's Work for Women Fund" in the county of Elgin and Moray.

The need is great, and the Queen "appeals to the women of Great Britain to help their less fortunate sisters through this fund." The Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, has been appointed honorary treasurer for Scotland.

A Committee has been formed on the same lines as the Central Committee on Women's Employment to draw up schemes dealing with unemployment among women in Scotland, and is sitting in Edinburgh; but schemes are useless unless the funds are forthcoming. Every subscription received helps some woman, now without work, to obtain useful paid employment. Many women and girls who before the war were fully employed are now idle, and there is much distress.

The management of local schemes is in the hands of the local representative Committees and the Women's Employment Sub-Committee appointed by them. These Committees are now working in many of the large towns.

Already many schemes have been approved, involving a very large expenditure, and money is urgently required to help forward the work.

Some of the schemes include the making of cradles and maternity outfits, training women to cook and act as sick-room helps, remodelling old clothes, pulping fruit, and drying vegetables.

I have visited some of the smaller workrooms in Edinburgh, and can testify to the useful work which is being done. Many are busy lining soldiers' waistcoats with warm material, and making old clothes look like new, so that the wounded may have something warm and tidy to wear when they leave hospital. At another house there is a domestic training centre, where women are employed in cooking for the workgirls—an excellent two-course dinner can be had at 3d. a head—and the girls themselves are prepared for domestic service.

I shall gratefully acknowledge large or small donations, and in due course a receipt will be sent from Buckingham Palace to each contributor.—I am, &c

EDITH MORAY.

P.S.—Remittances should be made payable to "The Countess of Moray," and all communications should be addressed:—The Countess of Moray, at 31 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

The Daily Telegraph,
Dec. 14 th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund at noon on Saturday reached the sum of £96,658 3s 8d.

A great public meeting will be held in the Queen's Hall, Langham-place, on Wednesday evening, when the chair will be taken by Lady Frances Balfour. The speakers will include Mrs. Henry Fawcett, Professor Gilbert Murray, Sir George Pragnell, Lady Roxburgh, Miss Helen Ward, and Dr. Florence Willey.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

The finished cradles and baby garments made by unemployed women are going out from the Queen's work-rooms now to poor East-end mothers, and are being gratefully received. There will be many a little "Mary" in East London this winter, for these baby clothes are marked with an "M," and the cradles are looked upon as gifts from the Queen, and the proud mothers will never forget it. Twin girls who have been born to one mother are to be "Mary" and "Victoria," both called by her Majesty's names. They lie top and bottom of the "Queen's cot," which is placed on two chairs by the fire in the daytime and close to the bed at night.

The East-end Mothers' Lying-in Home sends nurses out to eighty mothers on an average every month, besides receiving sixty in the cosy, well-equipped home in Commercial-road. There is no doubt there as to the cradles and baby garments being wanted. "A mother brought a baby to show us yesterday," said one of the sisters, "and it was limp with cold. It had not a bit of flannel on it, only two petticoats—one flannelette, one cotton—and a flannelette dress with short sleeves. The hat was borrowed from a younger sister."

Glasgow Eng. Times,
Dec: 14 th. 1914.

The Queen's Fund.

An interesting fact in connection with Princess Mary's Gift Book is that the production of the beautiful volume has given employment to so many women, for although it was not carried through by women workers only, a great many women were, naturally, employed in the work of folding, sewing, etc., and pasting and mounting the pictures. The proceeds of the book, of course, are going to the "Queen's Fund," and the originals of many of the pictures are to be sold for the benefit of the Fund. By the way, it is gratifying to note that the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment has received permission to use the Queen's initials and crown on the articles turned out from the workrooms under its control. To-day one of the Glasgow workrooms for unemployed women and girls is to be opened in the Park Parish Church Hall, under the auspices of the Sub-Committee on Employment of the Citizens' Relief Committee for Glasgow. A scheme for the training of machinists has been approved by the Scottish committee, and a workroom, where girls will be trained in the making of shirts, etc., will probably be opened shortly. In the workrooms at present under control of the committee, however, the principal work will be knitting, sewing, and altering garments for various institutions, also for the Belgian refugees and the Red Cross Society. Mr John M'Leod is president, and Mrs Baird Smith secretary of the workroom, under the auspices of the National Relief (Queen's Work for Women).

Glasgow Herald,
Dec: 14 th. 1914.

"WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund on Saturday reached the sum of £96,658 3s 8d. A public meeting on behalf of the fund will be held in the Queen's Hall, Langham Place, on Wednesday next, at 8 p.m. The chair will be taken by Lady Frances Balfour, and the speakers will include Mrs Henry Fawcett, Professor Gilbert Murray, Sir George Pragnell, Lady Roxburgh (hon. secretary of the fund), Miss Helen Ward, and Dr Florence Willey.

Lady Inverclyde, in a letter from Hartfield, Cove, Dumbartonshire, writes:—"As one of the Queen's Council I am commanded by Her Majesty to collect for this fund in Dumbartonshire, and will be grateful if you will help me by publishing this letter. The fund is a national one, and it is hoped that sympathisers who live in districts where there is little or no distress through unemployment amongst women will contribute towards the urgent help required in counties more unfortunately placed, and from which automatically a smaller amount in collections can only be expected. The fund is to be immediately applied to the assistance of schemes promoted by the Central Committee on Women's Employment and approved by the Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress. Within the burghs in this county the Provosts have made or are making arrangements to receive subscriptions. I shall be glad to receive donations and subscriptions from the county area, or these may be sent to Mr T. S. Harrison, Clydesdale Bank, Helensburgh, who has kindly consented to act as hon. treasurer. All subscriptions will be forwarded to the Marchioness of Linlithgow, hon. treasurer for Scotland, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, and eventually each subscriber will receive an acknowledgment from Buckingham Palace. The smallest subscriptions and any offers of help will be very gladly received."

Daily Telegraph,
Dec 14th 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund yesterday reached a total of £37,331.

The members of the mothers' meeting connected with St. Thomas's Church, Orchard-street, have given up their usual Christmas treat, and have sent £12 to the Fund through Lady Edith Cores.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

Daily Mail,
Dec: 14 th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S COTS.

In connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund the finished cradles and baby garments made by unemployed women are now going out from the Queen's workrooms to poor East End mothers, and many stories are told of the gratitude displayed by the recipients.

A newsvendor, who has had very little to do of late, stood looking down at the cradle he was going to take home to his wife. "I'm a proud man, I am," he said, "I've read of these cradles in my papers, but I never thought that I should have one of the Queen's cots."

The little white-faced mother now lies wrapped in a warm bed-jacket made at the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee, and the baby is to be called "Mary" because all her things are marked with an "M"—the Queen's stamp "M.R." beneath a crown.

The Queen has expressed her sincere thanks for a donation of £250, the second instalment from the profits on the sales of Mr. Paul A. Rubens's song "Your King and Country Want You," published by Messrs. Chappell and Co., through The Daily Mail.

The totals of the undermentioned funds on Saturday were:

The Queen's Work for Women Fund	£96,658
The Prince of Wales's Fund ...	£4,108,000
Princess Mary's Gift Fund	£136,889

Glasgow Record,
Dec: 15 th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

To the Editor of the "Daily Record."

Sir,—As one of the Queen's Council I am commanded by her Majesty to collect for this fund in Dumbartonshire.

The fund is a national one, and it is hoped that sympathisers who live in districts where there is little or no distress through unemployment amongst women will contribute towards the urgent help required in counties more unfortunately placed and from which automatically a smaller amount in collections can only be expected.

The fund is to be immediately applied to the assistance of schemes promoted by the Central Committee on Women's Employment and approved by the Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress.

Within the burghs in this county the Provosts have made or are making arrangements to receive subscriptions. I shall be glad to receive donations and subscriptions from the county area, or these may be sent to Mr. T. S. Harrison, Clydesdale Bank, Helensburgh, who has kindly consented to act as honorary treasurer

All subscriptions will be forwarded to the Marchioness of Linlithgow, honorary treasurer for Scotland, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, and eventually each subscriber will receive an acknowledgment from Buckingham Palace. The smallest subscriptions and any offers of help will be very gladly received.

CHARLOTTE INVERCLYDE.
Hartfield, Cove.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

7½ MILLION CHILDREN INTERESTED.

Her Majesty's appeal to the Sunday School scholars for the "Work for Women Fund" is meeting with a splendid response throughout the United Kingdom and Ireland.

A few voluntary collections have been taken already, but the majority of the schools are harvesting their offerings to send to the Fund early in the New Year. Children who have won class prizes are making personal sacrifices in various districts throughout the country. This sacrifice was suggested by one little girl, who, on hearing of the collection, approached her teacher and said:

"I want to give something to the Queen. You might send her my prize instead of giving it to me."

When the Queen heard of this she was much touched, and instantly suggested the issuing of certificates to the children who voluntarily made this personal sacrifice. The certificate is beautifully printed in colours, and will be something for every child to frame and keep as a reminder that a child's sacrifice was appreciated in the dark days of the great war.

Any children who win the Queen's certificate should ask their teachers to communicate with the hon. secretary, Lady Roxburghe, 33 Portland Place, London, W., marking their letters "R.P."

653/35 653.
Evening Standard,
Dec: 15 th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

SACRIFICES BY CHILDREN THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

CERTIFICATES AS SOUVENIRS.

Her Majesty's appeal to the Sunday school scholars is meeting with a splendid response throughout the United Kingdom and Ireland A few voluntary collections have been taken already, but the majority of the schools are harvesting their offerings to send to the fund early in the New Year.

Children who have won class prizes are making personal sacrifices in various districts throughout the country. This sacrifice was suggested by one little girl, who on hearing of the collection approached her teacher and said, "I want to give something to the Queen. You might send her my prize instead of giving it to me."

When the Queen heard of this she was much touched, and instantly suggested the issuing of certificates to the children who voluntarily made this personal sacrifice.

The certificate is beautifully printed in colours, and will be something for every child to frame and keep as a reminder that a child's sacrifice was appreciated in the dark days of the great war. Any children who win the Queen's certificate should ask their teachers to communicate with the hon. secretary, Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., marking their letters "R.P."

Morning Post,
Dec: 15 th 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£97,063 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £97,063 8s. 10d. The subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Collected by the Walthamstow Local Committee (further instalment)	79	3	0
By the Mayoress of Launceston	64	13	7
By the Urban District Council of Chislehurst (proceeds of concert).....	63	1	10
By the Urban District Council of Willesden (including £25 from Mrs. Acworth)	50	0	0
By the Town Commissioners of Balbriggan...	21	11	9
Mr. Waller (2nd donation)	21	0	0

Her Majesty's appeal to the Sunday School scholars is meeting with a splendid response. Children who have won class prizes are making personal sacrifices. This sacrifice was suggested by a girl who, on hearing of the Work for Women collection, approached her teacher and said: "I want to give something to the Queen. You might send her the value of my prize instead of giving it to me." When her Majesty heard of this she suggested the issuing of certificates to the children who voluntarily made this sacrifice. The certificate is beautifully printed in colours. Any children who win the Queen's certificate should ask their teachers to communicate with the Hon. Secretary, Lady Roxburgh.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Scotsman, Dec: 15th. 1914.

APPEAL TO THE WOMEN OF SCOTLAND.

Hopetoun House,
South Queensferry, December 12, 1914.

SIR,—May I, on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, make an appeal through the medium of your paper to the women of Scotland, inviting each one of them who is in a position to do so to contribute a shilling as a New Year's offering to the Fund?

Over sixty workrooms have been started in various parts of the United Kingdom, and a good deal has already been done in Scotland towards the alleviation of distress; but more money is urgently needed to carry out the schemes of work and training for unemployed women and girls. Those approved already involve an annual expenditure of over £250,000.

The knowledge that they are thereby helping the less fortunate of their sisters may tend to make those who subscribe feel that they are starting the New Year well. Every woman can augment this great New Year's offering, for those who feel that they are unable to afford a shilling can easily collect this sum; and may I add that those who are able to afford more will be giving much-needed assistance by sending several shillings. Donations should be sent to me at Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, by the end of December.—I am, &c.

DOREEN LINLITHGOW,
Hon. Treasurer for Scotland.

Daily Graphic. Dec 16th.

A facsimile of the certificate which is being given by the Queen to each Sunday school scholar who makes a personal sacrifice for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. The idea was suggested by the act of a little girl who sent her school prize as an offering towards the Fund.

Daily Telegraph, Dec. 18th. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

Not the least valuable part of the activities of the Central Committee on Women's Employment has been its efforts to obtain orders for firms whose operations would otherwise be at a standstill. During the last few days an order for khaki clothing sufficient to maintain a considerable number of women in employment for several months has been obtained for a large firm at Liverpool among whose workers there was considerable distress.

In the same way a mantle factory in London, on the advice of the committee, tendered to the War Office for a contract for 8,000 greatcoats.

With yesterday's contributions, which included £200 collected by the Marchioness of Bath and £111 collected by the Mayoress of Chester, the Queen's Fund has now reached a total of £98,318.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

The Times, Dec: 16th. 1914.

THE QUEEN AND WORK FOR WOMEN.

ROYAL RELIEF FUND.

From many communications received there obviously exists a considerable misunderstanding about the "Work for Women" Fund.

Some weeks after the National Relief Fund was inaugurated by the Prince of Wales it became evident that the provision of work for women was an urgent necessity. For this reason the Queen started a special fund to be devoted to providing employment for women unemployed through the war. The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which Lady Crewe is chairman and Miss Mary R. Macarthur honorary secretary, was thereupon appointed by Mr. Herbert Samuel, with the approval of the Queen, to devise, initiate, and supervise the necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the Committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies the final responsibility for the expenditure rests.

All the money collected in her Majesty's name by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund (and its Council) of which Lady Roxburgh is the honorary secretary and Mrs. C. A. Pearson the honorary treasurer, is handed to the National Relief Fund, and can only be spent on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women.

The Queen's cooperation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of the money to finance the schemes. All suggestions, therefore, for employing or helping women should be sent to the honorary secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment at 8, Grosvenor-place, S.W., and not to Buckingham Palace, while contributions should, as announced, be sent to the honorary treasurer of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund at 33, Portland-place, W.

Applications for employment or for help for individual women should be addressed to the secretary of the local representative committee at the Town Hall or urban district office in the locality in which the applicant resides.

Communications in respect of professional women should be addressed to the secretary, Professional Classes Sub-Committee, Board of Education, Whitehall, S.W.

The fund reached last night a total of £97,331.

The total of the Prince of Wales's Fund now amounts to £4,131,000.

A sum of £2,200 was received on Tuesday in response to Princess Mary's appeal for Christmas gifts to sailors and soldiers, and the total amount available up to date is £141,389.

An exhibition of pictures and arts and crafts is being held by the Professional Classes War Relief Council at 13, Prince's-gate, S.W. (by permission of Mr. G. Pierpont Morgan), and will remain open to the public free from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturdays included, until Christmas Eve.

Morning Post. Dec 17th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

CONTRIBUTIONS, £97,725.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached £97,725 2s. 11d. yesterday. The subscriptions included the following:

	£	s.	d.
Collected by the Mayoress of Tiverton	51	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Huddersfield (further instalment)	43	15	9
Twelfth Contribution from sale of Gifts in Kind by Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co. (Limited)	37	7	10
The Women of Hornsea	37	6	1
Collected in Restaurants of James Flemings (Limited)	25	0	0
Misses Sotheran (second donation)	20	0	0
Part Proceeds of Sale of Work by Rotherham House of Help for Friendless Girls	15	15	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Scarborough (further instalment)	15	0	0
United Methodist Church Sunday Schools, Nottingham District	11	6	9
Collected by U.D.C. of Marlow	11	1	0
Collected by Lady Milbank	10	18	6

The £50 acknowledged on Wednesday as having been collected by the Willesden Urban District Council should have read "Collected by the Willesden Ladies' Committee."

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

653/36 653.

Glasgow Herald, Dec: 16th. 1914.

"WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

The Marchioness of Linlithgow, in a letter dated from Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, appeals to the women of Scotland, inviting each one of them who is in a position to do so to contribute a shilling as a New Year's offering to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Over 60 workrooms have been started in various parts of the United Kingdom, and a good deal has already been done in Scotland towards the alleviation of distress; but more money is urgently needed to carry out the schemes of work and training for unemployed women and girls. Those approved already involve an annual expenditure of over £250,000. The knowledge that they are thereby helping the less fortunate of their sisters may tend to make those who subscribe feel that they are starting the New Year well. Every woman can augment this great New Year's offering, for those who feel that they are unable to afford a shilling can easily collect this sum, and those who are able to afford more will be giving much-needed assistance by sending several shillings. Donations should be sent to the Marchioness at Hopetoun House, South Queensferry, by the end of December.

The Scottish contributions to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund to date amount to £1653 15s 5d. The honorary treasurer for Scotland, to whom subscriptions should be sent, is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry. Communications regarding the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the honorary secretary, Miss Mary M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

Northern Daily Telegraph, Dec 17th 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

SIR,—Now that the week of our appeal is over, let me thank you most sincerely for all you have done to ensure its success. Considering the multitude of appeals at the moment, it has done extremely well—far better than most people anticipated. I shall trespass upon your generosity again, if I may, in asking you to publish a little account of the total on New Year's Day. Lady Roxburgh wishes to associate herself with this expression of gratitude.—Yours faithfully,

ETHEL PEARSON, Hon. Treasurer.
33, Portland-place, W., 15th Dec., 1914.

THE CHILDREN'S OFFERING.

Her Majesty's appeal to the Sunday-school scholars is meeting with a splendid response throughout the United Kingdom and Ireland. A few voluntary collections have been taken already, but the majority of the schools are harvesting their offerings to send to the fund early in the new year. Children who have won class prizes are making personal sacrifices in various districts throughout the country. This sacrifice was suggested by one little girl, who, on hearing of the collection, approached her teacher and said, "I want to give something to the Queen. You might send her my prize instead of giving it to me." When the Queen heard of this she was much touched, and instantly suggested the issuing of certificates to the children who voluntarily made this personal sacrifice. The certificate is beautifully printed in colours, and will be something for every child to frame and keep as a reminder that a child's sacrifice was appreciated in the dark days of the great war. Any children who win the Queen's certificate should ask their teachers to communicate with the hon. secretary, Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland Place, London, W., marking their letters "R. P."

Daily Mail, 17.12.14.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £97,725 2s. 11d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by Mayoress of Tiverton, £51; collected by Mayoress of Huddersfield (further instalment, including Mrs. Pratt's Sale of Work £30), £43 15s. 9d.; (twelfth) contribution from proceeds of sale of "Gifts in Kind," by Work for Women Fund department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., Oxford-street, W., £37 7s. 10d.

The Women of Hornsea, £37 6s. 1d.; collected in the restaurants of James Flemings, Ltd., £25; the Misses Sotheran, second donation, £20.

All communications should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all contributions and cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Sketch, December 16th. 1914. 653/37 653.

THE DISAPPEARING WALL OF THE QUEEN'S W.F.W.F.

1. THE DISAPPEARING WALL OF LORD BLYTH'S TOWN HOUSE, PORTLAND PLACE, THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND: LADY ROXBURGH THE HONORARY SECRETARY, STANDING IN FRONT OF THE WALL.

The mechanical curiosity shown above is at Lord Blyth's town house, 33, Portland Place, now in use as the headquarters of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Her Majesty, at a recent visit, was much interested in the disappearing wall, which is massively built with elaborate panelling and has pictures on it. The mechanism is electric and controlled by touching a button. In No. 1, Lady Roxburgh, the Hon.

2. THE WALL DISAPPEARING INTO THE BASEMENT AND DISCLOSING THE GENERAL OFFICES OF THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND: AFTER LORD BLYTH HAD TOUCHED THE BUTTON.

Secretary of the Fund (standing, on the right), is seen in her office. In No. 2 (showing the wall descending into the basement), Lord Blyth is seen seated. In the background beyond the wall are members of the clerical staff in one of the rooms in which they are at work, so suddenly disclosed by the sinking of the wall. Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Treasurer of the Fund, is seen seated next Lady Roxburgh. [Photographs by G.P.U.] 653.

653/38

The Daily News & Leader,
Dec: 24th. 1914.

PRINCESS MARY'S BOOK.

A £10,000 Cheque for the Queen's Work for Women Fund

Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, publishers of "The Princess Mary's Gift Book," are able to announce the contribution of the sum of £10,000 to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

This handsome sum, which represents the first instalment of the profits on the publication, has been sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer of the fund

The publishers of this remarkable book announce that half a million copies have been sold. Within three weeks from publication over 400,000 copies were delivered to the trade.

The Gentlewoman,
Dec: 26th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

CHRISTMAS IN THE QUEEN'S WORKROOMS.

The women in the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment are to be paid for the Christmas holidays. The workrooms will be closed on December 25th and 26th, and reopened on the Monday morning, and the women returning to work will be paid for the two days missed. The workrooms will also be closed if possible at midday on December 24th, the workers being paid for the whole day. A very welcome Christmas gift of 500 thimbles has been sent by Sir George Pragnell, to be distributed among the women and girls working under the auspices of the Queen's Fund.

QUEEN VISITS HEADQUARTERS OF HER FUND.

The Queen, on the eve of leaving town for Sandringham, paid a visit to 33, Portland Place, London, W., the headquarters of her "Work for Women" Fund. Her Majesty was attended by the Lady Bertha Dawkins and Mr. E. W. Wallington, C.M.G., C.V.O. Her Majesty was received by Lady Roxburgh (the Hon. Secretary) and Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson (the Hon. Treasurer). Others present included the Hon. Mrs. Francis McLaren, the Hon. Marguerite Joicey, Mrs. Heron Maxwell, Miss Lessing, Miss Gibson, Miss Fielden, Lord Blyth, Mr. Dudley Myers, and Mr. Valentin.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland Place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor Place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Glasgow Weekly Herald,
Dec: 26th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

FROM TYPEWRITING TO DOMESTIC SERVICE.

Over 100 unemployed women have already responded to Australia's invitation through the Queen to them. For £1, which the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund will pay, the girls are to be taken to Australia and work in domestic service found for them. £1 is also to be given to them on arrival, and complete outfits for each girl are being made in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. So eager are widows to go—for the invitation is extended to them—that it is necessary to ask for birth certificates from women over 30. The age limit is 35 years. Marriage certificates have also been found necessary, for deserted wives are apt to think they are widows. A great many business girls are going very willingly to take up domestic service. Among them are typists, dressmakers, cashiers, shop-girls, and factory workers.

The Queen, Dec: 26th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Restaurant for Training Cooks.

A RESTAURANT run by unemployed women, under the supervision of the central committee on women's employment has been opened at the headquarters of the committee. Luncheons for 3d. and 7d. are served every day and a number of dishes à la carte. On an average 100 customers are served every day, these being confined to the staff of the central committee and the workers from the adjacent contract workrooms and central depot. The need for such a restaurant has been felt since the work of the committee began, both on account of the distance of the workrooms from restaurants, and the expense to working women engaged in a West-end district. Since very suitable premises were available in the basement of the large house lent to the committee for offices, it was resolved to combine a restaurant with a cookery training centre for some of the unemployed women of Westminster. Dining rooms have been simply furnished, and the kitchen is of good size and convenient. There are ten women at present under the instruction of a cook-instructress from the National Training School of Cookery. They have all been thrown out of work through the war, and to the majority cookery is a new art.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All communications respecting the work of the central committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. MacArthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary or the local representative committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Methodist Recorder,
Dec: 31st. 1914.

Sunday School Notes.

Our Sunday Schools are responding magnificently to the many appeals that are being made to them just now. Some of these are annual, and some of them are special through the War. I am more than glad to know that in many instances the contribution to the Children's Home is larger than usual. Those who were at the annual meeting at the Queen's Hall must have felt their hearts strangely moved with a desire to help Mr. Smith in his splendid work. Our schools also have not neglected the appeal sent by "The Queen's Work for Women Fund." And now there comes another from Mrs. Bruce Williams, the wife of General S. H. Bruce Williams. It runs thus:—

"There is an immediate need of sea boots and waders, waterproofs (khaki or black), and oilskins, for the use of the troops, numbering many thousands, waiting at No. 1 Base (France). Owing to the recent wet and stormy weather the camps are literally quagmires, and the tents are without floors. The men are never dry night or day. Will yachtsmen, fishermen, and others, give what they can, and so ameliorate the hardships of our soldiers waiting their turn?

"Depot for receiving above: 8, Beauchamp Place, London, S.W. All communications to be addressed to the wife of the Comamnder, No. 1 Base."

I am not going to offer any apology for this appeal. My own conviction is that we have to give—give—give—and that with a very thankful heart and a willing mind. We owe our power to give, our uninjured homes, and possibly our life itself, to our men for whose needs General Bruce Williams appeals.

Glasgow Evening Times,
Dec. 28th. 1914.

Queen's Work for Women.

In addition to the Glasgow workrooms financed by the Queen's Fund, there is a workroom at Clydebank. In Edinburgh there are three workrooms and two domestic training schemes, while other schemes for the benefit of women thrown out of employment as a result of the war are on foot in Leith, Stirling, and Aberdeen. It should be borne in mind, by the way, that this fund in Scotland is managed by a committee quite distinct from the Central Committee in London. The work in Scotland is carried on by a special committee and officials, and the methods are often totally different from those employed by the committee in London.

* * *

Edinburgh Evg. Dispatch,
Jan. 1st. 1915.

653/39 653.

COLLECTION.

Message from the Queen.

TO THE EDITOR.

The amount realised by the "Domestic Servants' Collection" in Edinburgh for December is £129, 18s. 4d. This sum is £14 less than that collected last month, when a number of donations were given which will not be repeated. The near approach of Christmas and the Near Year had naturally a slight effect in diminishing the contributions in December.

Half the proceeds are devoted to the Prince of Wales's Fund and the other half to the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

A very cordial message has been sent through the Marchioness of Linlithgow to the contributors by Her Majesty, who expresses her pleasure at such a "splendid contribution."

> "The Queen is most touched by the generous thought which has prompted the generous collection among the domestic workers of Edinburgh, and she gratefully appreciates the ready response they have made to her appeal."

The kind message may in part console those maidens who would have preferred their contributions more directly to benefit the "Tommies." This is a sentiment with which all can sympathise, but let it be borne in mind that there is a limit to the ambulances required as well as to the warm clothing capable of being worn, whereas there is practically none to the needs of the "home which Tommy's left behind him," and in helping it lies one of the most effective ways of saying "Thank you" to our men at the front.

CONSTANCE DE LA COUR (Hon. Sec.),
17 Inverleith Row,
Pro E. M. MILLAR (Convener.)

Daily Telegraph,
Jan: 1st. 1915.

QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

RESULT OF SHILLING APPEAL.

Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary, of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, announce that their special Christmas-time appeal for shillings to provide women with work has produced the splendid total of 167,446 shillings, equivalent to £8,372 6s.

Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh desire to thank all those who have so generously responded to the appeal. They regard the total realised as exceedingly gratifying, not only as evidence of the confidence of the public in the practical nature of the measures of help which are being carried out, but also as a guarantee of the popularity and prosperity of the fund in the future.

The Fund yesterday reached a total of £119,289 11s 7d. The day after the Queen's Fund reached £100,000 it was swollen by the pouring in of £10,000 in one sum—the first instalments of the profits of the Princess Mary's Gift Book.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

Daily Citizen,
Jan: 1st. 1915.

167,446 SHILLINGS.

NEW YEAR'S GIFT TO QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the hon. treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary, of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, announce that their special Christmas-time appeal for shillings to provide women with work has produced the splendid total of 167,446 shillings—equivalent to £8,372 6s.

Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh desire to thank all those who have so generously responded to the appeal. They regard the total realised as exceedingly gratifying, not only as evidence of the confidence of the public in the practical nature of the measures of help which are being carried out, but also as a guarantee of the popularity and prosperity of the fund in the future.

Daily Citizen,
Jan. 2nd. 1915.

WOMEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN.

SPLENDID WAR SERVICE UNDER THE QUEEN.

Four months have passed since the "Queen's Work for Women" banner was unfurled. Since then the Queen's own words, "Employment is better than charity," have been adopted as the war cry for women throughout the country.

In the strength of their appeal two committees have done strenuous work. On the one hand the collecting committee has achieved a total of £119,289 for the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and, on the other, the Central Committee on Women's Employment has set in motion the machinery for providing work for women wherever it is needed.

A survey of the activities of these twin committees reveals a record of astonishing work.

The Collecting Committee shows the following result from its many-sided efforts. The fund grew thus:—

September	£67,218
October	£81,972
November	£94,447
December	£119,287

It has mounted by many aids: Flower days, flag days, whist drives, lectures, Sunday school collections—to which it is estimated 7,000,000 children have had opportunities of contributing—bazaars, concerts—notably a series arranged by Mme. Clara Butt, which have already realised £1,500—and Princess Mary's Gift Book, of which more than 500,000 copies have been sold.

SOCIAL EXPERIMENT

The Central Committee on Employment, on their part, have devoted themselves to the double task of preventing unemployment and dealing with that already prevailing.

To steady trade, at the very outset, they restarted 30 West-End workshops, which were on the point of closing down. Big orders were diverted into needy directions, until some 130 firms were receiving work through the committee; contracts were secured from the French Government for 10,000 flannel belts and 10,000 shirts to be supplied weekly, and from the War Office. Grants have been made for workrooms in 12 boroughs outside London; girls have been taken from the East End and placed on the land as fruit-growers; investigation has been made as to the possibilities of new industries, such as toy-making; and outfits and other assistance given to enable 550 unemployed girls to emigrate to Australia. There is also a scheme for the training of juveniles in co-operation with the education authorities.

In splendid faith that the funds will come, sanction has been given to schemes which already involve an estimated expenditure of £250,000.

Daily Mail,
Jan. 2nd. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £121,149 13s. The day's subscribers included:

Sixth contribution from Scottish Branch, per Lady Linlithgow, £668 6s. 1d.; "From Shanghai," per Hong-Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, £531; London Teachers' Association, £250; Hon. F. H. Baring, £105; Mrs. Tetley, £25; collected by Lady Henderson, per Lady Wantage, £21 9s. 8d.; collected by Mayoress of Tenby (further instalment), £18 8s.; Mrs. Eleanor Colvin Smith, per British Linen Bank, £10; Pupils of Southlands School, Exmouth, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Star,
Jan. 2nd. 1915.

"WORK FOR WOMEN."

A War Scheme and Some Missing Figures.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund sends out an interesting account of its achievements since it was started four months ago It will be scanned with particular curiosity by those correspondents who have written to us criticising the work of this organisation

The fund claims to have collected £119,289, and (in the words of the account now presented) "to have set in motion the machinery for providing work for women wherever it is needed."

A Practical Side to the Scheme.

The second claim is the one that has the more practical importance.

The fund says it has opened 13 experimental workrooms in London and 5 domestic economy experimental training centres; 21 boroughs in London have opened workrooms, some with training schemes in addition, and 35 outside London; schemes for training unemployed women as sick-room helps have been started in the East-end and in St Pancras; about 130 firms (dressmakers, blousemakers, etc.) have received work on contracts obtained by the fund, such as 10,000 belts for the French Army and 10,000 shirts weekly; unemployed factory girls from the East-end have been taken to Radlett to train in fruit-growing and horticulture; a grant has been approved to send 550 unemployed girls to Australia; and a new fruit-pulping industry has been started in the West of England for unemployed factory girls.

Figures Wanted.

It is a fault of the fund's statement that no estimate is given of the actual number of women who are now at work provided by the fund; and nothing is said about what system is adopted for the payment of those who are so employed.

Definite figures would have been better than the paragraphs in which there are vague allusions to these matters.

This does not help us to form any judgment on the complaints of under-payment for work obtained through the fund, and of long delay between the application for work and the provision of it.

A Specimen Complaint.

A specimen of these complaints is that which reaches us from a lady who, after nine years as nurse, companion, and housekeeper to an invalid lady, became unemployed through her patient's death. Having come to the end of her savings, she applied to the fund some 13 weeks ago for work at knitting for the troops. She says:—

"I was given a belt that took about nine days to do, as unsuitable needles were sent, and I had to buy others at the cost of 9d., and to spend a 1s. fare to take the belt to Portland-place (the offices of the fund). I was paid 1s. 6d.! The 9d. I spent for needles was not refunded.

Nine Hours for a Shilling.

"Since that, the knitting being my only means of subsistence, I have applied for more work to the secretary. I got wool and knitted nine pairs of mittens for our soldiers, the time taken to knit a pair being nine hours close work, for the small sum of 1s. per pair!"

In view of the fund's claim that it is opening up hopes of finding "a better way for women than in some of the sweated trades," a clear statement of the rates of payment made, and the average earnings per hour of the women whom the fund employs is very desirable.

The allegations on both sides could then be tested.

Manchester Courier, Jan: 4th. 1915.

Practical Lessons in Shopping.

An infinite amount of good is being done by the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and one particular instance that has been brought to my notice is deserving of all praise. Marketing has been added to the curriculum at the domestic economy training centre for unemployed girls, and this is how it is practised. Under the charge of an older woman, experienced in what she calls "baiting" (bargaining), about six girls go out each morning to buy food for a dinner for the forty women who come to the dining centre from the neighbouring workrooms. The shopping party has ten shillings to spend, and having been told the menu for the day the girls know exactly what they have got to buy. They go to the shops or stalls at which they are accustomed to shop, and are taught to pick out fresh-looking vegetables and sound fruit, and to be careful to shun "bad boilers" among potatoes. The different pieces of meat for various ways of cooking are pointed out to them, and they are shown how to distinguish between English and frozen meat. The girl who cannot tell a scrag from a breast of mutton earns the scorn of the others. They only buy the quantity required for the day, pudding, etc., so that they shall know for themselves exactly what is needed. Afterwards they cook what they have bought, being open to the criticism of the dinner customers. The girls, who once bought hard meat, have never forgotten it. With this practical instruction it is possible to believe that the recipients will make better wives than would otherwise have been the case.

Birmingham Post, 5.1.15.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

AN APPEAL FROM CRADLEY HEATH.

The Rowley Regis and District Women's Employment Joint Sub-committee, established in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund, have opened experimental workrooms at the Workers' Institute, Cradley Heath, to find employment, as far as possible, for women who have been thrown out of work in consequence of the war. The areas covered by the sub-committee are Dudley, Cradley, Quarry Bank, Lye, and Rowley Regis. Included in the scheme of work will be the making up of garments and the mending and altering of cast-off clothing, and the sub-committee make an urgent appeal to all residents in the above areas for gifts of travellers' samples, remnants, and cast-off clothing. The finished garments will be distributed free amongst the very poorest classes. All gifts of this kind should be sent to the joint hon. secretaries at the Workers' Institute, Cradley Heath.

War-Time Work for Women.

Within the first week or two the organisers of the Queen's Work for Women Fund have recognised the special needs of the middle-class girl out of work because of the war by opening a bureau of assistance for typewriters and secretaries at Bridewell, in the City of London. Much more, however, will need to be done in this direction, and those in charge of the fund will have it more and more brought home to them that the factory girl is not the only type of woman worker who most wants help just now. Actresses, governesses, vocalists, and practitioners of various of the gentle arts have been hit severely, and the conditions sought to be imposed upon them as necessary preliminaries to aid are in many cases inapplicable, and in some would seem inquisitorial. It may also be feared that certain firms assisted by the fund with orders are profiting by the opportunity to "sweat" the women who do the task for them, and I have had cases laid before me where admirable work has had to be done at a price which, in the nature of things, would not keep body and soul together. These instances are furnished by the type of girl who is in the utmost physical and moral danger, and who is the most difficult to help, because she has been comfortably nurtured, and is shy of showing her poverty even to the best-intentioned helper. The task of aiding such, however, is incumbent on those who are raising public funds, and it should not be despaired of.

Glasgow Herald, Jan: 4th 1915.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £121,578 14s 9d. Marketing has been added to the curriculum at the domestic economy training centre for unemployed girls at Bethnal Green, opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Under the charge of an older woman experienced in what she calls "baiting" (bargaining) about six girls go out each morning to buy food for a dinner for 40 women. The latter come to the dining centre from the neighbouring workrooms. The girls are taught to pick out fresh-looking vegetables and sound fruit, and they are careful to shun "bad boilers" among potatoes. The different pieces of meat for various ways of cooking are pointed out to them, and they are taught to distinguish between English and frozen meat.

Daily Mail, Jan: 4th. 1915

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached on Saturday a total of £121,578 14s. 9d. Latest subscribers:

Collected by Mayoress of Hammersmith, £84 2s. 3d.; further instalment, including proceeds of whist drive, £33 4s., and of concert, £29 13s. 4d., promoted by sub-committee, and proceeds of "American Tea" promoted by Mrs. Sankey, £15. Subscriptions of members of Lloyd's per Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, £52 10s., including Mr. G. H. Da Costa, Mr. K. G. R. Valsey, Mr. H. B. Foster, and Mr. P. Janson, £10 10s. each.

Miss Stancomb Wills, further monthly donation, £50; Sabbath School Society for Ireland, £31 18s. 2d.; Mrs. Florence Ward, £25; collected by Urban District Council of Edenderry, £23 4s. 3d., including proceeds of jumble sale, £14 10s. 9d.; collected by Urban District Council of Ammanford, £20; Mr. L. J. Diggle, £10 10s.; Mr. Charles E. Lloyd, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund amounted on Saturday to £4,294,000.

Monmouthshire Reg. Post, Jan: 5th. 1915.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

Subscriptions to Local Fund.

A sub-committee has been formed under the chairmanship of the Mayoress of Newport to undertake the provision of work for women who may be out of employment in consequence of the war, and, as far as possible, to prevent unemployment among women.

Subscriptions towards the local fund are earnestly asked for to enable the work to be successfuly carried on, and may be sent to Mr. W. T. Duke Williams, National Provincial Bank of England, Newport, hon. treasurer; or to Mr. C. P. Mitchell Innes, Town Hall, Newport, hon. secretary.

Orders for work and gifts of material will be a great assistance in achieving the objects of the sub-committee, and may be sent to the hon. secretary. All subscriptions will be acknowledged in the Press.

Am't previously acknowledged 295 13 2

Daily Mail, Jan. 6th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £122,009 13s. 8d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by Urban District Council of Merton and Morden (including proceeds of cafe chantant, per Mrs. Morley, £17 13s. 10d.), £42 15s.; collected in United Methodist Sunday Schools in Plymouth and East Cornwall district, £33 2s. 3d.; Miss Morris, £15; collected by ex-Mayoress of Haverfordwest, further instalment, £14 19s. 11d. Mr. Joseph Clarkson, £12 10s.; per Mayoress of Chichester, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund yesterday reached £4,312,000.

653/40 653.
Morning Post, Jan: 5th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£121,792 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £121,792 17s. 11d. The subscriptions included:

Collected by the Mayoress of Northampton (proceeds of Concert and Whist and Bridge Drive)	£64	15	0
Proceeds of a Sale of Work held by the Scholars of Knowsley C.E. School	33	0	0
Collected by the Lady Hollenden (includ- Mrs. Milburn, £10 10s.)	30	5	5
Mr. A. P. Percival	20	0	0
Collections in Bakewell	10	0	0

The publishers report that the sales of the Princess Mary's Gift Book have been in no way affected by the Christmas Holidays. Thousands of copies of the Book have been sent by generous persons to sailors on the high seas and soldiers at the Front, and to wounded sailors and soldiers in hospitals and convalescent homes all over the country.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed Queen's Work for Women Fund Account. All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Glasgow Herald, Jan: 6th. 1915

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Scottish subscriptions for the Queen's Work for Women Fund to date amount to £2512 1s 5d, last week's receipts including a third contribution of £200 from the Scottish Teachers' Fund for War Relief. £64 19s 2d as a further contribution from the Edinburgh Domestic Servants' Collection for National Relief, £40 from Langholm, and £15 15s from the Old Girls' Club of Glasgow High School for Girls. The Scottish treasurer for the Queen's Fund, to whom subscriptions should be sent, is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry. Communications regarding the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the honorary secretary, Miss M. M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund amounts to £122,009.

The Daily Telegraph, Jan. 7th. 1915.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

To-day the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund amounts to £122,260. Contributions received yesterday include:

Collected by the Mayoress of Weymouth, £40; collected by the Countess of Bosse, £30; collected by the Mayoress of Dewsbury, £29 7s 6d; collected by the Mayoress of Leeds (further instalment), £22 2s 3d; Mrs. Henderson, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

A richly-embroidered satin coat, said to have been once the property of an Emperor of China, has been sent to Messrs. D. H. Evans (Ltd.), Oxford-street, to be sold for the Fund. The fabric of the garment is of purple-black satin, and the embellishments are in different shades of blue, the turned back part of the sleeves being embroidered in rainbow colours.

Morning Post, Jan: 7th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

TOTAL CONTRIBUTIONS £122,260.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £122,260 13s. 5d. The subscriptions included:

Collected by the Mayoress of Weymouth ...	£40	0	0
By the Countess of Rosse ...	30	0	0
By the Mayoress of Dewsbury ...	29	7	6
By the Mayoress of Leeds (further instalment) ...	22	2	3
Mrs. Henderson ...	10	0	0

A richly embroidered coat, once the property of an Emperor of China, has been sent to Messrs. D. H. Evans, Oxford-street, to be sold for the Queen's Work for Women Fund. For 170 years it was preserved in an air-tight case in the Palace of Peking and was held in veneration. The fabric of the garment is of purple black satin, and the embellishments are in different shades of blue. The turned back part of the sleeves is embroidered in rainbow colours. It was brought to England after the last Chinese Revolution.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Scotsman, Jan: 7th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

January 3, 1915.

SIR,—Some days ago I had a number of papers sent me in connection with the above Fund—among them certain leaflets for the "boys and girls" of my Sunday school. In these leaflets the boys and girls are urged to raise what money they can for the Fund, and are told—"It will be a good work to do, and you will do it with your hearts, because you will be proud and glad to have helped England and other English children in their hour of need." Now, the work would certainly be good, but is England really so put to it that she requires to make special appeals to Scottish children for aid in the present crisis? And this, too, when in Scotland we have, proportionately at least, as many women and children whose needs are every whit as great. Had the appeal been for the women and children of Great Britain I could have understood it, but when it is for the women and children of England only, I honestly think it too much. Surely wealthy England can look after her own women and children. I am not aware that Scotland in her distress has made any similar appeal to the boys and girls of the sister nation.—I am, &c.

D. W. Y.

Daily Mail, Jan. 9th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £123,538 12s. 10d. The day's subscribers included:

Third contribution from Jumble Sale Agency, £50; proceeds of bazaar held December 11 at St. Leonard's College, Amherst Park, £20; further proceeds from sale of "gifts in kind" by the Work for Women Fund Department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., £13 3s. 2d.; collected by Lady Ela Russell, including collected by Mrs. William Pollard, £10, £10 18s. 5d.; collected by Mayoress of West Bromwich, £10 10s.; collected by Mayoress of Fowey, £10 0s. 6d.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's Fund yesterday reached £1,336,000. The committee have allocated in all £1,420,000 for the relief of distress.

Daily News & Leader, Jan: 7th. 1915.

EMPEROR'S COAT FOR SALE.

A richly-embroidered and beautiful coat, once the property of an Emperor of China, has been sent to Messrs. D. H. Evans, Ltd., Oxford-street, to be sold for the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. For 170 years this garment was preserved in an air-tight case in the Palace of Pekin and was held in veneration. The fabric is of purple black satin, the embellishments are in different shades of blue, the turned-back part of the sleeves being embroidered in rainbow colours. It was brought to England after the last Chinese Revolution.

Shields Gazette, Jan: 9th. 1915.

Queen's Work for Women Fund.

(To the Editor of the "Shields Daily Gazette.")

Sir,—I should be glad if you would allow me to mention through your columns that I have received the following amounts in aid of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund:—Mrs Hayton, £1 1s 0d; Miss Hayton, 5s.; Mrs Sinclair, 5s; Sale of Copies of Song "Children of Britain," £1.

May I remind your readers that the purpose of the committee of The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is to obtain money for the relief of unemployment among women. It is a collecting and not an administrative body; and the funds it is raising will be spent solely on schemes devised by the Central Committee on Women's Unemployment. The primary function of the Central Committee is to think out and put into operation, schemes that while avoiding any interference with ordinary trade, will provide work for women and girls whom the war has thrown out of employment. The Queen's message to the nation points out that the sufferings of war fall harder on women than on men, but hardest of all on the women who are deprived of their means of livelihood.

With permission, I propose to place in the banks subscription lists in aid of the fund, and I shall arrange to hand collecting books to any lady who may feel disposed to have one, on application at the Municipal Buildings, at any time, or to myself personally at the Municipal Buildings, on Wednesday, the 13th instant, where I shall be "At Home," from three to five p.m.—Yours, etc.,

E. USHER, Mayoress.

Mayor's Chambers, Municipal Buildings.

Daily Telegraph, January 11th. 1915.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund reached by noon on Saturday a total of £123,710 13s 6d. The day's subscribers included:

Miss K. Hawthorn	£25	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Hemel Hempstead: Proceeds of a small Entertainment arranged by the Mayoress	21	16	6
The Lady Egerton of Tatton: Prizes won by Pedigree Cattle	18	16	0
Collected by the Countess of Lonsdale (further instalment)	17	17	3
Captain J. E. Drummond	10	0	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

653/41

Morning Post, Jan: 8th. 1916.

653

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£123,338 CONTRIBUTED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £123,338 7s. 10d. The new subscriptions include:

The Scottish Branch, per the Marchioness of Linlithgow ...	£738	1	0
Collected by the Lady Mayoress of Birmingham (further instalment) ...	100	0	0
Collected at Westminster Abbey by the Dean of Westminster ...	48	15	9
Collected by the Lady Mayoress of York...	39	4	6
By the Mayoress of Plymouth (further instalment) ...	13	19	10
By the Viscountess Clifden (further instalment) ...	11	0	3
Misses Cundall ...	10	10	0
Lady Mary Morrison ...	10	0	0
Part Proceeds of a Sale of Work held at Upshire, Waltham Abbey, per Rev. F. B. Johnston ...	10	0	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Morning Post, Jan: 9th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£123,538 CONTRIBUTED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £123,538 12s. 10d. The subscriptions included:

Third Contribution from the Jumble Sale Agency ...	£50	0	0
Proceeds of a Bazaar held on December 11 at St. Leonard's College, Amherst Park ...	20	0	0
Further proceeds from the sale of "Gifts in Kind" by the Work for Women Fund Department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., Oxford-street ...	13	3	2
Collected by Lady Ela Russell (including collection by Mrs. William Pollard, £10) ...	10	18	5
By the Mayoress of West Bromwich ...	10	10	0
By the Mayoress of Fowey ...	10	0	6

The jumble sale at 39A, Charing Cross-road will contain a large variety of old china, bric-a-brac, and jewellery for sale, also some interesting pieces of early Georgian silver and Sheffield plate. Among the "Gifts in Kind" sent for realisation are included some mounted skins from Mr. John Fenton, Station-master of Boohudi, South Africa.

"Drilling Made Easy" is the title of a little book written by Mr. Fred. G. Shaw, in order to assist the education of recruits, by bringing thought suggestion to the aid of the instructor. The price of the publication is threepence, and all profits made by its sale will be devoted to the Fund.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Medical Times.
Jan: 9th. 1915.

War Notes.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, the Hon. Treasurer, and Lady Roxburgh, the Hon. Secretary, of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, announce that their special Christmas-time appeal for shillings to provide women with work has produced the splendid total of one hundred and sixty-seven thousand, four hundred and forty-six shillings, equivalent to £8,372 6s. Mrs. Pearson and Lady Roxburgh desire to thank all those who have so generously responded to the appeal. They regard the total realised as exceedingly gratifying, not only as evidence of the confidence of the public in the practical nature of the measures of help which are being carried out, but also as a guarantee of the popularity and prosperity of the Fund in the future. Four months have passed since the "Queen's Work for Women" banner was unfurled. Since then the Queen's own words, "Employment is better than charity," have been adopted as the war cry for women throughout the country. The well-to-do woman has whispered it as she sent off her cheque to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, the woman in employment has repeated it as she deducted a share of her salary for her unemployed sister, the out-of-work woman has kept hope alive on the words, and they have been the inspiration of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. In the strength of their appeal, two Committees have done strenuous work. On the one hand, the Collecting Committee has achieved a total of £119,289 for the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and on the other, the Central Committee on Women's Employment has set in motion the machinery for providing work for women wherever it is needed. Side by side, the two Committees have worked, and as the money has been subscribed the schemes of work have multiplied. On September 4th the Queen made her appeal, and in the first month £67,218 was contributed. The schemes of work promoted and approved by the Central Committee already involved an annual expenditure of nearly a quarter of a million. A grant had been approved to send 550 unemployed girls to Australia, for whom the Central Committee is providing outfits, one hundred paid women clerks had been offered to give assistance to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association, and maintenance was arranged for 50 girls who had been offered training scholarships.

Nottingham Guardian,
Jan. 11th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £125,710 13s. 6d.

A large number of dressmakers and tailoresses thrown out of work from West End business houses owing to the war, are now employed in the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment in connection with the fund.

The training in needlework which is part of the domestic economy course for unemployed girls at St. Pancras workroom is specialised in two directions—dressmaking and tailoring. A skilled forewoman is in charge of both workrooms, and the girls spend a month in each. The London County Council has agreed to give further instruction in needlework and home-dressmaking classes. Lectures on health are also to be given, and a course of physical drill.

Daily Mail
Jan 11th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached on Saturday a total of £123,710 13s. 6d. The day's subscribers included:

Miss K. Hawthorn, £25; collected by Mayoress of Hemel Hempstead, proceeds of a small entertainment arranged by mayoress, £21 16s. 6d.; Lady Egerton of Tatton, prizes won by pedigree cattle, £18 16s.; collected by Lady Lonsdale, further instalment, £17 17s. 3d.; Captain J. E. Drummond, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's Fund on Saturday reached £4,344,000.

Daily Mail
Jan: 12th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £123,855 18s. The day's subscribers included:

Miss Eloise Bridgman, proceeds of a concert at South Norwood, £45; Sunday School Society for Ireland, £25 6s. 5d.; Mrs. Hitchcock, further contribution from proceeds of sale of coins, £20; Miss Ruth H. Western, £15; Mr. John W. Western, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's Fund yesterday reached £4,359,000.

Daily Mail,
Jan: 13th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £124,431 6s. 6d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by Mayoress of Southampton, £200; first instalment from the British women of Manila, Philippine Islands, £150; collected by ex-Mayoress of Ruthin Mrs. M. J. Roberts, £92 8s. 2d.; Mr. and Mrs. Blake, per Lord Lieutenant of Surrey's Fund, £10 10s.; collected by Miss Walsham from members of warehouse of Messrs Welch, Margetson, and Co., £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's Fund yesterday reached £4,365,000.

Glasgow Herald,
Jan. 13th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Scottish subscriptions to date amount to £2686 16s 9d, last week's receipts including £45 15s 2d as the result of a patriotic sale in Lochgilphead. The Scottish treasurer of the Queen's Fund, to whom subscriptions should be sent, is the Marchioness of Linlithgow, Hopetoun House, South Queensferry. Communications regarding the work of the Scottish Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss M. M. Paterson, 20 Melville Street, Edinburgh.

Glasgow Herald,
Jan: 14th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

In connection with the effort which is being made at the instance of Lady Elgin to raise money for the Queen's Work for Women Fund in the county of Fife a meeting was held for the Dunfermline district in Dunfermline Council Chambers yesterday. The Countess of Elgin presided, and in addition to representative ladies from all parts of the district there were present Provost Husband and Mr John L. Jack, Town Clerk. Lady Elgin explained to the meeting the objects of the fund, and said that an endeavour was being made over the whole county of Fife to raise money in aid of the fund. It was proposed that funds should be procured by means of (1) articles in the local press drawing attention to the fund; (2) collections at all religious services on the first Sunday in February; (3) flower day on the last Saturday in January; (4) collections and subscriptions from shops, works, and dwelling-houses; (5) the sale of picture postcards by Sunday school scholars; and (6) the organisation of entertainments. It was mentioned that the use of the Drill Hall and the Opera House had been given for one day free, and a donation of £10 was intimated by Mrs Alexander Mitchell of Luscar. Mr Jack agreed to act as secretary to the fund, and Mr D. D. Blair, Burgh Chamberlain, as treasurer.

653/42 653
The Morning Post,
Jan: 14th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£125,068 CONTRIBUTED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £125,068 4s. The subscribers included:

Collected by the Mayoress of Stockport	£200	0	0
By the Mayoress of Chester (further instalment), Chester Women's Freedom League (result of the sale of badges and heather)	120	0	0
Sir Francis Trippel (fifth monthly donation)	100	0	0
Miss Du Pre	100	0	0
Mrs. Kirkwood (second contribution)	10	10	0
Mrs. Dodgson	10	0	0

In connection with the Fund a meeting of unemployed girl clerks was held yesterday by the London County Council at the Regent-street Polytechnic. The girls had been selected by the Central Committee on Women's Employment as candidates for commercial training, for whom they have approved a maintenance grant from the Queen's Work for Women Fund of 10s. per week, with up to 4s. for expenses. The committee is desirous during the time of widespread unemployment among women clerks to encourage them to improve their qualifications, rather than to find temporary occupation for them. A large number of those unemployed are only partially trained for business, and there is much need for improvement in general education. The meeting was held with a view to finding out the attainments of the girls and deciding the classes suitable for them. The London County Council's intentions with regard to the girls were explained to them. They would be expected to attend the whole course of classes, and would be regarded as ordinary students of the centres to which they were sent. It was pointed out to them that with such opportunities they would be able to get better posts when they returned to employment again. Four of the six free studentships offered by the City of London College have been taken by girls unemployed through the war, and recommended by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Dundee Advertiser,
Jan: 14th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND

West Fife Arrangements.

A meeting, convened and presided over by the Countess of Elgin, was held in Dunfermline with a view to starting a Queen's Work for Women Fund in West Fife. Those present included a number of influential women throughout the district. The Countess of Elgin explained that the primary function of the Central Committee of the Fund was to think out and set in motion various schemes for the employment of women who had lost their occupations through the war, which would not at the same time interfere with ordinary trade. The Committee considered and reported on schemes sent in by the District Committees or other bodies. It investigated the possibilities of a more equal distribution of such work as was available for women through the ordinary channels.

After some discussion Committees were appointed and arrangements made for taking collections at all religious services on the first Sunday in February; for a Flag Day on the last Saturday in January; for a collection of subscriptions in shops, works, and warehouses; for a sale of picture postcards by Sunday scholars; and for the holding of entertainments. In connection with the last mentioned, the use of two halls has been placed at the disposal of the Committee free of charge.

Christian Globe, Jan: 14th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

"I'd like to keep my hand in."

This is the pathetic plea in many of the workrooms opened by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Particularly is it so in the St. Pancras workroom where a large number of the workers are unemployed dressmakers and tailoresses from West-End business houses.

The dread of losing skill and speed is not one of the least of the ills of the war unemployment. Because of it, the training in needlework which is part of the Domestic Economy Cause for unemployed girls at St. Pancras workroom is specialised in two directions: dressmaking and tailoring. A skilled forewoman is in charge of both workrooms and the girls spend a month in each.

The material for the training is entirely second hand clothing which has been sent as a gift to the Central Committee. Riding-habits and tweed skirts are sent up to the Tailoring workroom where boys' suits, evercoats, caps and gaiters are made, while the softer materials go to the dressmakers.

Out of men's white shirts, embroidered collars for children have been made; pieces of fur are fashioned into fur sets; the stiffening in men's silk hats make children's hats, and flowers are made out of scraps of silk to trim them.

Everything is made as technical as possible. The girls learn the proper processes and when the clothes are made they are subjected to a close examination, and if not up to standard are returned for alteration.

The London County Council has agreed to give further instruction in needlework and home-dressmaking classes. Lectures on health are also to be given and a course of physical drill.

There is no difficulty in getting the girls to enter the training; their only question is about the wages. When they hear that they will be paid 10s. per week, volunteers come faster than the vacancies. At present 40 girls are going through the course.

Glasgow Record. Jan: 15th. 1915.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT-BOOK PICTURES.

Selfridge's, in Oxford Street, are exhibiting the original little gems of art which were contributed by the artists who illustrated the "Princess Mary's Gift Book."

It is well worth while to see this collection of pictures, if only to get some idea—possibly a vague one—of the artistic labour expended in the making of one of the most popular story books ever published.

At the entrance of the little picture salon on the first floor Shannon's picture of Princess Mary attracts first attention. It is a work of art that one day is destined to occupy a prominent place in some great historical collection.

On the walls of the salon some three dozen other sketches are hung. Each of them has her Royal Highness's monogram in a corner of the mount, and every one has its own individual interest.

All the profits of the sale go to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and you can spend anything from a guinea to fifty guineas for a single exhibit.

Daily Mail, Jan: 15th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £125,271 12s. 3d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by Urban District Council of Sittingbourne and Milton Regis, £34 15s. 8d.; collected by Lady Walker of Osmaston, £26 14s.; British Women's Guild in Siam, £25; collected by Mayoress of Tynemouth, £25; further contribution from proceeds of sale of "gifts in kind" from Work for Women Fund department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., £13 14s. 3d.; Mr. A. S. Churchill, £10 10s.; Messrs. Perry and Co., first instalment from proceeds of sale of the "Queen Mary" pen, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

Morning Post, Jan: 16th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£125,662 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £125,662 8s. 1d. The contributions included:

	£	s.	d.
Collected by the Mayoress of Chester (further instalment) (including proceeds of an entertainment per Mrs. Broom £70, Miss Bird £16)	120	7	8
Shilling Appeal Contributions received since New Year announcement	105	10	6
Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gibson	55	0	0
The British Ladies in Hankow (China)	26	6	7
Mrs. H. L. Cohen	10	10	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Denbigh (further instalment)	10	7	4
Admiral and Lady A. Colville	10	0	0

A London County Council domestic economy course of lessons for unemployed women is to be given in several of the Council's centres. Through the representations of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, classes have been arranged for the women who are going through domestic economy training in the Committee's experimental work-rooms. These work-rooms are situated at Stepney, Bethnal Green, Islington, and St. Pancras. The course arranged by the London County Council includes home cookery, home laundry, and health.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Morning Post, Jan: 18th. 1915

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£125,915 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached the total of £125,915 5s. 1d. The subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Collected by Countess Waldegrave	144	12	8
Mrs. Torrin	25	0	0
Mrs. Eric Riddiford, New Zealand	20	0	0
Collected by Lady Simeon, per Lady Baring	10	8	3

The task of finding trades for unskilled women workers who are thrown out of work through the war is one of those to which the Central Committee on Women's Employment has set its hand. Laundry work has been found to offer good openings, both in London and in the country, and the Central Committee has made arrangements with the Borough Polytechnic to take sixteen girls from the Committee's workrooms as pupils in their trade laundry schools. After the training the Polytechnic has no doubt that places can be found for the girls. There is always a shortage of skilled hand-ironers in London, while in some country districts laundries cannot get on for want of workers.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

653/43

Morning Post, Jan: 18th. 1915.

653

ANGLO-BELGIAN EXHIBITION.

The Women's International Art Club's Exhibition, opening on February 25, will be one chiefly of paintings and lace, and the entire entrance money will be divided between the Queen's Work for Women Fund and the Belgian Relief Fund. Few of the foreign members of the club will be exhibiting this year, but as many works by Belgian artists as possible will be included. The lace section is an important addition, designed to illustrate the lace industries of this country, and to show fine examples from abroad, and particularly from Belgium, some of which will be lent by collectors here, while others have been brought over by M. Paul Lambotte, Directeur des Beaux Arts. Most of the Brussels lace will be on sale for the benefit of the lace-makers, many of whom, unable to continue work for want of funds, are half-starving in their own land.

The Daily Mail. Jan: 19th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £126,022. The day's subscriptions amounted to £106 15s. 7d.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's Fund yesterday reached £4,415,000.

Daily Mail, Jan: 20th. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £126,364 2s. 4d. The day's subscribers included:

Balance of fund from Distressed Needlewomen's Institution, now closed, per Archdeacon Lawrence and Mr. John Palmer, £80; collected by Urban District Council of Padiham, £53; Ladies of Valparaiso and Vina del Mar, £49 10s.; collected by Mayoress of Battersea, £39 12s. 6d.; Bangkok British Women's Needlework Guild, £25; collected by Mayoress of Gloucester, further instalment, £11 12s. 3d.; collected by Urban District Council of Wadebridge, £10 15s. 2d.; Mrs. Perkins, £10; collected by Urban District Council of Teddington, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

Morning Post, Jan: 21st. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£126,657 CONTRIBUTED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £126,657 6s. 4d. The subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Collected in Rugby and District by Mrs. Arthur James and the Chairman of the Rugby Urban District Council (further instalment)	139	7	11
The Jumble Sale Agency (fourth instalment)	50	0	0
Collected by the Urban District Council of Bacup	25	0	0
Half Proceeds of a Concert given in the Borough of Newport, Isle of Wight (per the Mayor)	11	0	0
Mrs. Page (Rome), per Lady Rodd	10	0	0

The popular patriotic pendant, designed for the Fund, is now to be obtained at the Headquarters of the Fund, 33, Portland-place, London, in the form of a hatpin or safety-pin brooch. The design of this hand enamelled souvenir forms a cross of the Allies' Flags encircled with the words "One Standard—Honour—1914." Every purchaser of the half-guinea or 12s. 6d. souvenir becomes a contributor to the Fund and helps to provide work for women.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Star, Jan: 20th. 1915.

653/44

653.

The Dead Hero's Ring.

Pathos and Romance of the Queen's Work for Women.

LADY ROXBURGH,

Hon Secretary of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

IS there anything quite so cheering as the way money rolls in for every fund that can be suggested for the benefit of those at home and the comfort of those who have taken their stand for the defence of their honour and country? Most people have their pet funds, but the Queen's Work for Women Fund seems to have captured everybody, though women regard it as being peculiarly their own.

This sense of ownership has had some extraordinary expressions. Many people send fat cheques regularly, but the crowds who can only send their mites have never been content with this. Not to be outdone, they have put their wits to work to devise ways and means of augmenting the fund. Nothing has been too large to tackle, nor has anything seemed too small and trifling, if only it would turn in a few odd pennies, many shillings, or more pounds. And every giver has known that to the Queen herself, the wit and ingenuity, the effort and sacrifice that have gone to the securing of a handful of coppers is as warmly esteemed as if it had produced a record pile of banknotes.

The Queen's Mastery of Detail.

Not all realise the active part the Queen herself takes in this fund. At the headquarters where the moneys are received and the fund is administered, at the workrooms where employment is given to the women thrown out of work by the war, the Queen may arrive unexpectedly at any moment. Her knowledge of every detail of the organisation is astounding. The slightest difficulty is not too small for her Majesty to remember, to ask about, and to see through to the very end; nor does she hesitate to suggest improvements. The whole affair is such a personal matter to her that her Majesty holds every thread in her hand, and does everything possible to aid the big body of devoted helpers who are giving up all their time and energies to the cause. She reads the Press cuttings (there are already over 6,000 of them) with great attention, and one day carried off the last bundle in her muff.

One School Child's Happy Thought.

It was a small school child who started the plan which now interests some seven or more million school children.

One anxious little fellow, having naught else to give, sent the prize he had won at school to the Fund, asking if they could not sell it and keep the money. The Queen was touched, and, while accepting the laddie's generosity, felt that he must have some return. So she had sent from Buckingham Palace itself a large illuminated card certifying that her Majesty had received and accepted the school child's gift for the Fund. Multitudes of other little prize-winners all over the country are now following that first boy's example, and each prize-winner whose prize value goes to the Fund receives a similar certificate.

The Story of an Engagement Ring.

There are endless touching stories of the way in which the money is being raised. One woman who had nothing else to send, cut off her magnificent head of hair and sent it up; and a girl who wanted to give her all, when her sweetheart was killed in action, actually took her engagement ring from her finger and forwarded it, that it might be sold to help other women. Like a flash this example of devotion got known, and from every corner of the kingdom money to replace the sacrifice of the ring literally tumbled into the treasurer's hands. Some people even sent blank cheques, in their anxiety to lose no time. Telegrams came from would-be purchasers who wanted to return the ring, and one whole battalion of an Essex regiment said they were subscribing threepence or more a man that the girl might always be able to keep the token of her dead sweetheart.

Anything that can be thought of which is likely to produce something for their pet fund women will jump at. Numbers of them have made cakes, and, getting permission, have sold them in picture palaces. One woman gives her donations frankly as "thankofferings for full work and full wages." G. Flemwell, the artist, gave the whole of the 36 pictures comprising his exhibition at the Doré Galleries.

World's Biggest Jumble Sale.

A well-known young architect, who suggested a monster jumble sale for the fund, evidently hit a very right nail on the head, for the success of this undertaking is tremendous and full of interest. Every form of valuable curio, objet d'art, or article of utility finds its way to the receiving house at 39a, Charing Cross-road. Nothing is barred but live stock—though some generous donor did send a pair of Shetland ponies, and they certainly were not refused. All the goods received pass through the hands of expert valuers according to their class, the highest experts giving their services voluntarily. The result is often astounding. Things that to the lay mind seem trifling are recognised as of great value, and find many ready purchasers. It would seem that the attics and cellars, the boudoirs and dining-rooms of large country houses, as well as of smaller homes, have been ransacked that they might provide the wherewithal to give work to unemployed women.

Crowds of the things have to go to the public auction-room to meet the competition of would-be purchasers; and quantities of articles such as valuable old glass, unique jewellery, etc., are sent for sale to firms like D. H. Evans and Co., who sometimes for three weeks at a time have made a present to the fund of an island window for the exhibition of its possessions.

The Colonies, America, China, Sarawak, the Philippines, Siam, and Borneo have contributed largely. The treasures that have come include the famous zodiacal ring which Sir Henry Irving gave to Mr. Toole in 1874, and a wonderful necklace of cameos, a present from Napoleon to his sister Princess Pauline Bonaparte.

At the headquarters of the Queen's Work for Women Fund in Portland Place—the house kindly lent for the purpose by Lord Blyth—is a disappearing wall, supposed to be the only one of its kind in London. This wall is situated on the ground floor, and connects the morning-room and the dining-room. It is solidly built, is hung with pictures, and also shows a big mahogany door. It was built some twenty-five years ago. At the pressure of a button, much in the same way as old sliding panels used to act, the whole wall with pictures, draperies, door, etc., glides down into the basement, and the two already large rooms are converted into an immense one. Neither when the wall is up nor when it is down is there any indication that the solid wall can ever move. One use of the disappearing wall is to enable both rooms to be flooded every morning with air and sunshine from one side of the house to the other.

Glasgow Eve. Times, Jan. 21st. 1915.

The Sacrifice.

There are war incidents at home as poignant as those of the battlefield. Anyone who has helped to organise one or other of the relief funds can tell many a story in which tender pathos is blended with golden romance, but I have heard none more touching than one related by Lady Roxburgh, the energetic secretary of the Queen's Work for Women Fund. A girl whose sweetheart was killed in action anxious to do her best to help her sisters in distress actually took her engagement ring from her finger and forwarded it, asking that it might be sold for the fund. Like a flash this story of splendid devotion was spread abroad, and from every corner of the kingdom money literally tumbled in to the treasurer, the senders in every case stipulating that the ring was to be given back to the girl. Some people even sent blank cheques in their anxiety to reward the girl, and there were scores of telegrams making bids, while one Territorial battalion intimated that they were prepared to subscribe whatever amount was necessary to have the treasure restored to its brave owner.

Daily Mail, 22.1.15.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £126,975 13s. 6d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by Mayoress of Yeovil, £15 15s.; Miss Sybille Mason, £10; Lancashire Ladies' County Golf Club, £10

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

Daily Mail, Jan: 23rd. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £127,067 14s. 3d. The day's subscribers included:

Further instalment from proceeds of sale of "Gifts in Kind" by Work for Women Fund Department of Messrs. D. H. Evans and Co., £27 0s. 7d.; Collected by Urban District Council of Loughton; proceeds of entertainment at Lopping Hall, Loughton, £15 4s. 3d.; Collected by Mayoress of Wilton, £10 16s. 4d.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's Fund yesterday reached £4,466,000, out of which £1,535,000 has already been allocated for relief.

Daily Mail, Jan: 30th. 1915.

£5,000 FOR QUEEN'S FUND

PROFITS FROM SALE OF WOMAN'S RECRUITING SONG.

The most popular song published since the outbreak of the war is unquestionably Mr. Paul Rubens's "Your King and Country Want You," the woman's recruiting song.

Mr. Paul Rubens has very generously decided to devote the royalties received on the sale of the song to the "Queen's Work for Women Fund," which up to the end of January will benefit by considerably over £5,000.

Half of this sum has already been forwarded to The Daily Mail for the fund by Messrs. Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street, who have most patriotically placed the entire resources of their organisation at the disposal of the fund. The cost of publishing has been borne by them, and the profits therefore derived from the sale, after the actual cost of production has been paid, will be handed over to the Queen's Fund.

Sunday Times, Jan. 24th. 1915.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

EMPLOYMENT GROWING.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £127,275 14s. 3d. Every week that passes now adds definitely to the employment which has been organised for unemployed women by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

New hope has come with the week to dressmakers in distress. An order for 15,000 double flannel body belts for the French Army, obtained through Sir George Pragnell, has kept about 200 women employed.

The making of ulsters for girls who are emigrating to Australia, under the Queen's Work for Women Scheme, has also given employment for seventy or eighty women, whose firm was on the point of dismissing them. Better still, the contract for 2,000,000 pairs of Army socks obtained by the committee, which will keep well over 1,000 women employed weekly until August, has been taken in hand.

Further encouragement has been given to the scheme of training women as sick-room helps. A grant has this week been recommended in order that the committee may select suitable women for training from various districts, where the numbers do not warrant establishing a special scheme.

The "Queen's Workroom" at Islington has just become a centre for L.C.C. classes, and under the domestic economy scheme fifty-four unemployed women are being trained. They are a motley crowd, including a quiet-faced superior-looking tea-shop manageress in black dress and neat white apron, a little private dressmaker who could get nothing to do, a young lampshade maker who had been at the same work since she was fourteen, a waitress from a fish and oyster bar in the City, several young factory girls, etc.

Daily Mail, Jan: 27th.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £127,654 12s. 10d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by Urban District Council of Altrincham (including Lady Stamford £20, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hamers £10), £45 5s.; Mr. W. R. Angus, of Montreal, £10

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's Fund yesterday reached £4,481,000

South Wales Daily News, Feb: 2nd. 1915.

LADY GOLFERS AND WAR.

Big Sum for Queen's Fund.

The annual meeting of the Council of the Ladies' Golf Union was held yesterday at the Cafe Monico, Piccadilly Circus, London, W., there being representatives present from most of the leading clubs. Mr Robert Whyte presided.

A sum amounting to £786 9s had been received in subscriptions during the past year, and the excess of income over expenditure was £121 19s 1d; the balance now standing at the credit of the Union amounts to £1,377 7s 10d. All the officers were re-elected, and sub-committees elected for the year. It was resolved during the continuation of the war that affiliated clubs should pay only half the usual subscription to the Union.

A sum amounting to £743 12s 8d, which included £50 from the Union alone, had been collected for the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and the following letter had been received by the Union from Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein in acknowledgment of same:—

I have received the cheque for £743 12s 8d which you sent from the Ladies' Golf Union, and have at once forwarded it to the Queen. I cannot tell you how deeply grateful I am to all those who have contributed to this large sum, and I thank you all most warmly. I think it is really wonderful, and fully appreciate all the hard work which the collecting of so much money must have entailed. Would you kindly express my warmest thanks to all your members? I feel sure the Queen will be quite delighted. Her Majesty was much delighted when I told her about the scheme.

Morning Post, Jan: 25th. 1915. 653.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£127,275 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund at noon on Saturday reached a total of £127,275 14s. 3d. The day's subscribers included:

Collected by the Mayoress of Nottingham (further instalment)	£62	2	6
By the Urban District Council of Leyton (further instalment)	50	0	0
By the Hitchin Committee	15	3	2
Mrs. Alsop (second donation)	10	0	0
Mrs. Henry Courtenay	10	0	0

Every week now adds definitely to the employment which has been organised for unemployed women by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. An order for 15,000 double flannel body belts for the French Army, obtained through Sir George Pragnell, has kept about 200 women employed. The making of ulsters for girls who are emigrating to Australia under the Queen's Work for Women Scheme has also given employment for 70 to 80 women, whose firm was on the point of dismissing them. The contract for 2,000,000 pairs of Army socks will keep well over 1,000 women employed weekly until August. Further encouragement has been given to the scheme of training women as sick room helps.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local Representative Committee, at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Morning Post, Jan: 30th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£128,268 CONTRIBUTED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £128,268 19s. 10d. The subscriptions included:

Jumble Sale Agency (fifth instalment)	£50	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Reading (further instalment)	38	6	3
The Allies' Relief Committee, Los Angeles (California), per the Over-seas Club	20	10	8
Collected by the Urban District Council of Exmouth (further instalment)	14	9	6
By Viscountess Clifden (further instalment)	11	6	9

As a centre for finding work for unemployed women, the Central Committee on Women's Employment now looks out to a vast net-work of local schemes spreading all over the country. One by one the provinces have adopted the committee's plans of giving work, and have linked up with the headquarters. Thirty-two boroughs in London and Greater London have now opened workrooms approved by the Committee, as have also thirty-four provincial towns. The result to the women of the country should be threefold; present distress is checked, the level of women's work is being raised by trade and commercial teaching, and the future of England's homes assured, by training in domestic economy.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside

653/45

The Co-operative News
30/1/15

653
653/46

WOMEN'S CORNER.

ALL communications intended for this Page should be addressed to the Editor of the "Women's Corner," "Co-operative News" Office, Long Millgate, Manchester.

PROBLEMS OF WOMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

Old and New.

WITHOUT claiming a gift of prophecy, it is perfectly safe to say that amongst the great problems of the near future will be the problem of the fair adjustment of women's employment to the economic conditions of the times. Some of the old problems are gone altogether. We no longer question whether our girls shall be allowed to go out to work or be kept in elegant idleness (?) at home. All wise parents insist on having their daughters prepared for self-support, even if the necessity for wage-earning is not urgent.

The question of women's right of entry into industries and professions—with the exception of a few still close-barred doors—is no longer a subject of debate, and the right of a woman worker to a subsistence wage is now (theoretically) conceded.

If no other result emerges from the experience of the war-created Queen's Work for Women Fund, the fact that a minimum rate of wage per hour has been accepted as a national necessity will mark the end of another great problem of women's employment. It should be noted that the minimum of threepence per hour fixed by the fund committee was not fixed upon the quantity or quality of the skill of the workers, but is grounded upon the purely human question of subsistence, just as the co-operative minimum wage is grounded.

The new problem for us women will be to ensure that this position is not lost sight of on the return to normal employments. Already there is a revival in such employments, and we meet with advertisements for "good machinists for ladies' underclothing; piece work; out," and we learn that this offer is for the making of dainty, lace-trimmed camisoles, to be made complete at 1s. 8d. per dozen, the worker to find her own workroom, machine, thread, light, and fire, and to fetch and carry home the work. Inquiring of a worker, from whom the information was received, how many she could do in a day, she replied: "If I can work straight on, without interruption, I can do one dozen in about ten hours."

When one remembers that the purchasing power of 1s. 8d. to-day is considerably less than six months ago, we are faced with a problem indeed! What is co-operation going to do about such problems?

We have before us as we write a list of "vacancies" amongst which are the following:—

"Young lady used to bookkeeping, to take charge of show room; accustomed to wholesale. £1."

"Shorthand-typist, well educated and good writer. 16s."

"Tailoress, experienced. 16s. per week, permanent."

"Sleeve hand. 18s."

These posts are all for "skilled" and trained workers, and the wages offered rise above the bare subsistence minimum of 3d. per hour by only a very small margin. Are we in danger of letting the minimum become the maximum in our problem of women's employments?

One of the newest problems before us will be the employment of the childless widows of our soldiers and sailors who have given their lives to the country. It will be well if we look closely into this problem and do not allow it to be settled by any Select Committee without the voice of the working woman herself being heard. We are glad to see that the National Union of Suffrage Societies has already taken this question in hand, and has laid before the Select Committee on Pensions a scheme for this special class of women workers.

The proposal is, that young widows should be trained for occupations such as health visitors, nurses, relieving officers, domestic sciences, and helps in maternity centres, in which trained women are needed. The cost of such training, together with full maintenance to be paid by the Government.

When the worker is launched upon her work a further problem must be faced, viz: how to prevent the pension which she should receive as "compensation" for the loss of her husband, being used to subsidise her wages and lower the whole rate of earnings to other women in similar occupations. The danger is a real one, as men will also know when a pensioned army comes back into the labour market.

But now is the time to consider such problems, not presently, when they are full upon us.

The problem of the sweater and his victims can be attacked by trades boards and the workers in combination; the other problem indicated will need the careful consideration of the social aspect of our pension schemes, as well as the industrial difficulties involved.

These are questions for study, thought, and action. Certain it is that they will only be settled rightly if women themselves help to settle them. Co-operative women have both the opportunity and the power to study and to solve the problems before the industrial world. But study must come first.

Birkenhead News, Jan: 30th. 1915.

Birkenhead "Work for Women" Association.

MANY ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

In our advertisement columns to-day will be found the list of subscriptions to the funds of the above-named Association, also a statement of receipts and payments to December 31st last. The subscriptions have amounted to £298 10s. 2d., and other main items of income are:—Donation from the Local Relief Fund, £200; orders for work, £152 9s. 9d. On the expenditure side £244 5s. 2d. has been paid in wages, and £107 4s. 10d. on materials.

The Association having completed the first three months of work, the committee desire gratefully to record their sincere obligations to the following for much valuable assistance received:—To the Wirral Lodge of the Theosophical Society for the use of the Lodge premises rent free; to Messrs. Blease and Sons for auditing the accounts free of charge; to Messrs. Pullar and Sons for the free delivery of all parcels in the neighbourhood; to all voluntary helpers for cutting out and assisting in all departments of the work, and to the ladies in charge of the Red Cross depot for the organisation and effective administration of the outworkers' department. Following is a list of those who, in addition to the members of the committee, assist in the work:—Mrs. Joseph Bibby, Mr. Booth, Miss Bramble, Mrs. Gordon Brown, Miss Callendar, Mrs. Guy Clover, Mrs. Cook, Miss Crozier, the Misses Duckworth, Mr. Iwan Howliczek, Miss Emmott, Mrs. Hastwell Grayson, Miss Green, Mrs. Hale, Miss Hale, Miss L. Hind, Mrs. G. Livingstone, Miss Lloyd, Mrs. Proston, Mrs. Rowe, Miss Rowe, Miss M. Rylands, Mrs. Scott, Miss J. Spence, Miss Stevens, Miss Stevenson, Miss Tessimond, Mrs. G. Thin, Miss M. Thin, Miss Tweedle, Mrs. W. Willmer, Misses Woods, Miss N. Worrall, Mrs. Ziegler.

Acknowledgment is made to the following for special gifts:—Mrs. Duckworth and Miss J. B. Chambres, head office postage expenses; Miss Braham, sewing machine; materials from Mrs. Arkle, Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. Byrne, Mrs. Bentley Carr, Mrs. Stanley Clarke, Mrs. Chalmers, Mrs. Hinton, Mrs. Fowell, Mrs. Hinton, Mrs. Hodgson, Miss Jacobson, Mrs. Newall, Miss Nicholls, Mrs. Arthur Oakshott, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Roche, Miss Sargent, Mrs. Spence, Mrs. Winder.

To the band of collectors, members of the Suffrage Society, and others organised by Miss Dalby:—Mrs. Byrne, Mrs. Bryce Forrester, Mrs. Stanley Clarke, Miss Cox, Mrs. Darley, the Misses Eaton, Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Fellowes, Miss Edwards, Mrs. Hastwell Grayson, Miss Griffiths, Mrs. Gordon Browne, Miss B. Hibbert, Mrs. Hill, Miss Horlick, Miss M. Jackson, Mrs. Hugh Jones, Miss Judd, Miss Lathom, Miss Livingston, Miss Lloyd, Mrs. Marples, Mrs. McKissack, Mrs. Miller, Miss McKune, Miss New, Miss Oakley, Miss Ogden, Miss Patterson, Miss Priestman, Mrs. Proctor, Miss Richardson, Miss Saunders, Mrs. Scott, Miss Size, Miss Tredale, Mrs. Van Gruisen, Mrs. Wilcox, Miss N. Worrall, Miss Wyse.

The committee appeal for orders for needlework (soldiers' shirts, clothing for the poor, embroidery, and fine needlework of all kinds) to assist the Association in the carrying on of the workrooms. Estimates will be given on application at the workrooms.

Glasgow Herald, Feb: 1st. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £130,353 11s 1d, which included £2000, a third instalment of the profits on the sale of the song, "Your King and Country Want You," by Mr Paul A. Rubens. All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment should be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8 Grosvenor Place, Hyde Park Corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Daily Mail, Feb: 2nd. 1915.

THE QUEEN'S FUND FOR WOMEN

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached last night a total of £130,477 16s. 10d. The day's subscribers included:

Sabbath School Society for Ireland, January subscriptions, £29 15s. 3d.; collected by Mayoress of Islington, further instalment, £19 6s.; collected by Mayoress of Eastbourne, further instalment, £10 1s. 4d.; Strabane Presbyterian Sunday School, £10.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

The Prince of Wales's Fund yesterday reached £4,528,000, the latest contributions including £20,770 from Durham County.

Northern Daily Telegraph, Feb: 2nd. 1915.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY TRAINING.

A month ago the Queen's Work for Women Fund instituted a domestic economy training for the unemployed women chain-makers of Cradley Heath. This scheme, says the London correspondent of the "Yorkshire Post," is achieving excellent results, although most of the women scarcely understood the use of a needle, and many were unacquainted with even the rudiments of the domestic arts. Five local Education Committees are co-operating in the work, which includes, besides health talks and demonstrations, cookery lessons, and needlework, the making and mending of clothes, cradle-making, and the training of sick-room helps. An incidental result is a great improvement in the personal appearance of the women.

Yorkshire Post, 3.2.15.

A month ago the Queen's Work for Women Fund instituted a domestic economy training for the unemployed women chain-makers of Cradley Heath. This scheme is achieving excellent results, although most of the women scarcely understood the use of a needle, and many were unacquainted with even the rudiments of the domestic arts. Five local education committees are co-operating in the work, which includes, besides health talks and demonstrations, cookery lessons, and needlework, the making and mending of clothes, cradle-making, and the training of sick-room helps. An incidental result is a great improvement in the personal appearance of the women.

Morning Post, Feb. 5th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

TOTAL AMOUNT, £131,748.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £131,748 14s. 3d. The subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Women's Service (collection at Queen's Hall Meeting)	56	15	11
Collected by the Mayoress of Chester (further instalment)	33	2	6
By the Mayoress of Plymouth (further instalment)	25	1	5
By Mrs. A. Thomas (the Lady Glanusk's, Breconshire, Collection)	10	4	3
S. E. J.	10	0	0
Miss Matthews and Friend	10	0	0

A Carol Choir of young Eurasians, under the leadership of Mr. E. H. Lincoln, gave an open-air concert in the streets of Negapatam, South India, on Christmas Eve, collecting from the townsfolk the sum of £5 14s. This sum they handed over to Mr. E. C. Toston to be sent to the Fund.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

653/47

---

653 Evening Post, Feb: 3rd. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£130,635 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £130,635 19s. 3d. The subscribers included:

	£	s.	d.
Miss Stancomb Wills (further monthly donation)	50	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Gloucester (further instalment)	24	5	8
By Mrs. Gordon Brodie, per Lady Baring...	12	0	3

Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, as President of the Ladies' Golf Union and as Vice-President of the Queen's Work for Women Fund, has forwarded to her Majesty a cheque for £743 12s. 8d., the amount being the proceeds of a collection made by all the ladies of golf clubs belonging to the Ladies' Golf Union. The Queen has written to Princess Victoria asking her to convey her Majesty's grateful thanks to the various subscribers for their generous and valuable assistance to her fund.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Morning Post, Feb 6th 1915

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£131,872 CONTRIBUTED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £131,872 8s. 9d. The subscribers included:

	£	s.	d.
Proceeds from Sale of Two Pictures by Mr. George Flemwell at the Doré Galleries...	21	0	0
Collected by Mrs. Richardson (further instalment of Mrs. Herbert Samuel's Collection)	11	8	8
Collection by the Lady Glanusk (further instalment), per Mrs. Rees, Mrs. Pugh, and Miss M. O. Evans	10	15	0
All Saints' Sunday School, Darlaston (being the value of prizes given up by the children, who each receive the Queen's Special Certificate instead of a prize)	10	0	0

The donations from the staff of Messrs. John Smith (London-wall) (Limited) have reached to date £11 15s. 6d. The amount collected by the Mayoress of Leominster acknowledged on January 28 included a donation of £10 from Miss Wood.

Experiments with an Austrian and German cottage industry are being made in the workrooms of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. It is that of making crochet buttons, for which there is a large and steady demand in this country. In the country districts of France these buttons are also made, but it is a higher class of work. The peasant women of Brittany are seldom to be seen without some such work in their hands. The Committee are hoping to prove by these experiments that the work could be sufficiently remunerative to be worth considering as a new trade for women. The work is very easily learned.

Her Majesty has given permission that half the proceeds derived from the sale of Miss Mary Helen Carlisle's well-known picture "A Panorama of a Meadow in Spring," now at the Walker Galleries, 118, New Bond-street, should go to the Queen's Work for Women Fund when the picture realises the sum of £400.

Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay has been able to hand over £40 to the Queen's Work for Women Fund as the result of the two matinées she gave. She starts a new series on Thursday next at the Little Theatre.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside

Evening Standard and St James Gazette
12-2-15.

653

653/48

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

NEW SCHEMES FOR UNEMPLOYED CLERKS IN CROYDON.

A very comprehensive scheme of work for women has recently been started at Croydon under the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It provides commercial training for girl clerks; dressmaking, tailoring, and millinery instruction for needleworkers and others; cookery and housewifery experience for all; and training for a selected number for the new employment of sick room helps.

The women thrown out of work through the war in Croydon belong to a wide variety of trades, and the Women's Employment Sub-Committee hopes by its varied scheme to provide congenial and educational occupation for all.

Clerks and Shop Assistants in Majority.

Clerks form the largest class of unemployed, shop assistants come next, then daily servants and factory workers, but the numbers include tailoresses, dressmakers, milliners, die stampers, book-binders, waitresses, telephone operators, and theatrical workers.

Some of these have been out of work for six months, and until the workroom was opened the only form of help which could be given to the self-respecting workers was in grocery tickets. One woman laid her last coppers on the table to pay for her dinner and tea at the workroom.

"Home" Atmosphere.

The sense of proprietorship the first workers feel in the workroom, which they know has been opened for their direct benefit, is so strong that the supervisor finds is necessary to put a newcomer into the charge of a worker who is quite at home. Otherwise, she would undoubtedly feel herself an intruder.

The "home" atmosphere is increased by the domestic economy training.

Twelve workers are taking week about in the kitchen. They cook dinner for the others, wait at table, wash up afterwards, clean the kitchen, and are responsible for the tea.

Flowers for the Dinner-table.

So eager are they that everything shall be of the nicest that they fetch the flowers from the workroom every day to decorate the dinner-table. Equipment at present is of the very simplest, so when a visitor called at the workroom, the ingenious young waitresses brought her tea on a large white dish in lieu of a tray.

Every piece of work is inspected by the supervisor, but the girls themselves are becoming admirable censors. The worker who polishes the glasses thinks nothing of returning one to be washed three times over, because of an obstinate streak. The girls wash their own towels, scrub the tables, clean the grates, and keep everything in spotless order.

Change of Occupation.

During the latter part of the afternoon the cooks return to the needlework room. A change of occupation is to be given to every worker as soon as all the classes are in order, the work being allotted according to the worker's usual employment.

Remarkably good premises have been secured for the scheme in the South Norwood Polytechnic. The girls and women have the use of large light classrooms; typewriters are at the disposal of the commercial pupils; dressmakers' dummies, sewing machines, and fitting mirrors for the dressmakers; equipment for nursing lectures; and the necessary conveniences for cooking.

Further Training for Clerical Workers.

It is intended to teach shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping, business routine, and modern languages in the commercial classes, but only girls who have previously been employed in clerical work will be admitted. These incude many who will greatly benefit by the training.

A girl who was employed in the cash box of a draper's shop and who had only "muddled" in bookkeeping is one of those who are looking forward to being capable of earning a good salary when the war is over. She has only earned 9s. per week hitherto. The teachers for the various instruction classes are supplied by the Local Education Committee, while the working of the scheme is under the supervision of the principal of the Polytechnic.

653

653/49

Glasgow Herald
15/2/15.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £133,876 10s 9d.

LONDON DRESSMAKERS' WORK.

The enterprise of London dressmakers during the present crisis in their trade has been altogether remarkable. With the assistance of the Central Committee on Women's Employment they have in turn become flannel beltmakers, shirtmakers, and sockmakers. At the moment they are turning out 10,000 Army shirts weekly, a contract obtained for them by the Central Committee. Seven hundred and fifty employees by this means are able to make up their wages to the normal amount, while 40 girls at the committee's test workroom in Piccadilly are employed full time on shirtmaking. The sock-making enterprise is even more creditable to the dressmakers, for it involves turning from sewing to the entirely unfamiliar work of knitting. The Central Committee has undertaken the responsibility of procuring suitable yarn; it has bought and lent machines to the dressmakers, and provided instructresses to teach the girls, but the producing of the socks in sufficient quantities rests with the dressmakers. On their behalf the committee has secured a contract for 2,000,000 pairs of socks. This will give work, taking into account the yarn spinning and knitting, to well over 1200 women per week until July. Upon the individual output will depend the wages. It is expected, however, that, when efficient, a worker will be able to make a dozen pairs a day.

Aberdeen Daily Journal
15/2/15.

From Court Gowns to Sock Knitting.

Just before the winter social season should have commenced I spoke of the distress amongst Court dressmakers in London. All sorts of odd work has been given them from time to time. Now they have begun to knit socks for the army. It is a big jump from sewing delicate trimmings on Court gowns to knitting socks, but the women are learning to handle the machines with considerable alacrity. The Queen's Work for Women Fund has secured an order for two million pairs of socks, and the work is being handed over to the workrooms of the West End costumiers. This will keep 1200 dressmakers in constant employment right up to July. Those who are not sock knitting are shirt-making. Here, too, there was some difficulty at first experienced by the women in becoming accustomed to the new class of work. They have 10,000 army shirts on hand at the moment.

Scotsman
Edinburgh
13/2/15.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund has now a total of £133,876, 10s. 9d.

The enterprise of London dressmakers during the present crisis in their trade has, it is pointed out, been remarkable. With the assistance of the Central Committee on Women's Employment, they have in turn become flannel belt makers, shirtmakers, and sockmakers. At the moment, they are turning out 10,000 Army shirts weekly, a contract obtained for them by the Central Committee. Seven hundred and fifty employees by this means are able to make up their wages to the normal amount, while 40 girls at the Committee's test workroom in Piccadilly are employed full time on shirtmaking. The sockmaking enterprise is even more creditable to the drassmakers, for it involves turning from sewing to the entirely unfamiliar work of knitting. The Central Committee has undertaken the responsibility of procuring suitable yarn, it has bought and lent machines to the dressmakers, and provided instructresses to teach the girls, but the producing of the socks in sufficient quantities rests with the dressmakers. On their behalf, the Committee has secured a contract for two million pair of socks. This will give work, taking into account the yarn spinning and knitting, to well over 1200 women per week until July. Upon the individual output will depend the wages. It is expected, however, that when efficient, a worker will be able to make a dozen pairs a day.

Morning Post
23/3/15.

Home Notes
20.2.15.

653

653/50

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £143,237 6s. 4d. The subscribers included :

	£	s.	d.
Twelfth Contribution from the Scottish Branch, per the Marchioness of Linlithgow (including a further contribution from Kirkwall, £25, and the Students' Representative Council, University College, Dundee, £20)	100	10	9
Collected by the Walthamstow Local Committee (further instalment, including the Walthamstow Teachers' January, February, and March contributions £20 2s.)...	40	1	3

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Home Notes
20.2.15

OFF TO AUSTRALIA!

"The Queen's Work for Women Fund" does more than help girls in our own country thrown out of work by the war. It is ready and willing to give a fresh start in other parts to those who are enterprising enough to emigrate. In this article one of the plucky girls tells you all about it.

The girl who tells her story in this article. Aided by "The Queen's Work for Women Fund," she is going to start new work in the Antipodes!

YES! I'm going to Australia this month with eighteen other girls who have been thrown out of work through the war.

I made up my mind to go at a tea-party the British Women's Emigration Association gave in November, when we were told that Australia had sent an invitation to the Queen for five hundred and fifty unemployed girls.

I always wanted to travel, but I knew that even if I could manage the fare, I couldn't afford to get the outfit I should need. But when they said that the Australian Government would take us all the way for £1 if we promised to go into domestic service for one year and to pay £2 out of our wages after we got there, I thought my chance had come! Especially when the Queen's Work for Women Fund offered to pay the £1 for us, and to give us another sovereign to have in our pockets when we landed.

It seemed almost too good to be true when an outfit was promised as well, which the Central Committee on Women's Employment would have made for us in the women's workrooms.

* * * *

Hard Work, but Good Holidays.

My friend wanted to go at once, for she was out of work then. She's a glove maker, and her firm wasn't doing anything. I was expecting to be out of work after Christmas, too. I'm a cashier in a tea-shop, and all our places have been doing so badly that there was a feeling that a good many of us would have to go.

They showed us lime-light pictures of Australia at the tea party, and Louie and I took a fancy to Sydney at once. It looked so bright and somehow home-like, and I said to myself, "never venture never win!" Some ladies who had been in Australia spoke, too, and told us what a wonderful country it is.

Mrs. Laird from New South Wales said that although we would have to work hard, we should have lovely holidays—two half-days every week, and from 2 o'clock till 10.30 or 11 o'clock every other Sunday, with a day and a night off every month. And someone else said that if we could not do housework, it was best to say so, and go as a learner; not be like a photographer's assistant who took a place as first-class cook at 35s. a week and couldn't boil a potato.

Louie and I filled up the application form before we left, and we took home a whole lot of papers and books telling us all about Australia. We've read them all, and I should think we know more about Sydney now than the Association itself!

* * * *

When we Get to Australia.

Louie's been to the museum too, and studied the Australian section, and we've been to another tea-party and heard more ladies tell about the life out there. One lady offered to pay for us to go to classes on how to turn out a room, and how to cook, but I hadn't time to attend them.

My firm's been very good. When they heard that I wasn't to sail till February they kept me on. And Louie got a temporary place in a draper's until Christmas.

Some of our friends wonder at our going to domestic service, and Louie doesn't want her relations to know. People do look down on you here certainly, but they say in Australia a lady would be ashamed not to be able to scrub a floor. I'm quite strong, too. We had to get a doctor's certificate. Altogether, we've signed five papers.

In one we had to say we would be willing to go to the country. I would really rather go to a farm than anywhere else. I lived seven years in the country, and I liked the life, and I think you can save in the country.

Of course, our places are not chosen for us, although the Government promises to find us work at once. When we get to Sydney, the ladies will meet us in one of the Homes the British Women's Emigration Association know about, and we shall be able to take the place we think we can suit best. We're not bound to stay in it for the year, either. We can come back to the Home and get another place.

There's other girls going, too, and they're very nice. Two are shop-girls, and they say they're sick to death of business. They have to spend all their money on food if they want to keep healthy. One is the eldest girl of eleven, and she's been used to housework. Two shorthand typists are going together, and they think they will stay in domestic service even when the year is up. And there's a dressmaker who has been out of work a lot. She is glad of the chance. She said just before she got work at the Queen's workroom, she had only 3s. left to pay the rent. They've sent us all these clothes from the Central Committee:

1 trunk, 1 ulster, 1 tweed coat and skirt, 2 overalls 2 fine linen aprons, 2 coarse linen aprons, 2 print dresses, 1 alpaca dress, 1 flannel blouse, 3 pairs stockings, 6 handkerchiefs, 1 rough towel, 2 smooth towels, 4 nightgowns, 2 pairs knickers, 4 pairs combinations, 1 brush, 1 comb, 1 tooth brush.

The clothes have been made in three sizes, and they seem to fit us both. They're pretty things, too.

We're to have a good send-off. The night before we sail we are all to meet at the Wortley Hostel, Paddington, when we can get to know the girls, and the matron who is going with us. Then a lot of the ladies, who have arranged the emigration for the Queen, are coming down to the ship to see us off. The Queen does do things nicely, doesn't she?

WOULD YOU LIKE A BLOUSE-LENGTH

to be chosen from a splendid selection of materials? Read how to obtain one

NEXT WEEK.

653

653/51

Daily Telegraph.
4. III. 1913.

DERBY "WORK FOR WOMEN" SCHEMES.

(Specially Contributed.)

There has recently been formed in Derby an influential committee for dealing with distress through unemployment, or partial unemployment, created through the war, among women and girls. The Mayoress (Mrs. Joseph Hill) is president and treasurer, and there is a representative committee to aid her. The peculiar circumstances of Derby have been thoroughly discussed, and a conference with employers held, and from these a working scheme has been evolved which has some rather original features. Students of social and economic conditions constantly declare that if each worker had two trades instead of one there need be very little unemployment anywhere, because, when one trade is slack another is busy; but the difficulties in the way of putting this into practice have hitherto been very great.

Queen Mary's Fund for the relief of distress expressly aims at employment. From the highest quarter, therefore, comes the endorsement of the policy of self-help. This is the idea now put into practice by the Derby Committee, i.e., to teach another trade to women and girls unemployed through the war.

The difficulties are (a) that while learning another trade an adult worker usually only earns a small wage, and (b) the natural objection of employers to pay children's wages to grown women. But the idea itself is such a good one, and so suited to Derby conditions, that these difficulties are being overcome. There are coming into the labour market daily young women who up to now have stayed at home, as their services were required there, but who, owing to the wage-earners of the family having enlisted, are obliged to supplement a greatly-reduced income by their own earnings. Such patriotic action must be assisted by every means. There is, alas, too sure proof that many of those wage-earners will never return, and, of those who do, many will never earn the same money again. It is thus necessary to look ahead in these schemes. The men at the Front will have an anxiety removed if they know that their dependents are becoming self-supporting.

In Derby some factories are very busy on Government work, while others are slack through the war. It is intended to draft unemployed workers from one trade to another, where employers are willing to teach them. Many of the Derby employers have signified their willingness to do so, a fact greatly to their credit, as anyone who knows how grooved all the sections of workers become, and how many difficulties and adjustments are constantly arising, can realise. These, however, are not insurmountable. Already about 20 young women have made a beginning. This is a more promising scheme than simply to open workrooms, which only tide over distress for a time and lead nowhere. As this scheme is quite distinctly one suited to local needs, it must not look to help from central funds to any extent, and must appeal to the generosity of Derby citizens to be put upon a sound basis. While these workers are learning it is proposed to add to the small wage earned a subsidy from the local fund which will bring the weekly money up to a minimum of 10s. As the learners become proficient they will go on their own time and become independent of the subsidy, which will then be withdrawn.

The ladies of the committee and their friends are passing round the inevitable hat, and musical teas, entertainments, etc., are already initiated. It is hoped that a generous response will be made. The hon. secretary (Miss Macarthur), at the Labour Exchange, will be pleased to give any further particulars, this scheme being worked in full collaboration with the Labour Bureau.

L. M. C. A.

Belfast News Letter
19. II. 15

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has reached a total of £134,060 16s 6d. How much it is doing for children is very plainly seen at Battersea. For weeks past a crowd of unemployed girls of 14 to 16 years of age has hovered round the women's workrooms. Thirty little unemployed wage-earners have begun work in a workroom of their own under the Queen's Fund. They are divided into two classes, commercial and domestic, for 15 of them have been clerks, and 15 have worked in dressmaking or domestic service. A special training has been arranged for each in co-operation with the London County Council. In the school atmosphere of the new workroom they have, however, quickly become children again, and, with the load of unemployment off their minds, are as happy as the day is long in their classes. A grant of 4s per week is given to each girl, and a hot meal is provided at the workroom. During the morning both commercials and domestics mend or make their own clothes under the direction of the committee's supervisor. The great ambition is to make drill dresses for gymnasium, which is the favourite occupation of the day. L.C.C. teachers take charge of the girls in the afternoon, and the "domestics" attend L.C.C. cookery and laundry centres for their special classes.

Aberdeen Free Press
13. III. 1913.

The Queen, attended by Lady Eva Dugdale, Lord Stamfordham, and others, yesterday visited the Wood Green branch of Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund. Her Majesty examined the articles of clothing which are being made by the women, who presented her with a bouquet. The Queen afterwards inspected centres of work in connection with the fund at Tottenham and Edmonton.

Nottingham Express
14. IV. 1915.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has reached a total of £152,111 1s. 9d.

Daily News & Leader
17. III. 1915.

THE RELIEF FUNDS.

The National Relief Fund has reached £4,820,000. The list of subscriptions includes: The British-American War Relief Association, Youngstown, Ohio, £167; the British Residents of San Diego, California, £103 8s. 5d.; Atacama Club, Antofagasta, Chile, £48 4s. 9d.; Employees, Springs Mines, Ltd., Springs, Transvaal (one month's contribution), £39 18s. 4d.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund is now £141,590 0s. 11d.

Nottingham Express 13/3/15

683

653/52

THE QUEEN VISITS WOMEN WORKERS.

The Queen, attended by Lady Eva Dugdale, Lord Stamfordham, and others, yesterday visited the Wood Green branch of the Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund. Her Majesty examined the articles of clothing which are being made by the women, who presented her with a bouquet, and with several of whom she shook hands. The Queen afterwards inspected centres of work in connection with the fund at Tottenham and Edmonton.

Country Life 13/3/15.

653

653/53

One Hundred Miles of Pennies

The organisers of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund never let the grass grow under their feet. Every scheme that can possibly be suggested for the promotion of the fund is heeded, but it is rarely that such a good money-collecting idea is brought forward as their mileage scheme. Lady Roxburgh and Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson are organising it, and they hope to raise £22,000 in pennies before they finish. The name of the scheme explains itself, but its magnitude can only be grasped after a moment's reflection. It is in very truth a great task that these ladies have undertaken, for it is no less than the collection of a hundred miles of pennies.

A hundred miles of pennies, we hear, heaped in a pile would make quite a mountain of copper. If we imagine that this great mound had been taken from a long string of houses, each house having a frontage of thirty feet and every householder contributing a penny, we can get a mental picture of the undertaking, for such a line would not only span the circumference of the earth, but leave 5,124 miles to spare.

It is hoped that girls and womenfolk all over the country will help in this mighty collection of copper. Even the poorest amongst us may feel moved to contribute one penny towards the Mileage Scheme, while those richer in possession of this world's goods will probably send many pennies with their contribution. Most people know the headquarters of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund; but at the risk of repetition it may be said that the address is 33 Portland Place, and that particulars of the work will always be promptly forwarded.

The Builder 22/3/15.

683

653 | 54

A Notable Picture Exhibition.

At the French Gallery in Pall Mall there is a rather remarkable exhibition of pictures, the property of one private owner, lent for exhibition on behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It is not often that one sees collected in one room so many good pictures of various schools and dates. It includes important works by Velazquez, Vandyck, Rembrandt, Reynolds, and Gainsborough among the ancients; and Watts, Rossetti, Alfred Stevens, Whistler, and Mr. Orpen among the moderns. One or two of the Whistlers are interesting because they represent the artist before he took to some of the eccentricities in painting which have become especially associated with his name; "Old Battersea Bridge," for instance, though called by the fantastic sub-title "Brown and Silver," is an admirable, unpretentious landscape suggesting no special tendencies in painting. It is interesting to see several examples of Alfred Stevens together, and note his brilliant talent and its limitations. It is all admirable workmanship, but it suggests nothing beyond workmanship. Compare these pictures with Mr. Orpen's "Solitude"; it is by no means equal to Stevens in executive accomplishment, but it has feeling and pathos, qualities which are beyond the scope of the brilliant Belgian artist. There are several remarkable small marble groups by M. Rodin, but his life-size bronze "Eve" is disfigured by the practice he has taken to of leaving his large bronze figures all rough on the surface, as if they were suffering from a cutaneous disease. But the collection as a whole is well worth a visit.

Nottingham Guardian 23/3/15.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN.

Amount already acknowledged	£1,059	18	3
Miss K. H. Burton, Calverton		10	0
The Nottingham Harmonic Glee Society Concert, Sandon-street	3	5	0
	£1,063	13	3

Donations may be sent to Mrs. McCraith, The Park, Nottingham, hon. treasurer of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £141,426 5s. 3d., which included a sum of £376, being the tenth contribution from the Scottish branch (per the Marchioness of Linlithgow).

The Daily Telegraph. £5/3/15.

Glamorgan County Times £20/3/15.

653

653/55

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN.'

Yesterday's additions to the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, which now amounts to £143,237, included: Twelfth contribution from the Scottish Branch, per the Marchioness of Linlithgow, £100 10s 9d; collected by the Walthamstow Local Committee (further instalment), £40 1s 3d.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

The Queen's Work for Women Fund.

INTENSIVE POULTRY FARMING.

How the middle-class women may be trained in Intensive Poultry Farming has been occupying the attention of the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

The cost of the expert teaching prevents for the moment the starting of a large scheme, and the Committee is contenting itself with making an experiment.

Girls of the clerk type have been offered free training by a successful woman poultry farmer at Boreham Wood, Herts., for three months, and if they are satisfactory for six months. In order to enable them to take advantage of this offer, the Central Committee has recommended a maintenance grant for them of 3d. an hour in a sixty-hour week.

Very good prospects are now before these girls who were thrown out of work through the war. The manageress of the Poultry Farm is confident that they will easily find employment after their training, as applications for fully trained poultry managers of the Intensive system are numerous. She has herself received half a dozn applications within a fortnight.

The opening for intensive poultry farming in this country is good, for much of the produce has hitherto come from abroad. As for the system itself, the returns of the Chicago market show that intensive farming supplies them with all the eggs needed, and the same may be said of all the large cities throughout the United States.

The Committee feels that in training women for this work, they are not only giving present relief, but employment which will be of permanent value.

It is particularly suitable for women, because skill rather than physical strength is the qualification most needed.

The girls, who are to be chosen by the manageress of the Poultry Farm, will be selected for their intelligence and their evident capacity of taking responsibility.

Lodgings have been found for them in the village at Boreham Wood, and they will start their training immediately.

The syallabus suggested by their instructress is as follows:—

Practical work in the poultry houses, consisting of routine work such as cleaning, feeding, watering, etc.

Instruction in feeding methods comprising the necessary knowledge of food values, given either by lectures or individual tuition, or by both means.

Instruction by demonstration in hatching both with hen and incubators.

Instruction by demonstration in rearing methods from shell to maturity

Instruction by demonstration of killing and plucking and trussing.

In order to keep the girls fully employed, carpentry may be added to the curriculum as there is not a great deal to do in Intensive Poultry Farming. The girls will thus learn how to make their own coops, and will prepare themselves by learning how to provide their own plant for the most econmical methods of farming.

The instructress believes very strongly in practical training. As a proof of her success, it may be said that she has been able to sell eggs all the winter at 2s. 6d. and 2s. 9d. per dozen.

Cambridge Chronicle 20/3/15.

653

653/56

WANTED : QUARTER-OF-A-MILE OF PENNIES.

MAYORESS'S APPEAL FOR QUEEN'S FUND.

The Mayoress of Cambridge (Mrs. Raynes) writes:—

Sir,—The Queen's Fund for Women having repeatedly written and pressed me to take up collecting for them, I have at last promised to try and get a quarter of a mile of pennies for their funds.

This scheme is simplified by being put into sections, each consisting of fifteen pennies. These measure one foot and a half; so everyone contributing one penny helps one inch towards the mile, and a household taking a whole section advances us a foot and a half on the way.

Hoping you will have space to insert this letter, and trusting to your readers' kind support,—I remain, faithfully,

MARY F. RAYNES,
Mayoress.

West Point, Adams Road,
March 18th.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

	£	s.	d.
Already acknowledged	360	12	8
Further Instalment:—
The Whittlesey Patriotic Fund, per Mrs. Peed	20	0	0
The Countess of Ellesmere, per Mrs. Hammond	5	0	0
Per Mrs. Ellgood—
Mr. J. Dennis	1	1	0
Mrs. Yates	0	5	0
Mrs. Weston Miller	0	2	6
Mr. A. Fraser	0	10	0
Per Lady Marjorie Binney—
Collection in Duxford Church...	0	12	0
Rev. F. A. Sampson	0	15	0
	£388	18	2

Cambridge Independent Press
20/4/15

653

653/57

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Viscountess Clifden's Appeal.

	£	s.	d.
Amount already acknowledged ...	360	12	8
The Whittlesey Patriotic Fund, per Mrs. Peed	20	0	0
The Countess of Ellesmere, per Mrs. Hammond	5	0	0
Per Mrs. Ellgood:—
Mr. J. Dennis	1	1	0
Mrs. Yates	0	5	0
Mrs. Wiston Miller	0	2	6
Mr. A. Fraser	0	10	0
Per Lady Marjorie Binney:—
Collection in Duxford Church.....	0	12	0
Rev. F. A. Sampson	0	15	0
	£388	18	2

Cambridge Independent Press
20/3/15

QUARTER-OF-A-MILE OF PENNIES WANTED.

Mayoress's Appeal for Queen's Fund.

We have received the following letter from the Mayoress of Cambridge:—

TO THE EDITOR.

Sir,—The Queen's Fund for Women having repeatedly written and pressed me to take up collecting for them, I have at last promised to try and get a quarter of a mile of pennies for their funds.

This scheme is simplified by being put into sections, each consisting of fifteen pennies. These measure one foot and a half; so everyone contributing one penny helps one inch towards the mile, and a household taking a whole section advances us a foot and a half on the way.

Hoping you will have space to insert this letter, and trusting to your readers' kind support,—I remain, faithfully,

MARY F. RAYNES, Mayoress.

West Point, Adams-road,
March 18th.

Evening Standard
23.3.15

653

653/58

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

GIRL EMIGRANTS' COOKERY LESSONS.

The party of girls who left for Australia under the Queen's Work for Women Fund scheme were equipped with a newly acquired knowledge of cookery and household matters.

Those of their number who had had no experience at all in the work to which they were going—that of domestic service—learnt cookery at the Training Centre of the Central Committee on Women's Employment at Grosvenor-place.

Varied Trades.

Among them was a shop girl, a theatre-box assistant, and some dressmakers. Their anxiety to learn made up for the ignorance of some of the girls. The cookery course was very practical, for luncheons for the staff and dinners for the women in the neighbouring workrooms were prepared every day by the girls.

The cook-instructress, who came from the National Training School of Cookery, considered that the girls had got a fair idea of plain cooking in the short time. She made them take turn about in looking after the joints and making the soups, sauces, and puddings.

In the afternoons, they had special lessons on cookery, household hints, and cleaning. The latter is considered as necessary as cooking. The first attempt of a girl to scrub a table was the cause of much amusement, as she had no idea how to go about it. She did not even know that the brush must be dipped in water.

Treasured Notebook.

Another girl told to wash out cupboard shelves began at the bottom shelf. The girls were made to write down the recipes they learnt in their own note books, and these treasured possessions were taken to Australia.

A young dressmaker who had been a fitter, earning 35s. to £2 10s. a week before the war, wished that she could have had a longer course of instruction. She only made application, however, to go to Australia a few weeks previously.

"But I'm not looking forward to feeling strange at the work," she said, "I've got my hand in, and I've made up my mind to get on. If I like it, I shall stay in domestic service."

Another girl said that being the youngest of the family, she felt it "a bit awkward" doing cooking and cleaning, but she knew a "lot more" now than she did when she came.

She learnt how to buy a cheap dinner, and how to make a little go a long way. She hoped to become experienced very quickly in Australia, so that she will be able to command better wages. As an inexperienced worker she will get 8s. to 10s. per week, and board and lodging.

The Queen's Fund is paying £1 each for the girls, which is the special arrangement made by the Government of Australia for the preliminary passage money, and is giving them £1 each on arrival, besides providing them with a complete outfit.

Morning Post.
25/2/15.

~~652~~
653.

653/59

WORK FOR WOMEN.

HOW THE QUEEN'S GIFT HELPED.

Since the early days of the war the Central Committee on Women's Employment have been hard at work in two directions. They have in the first place endeavoured to secure the employment of women under economic conditions by aiding in the proper distribution of work and facilitating the provision of alternative employment for skilled workers displaced by the war, and also by promoting new openings for permanent employment under economic conditions. The second branch of their labours has been that of organising and administering schemes of relief work.

The Committee is constituted as follows: The Marchioness of Crewe (Chairman), Mrs. H. J. Tennant (hon. treasurer), Miss Mary R. Macarthur (hon. secretary), Lady Askwith, Miss Margaret G. Bondfield, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, Mrs. Gasson, Miss R. E. Lawrence, Miss Susan Lawrence, L.C.C., the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Miss Violet Markham, Viscountess Midleton, the Hon. Lily Montagu, and Dr. Marion Phillips. They were appointed by the President of the Local Government Board with the approval of her Majesty the Queen, who inaugurated the Queen's Work for Women Fund for providing schemes of employment for women who have lost work as a result of the war. These schemes are devised and administered, or approved and supervised, by the Central Committee with the approval of the Government Committee on the Prevention and Relief of Distress.

Her Majesty's Personal Interest.

In an interim report issued yesterday the Committee state that the personal interest which the Queen has graciously taken throughout in their many activities has given a great stimulus to the work. Dealing with the employment of women under economic conditions they say they considered it their duty to use such opportunities as were given to them to increase the number of firms and workers participating in the supply of Government requirements. For this purpose they created a special Contracts Department. They have thus been enabled (1) To advise in regard to the placing of contracts and orders so that unemployment may be prevented or minimised; (2) to undertake orders for certain articles from Government and other sources, such orders being carried out—(a) by firms adversely affected by the war, (b) in workrooms organised by the Committee on a self-supporting basis.

In regard to hosiery, the scope of the Committee's work was much extended by the action of the Queen, who entrusted them with the purchase of woollen belts to form part of the "Queen's Gift to the Troops." In executing the command of her Majesty the Committee were able to place orders for wool with spinners whose staffs were only partially occupied, and in the actual making of the belts to provide employment for the workers of other firms similarly situated, and for a considerable number of women in Kidderminster, Belfast, Stroud, and elsewhere who were already out of work. The yarn was largely obtained from firms previously engaged in the production of yarn for carpets, and assistance was thus given to an industry which suffered severely on the outbreak of war. Altogether, 75,000 woollen body belts were provided by the Committee.

Fresh Occupation for Dressmakers.

An interesting example of cases in which her Majesty's order was made the medium of the provision of employment was that of a London dressmaker whose business, employing upwards of 100 women, was brought to a standstill by the war. On learning of the action of the Queen the dressmaker in question asked leave to tender to supply a number of the belts, and, on the acceptance of her tender, proceeded to purchase the required wool and machinery and to train her staff to a new occupation. The contract entrusted to her, amounting to £1,500, was carried out to the satisfaction of the Committee, while the experience gained by the dressmaker has since enabled her to tender successfully for Army contracts for hosiery, on which all her workers are now fully employed.

Trading Responsibilities Assumed.

At an early stage of their work trading responsibilities had to be assumed by the Contracts Department, and the Committee applied for and obtained the following among other orders: (a) 20,000 cut out Army grey shirts to be made up. (b) As from October, when the above-mentioned contract expired, 10,000 similar shirts per week. The Committee in this case became responsible for the cutting as well as the making of the shirts. (c) 105,000 flannel body belts for the French and British Armies. The order for these was obtained from Cook and Son, through Sir George Pragnell. (d) 2,000,000 pairs of Army grey socks.

In regard to these orders they emphasise the facts that: (1) The work is only undertaken where the ordinary trade is fully employed. (2) The work is undertaken at trade prices and is self-maintaining. Advances made from the National Relief Fund in connection with certain contracts are merely working capital which at the completion of the contract will be returned in full. (3) The conditions as to the remuneration of workers have been (since October last) those usual in women's trades, that is to say, payment is mainly by piece, and the limits as to weekly earnings which apply in the relief workrooms are not observed.

New Openings for Employment.

The Committee's desire to keep women as far as possible in employment under normal economic conditions led them to give consideration to the possibility of promoting new trades. At the outbreak of the war the idea was widely prevalent that the mere fact of some article having been customarily imported from Germany made the transference of its production to Great Britain a simple matter. The Committee remark that attempts to start new enterprises on unsound lines are invariably dangerous, and at abnormal times they may cause serious mischief by temporarily diverting custom from usual channels, and thus accentuating the the war the idea was widely prevalent that the mere fact of some article having been customarily imported from Germany made the transference of its production to Great Britain a simple matter. The Committee remark that attempts to start new enterprises on unsound lines are invariably dangerous, and at abnormal times they may cause serious mischief by temporarily diverting custom from usual channels, and thus accentuating the dislocation of industry. The Committee therefore discouraged misdirected efforts of this kind, or helped to guide them on to better lines. It has been especially necessary to emphasise the importance of avoiding any use of relief funds in competition with existing industrial concerns. Any financial help given by the Committee to schemes for starting new trades has only taken the form of advancing money for the payment of wages for a limited period, to be repaid out of any profits that might accrue, and with the assurance that the scheme was to be managed by experienced persons on sound commercial lines.

The trades which the Committee have had, or now have, under review include various branches of the toy-making trade (stuffed toys, wooden toys, the making of china dolls' heads and dolls' trunks, &c.), and the making of artificial flowers, baskets, bon-bon bags, boot polish, brushes, crochet buttons, fireless cookers, gloves, Japanese cot quilts, hair nets, memorial wreaths, nets, polished wood fancy articles, potash (from seaweed), rugs (of a kind previously made in Austria), slippers, stockinette knickerbockers, surgical bandages, tapestry, and tinsel scourers, and also gold-beating, the weaving of willow and rush for mats, chairs, and baskets, and the cottage weaving industry. The Committee have also considered plans for extending women's employment in agricultural enterprises, including intensive poultry farming and schemes for fruit-growing, vegetable-preserving and drying.

Principles of Relief Work.

The Committee report at length on their schemes of relief work. In deciding what types of employment should be permitted in relief workrooms they were guided by two main principles. In the first place, the product of that employment must not compete in any way with ordinary industry. In the second place, the work must be of such a nature as to maintain and, if possible, improve, the efficiency of the women employed. They give a detailed explanation of their reasons for having fixed in August a minimum rate of pay of 3d. an hour for those employed in workrooms, and state that, in view of the increase in the cost of living since the maximum of 10s. was fixed for a working week of 40 hours, that maximum has been raised to 11s. 6d.

SWANLEY HORTICULTURAL COLLEGE SCHEME.

Wishing to help in this time of crises by working on the land and thereby setting free men to serve the country, the Horticultural College, Swanley, is taking a useful part by providing short courses of training for female gardeners, fruit-growers, dairy workers, and others. The annual report presented at the general meeting of the College, presided over by Sir John Cockburn, at 30, Hyde Park-gardens, yesterday, pointed out that practical teaching was given to women in methods of production and in the disposal of produce, and that many applications were received from employers. Gratitude was expressed for a gift of £10 from the Queen for the Colonial and Domestic Training Branch, which, in addition to the management of the gardens and poultry, also teaches such useful matters as housecraft, carpentry, upholstery, and cooking. Several past students, it was stated, were turning their varied attainments to good account at Red Cross centres in England and France.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said it was gratifying in the present circumstances that the College had suffered less than might have been expected. The number of students had been well maintained, and they helped to meet the growing demand for women's work, especially in gardening. Women were proud to take the places of men who had gone to the front, it being well understood that the displacement was only temporary. The present conditions gave women an opportunity of proving their capacity in various new directions, and their work generally was showing remarkable development, even motor-driving being among the various occupations in which employment was offered. He recognised the devotion with which women were offering their services in a time of emergency, and remarked that many girls were being sent to the College by the Board of Agriculture to learn milking, which had of late years been done by men. The Government had shown recognition that the College filled a desirable function in the national life. Viscountess Falmouth seconded, and the motion was carried.

In connection with their work of finding employment for women on the land and of developing and fostering agricultural industries the National Political League have arranged a meeting to be held, by permission of Lady Cowdray, at 16, Carlton House-terrace, to-morrow, at half past four. Lady Denman will take the chair, and Mr. Stephan Graham will speak on the land problem in Russia. Miss M. A. Broadhurst, President of the League, will deal with the work done by the National Land Council in developing industries on or connected with the land, and towards the formation of training colonies for women and girls. Applications for tickets may be made to the Secretary, Bank Buildings, 16, St. James's-street.

Medical Times
19.4.15

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

WE have received from the Committee of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund a copy of a publication which has been compiled by Mr. Percy Green, of the Press Department, 8, Grosvenor Place, S.W., which contains a large number of newspaper extracts, in which reference is made to the excellent work of the Fund. The first two pages of the publication contain the signed message of the Queen to the nation, appealing to the women of Great Britain "to help their less fortunate sisters through this fund," statements as to the duties of the various Committees, and as to what has been done, and is being done. There are about sixty folio pages of extracts from the London and other newspapers, including Scotch and Irish representative journals, all complimentary, and indicating approval of the scheme. The price of the publication is one shilling, and any profit arising from its sale will be added to the Fund.

Daily Mail
22.4.15

WARNING TO MAIDS.

Sir,—A leaflet has been sent to me headed "Australia Offers Help to Women in Distress Through the War," and it tells how New South Wales and Victoria will accept untrained girls and widows with not more than two children for domestic service.

A further inducement to the girl is a paragraph stating that the Queen's Work for Women Fund is ready to assist those eligible for these passages.

As an Australian woman I should like to warn English girls of the danger they run in leaving home and friends, seeking fortune in a strange country at a time like the present.

SMALL WAGES.

The wages offered are from 5s. weekly, a quarter of what a good mai dis paid in the Colonies.

How long will such an arrangement last? The girl will very soon feel that she is trained and worthy of more money. Will the mistress give it?

Then comes the parting of the ways and the danger to the girl.

Where is she to stay while seeking fresh employment?

The widow with two children is expected to go "outback." I have not been away from New South Wales six months yet, and when I left the advertising columns of our newspapers were full of servants wanted for the country, but "without encumbrances."

TROUBLE AHEAD.

There is poverty and trouble ahead for the girl who accepts a starvation wage in a country where clothing alone is double the price paid for the same article in England.

I would suggest that some scheme of training should be started.

A large house could be rented near London, and the girls given some months' good training under an experienced woman, preferably one who understands Australian conditions.

If the £2 given by the Queen's Fund helped such a scheme along to commence the house could easily be made to pay its own expenses by offering to board at a low rate many professional working women who have been reduced through the war.

(Miss) SUTTON TALHAM.

Pioneer Club, St. James's.

Herald.
13.2.15

603

A GREAT fight is being made by Dr. Marion Phillips and Margaret Bondfield on behalf of the women employed in the Queen's workrooms. They are asking for a rise of an halfpenny an hour. At present the rate of pay is 3d. an hour, with a maximum of 10s. a week. Everyone will admit this was only a bare subsistence rate before the rise in prices; now it is starvation pure and simple, and we trust the whole force of organised Labour will help in securing the very modest increase asked for.

Standard
19-4-15

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, to which more than £150,000 has been subscribed by the public, is doing admirable work in an unostentatious manner. Its machinery exists not for the relief of distress, but for its prevention, and it offers not charity but work to those who need it. In her message to the nation when the fund was inaugurated last autumn the Queen said, "In the firm belief that prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity, I have inaugurated the Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund. Its object is to provide employment for as many as possible of the women of this country who have been thrown out of work by the war. I appeal to the women of Great Britain to help their less fortunate sisters through this fund."

The Central Committee has the Marchioness of Crewe as chairman, Miss Mary R. Macarthur as hon. secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Tennant as hon. treasurer. Its members are Lady Askwith, Miss Margaret Bondfield, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, Mrs. Gasson, Miss R. E. Lawrence, Miss Susan Lawrence, the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Miss Violet Markham, Viscountess Midleton, the Hon. Lily Montagu and Dr. Marion Phillips. Its primary function is to devise and put into operation schemes which will provide work for women and girls whom the war has thrown out of employment without interfering with ordinary trade. It investigates suggestions and acts as a bureau of advice for individuals and organisations, and is a connecting link between the various official and voluntary agencies which are interested in the same problems.

There is also a collecting committee, whose duty it is to raise funds to be spent solely on schemes devised by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

All communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner, S.W. Applicants for work should apply to the secretary of the local representative committee at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

253/60

The Evening Standard
3/8/15

653
653/61

THE QUEEN'S FUND

POWER MACHINISTS MAKE KHAKI AND KIT-BAGS.

LARGE CONTRACT.

Over fifty girls, formerly engaged in printing, have been placed in new trades by the Central Committee on Women's Employment.

These girls worked at Kingsway Hall, a Queen's "Work for Women" Fund workroom, after their trade could not offer them employment. About five-sixths of the workers in the workroom are bookfolders, and there is no doubt that the trade is at present a very unpromising one.

Every week firms are either closing down or placing the workers on very short time, while occasional work which gave the women employment for one or two days a week during the war is getting distinctly less. The girls are very anxious to get into some employment which is more hopeful than that of their old trade, and they are very ready to learn whatever they can.

Leather-Stitching for Girls.

Thirty-six have gone into the contracts hosiery workroom in Piccadilly, where, after learning to use hand-knitting machines, they earn good wages, helping to carry out a contract for 2,000,000 pairs of socks for soldiers. Eight girls were sent to learn leather-stitching, which is always a good trade, and particularly so at the moment, and four girls have been trained in power-machining, the demand for workers at present exceeding the supply.

Urged by the long list of power-machinists wanted in the daily papers, the girls accepted with alacrity the invitation of Mrs. Halsey to learn how to use the machines she had set up in her house in South Audley-street. They were quite aware that power-machining firms would not take them without some training, owing to the difficulty of sparing time to teach new workers. They knew also that, once having learned to use power, a great many branches of work are open to them, particularly just now, when a great supply of khaki and kit-bags is needed.

After a fortnight's training the girls have obtained work with a children's frock-making firm at a wage of 14s. per week. When they are more experienced they will be put on piece work, and have the opportunity of earning better wages.

Of the remaining girls who have been transferred to new trades one has become a messenger clerk, and six others have been taken as ward-maids in the new Military Hospital in Endell-street.

Evening Standard
15/6/15

65

653/62

THE QUEEN'S FUND

TRAINING HOUSE-WORKERS AND HOME-HELPS.

WAGE-EARNING OVER 40.

Although young women who were unemployed in the winter have now for the most part found work, the problem of the older wage-earners remains.

The way it is being tackled at Willesden in the Queen's Fund workrooms is an illustration of the usefulness of the schemes approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. Training, where normal employment cannot be found, is the plan.

Over 100 women above forty years of age still remain in the workroom, and as the majority are not trained for any kind of work, Mrs. Ackworth, the energetic chairwoman of the Employment Committee, has set about training them all. She is following two distinct schemes, and converting them into home helps and trained houseworkers.

First and Second Class Workers.

Thirty of the women are in training as home helps, and it depends upon those who remain how many of them qualify for trained houseworkers. Certificates have been offered of first and second class, and later on, when they are trained, Mrs. Ackworth intends to have a bureau in connection with the workroom for the supply of first-class or second-class houseworkers. Ladies requiring daily workers will then be sure of competent people. A scale of wages will be fixed according to the class.

"I do not think there would be sufficient paid work in Willesden for all the home helps when they are trained," said Mrs. Ackworth, "if they only went to the sick homes, but if they have certificates as trained houseworkers as well they will always be sure of plenty to do."

Three Sad Cases.

After indoor training the women are sent out to look after the homes where district nurses, midwives, or charitable associations require their help. The following are typical cases:—

The mother dies in hospital, leaving the father with ten children, the youngest a newborn baby and the eldest but fourteen years old. The home help has been teaching the little girl how to look after the family, and goes in to help her.

A death and a birth in the same house. The mother dead and the daughter-in-law with a baby, and two helpless men.

The mother dying with cancer, the husband on night work sleeps in the day and so can do nothing for his wife. Three little children, the youngest eighteen months.

Home Spring Cleaning.

The home helps supervisor not only visits the homes where the women are working, but inspects their own homes. They have all done spring cleaning at home under supervision, and several have been moved to cleaner and healthier quarters.

The Morning Advertiser
20/7/13

653

653/63

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND

SKILLED DAILY SERVANTS.

The charwomen who received a maintenance grant from the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund while attending instructional classes arranged by the Central Committee on Women's Employment to equip them as skilled daily servants, are now ready to fill domestic places in private houses or hotels. For some weeks the women have received training from an efficient certificated teacher.

The first instruction given embraced practical demonstrations on the up-to-date and hygienic methods of cleaning everything in domestic and daily use, economy and the correct use of cleaning materials, scouring solutions, the proper mixtures for cleaning delicate fabrics, varnished surfaces, and furniture polishes. This part of the domestic economy training was given in an empty house in Cadogan-square.

The classes were then removed to a furnished mansion in the neighbourhood of Park-lane, lent to the Central Committee by a well-known society lady, who, being interested in the training scheme, and recognising that women would only become proficient by practical acquaintance with the contents of a residence, generously lent her town house for the purpose of training the pupils.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund yesterday reached a total of 162,579*l.* in the "Hundred Miles of Pennies Scheme." Another mile, realising 220*l.*, has now been completed.

653/64 653.

The Lady's Pictorial – October 2nd 1915.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

THE stress and concentration of war have done more than suppress political and social differences; they have unified the work of the sexes. It is never possible to draw a dividing line and say, "Here finished the work of the men; here began the work of the women." The nation is one, without division. There are nevertheless some directions in which work by women for women has been specialised, and the outstanding example of such work in the present war is the Queen's "Work for Women Fund."

The scheme was inaugurated by her Majesty the Queen early in September last, to provide employment for as many as possible of the women of this country thrown out of work by the war. Her Majesty's call was full of point and character. It contained such pregnant phrases as "prevention of distress is better than its relief," and "employment is better than charity." It was a declaration which, if made in normal times, would startle the country by its boldness and breadth of view, and it will not be forgotten when the war is over.

The purpose of the Committee was to obtain money for the relief of this unemployment, and the funds it is raising are being spent solely on schemes devised by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for this purpose. The Fund does not itself provide the actual work.

Throughout the country there were thousands of women workers who found themselves deprived of livelihood through loss of employment. All over the country factories were either closing down or turning off their hands in hundreds. This time last year, in London alone, nearly 50,000 women and girls were estimated to be out of work, and 200,000 more on only "half-time." Conditions have now improved.

The Queen's "Work for Women Fund" made a very timely entrance on the scene. Indeed, it is one of the good things that have come out of the evil of this war, that a grand experiment is now being made in the methods of treating the problem of unemployment. It was the Queen's intimate knowledge of girl life in England and the part women play in the industrial and commercial ranks of large towns that inspired her Majesty to write her appeal to British women to come forward to help their less fortunate sisters. The position of women who are actual breadwinners is extremely sad, and amid much that is sad, it is interesting to observe that women suffer at least as much as men from the horrors of war. We have all grown very enthusiastic over the gallant deeds of our soldiers, and we are all anxious to do what we can to help those whom they have left behind them, but some of us are apt to forget that there are others, who, while unable to claim assistance on the score of relationship with a fighting man, are just as deserving and in need of aid. Thousands of homes in the British Isles are entirely, or nearly entirely, dependent on women. Thus the problem of the out-of-work women presented itself in a more tragic manner, perhaps, than ever before. Charity is a good thing, but avoiding the necessity of charity as far as possible is a better. This has been made possible chiefly by opening workrooms in many of the most distressed districts of London and the provinces, in which clothing may be made for distribution. One fact which cannot be explained away or minimised is that for the time being all German export trade of made-up clothing is dead. Not only is wearing apparel concerned, but a quantity of smaller wares in fancy goods, which will not be "made in Germany" for a very long time to come. The manufacturers had little time to grasp the changed situation in the first few months of the war, but now there is every reason to think that they will call for plenty of women's work. Everyone, I think, has now become convinced of the distress among the industrial women workers, but not everyone has yet realised that the plight of the typist, the actress, and other such workers is no less serious. Many of them have pitiful tales to tell.

The problem before the Committee is therefore many-sided. The Committee is desirous to promote, wherever possible, schemes for the training of women in domestic economy, in trades where new openings are now offered to British industry, and in certain skilled trades where there is normally a shortage of labour. In this way the status of the workers is improved, and instead of being merely tided over a time of difficulty, they will be enabled hereafter to command a more useful position in the labour market and a better rate of wages. The fund neither employs voluntary clerical labour, nor did it encourage the voluntary workers who at the beginning of the war hastened to make numerous garments for the soldiers and their families, thereby injuring trade or making less possible the doubly vital work of employing those whose living actually depends on providing such articles. One of the aims of the scheme is that no existing trade shall be interfered with, and therefore no garment made in the workrooms may be sold.

H.M. THE QUEEN.

Her Majesty's appeal awakened the greatest interest in the Fund, and in the first twelve hours of its existence over £20,000 was subscribed. The profits of the sale of the song, "Your King and Country Want You"—which was dedicated by special permission to the Queen—are to be handed to the Q.W.W.F., and the composer generously decided to devote his royalties on the song to the Fund. By the end of January those royalties had amounted to considerably over £5,000! Women have emptied their jewel-cases into the Fund. A thank-offering of 2s. 6d. was made "for full work and full wages." The profits of the sale of "Princess Mary's Gift Book" alone added £10,000 to the Fund, when half a million copies of this book had been sold, and it is said to be a "record" in the publishing trade that 400,000 copies should have been sold to the trade within three weeks of publication. The production of the book gave over 2,000 people employment.

Her Majesty's appeal to seven million Sunday school scholars met with splendid response. One child, on hearing of the collection, approached her teacher and said: "I want to give something to the Queen. You might send her my prize instead of giving it to me." When the Queen heard of this she was much touched, and instantly suggested the issuing of certificates to the children who voluntarily surrendered their prizes, as a reminder that a child's sacrifice was appreciated in the dark days of the great war. The Chief Rabbi informed us in January that children of the Hebrew and Religion Classes in the provinces and in the metropolis had raised £100 0s. 8d., all collected in halfpennies. The Ladies' Golf Union forwarded a cheque for £743 12s. 8d., made up of £50 from the funds of the Union, £1 4s. from one of the Colonial affiliated clubs Pietermaritzburg and the remainder almost entirely in 1s. subscriptions from members of the affiliated clubs.

Other things besides hard cash have been attracted to the coffers of the various war funds. The Q.W.W.F. received a length of Chinese silk, embroidered with dragons, "each of which has a love story," and a piece of Hungarian work done entirely by the embroiderer's left hand. An old lady of ninety-five travelled to London to deliver personally the gift of a Jubilee sovereign, carefully wrapped up in tissue paper. Another donor was a blind old woman, who was led up by a Boy Scout to present the savings of many years. A soldier's fiancée sent her engagement ring with the following explanation: "The boy who gave me this ring made me promise that if anything happened to him I was to give it away. He will never come back. With a wrench I send it to you, as his gift to the Queen's Fund." A recruit sent in his full pay from the day he enlisted because work found by the Fund for his dependents had enabled him to go to the Front. One and a half million children made a collection for the Fund. There is also the "100 miles of pennies" collection, by which 52,000 pennies are collected from every mile of ground. This scheme is a mileage problem with a great fascination about it. Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, one of the Joint Treasurers of the Fund, said:—"A hundred miles of pennies, if you take it in the light of a street collection, means the longest street in the world. I believe that if you average a penny a house, each house with a frontage of 30 ft., the houses if placed in a single line would cover the circumference of the earth with 5,124 miles to spare." It is hoped this will be accomplished. A special Christmas appeal for shillings to provide women with work produced the splendid total of 167,446 shillings, otherwise a further £8,372 6s.

A vast network of local organisations all over the country is now connected with the Central Committee on Women's Employment of the Q.W.W.F. Thirty-two boroughs in London and Greater London, and thirty-four provincial towns opened workrooms approved by the Committee. In addition, over 114 ordinary trade workrooms which would otherwise have been shut down as a result of the war, have been kept going, and women retained in employment who would otherwise have swollen the ranks of the workless. Besides the experimental schemes which the Central Committee on Women's Employment has started as models of how work may be provided, twenty-nine schemes proposed by Local Representative Committees all over the country have been approved by the Central Committee. The relief work is by no means confined to needlework, but includes training schemes by which the women and girls will be fitted for better work in the future. The results show the value of the lessons in making old clothes new which have been given during the past few weeks. Many of the workers could not sew at all when they came to the workrooms, yet one woman brought her husband's old trousers and cut them down to a neat pair of knickerbockers for her boy; a wife mended her husband's flannel shirt with the tail, and added a new tail of a different material; a sheet for a cot was made out of a nightshirt. Mr. Arnold Bennett, who visited the workrooms, said:—"I was shown an exquisite pair of house-shoes which had once been an old tweed hat and a bit of ribbon. Waste was inconceivable. Recollect that all articles are given away to those who need them. Nothing is sold, except the very rags of rags, which are secretly disposed of to a rag merchant."

Five thousand women were found employment due to the schemes of this committee within the first six months; and of the 2,000 shopgirls in the West End of London who were thrown out of work in the early days of the war, many have gone back or found other employment. Among the centres of work opened last October, two workrooms in Bethnal Green and Stepney employed ninety-six women in making cradles out of banana crates. Fifteen hundred cradles were being fitted up complete to give away to poor mothers in the neighbourhood who could not afford to buy them. Contract work was placed with nearly 100 firms whose workers were out of employment. Those contracts were placed with the assistance of the Committee in such a way as to secure prompt delivery of goods which were urgently required, and at the same time to assist women's work in localities where unemployment was most feared. Both small and large firms have been benefited, the smaller firms being principally those engaged in the millinery and dressmaking trades. The work of making up 5,000 shirts weekly was given out to some sixty workshops, and the Committee made it a condition that the Fair Wages Clause should be strictly observed. An order for 50,000 flannel belts as a gift to the French Army was given out to some thirty firms, and large orders for body belts have been placed in connection with the Queen's Gift to Soldiers at the Front. Private orders for the making of shirts and other garments have also been distributed to workshops throughout London and the provinces. A contract for 1,000,000 pairs of Army socks came as a windfall to the Committee. It provided work for over a thousand women until the end of January, and up to the beginning of August.

where there is normally a shortage of labour. In this way the status of the workers is improved, and instead of being merely tided over with the following explanation: "The boy who gave me this ring made me promise that if anything happened to him I was to give it away. He will never come back. With a wrench I send it to you, as his gift the Queen's Gift to Soldiers at the Front. Private orders for the making of shirts and other garments have also been distributed to workshops throughout London and the provinces. A contract for 2,000,000 pairs of Army socks came as a windfall to the Committee. It provided work for over a thousand women weekly from the end of January right up to the beginning of August.

In the west of England a new factory was created, in which the working women of surrounding districts find a new employment in all forms of fruit-pulping, drying vegetables, and in bottling new unsweetened fruit preserves. By means of this work hundreds of tons of fruit, which would otherwise have been wasted, have been dealt with, and supplies for the Army and other public sources provided, and a trade hitherto centred in Germany developed in this country. Closer at hand, at Radlett, in Herts, East London girls were set to work with a view to establishing them as skilled market-gardeners and fruit-growers in the future, to develop a good acreage of land with fruit and vegetables and flowers.

A new privilege was later granted by Royal permission. Her Majesty's crown and initials may now be placed on each article made throughout the country in the workrooms controlled by the Committee. Many hundreds of garments were made before this distinction was conferred on the workrooms, and a small staff of unemployed embroideresses are now engaged on this final work.

Many stories are told of the gratitude displayed by the recipients of the finished cradles and baby garments that went out from the Queen's workrooms to poor East End mothers. In one home were four little ones of five years, three years, two years, and a baby seven weeks old. "She's the lucky baby," the mother said of the mite in the cradle. "The others never had a cot. I just love it!" She turned over the warm blankets, fondly pointing to the crown on each. "And all marked with the Queen's name, too! She's a lucky baby, she is!"

The total of the fund up to date reaches nearly £170,000. The whole tendency of social work at the present time is in the direction of utilising money which has been contributed for national purposes, to give people who are out of work the opportunity for training so that they will become more valuable citizens after the war.

If no other result emerges from the experience of the war-created Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, the fact that a minimum rate of wage per hour has been accepted as a national necessity will mark the end of another great problem of women's employment. But too much optimism should not be entertained as to the future. There is a trying time ahead. When peace comes, when factories stop turning out military equipment, and the great armies disband, mighty problems will arise. And then, above all others, it will be seen that the Prince of Wales's Fund and the Q.W.W.F. were vital necessities.

The Queen has been the first in the causes which belong to the women of England in war time. The magnificent work of this organisation is destined to achieve admirable results, and it is no exaggeration to say that the progress of their work is nothing less than amazing! Women are doing it all. Women invent it, scheme it, plan it, supervise it, and execute it in every detail. It is a triumphant vindication of the ethical organising genius of women.

NANCY NOYES.

The Morning Post,
Oct. 12th. 1915.

653/65 65

WORKS OF RELIEF.

THE QUEEN'S FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £165,857 11s. 3d. The day's subscriptions included a collection by the Mayoress of Poplar (further instalment), £48 12s. 8d.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, Hon. Secretary, 33, Portland-place, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner.

CLERICAL WORKERS' TRAINING SCHEME.

That training with maintenance is better in the end than finding unemployed and inefficient girls temporary work was long ago recognised by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, as answering in part the question: "What shall be done for our girls?" Even in those harassing days of last autumn and winter, when the dislocation of the industrial system affected women workers so generally and directly throughout the country, it was decided to give training instead of temporary work to a number of girl clerks, and to enable this to be done successfully a grant was made by the Queen's Work for Women Fund. The scheme is known as the Clerical Workers' Training Scheme. A report has now been prepared for the Central Committee on Women's Employment, which speaks eloquently of the achievements of the girls during their period of training. Dealing with 57 of the girls who have received instruction and maintenance at Clark's College and the City of London College, it appears that 51 have been placed in permanent employment, and all have secured a substantial advance on the wages they earned before the war, when their salaries averaged 15s. a week. Thirty-four of the girls on restarting office life begin as follows: 15s. per week, two; 17s. 6d., three; 18s., one; £1, thirteen; £1 2s. 6d., one; £1 5s., nine; £1 6s., two; £1 7s. 6d., two; and £1 10s., one. Only six of the original 57 now remain in training, and it is hoped that they will find employment within the next fortnight.

6.53.

Morning Advertiser

October 30th 1915

"THE QUEEN'S NET."

Everybody has heard of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, but few know much about the good work it is doing, and, in fact, many people have no idea as to whom the fund helps. To give a wider knowledge of some aspects of the work, however, Mr. Harold Begbie has written "The Queen's Net" (Hodder and Stoughton), in which he tells true stories of all sorts and conditions of women saved from the war flood of suffering, privation, and despair by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. It is a wonderfully interesting book, and the narratives show the author at his best. There is considerable dramatic interest in the stories of those whom he has selected as examples, and he candidly admits that they were chosen rather for their possibilities in that direction than for their pathos or tragedy. Readers will not quarrel with Mr. Begbie on that ground, for they will find in them both tragedy and pathos, and no little humour. The opening story, "Light Opera," contains touches of all three characteristics, and deals with the case of a lady who had been a member of the D'Oyly Carte touring companies, and who is now, with charming philosophy, keeping her daughter and herself on the ten shillings a week she earns in the workroom. Another, "Little Lulu," tells of one who years ago was in the circus-ring, and is now making a brave fight against adverse circumstances. And so on right through the book, each story is a novel in itself, but has the advantage over the latter of being true. Here the author has drawn living pictures of brave struggles against adversity, borne with a cheeriness which is marvellous, and without complaint, and one lays down the book with the feeling that there are many noble women whose names and lives never reach the public eye. Possibly these are exceptional cases, but they serve to show how wide the net of the fund is cast, and how it has helped people of all classes who have been hit by the effects of the war.

The author, in a few concluding words to the reader, says, "If the stories in this book have touched your heart, and through them you have come to realise how great and desperate are the sufferings of some women workers, may I appeal to you to mark this generous sympathy by sending me a subscription for the 'Queen's Net Fund,' which is to help the parent fund at headquarters." It will, indeed, be a hard heart which is not touched by the stories of bravery and struggle, and there should be a great response to the appeal, which would enable more of the good work to be done. Subscriptions should be addressed to Mr. Begbie, St. Paul's House, Warwick-square, E.C., and marked "Queen's Net Fund."

Observer.

October 31st 1915.

"THE QUEEN'S NET."

Under the title of "The Queen's Net" (Hodder and Stoughton, 6s.), Mr. Harold Begbie relates with rare skill and sympathy a number of deeply interesting stories which he has collected of all sorts and conditions of women who have been saved from the war flood of suffering, privation and despair by the Queen's Work for Women Fund. These stories, as the author tells us, take the reader into queer neighbourhoods, introduce him into strange rooms, make him acquainted with some odd characters, and show him at the same time how wide and how deep the Queen has flung her rescuing net into the war-muddied waters of London.

Amongst the odd characters to whom we are introduced are the star artist of light opera, the lady detective, the flower seller, the girl gardeners, the little stranded governess, and Lulu, the circus rider, who, as age came on and work grew scarcer, became an actress for the cinemas, for she was still "pretty useful to these people," as she could "fall out of a window and ride anything they give me." The author's aim will unquestionably be realised, and the stories will touch many hearts, with the result that there will be a widespread desire to help "The Queen's Net Fund," subscriptions to which should be addressed to Mr. Begbie at St. Paul's House, Warwick-square, E.C.

653/66

653/67 653

The Times
November 4th 1915.

SOCIOLOGY.

THE QUEEN'S NET. True Stories of all Sorts and Conditions of Women saved from the War Flood of Suffering, Privation, and Despair by the Queen's Work for Women Fund. Collected and told by HAROLD BEGBIE. 7¼×5, 300 pp. Hodder and Stoughton. 6s.

This is worth reading by all who feel the attraction of humanity revealing its indestructible worth in hard or stricken lives stripped of convention, for Mr. Begbie, as he has shown in his "Broken Earthenware," "In the Hand of the Potter," &c., has the gift of painting in vivid colours the stories of individual souls. There is a chapter at the end on "What it"—the Queen's Work for Women Fund—"does and how it does it."

Illustrated London News.
November 6th 1915.

SAUNTERS AMONG BOOKS.

BY RICHARD KING.

MOST people do not recognise a heroine unless she stands in the middle of a ray of limelight. A heroine sitting quietly by herself in a corner—who ever heard of her? The world requires a miraculous shaft of limelight and an accompaniment of slow music before it realises that someone superhumanly brave and virtuous and heroic is standing in its midst. Well, perhaps it really is rather difficult to see heroism in a charwoman—charing. It is more convenient to call her act of courage "duty," leaving it unapplauded at that. There is nothing heroic in doing one's duty. It does not require a crowd of admirers and a medal. It just has to be lived through—like Monday morning. Nobody feels the spiritual faith to remove mountains on Monday morning. It is just a drabness, a dulness, a dead-level to be lived through somehow. So the quiet heroism of the everyday goes unheralded, unknown. And yet it is far more difficult to achieve than the sudden act of immense courage which gets interviewed and photographed and rewarded. The one is a moment of inspiration; the other is a weary struggle against loneliness and poverty and tears. I know not if there be a heaven, but this I do know—there ought to be one, if only for those who have fought through the long years with cheeriness and courage and optimism. God knows they have had small reward here on earth—except the chilly reward of a duty done—but to them the unwritten history of drab humanity owes some of its finest pages of heroism.

"All scum in a boiling pot rises to the top and makes itself seen, concealing the pure liquid beneath, until it is skimmed off," writes Elinor Glyn in her new book, "Three Things" (Duckworth). It has been said before in a variety of ways, and people have cried, "How true! How very true!"—straightway living their lives as if they disbelieved it. But occasionally—very, very occasionally—we do catch glimpses of this pure liquid concealed beneath the scum, and these glimpses happen in the queerest, darkest, and most unlikely places. "The Queen's Net" (Hodder and Stoughton), written by Harold Begbie for the Queen's Work for Women Fund, describes some of them. Heaven alone knows how many of the wondrous army of Poor Brave Souls have been saved by this most practical and noble work! The Queen's "net" has not landed those "fish"—and they exist in their thousands in peace times—who, as it were, live in expectant readiness to be caught in the meshes of any charity under royal patronage. It has caught those poor women who would sooner starve than beg; who, behind the lace curtains of their little houses, have eaten out their hearts in loneliness and disappointment and poverty. In peace-time so many thousands of these poor workers lived so bravely—one might also say so "genteel-ly"—within nodding distance of the workhouse. It is, metaphorically speaking, so easy to look like a lady behind a lace curtain. They worked and kept themselves to themselves, clinging fondly to their remnants of "better days," secretly thankful for the fact that, though they had to cook their own dinner in a chafing-dish, nobody suspected, nobody saw them doing it. Then came the war. And war ripped away the pretty lace curtains from these lonely little homes, leaving their occupants exposed to all the shame of prying eyes and the horrors of starvation. But the Queen's Work for Women Fund saved these Poor Brave Souls from the final ignominy of a cruel fate. It helped to pin up the pretty lace curtains again in these poor little homes, and brought back courage and hope and a pale wintry glow of happiness into thousands of poor, terrified hearts. Mr. Begbie has collected a few of the life-stories of these poor workers whom the Fund has saved. His stories are pitiful stories of brave women fighting against great odds; but, though piteous and always sad, they yet are tales of wonderful courage and faith and hope—beauty too, and that heroic optimism which still persists bravely, even among human wreckage.

And, but for the very apparent manipulation of Fate by the author, Kathleen Norris, Julia, the heroine of "The Story of Julia Page" (Murray), might easily have become one of Mr. Begbie's forlorn derelicts. She was brought up upon the pleasing and easy ideal that a girl has only to wear a smart hat, show her teeth, powder her nose, and cry "Well, fancy that!" prettily enough, and Man and Matrimony will eventually land her on the Island of Soft Cushions and Caviare.

But Kathleen Norris, in the rôle of destiny, was kind. She has not a story to tell, so much as a series of interesting problems to propound. Consequently, Julia is thrown into the pit and dragged out of it again whenever occasion requires. We meet her at the beginning, a silly, giggling, badly brought-up flapper. But one day she hears the truth about her own "bad form" from the lips of a set of rich young people whom she wished to impress. Her reformation is sudden and unexpected. She almost at once becomes a grave, smiling, modest young person, giving up her life to the betterment of her less fortunate sisters. You see Miss Norris wished to show how a girl can turn to better things, while incidentally allowing a writer to describe some American social problems. But when Julia finds the man she loves, who loves her, and the story seems likely to come to an end, we and her lover suddenly discover that she committed an "indiscretion" in her giggling days. Henceforth the problem is whether she should have told her husband or not, and whether he should rightly have gone and left her when she did. It is however settled happily unknown. And yet it is far more difficult to achieve than the sudden act of immense courage which gets interviewed and photographed and rewarded. The one is a moment of inspiration; the other is a weary struggle against loneliness and poverty and tears. I know not if there be a heaven, but this I do know—there ought to be one, if only for those who have fought through the long years with cheeriness and courage and optimism. God knows they have had small reward here on earth—except the chilly reward of a duty done—but to them the unwritten history of drab humanity owes some of its finest pages of heroism.

"All scum in a boiling pot rises to the top and makes itself seen, concealing the pure liquid beneath, until it is skimmed off," writes Elinor Glyn in her new book, "Three Things" (Duckworth). It has been said before in a variety of ways, and people have cried, "How true! How very true!"—straightway living their lives as if they disbelieved it. But occasionally—very, very occasionally—we do catch glimpses of this pure liquid concealed beneath the scum, and these glimpses happen in the queerest, darkest, and most unlikely places. "The Queen's Net" (Hodder and Stoughton), written by Harold Begbie for the Queen's Work for Women Fund, describes some of them. Heaven alone knows how many of the wondrous army of Poor Brave Souls have been saved by this most practical and noble work! The Queen's "net" has not landed those "fish"—and they exist in their thousands in peace times—who, as it were, live in expectant readiness to be caught in the meshes of any charity under royal patronage. It has caught those poor women who would sooner starve than beg; who, behind the lace curtains of their little houses, have eaten out their hearts in loneliness and disappointment and poverty. In peace-time so many thousands of these poor workers lived so bravely—one might also say so "genteel-ly"—within nodding distance of the workhouse. It is, metaphorically speaking, so easy to look like a lady behind a lace curtain. They worked and kept themselves to themselves, clinging fondly to their remnants of "better days," secretly thankful for the fact that, though they had to cook their own dinner in a chafing-dish, nobody suspected, nobody saw them doing it. Then came the war. And war ripped away the pretty lace curtains from these lonely little homes, leaving their occupants exposed to all the shame of prying eyes and the horrors of starvation. But the Queen's Work for Women Fund saved these Poor Brave Souls from the final ignominy of a cruel fate. It helped to pin up the pretty lace curtains again in these poor little homes, and brought back courage and hope and a pale wintry glow of happiness into thousands of poor, terrified hearts. Mr. Begbie has collected a few of the life-stories of these poor workers whom the Fund has saved. His stories are pitiful stories of brave women fighting against great odds; but, though piteous and always sad, they yet are tales of wonderful courage and faith and hope—beauty too, and that heroic optimism which still persists bravely, even among human wreckage.

And, but for the very apparent manipulation of Fate by the author, Kathleen Norris, Julia, the heroine of "The Story of Julia Page" (Murray), might easily have become one of Mr. Begbie's forlorn derelicts. She was brought up upon the pleasing and easy ideal that a girl has only to wear a smart hat, show her teeth, powder her nose, and cry "Well, fancy that!" prettily enough, and Man and Matrimony will eventually land her on the Island of Soft Cushions and Caviare.

But Kathleen Norris, in the rôle of destiny, was kind. She has not a story to tell, so much as a series of interesting problems to propound. Consequently, Julia is thrown into the pit and dragged out of it again whenever occasion requires. We meet her at the beginning, a silly, giggling, badly brought-up flapper. But one day she hears the truth about her own "bad form" from the lips of a set of rich young people whom she wished to impress. Her reformation is sudden and unexpected. She almost at once becomes a grave, smiling, modest young person, giving up her life to the betterment of her less fortunate sisters. You see, Miss Norris wished to show how a girl can turn to better things, while incidentally allowing a writer to describe some American social problems. But when Julia finds the man she loves, who loves her, and the story seems likely to come to an end, we, and her lover, suddenly discover that she committed an "indiscretion" in her giggling days. Henceforth the problem is whether she should have told her husband of it, and whether he should rightly have gone and left her when she did. It is, however, settled happily—after many pages and a very interesting but badly constructed story comes to an end. When an author is out to discuss a variety of problems it is extremely difficult to connect them by a love-story. The problems get in the way of the tale, and the tale gets in the way of the problems—often most unhappily. It is better to do as Elinor Glyn has done in "Three Things"—discuss the subjects she wants to discuss in a series of essays. She may not have much that is new to say upon such pro[illegible]s as Common Sense, Marriage and [illegible]ter, Divo[illegible] Motherhood, but she s[illegible]it tersely and dog[illegible] them up with romance—romance panting [illegible] problems. So we get a very readable litt[illegible] luncheon-party opinions which have [illegible] often as to be mistaken for platit[illegible]

Morning Post.
1. V. 1916

The African World 6 5 3.
13-3-16

653/68.

WORKS OF RELIEF.

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund has now reached a total of £169,324 8s. 10d. Recent subscriptions include: Thirty-seventh contribution from the Scottish Branch, per the Marchioness of Linlithgow, £51 15s.; collected by the Countess of Elgin, Broomhall, Dunfermline, a further contribution from Mr. George Lauder, Pittsburg, U.S.A., per Messrs. Thomas Blair and Son, solicitors, Dunfermline, £50; collected from the Scholars in the Sunday School, South Westoe, South Shields, £12 6s. 4d.

Sussex Daily News
14. 2. 16

HOW TUNBRIDGE WELLS IS HELPING.

SALE FOR THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Council Chamber at the Town Hall, Tunbridge Wells, presented a strange appearance yesterday, when a sale was held on behalf of The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.—The Mayor (Councillor C. W. Emson, J.P.) described the occasion as unique, for never before had the fine room, held sacred to the local governing body—the seat, as it were, of local government—been utilized as a sale room.—The raised portion of the room, crowned by the mayoral chair, was yesterday used as the rostrum by the auctioneers, who, regardless of their high position, "held forth" on the merits of the various lots, and banged the Mayoral table without respect as they knocked down the items to buyers with the usual cry of "Going, going, gone."—The Mayor, prior to the commencement of the sale, said large sums had been sent up from Tunbridge Wells to the Prince of Wales's Fund and other funds, but not to The Queen's Fund. He had arranged the sale at the request of Lady Roxburgh, on behalf of the Queen, and desired to thank every doner who had sent an article for sale that day. The need of this particular fund was steadily increasing, and a regular income was desirable. His Worship also expressed his thanks to the auctioneers of the borough, who would each take a turn on the rostrum, and upon this unique occasion he hoped a large sum would be realized for the fund. The sale was not only unique, inasmuch as it was being held in the Council Chamber, but also because, unlike other sales, the bidders would not endeavour to buy as cheaply as possible.—Mr. Arthur Brackett, on behalf of the auctioneers, said it gave them all great pleasure to assist in making the sale a success, and he desired, on behalf of his colleagues, to thank Mr. W. F. Bellamy, the Deputy Town Clerk, and the Town Hall staff for their great assistance.—The articles for sale were of a varied and excellent quality, including furniture, jewellery, bric-a-brac, and many other really valuable goods. A brisk trade was done.

THE EDMUND DAVIS COLLECTION.

A Beautiful and Comprehensive Exhibition.

By Sir Claude Phillips in the "Daily Telegraph."

This exhibition, which is for three weeks only, is "on behalf of the Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund"; by which queer phrase is no doubt meant that it is for the benefit of that fund. It is, next to the National Loan Exhibition at the Grosvenor Gallery, the most notable collection of paintings and sculpture that has been brought forward in London this winter. Mr. Edmund Davis confers a great privilege upon amateurs of fine painting and sculpture in affording them this opportunity for inspecting and enjoying at their leisure his exquisite collection, in which there is nothing that is not fine of its kind. It is one made entirely without parti pris, for æsthetic enjoyment, not in a spirit of ostentation. We have here exceptionally fine examples of Van Dyck, Rembrandt, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Watts, Rossetti, the Belgian painter, Alfred Stevens, Whistler, and M. Rodin; and the show is completed with some well-known examples of the art of Mr. Charles Shannon and Mr. Charles Ricketts, and paintings by Frank Potter, C. W. Furse, Charles Condor, and Mr. James Pryde. If we judge by mere numbers the collection is small; if we judge by quality and the masterpieces included, it is great.

Van Dyck and Rembrandt.

Most worthily occupying the central place of honour, appears the beautiful "Queen Henrietta-Maria," by Van Dyck, from the Lansdowne collection. It is decidedly superior in quality to the similar examples in the Royal collection and that of Lady Wantage. The Queen stands erect and impressive, dressed in shimmering white satin, touched here and there with crimson. The work is not only a masterpiece of execution, at once broad and subtle; it is what Van Dyck's portraits of women so seldom are, a masterpiece of strong and fearless characterisation. Among the paintings of his later English period it has few, if any, rivals. This canvas and the beautiful "Children of Charles I.," in the Turin Gallery, would suffice to prove that in technical accomplishment if not in virile power Sir Anthony reached his highest point in the later years of the sojourn in England. The "Saskia at her Toilette," by Rembrandt, painted about 1635, is a work of fine quality and fine condition, in which, however, we fail to recognise the young master's much-loved consort, the elegant Saskia. It was last in the collection of Dr. Bredius, and was by him for some years lent to the Royal Gallery of The Hague. The pre-eminently Spanish "Portrait of a Man," ascribed (not without some reason) to Velazquez, is a puzzle. There are many points—and among them especially the painting of the eyes—that are evidence in favour of the attribution. On the other hand, we miss the intense virility of conception and execution, the power of impression, both spiritual and visual, that characterise the greatest examples of the art of Velazquez. But if not by him, then by whom? This is a question which we must reserve for future discussion.

British Masters.

It is a great leap that we take, passing, as we must here, straight from Velazquez to Reynolds. By the English master is the fine and dignified three-quarter length "Earl of Suffolk," in colour scheme a "symphony" in brown and gold. One of the most beautiful works of Sir Joshua's later time is the "Lady Ormonde and Child"; in brilliancy and desinvolture, in archness and self-conscious charm, it just reaches the permissible limit, but does not, as a good many of the later portrait fantasies do, pass beyond it. The two Gainsboroughs, "Lady Clarges" and "Miss Indiana Talbot," though in what is deemed to be the artist's best manner, are not wholly sympathetic; in this exhibition Sir Joshua easily defeats the dazzling rival who so often, as painter if not as artist, rises superior to him. Taking another great leap, we come to Whistler, Alfred Stevens, Rossetti, and Watts. By the Anglo-American master we have the early "Old Battersea Bridge—Brown and Silver," the so-called "Piano Picture" (Lady Seymour Haden and Miss Annie Haden), and the exquisitely pure and brilliant "Symphony in White, No. III." In the "Piano Picture," a sober yet superb harmony of brown and silver, relieved by flesh tints of the utmost delicacy, Whistler's work has a sheer simplicity, a penetrating human charm that it rarely if ever exhibits in the later years.

The Belgian Poet-Painter.

The Belgian, Alfred Stevens, is the poet-painter of the Second-Empire beauty. His virtuosity—hardly rivalled by that of any modern executant in this style, which is more or less that of his Netherlandish ancestors—does not overwhelm, but on the contrary serves most appropriately to express the pensive élégante of the world, or more often of the half-world. He shows her in moments of sad, sensuous reverie, unsatisfied and full of foreboding in the midst of her splendour. The best things here, from his brush, are "L'Attente," "La Femme en blanc," and "La Dame en rose." With Watts we soar with solemn gladness into the empyrean; his great composition, "The Creation of Eve," reveals the Spirits of Air rising rainbow-hued in triumphant flight, when in their presence the act of creation has been accomplished. Two famous examples of Rossetti's earlier and finer manner are here—the curious caprice entitled "Borgia," and the triptych, "Paolo and Francesca." This last is one of the most inspired conceptions of the painter who was a poet and the poet who was a painter. The fatal hour of the lovers—the hour of bliss, overshadowed even in the moment of fruition by relentless Fate—has never save this once been realised in beauty.

THE LATE LIEUT. N. W. R. KING.

the son of Mr. H. J. King, the well-known South-African Magnate, to whom the condolences of Anglo-Africans will go out in the death of his son, the circumstances of which were published in our last issue.

Beautiful Sculpture.

The sculpture includes a vivacious portrait-bust, "La Comtesse de Sabran," ascribed to the great Houdon, and a whole group of works in marble and bronze, chiefly on a small scale, by M. Rodin. High above these white-marble fantasies and symbolisms of his later time "L'Eternelle Idole," "L'Eternel Printemps," "Les Voix," "L'Illusion brisée"—towers in Michelangelesque force, in Michelangelesque isolation, the life-size bronze statue, "Eve"—a figure the reposeful grandeur, and yet the tremendous vitality, of which it is difficult to express in words. This great work in its central position fitly crowns an exhibition of singular beauty and interest.

Dundee Courier
20.8.16

653

653/69

Queen Mary is extraordinarily busy in and about London just now, and there is hardly a part of it where there is a centre of women's work established under Her Majesty's "Work for Women Fund" that she has not visited. To-day Deptford was selected, and the Queen went there quite privately, and with the usual injunction that reporters must not be present. This is not meant to be disrespectful to the press, but is only an indication of the Queen's wish for privacy. She really does not wish her comings and goings to be blazoned throughout the country. Needless to say, the precautions taken for secrecy fail entirely in their object. Someone always betrays the secret, and an account of the visit duly appears. To-day's visit was conducted in the usual private way, but I hear that it passed off very successfully. Deptford is like all other districts of London, a town in itself, and extremes of poverty and middle-class prosperity are to be met within its boundaries. It was once represented by Mr Justice Darling, but its present member belongs to the Labour party. Queen Mary went round the workrooms and talked with the officials and workers, and the visit was altogether of the most agreeable character.

Newcastle Chronicle
16/12/16

653

653/70

A Circumlocution Tangle.

It is the fault of many of our laws, while framed with the best of intentions, that they are not sufficiently elastic to meet unforeseen contingencies. A case in point has arisen in connection with the London unemployed body. It has on its hands about 9,000 garments, made in the Women's Workrooms before the war, for distribution among the unemployed poor of the Metropolis. These cost £600 to produce, and, as we have at last reached the happy condition when there are no longer any poor with us, the charity clothing is left on the hands of the unemployed body and fast deteriorating. Though the authority may give away these garments, they are not allowed to sell them, and they are therefore in a quandary as to their disposal. In this dilemma the Local Government Board is to be asked to sanction their sale, though whether the Whitehall authority will agree to such a reasonable course is by no means certain.

w. Daily Mail

653-3

653/71

ELDERLY HELPS.

The growing scarcity of women workers has given opportunity for a scheme for using elderly women as helps in the home. At the beginning of the war many women suddenly thrown out of work were taken into the work-rooms of the "Queen's Work for Women Fund." But it was soon found that there were many unsuitable for special training in needlework or power-machine running. It was then decided to train those who seemed suitable as home helps. The organisers made the most careful inquiries into the personal character and cleanliness of these women. They visited them in their own homes to see how these were kept, and then they gave those who passed their tests a three months' training in domestic work. These new home helps are instructed in cookery, laundry, housewifery, and hygiene, and in the care of infants. In one district they are even given instruction in first aid. There are going to be tens of thousands of homes in London in the coming winter where it will be impossible to employ servants as usual, but where the help such as these women can afford in part time work during the day will be very welcome. A vast process of readjustment is going on in London as everywhere else throughout the country. We are discovering how to adapt our lives to new conditions. People who had big homes are often enough finding out it is possible to be just as happy in small homes. Women who had their motors last year are learning this year that walking has its advantages, for health and for many other reasons.

For Miss Boudfield. 653/72 11/9/18

Press Cuttings from Files 652 & 653. on Central Clee's Work.

652. Central Clee File. | Selected Cuttings, in chronological order, except the Radlett experiment cuttings which I have been able to put together as they are all on  sheets without otherwise.

In the other set of 652 cuttings are particulars of Queen Mary's visits to workrooms & various details about the work done: including emigration to Australia: they are on the same sheets - mixed rather - but all I have put here are fairly important.

653. W.W.F. "File | A few personal paragraphs & articles on inception of fund.

In the large lot of 653 cuttings are further particulars about the fund; & the Queen's visits with some Illustrations of workrooms.

These are in chronological order. There are three articles by girls who were rescued from sweated cookery, put on land & helped from state, by fund. The files from which these selections have been selected are put here as I have been through them carefully.

L.B.

653/73

19/9/15 Mrs Bondfield.

Re Central Club Queens Fund up to October 1914 from Enquet, are filed quite separately under 452. I have taken out such cuttings as I think may be useful, from "One of the Nero Times" copies but I will use for cutting so 652. The other for framing

EB

The Scotsman
Oct. 22nd. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

Yesterday's subscriptions amounted to £283, bringing the total up to £76,895. Two long tresses of hair, cut from a girl's head, have been sent by the Queen's Guild, Evening News, to be sold for the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Illustrated Chronicle, Oct. 23.

QUEEN AND WOMEN WORKERS.

Queen Mary's Fund to secure work for women is beginning to exert a beneficial influence. Experimental schemes for providing work for women have already been adopted by many local representative committees, Islington affording a notable example of what can be done. In the way of assisting poor women to get work in that borough, the labour exchanges registered 700 women and girls out of work recently, and the local committee obtained from the Queen's Fund a grant for the assistance of such as were thrown out of employment by the war. Eighty-four are now employed by the local employment committee. Arrangements have been made for starting other 200 at once. Two private work-rooms have been established to provide work for others, and help is given to the remainder until they can be put in the way of earning their living.

653a/1

653.

The Universe, October 23rd 1914

Notes and Comments.

Perhaps one of the most valuable of the many funds which the war has brought into being is the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, for the reason that it provides useful employment to many distressed women reduced at a stroke from comparative affluence to grinding poverty, and gives money in return for profitable services rendered—thus relieving those who are the recipients of its benefactions from that most hateful of all fears to independent minds—the fear that they are receiving charitable doles. There is another reason why this Fund should appeal to us all. We can all help it—if not with money, then with some cast-off garment, which might otherwise find its way to the rag-bag. All's fish that comes to the net of this excellent fund; garments of serge, tweed, or cloth, shirts, stockings and socks, all and any sorts of underwear, and odd lengths of material of any kind—old chintz, dimity, and cretonne. All go into the beneficial furnace of the Fund's workrooms, and, under the dexterous manipulation of its willing workers, emerges a cot-quilt, a rag-rug, a garment and what-not, to comfort some poor home, to protect some poor child from the winter's cold.

Daily Mail,
Oct. 24th. 1914.

HELP FOR WOMEN WORKERS.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund, which is finding employment for women and girls thrown out of work through the war, amounted yesterday to £77,867 15s. 5d. Latest subscriptions, some of them further instalments, included:

£102 6s. 5d.—Collected by Mayoress of Reading, including entertainment, £25 8s.; collected by Miss Smith, £12 10s. 6d.; by Mrs. Bull, £10 19s. 8d.
£55.—Collected by Mayoress of Nuneaton, including concert by Congregational church choir, £40.
£27.—Collected by Mayoress of Hastings, including Mr. Herbert Neal, £10; Mrs. Edward Kent, £10.
£16 1s.—Collected by Weston-super-Mare Urban Council.
£14 5s. 6d.—Collected by Mayoress of Brighton.
£10.—Mr. and Mrs. James A. Morris.

Contributions should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, W., and all cheques made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address.

Burnley Gazette
Oct. 24th.

FINDING WOMEN WORK AT PADIHAM.

There has this week been commenced in Padiham a praiseworthy scheme for finding unemployed women and girls with work. The scheme has been originated by a number of Padiham ladies in conjunction with Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund. The Hon Rachel Kay-Shuttleworth, Miss Briggs, and Miss Horn, are prominent workers, and the girls are paid 3d. per hour with 40 hours per week. Already a sum of £50 has been collected, including a subscription of £10 from Lord Shuttleworth, but further subscriptions will be necessary if the work is to be carried on successfully, and the workers urgently appeal for assistance. During the week the following local manufacturers have contributed bales of cotton:—Messrs. Geo. Green (who have also subscribed £3 3s.); George Street Manufacturing Company; Messrs. Inghams; Crescent Manufacturing Co.; Levant Mill; and Messrs. R. Thompson and Sons. Two local girls named Shaw, as a thankoffering for having been fully employed throughout the war, have each contributed £1. The committee, in addition to asking for subscriptions, also appeal for gifts of clothes that can be altered, material, etc; and, with a view to augmenting the funds, a flower day is to be held to-day. A grant has been applied for from Queen Mary's Fund.

Western Independent
Oct. 24th. 1914.

The Queen's Fund.

IN the list of contributions to Queen Mary's "Work for Women" Fund, which was published last week in this paper, some names were omitted of Devonport subscribers, as follows:—Mrs Leigh-Bennett, £2 2s. 0d.; Mrs. J. B. Love, £1 1s. 0d.; Mrs. S. Lillicrap, 10s. 6d. The Fund is making rapid progress under the active personal superintendence of the Mayoress of Plymouth (Mrs. T. Baker), and the committee of ladies who are helping her. Mr. H. Moreton is giving a concert at the Plymouth Guildhall on Wednesday, November 11th, in aid of the Fund, for which a large number of tickets have already been sold, and an entertainment of very enjoyable character is being organised by Miss Florence Duprez, the date of which has not yet been fixed. Devonport will have a special effort of its own on Saturday, October 31st, when a street collection will be made by ladies, who will sell a flower of forget-me-not shape, with the patriotic red, white and blue, which will be sent from the Queen for this purpose, and will doubtless command a ready sale.

Wigan Observer,
Oct. 24th. 1914

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Mayoress presided at a meeting of ladies (at which there was a large number present), which she had convened for the purpose of considering a letter from the Marchioness of Crewe inviting (at the command of Her Majesty the Queen) the Mayoress's co-operation in the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund by forming a sub-committee, which was held in the Old Council Chamber last week.

The Town Clerk stated that the object of the fund was contained in the Queen's message to the people as follows:—"In the firm belief that prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity, I have inaugurated the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. Its object is to provide employment for as many as possible of the women of this country who have been thrown out of work by the War." I appeal to the women of Great Britain to help their less fortunate sister through this fund.—Mary R."

It was resolved that a local branch of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund be opened; that contributions be unlimited, acknowledged and forwarded not individually but as from the women of Wigan; that a sub-committee be appointed with power to add to their number for the purpose of taking all necessary steps for the establishing of the fund; that Miss Norman, of the Health Office, be appointed hon. secretary, and Mrs. Baucher, of Monument Park, be appointed hon. treasurer.

Several contributions were made, and several promises.

Northern Scot, Oct. 24th.

GRANTOWN'S FINE RECORD.

A meeting of the committee administering the relief funds was held at Grantown on Wednesday, Mr G. Harvey presiding. It was agreed to assist the Queen's "work for women" scheme. The Chairman stated that the amounts collected for the various funds were as follows:—National, £522 18s 1d; local relief fund, £131 12s 3d; Belgian fund, collected by Provost Grant, £22 14s 1d; collected by Miss Duncan, teacher, £7 18s—total, £30 12s 1d; contributions to the ladies' work party, £118 13s—a total of £803 15s 5d. Mrs Macgregor, Balmenach, reported that 460 garments, not including smaller gifts, such as soap and cigarettes, had been sent to the Seaforths in France, to the Territorials and men of the Fleet. A parcel of new and old garments had been provided for the Belgian refugees, and some hospital garments had been sent to the Red Cross Society, making a total of 700 garments from the ladies' work party.

Kidderminster Shuttle, Oct. 24.

Queen Mary's Fund

COMMITTEE FORMED IN KIDDERMINSTER.

As briefly stated in the SHUTTLE last week, a meeting was held in the Council Chamber on Friday afternoon to appoint a Local Committee in connection with Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund. The meeting had been convened by the Mayoress, and there was a large attendance, including Lady Honor Ward and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin. The Mayoress was unable to be present. The Mayor (Ald. M. Tomkinson) presided, and was supported by Mr. Stanley Baldwin, M.P., and Ald. G. W. Grosvenor.

The MAYOR said during the last month the Mayoress received a telegram from Buckingham Palace soliciting help for the Queen's Fund, but owing to the press of engagements which just then demanded attention the Mayoress deferred calling the meeting till now. What they were asked to do was to appoint a committee to raise funds. The movement was really a section of the Prince of Wales's Fund. In Kidderminster it could not be said that there was at present any dire distress. That was owing to the action taken by the manufacturers in deciding to run their works three days a week. In that way anything like destitution had been prevented. How long the manufacturers would continue to do so he could not say, for he could assure them that it was a serious matter for the manufacturers to do so. They would have to appoint a committee, a treasurer and a secretary. They would not have to appoint a president, as the Mayoress would hold that office, and as Mrs. Reginald Brinton was the Mayoress-Elect she would make an admirable president. They were delighted that Mr. Stanley Baldwin, M.P., who had been such a tower of strength to them in Kidderminster during these trying weeks, was present, and he would ask the hon. Member to speak.

Mr. STANLEY BALDWIN, M.P., explained that the functions of the Local Committee would be to raise funds, and so help on Queen Mary's Fund. They would not have anything to do with administration but their advice would be most valuable as to the character of work which might be needed for the women in the locality. They wanted ladies on the committee who would be willing to devote time in collecting funds.

A committee of about twenty ladies was appointed, Miss Margaret Tomkinson was elected treasurer; Mrs. Krauss, with Miss Burr, hon. secretaries; and the MAYOR stated that subscription lists would be opened at the banks.

The Mayor on behalf of his firm promised £10, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, M.P., promised £10, and [illegible] £5, and several other promises were tendered to the Mayor for A meeting held. Mr. [illegible] the committee was subsequently [illegible] meeting.

Finsbury Times,
Oct. 24th 1914

Queen Mary's "Work for Women" Fund—Mr. Oswald Stoll has sent to Lady Roxburgh a cheque for £426 12s 10d, being the proceeds, without any deduction whatever, of the war concert held on Sunday last at the Coliseum in aid of Queen Mary's "Work for Women" Fund. The next concert at the Coliseum takes place on Sunday, 15th November, when the whole of the receipts will be given to the Prince of Wales' National Relief Fund.

653.

653a/2

Church of Ireland Gazette, November 13th. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

(President—HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.)

APPEAL TO SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Readers of The Times will have noticed the splendid response which has been made by the Sunday Schools of the Church of England to the Appeal which the Queen has made on behalf of her "Work for Women" Fund. The Fund is a branch of the Prince of Wales's Fund, which is being organised by an influential Committee, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is Chairman, with a view to lessening the suffering of women who have been thrown out of work as a result of the War.

The specific object of the Fund is not to dole out monetary Grants, but to provide work. Great numbers of women who enjoyed regular employment in time of peace find that their services are not now required; they are able and willing to work, and the Queen's object is to find them work in every possible direction.

We note with satisfaction that the Sunday School Society for Ireland has undertaken to forward Her Majesty's Appeal to all the Sunday Schools connected with the Church of Ireland, and we have no doubt whatever but that the teachers and pupils will be anxious to take their place in this good work beside the teachers and pupils of the sister Church of England. The Appeal is strongly endorsed by His Grace the Lord Primate and also by the Lord Archbishop of Dublin.

The total amount which the Irish Sunday Schools may send cannot be expected to stand on a level with that sent by the Schools in England, but it will be a matter of surprise and disappointment if the Irish contributions do not compare favourably, when the relative numbers contained are taken into consideration. The Hon. Secretaries of the Sunday School Society (Rev. Principal Moore, D.D., and John Sibthorpe, Esq.), 4 Kildare Place, Dublin, have undertaken to receive and forward the offerings of the Irish Sunday Schools, in accordance with the special request of the Marchioness of Crewe's Committee.

With the Appeal, which is being issued this week to the clergy, go specimens of the literature connected with the movement; together with Requisition Forms which the Superintendents are asked to fill up and forward direct to the London address, in order to obtain full supplies for the use of their teachers and pupils.

The following extract from the Appeal which the Queen has issued will explain at once the real need which exists for the Fund, and the comprehensive way in which it is being worked:—

"The primary function of the Central Committee is to think out and to put into operation schemes that, while avoiding any interference with ordinary trade, will provide work for women and girls whom the war has thrown out of employment. It considers and reports upon schemes of employment for women submitted by the local representative committees or other bodies to the Central Committee; it investigates the possibilities of a more equal distribution of such work as is available for women through the ordinary commercial channels, and also of finding suitable employment for higher-grade workers; and it acts as a bureau of advice and guidance for individuals and organisations, and a connecting link between the various official and voluntary agencies that are already concerning themselves with the same set of problems.

"There can be no more important work than this. The sufferings of war fall harder on women than on men, but hardest of all on the women who are deprived of their means of livelihood. They are as a rule but poorly organised or not organised at all, their resources are of the slenderest, and they have next to nothing to fall back upon. Moreover, in a great many cases they are compelled to suffer not only in their own persons but, far more poignantly, in the persons of their children and the care of the home. Every one of us must have come across pitiable instances of this kind during the past few weeks in his or her own experience—instances of women despairingly seeking the work that would just enable them to struggle along, and every one of us must have wished that some efficient and workable machinery existed to save them from the abyss of destitution."

In venturing to impress upon the clergy, superintendents, and teachers of our Sunday Schools the claims of this noble effort which is being made by Her Majesty the Queen, we cannot do better than conclude by quoting the words in which the Queen herself commends the Appeal to the nation:—

"In the firm belief that prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity, I have inaugurated the Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund. Its object is to provide employment for as many as possible of the women of this country who have been thrown out of work by the war.

"I appeal to the women of Great Britain to help their less fortunate sisters through this Fund.

"MARY R."

The Queen's Fund.

We print elsewhere in this issue an appeal in support of a very worthy object—Her Majesty the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. This Fund is a branch of the Prince of Wales's Fund, and has for its special object the provision of work for women who have been thrown out of employment by the war. It is not, it should be noticed, a charity; these women do not desire charity, but work. The necessity of the Fund surely needs no emphasis. There is work for nearly all men to do in war-time, either in the firing-line or at home. Women are in a very different case. Their poorly organised or unorganised labour goes first to the wall when trades are stagnant and employers are making economies; they have, in the majority of cases, little or no resources upon which to fall back; and very many of them are struggling to maintain a home while their men-folk are at the front. To our brave and patient women, upon whom the sufferings of war thus fall hardest, we shall surely be ready to extend our practical sympathy. How admirable a vehicle of such sympathy is the Queen's Fund may be seen from the details of its work given in the article.

The Scots Pictorial, November 28th 1914.

653.
553/3

The Queen's Work for Women Fund

"It is better to work and live, than to starve in fretful idleness"

(Photos. by D. H. Munro and SCOTS PICTORIAL)

Much good work is being done in connection with the Queen's Work for Women Fund for the relief of distress by providing work for women who have been thrown out of employment through the effects of the war. Our photographs show

1. One of the workrooms at 18 Melville Street, Edinburgh (opened last week by the Marchioness of Linlithgow). The workers are seen making Cardigan jackets for the Indians.

2. A workroom in Glasgow where the workers are busy making toys, which should have a ready sale at Christmas.

The Scots Pictorial, November 28th. 1914. 653a/4 653

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND

(Photo. by D. H. Munro)

Last week the Marchioness of Linlithgow opened the workrooms which have been obtained and fitted out for the work of the Edinburgh Sub-Committee for Women's Employment in Edinburgh

In the course of her remarks her Ladyship said that thanks were due to those energetic and capable workers who were giving their services voluntarily in connection with the management of the workrooms. There had already been a gratifying response to the appeals sent out, but there was need for greatly increased support before the scheme of the Queen's Work for Women Fund could meet adequately the great need which existed.

Our photograph shows the ladies in the Sub-Committee

Names—Standing—Miss Allan, Miss Harvey, Miss Lindsay, Miss Little, Mrs. Stewart Gemmell, Miss Fraser, Miss Low
Sitting—Mrs. Pringle, Mrs. Millar, Mrs. Maitland

The Mayfair, November 28th. 1914.

A large number of entertainments were held last week in the interests of charity. The Queen gave her patronage to the Arts, Crafts, and Industries Sale at the Portman Rooms, which was opened by Mrs. Arthur Sassoon. Seventy-five per cent. of the gate-money was allotted to the Queen's Work for Women Fund, and Lady Roxburgh spoke of its needs at the opening ceremony, when the chair was taken by Lady Evelyn Scott. Another successful sale was that organised by Mrs. Wynn at the Antique Galleries in New Bond Street. China and curios were the principal exhibits and the opening ceremony was performed by the Servian Minister, the proceeds being devoted to the Servian Relief Fund. Lady Randolph Churchill and Lady Cunard were among those who brought parties to the Emergency War Entertainment and Tea at Claridge's, which was the first of a series of such gatherings. At this one the chief attraction was Miss Elizabeth Asquith, who made quite a good speech.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN.

A water-colour of "The Holy Family"—Italian school dated 1606, by Gilbert Angus, has been sent to the fund; also a copy of a sixteenth-century Bible, with memoirs of Myles Coverdale. The original was printed in Swiss or German type in 1535. It is estimated that since the sale of "Gifts in Kind" was established about £000 has been realised.

The fund has reached a total of £91,871.

653.

Scotsman,
December 1st 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £93,428. The subscribers included the following:—

Fourth contribution from the Scottish Branch (per the Marchioness of Linlithgow), £96.

Collected by the Countess of Lonsdale in Cumberland villages (further instalment), £58.

Daily Telegraph,
Dec: 1st. 1914.

QUEEN AND WOMEN'S WORK.

HER MAJESTY'S INTEREST.

The Queen's great interest in her "Work for Women" Fund was again made evident yesterday, when her Majesty, attended by Lady Bertha Dawkins and Mr. E. Wallington, visited three of the Mayoral work-rooms. These rooms are run on lines approved by the Central Committee on Women's Employment and with the aid of the Queen's Fund.

At St. Pancras work-rooms the Queen was received by Mrs. H. J. Tennant and Miss Mary R. MacArthur, on behalf of the committee, and by the Mayor and Town Clerk of the borough.

One hundred and fifty women were at work making clothes, which will be given away to the very poor. The Queen stopped every now and then to speak to one of them. Her Majesty observed to a girl who was embroidering a dress that it was good to train the eye, and a woman who was knitting was complimented on her speed, the Queen inquiring, "Don't you drop the stitches?"

In the little shoes which had been made out of men's old silk hats the Queen took a particular interest, and she delighted everybody by signing her name in the Visitors' Book.

At Islington the domestic economy training scheme claimed the Queen's first attention. Her Majesty first saw the young laundresses at work, and then inspected the kitchen and watched a cutting-out lesson, remarking to some pupils who were cutting and fitting an underbodice that it was a very difficult garment to fit. When shown the banana-crate cradles the Queen inquired if the crates could still be obtained, observing, "I remember that there was a danger of the supply running short, and that would have been a pity." Her Majesty passed through eleven work-rooms with Mrs. Abbott, the hon. manageress, seeing 207 workers busily engaged. On leaving, she remarked: "They seem very keen, and the training is excellent."

At the Holborn work-room her Majesty was shown piles of little garments made for the Belgian children. As at all the centres, the Queen turned first to the baby table. She inquired how many garments were included in the layette to be given away to the poor mothers, and felt the garments to see if they were soft and warm. The oldest woman in the work-room will never forget that the Queen inspected her work and asked her about her own trade. "To think that she should take an interest in us!" said the old woman.

Her Majesty inquired about every detail and every class of worker, and showed that she remembered everything that had been done and was going to be done. She inquired particularly as to the outfit which is to be made for the girls going to Australia on the invitation sent to her Majesty for them. Her Majesty said also that she had been watching the statistics of distress, and was glad to see they were a little lower this month.

Daily Telegraph,
Dec: 1st. 1914.

QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN."

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund has reached a total of £93,428. Yesterday's additions included:

Fourth Contribution from the Scottish Branch, per the Marchioness of Linlithgow, £96 12s 9d; Collected by the Countess of Lonsdale in Cumberland Villages (further instalment), £58 6s 5d; Collected by the Mayoress of Plymouth (further instalment), £35 3s 2d.

Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, the publishers, state that the actual production of Princess Mary's Gift Book has given employment to over 2,500 men and women. The copies printed consist of 3,500,000 sheets to fold, gather, and sew, and no less than 1,900,000 pictures to paste on and mount. Twenty-five printing machines have been at work day and far into the night for four weeks on the illustrations alone. Even the ink for these colour pictures must have weighed over a ton. The binding is another huge item. Forty-nine thousand yards of cloth, 36in wide, will be required to bind the whole edition, in addition to sixty-five tons of straw-boards, which are used as backing for the cloth. The total weight of the whole edition when bound will be over 230 tons.

It is added that the public demand for the Gift Book, although it was only published last Friday, is so enormous that the publishers expect it to establish a record.

PRINCESS MARY'S GIFT BOOK

ORIGINALS OF ILLUSTRATIONS.

Art at the present juncture is neither nurse, meddler, nor combatant. She is simply the willing handmaid ready to do her best. Her reward will come long after the war. In the patient meantime artists put forth their efforts for country's sake. For Princess Mary's "Gift Book" they have given their talents, and at the Leicester Galleries in Leicester-square may be seen the originals of the illustrations which deck this work.

At the head of these is Mr. J. J. Shannon's portrait in oils of "H.R.H. the Princess Mary," and the painter of English girlhood—such as that of which Tennyson sang—has obviously had a task demanding all his powers of capturing elusive charm. Yet the close observer will notice that the artist, in conveying this sense of "escape," has found a kind of painter's anchorage in a firm and stalwart neck. Thus do the concrete and the imaginative merge together For the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund this clever portrait and the rest are now offered for sale. It should not be long before all are sold.

At one time it was thought advisable to put the pictures and drawings up for tender at the highest price, but other counsel was adopted. Princess Mary's portrait and the others are now, therefore, to be sold to the first comers at fixed valuations. This statement has only to be made to bring forward the needful art lovers and patriots. Those who have bought the book will know the beauty of Mr. Arthur Rackham's drawings, the vigour of Mr. A. C. Michael's illustration, Edmund Dulac's ascetic "True Spartan Hearts," W. Russell Flint's illustration to Barrie's "Holiday in Bed," and the desirableness of possessing original drawings also by Talbot Kelly, W. B. Wollen, Eugene Hastain, Claude Shepperson, Norman Wilkinson, L. Baumer, R. T. Kelly, C. Napier Henry, Byam Shaw, Steven Spurrier, E. J. Detmold, and Etheldreda Gray.

The charming drawing by the last reminds us that, whatever happens in trenches and breaches, there is always at home some dear little unconscious baby-girl "instructing her dolly in the art of going off nicely to by-byes." And we know that every soldier would have it so.

653a/5

Daily Graphic,
Dec: 1st. 1914.

Princess Mary's Book.

May I point out to you a somewhat curious fact concerning the article which deals with "Princess Mary's Book" appearing in a prominent position in Friday's DAILY GRAPHIC? One would imagine from it that this important book, issued under the auspices of a woman, with the object of aiding women, had not been contributed to by women. Lady Sybil Grant, Ellen Thorneycroft-Fowler, Miss Beatrice Harraden, Baroness Orczy, Mrs. Swann and Miss Wiggin have also been as generous as the several gentlemen named in the DAILY GRAPHIC, and have also given stories, etc.—which obviously had they been offered to a publisher would have commanded quite large sums. The fact that women are doing their best to stand by and help each other during this very trying time should not be ignored in this fashion.—Mary Orme, 96, Boundary Road. N.W.

Manchester Courier,
December 1st. 1914.

The Queen in the Workroom.

Queen Mary takes the greatest interest in the practical side of her "Work for Women" Fund. To-day Her Majesty visited three of the workrooms, where some hundreds of women are employed, and her presence and gracious conversation with a number of the workers afforded great pleasure to all of them. Obviously, and as they confessed afterwards, they found it very hard to go on with their work, as the Queen stopped every now and then to speak to a worker. Her Majesty told a girl who was embroidering a dress that it was good to train the eye, and a woman who was knitting was complimented on her speed. In the little shoes which had been made out of men's old silk hats the Queen took a particular interest, and she delighted everybody by signing her name in the visitors' book. "It's like leaving us a bit of herself," remarked one of the workers to another. At another workroom Her Majesty inspected the kitchen and watched a cutting-out lesson. Her sympathy with the pupils who were cutting and fitting an underbodice touched their hearts. "It is a very difficult garment to fit," said Her Majesty, who also expressed the opinion that the knitted quilt was a splendid idea, and it was "so light and warm."

Morning Post,
December 1st. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

TOTAL SUBSCRIBED, £93,428.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £93,428 9s. 8d. Yesterday's subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
A fourth contribution from the Scottish Branch (per the Marchioness of Linlithgow)	96	12	9
Collected by the Countess of Lonsdale in Cumberland Villages (further instalment)	58	6	5
By the Mayoress of Plymouth (further instalment)	35	3	2
Mr. A. E. Gibbs	10	10	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer at the same address and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Morning Post,
Dec: 16th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

TOTAL CONTRIBUTED £97,331.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £97,331 1s. 8d. The subscriptions for the day included:

	£	s.	d.
The Women's Establishment of the Post Office Savings Bank, West Kensington	22	7	6
Subscriptions remitted by H.M. Consul at Las Palmas	20	8	4
Proceeds of a Violin Recital by Miss Marian Jay at Broadstairs	17	0	0
Half Proceeds of a Concert given by Madame Adelaide Lambe at Harrow (per Sir George Askwith)	15	2	6
Proceeds of a sale at the annual re-union of the L.L.S.A. Nurses' Guild	10	4	6
The Staff and Workpeople of Messrs. Howell and Co. (Ltd.), Sheffield (further instalment)	10	0	0
Miss Asser	10	0	0

As is proved from many communications received there exists a considerable misunderstanding about the Work for Women's Fund. Some weeks after the National Relief Fund had been inaugurated by the Prince of Wales it became evident that the provision of work for women was an urgent necessity. For this reason her Majesty started a special fund to be devoted to providing employment for women unemployed through the war. The Central Committee on Women's Employment, of which the Marchioness of Crewe is chairman, and Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, was thereupon appointed by Mr. Herbert Samuel, with the approval of the Queen, to devise, initiate, and supervise the necessary schemes, subject to the approval of the Government Committee for the Prevention and Relief of Distress, and the Committee of the National Relief Fund. Upon those bodies the final responsibility for the expenditure rests. All the money collected in her Majesty's name by the Queen's Work for Women Fund (and its Council), of which Lady Roxburgh is the hon. secretary, and Mrs. C. A. Pearson, the hon. treasurer, is handed to the National Relief Fund, and can be spent only on schemes for the benefit of unemployed women. The Queen's co-operation with the Central Committee on Women's Employment is confined to the collection of the money to finance the schemes.

The mothers' meeting connected with St. Thomas's Church, Orchard-street, has given up its usual Christmas treat and has sent £12 to the Fund through Lady Edith Cotes.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Leicester Daily Post,
Dec: 19th. 1914.

VALUABLE WORK.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund has been gradually extending its scope since the beginning of the war, and the development which began with a small scheme for feeding the workers at the various centres has now become a most useful system of training in cooking and housewifery. The state of affairs which prevailed when Heine urged all Christian souls to pray for deliverance from English cooking may be assumed to have passed away, but the value of training in economic and tasteful cookery to persons of limited means will hardly be questioned. One of the instructresses tells me that the ignorance in many cases is only equalled by the facility with which the young women learn when the right way is pointed out to them. The work has its humours. "Breaking an egg," I am told, "is a difficulty with the young dressmakers." It sounds pretty easy, but no doubt there are a right and a wrong way even here, as the Lilliputians realised. The results, though, are admirable, and how the threepenny luncheons are produced at the price is a mystery which mere masculinity is hardly likely to solve.

Mor... Dec: 18th. 1914.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

CONTRIBUTIONS, £98,318.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached a total of £98,318 15s. 10d. yesterday. The subscriptions included the following:

	£	s.	d.
Collected by the Marchioness of Bath	200	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Chester (further instalment)	111	16	0
First instalment from the Women Staff of J. Lyons and Co. (Limited)	39	2	9
Collected by the Mayoress of Wareham	38	2	6
Collected by Viscountess Clifden (further instalment)	28	2	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Sheffield	26	5	0
J. E. Hough (Limited)	25	0	0
Workpeople of John Paton, Son, and Co. (Limited)	15	19	4
Collected by the U.D.C. of Wembley	10	0	0
Sir Charles Campbell	10	0	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee, at the town or county hall or urban district offices in the locality in which they reside.

Morning Post. 19.12.14.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

TOTAL YESTERDAY, £98,854.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £98,854. The new subscriptions included the following:

	£	s.	d.
Collected from the N.U.W.W. by Countess Cassillis	211	11	9
Donations by the Women of Sarawak	43	16	11
Leeds Elementary Teachers	37	19	1
Collection at Westminster Abbey	33	1	1
The Empangeni-Umhlatauzi (Zululand) Women's War Relief Society	25	0	0
Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Low (further donation)	25	0	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Kinsale	20	14	4
Collected by the Mayoress of Nuneaton (further instalment)	18	7	6
J. St. Loe Strachey	12	12	0
Kilkenny Sunday School	11	11	10
J. G. Fairless	11	0	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Haydock (further instalment)	10	0	0
Miss Mary Brundrett	5	7	6

The women who sent the contribution from Sarawak include Malays, Dyaks, Filipinos, Chinese, and Indians.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Dec. 19

WORK FOR WO...

Subscriptions to Local Fund.

A sub committee has been formed under the chairmanship of the Mayoress of Newport to undertake the provision of work for women who may be out of employment in consequence of the war, and so far as possible, to prevent unemployment among women.

Subscriptions towards the local fund are earnestly asked for to enable the work to be successfully carried on, and may be sent to Mr. W. T. Duke Williams, National Provincial Bank of England, Newport, hon. treasurer; or to Mr. C. P. Mitchell Innes, Town Hall, Newport, hon. secretary.

Orders for work and gifts of material will be a great assistance in achieving the objects of the sub-committee, and may be sent to the hon. secretary. All subscriptions will be acknowledged in the Press.

Am't previously acknowledged ... 285 13 8

Daily News & Leader
9.12.14

HOW WOMEN MAY HELP WOMEN

On behalf of the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, every woman is asked to give or collect this week a shilling in order to relieve the distress caused by the war. Hundreds of girl clerks and typists have lost their situations.

The Queen's Fund has instituted useful training systems which will enable a girl to increase her efficiency, as, for instance, by acquiring some foreign language and making attendance at the classes a condition of the receipt of relief.

Contributions should be sent to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund, 33, Portland-place W.

Mrs. Pearson hopes that all subscriptions may be sent in by Dec. 26, so that the total may be announced on New Year's Day.

653a/6

Morning Post, Dec: 21st. 1914.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

SATURDAY'S TOTAL, £99,165.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached a total of £99,165 on Saturday. The subscriptions included:

	£	s.	d.
Ladies' Lacrosse Association	40	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Carnarvon (further instalment)	39	6	6
Marchioness of Ailesbury	25	0	0
Collected by the U.D.C. of Aylesbury (further instalment)	24	4	10
Ladies' Golf Union	19	16	7
Proceeds of Concert arranged by Miss Lillie Stamper and Mrs. S. A. Hipkin	11	0	0
Part Proceeds of small Sale of Work held at Clumber (per the Duchess of Newcastle)	10	10	0
Collected by the Countess of Lonsdale (further instalment)	10	5	2
School Children of Enfield	10	0	0
Committee, Penarth Branch of the Fund	10	0	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

THE ROYAL MONOGRAM.

Additional work has come to unemployed women through the plan of embroidering the Royal Monogram on every garment made in the Relief Workrooms. Many hundred garments were made before this distinction was conferred on the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, and a small staff of unemployed embroideresses are now engaged at the Committee's Depot on this final work. These skilled workers are very glad of the employment, for their trade is one of those which have suffered most during the war. Elaborate dress embroidery, in which they have all been employed, is a luxury, and, as such, is being dispensed with at present. The forewoman herself supplied 150 firms before the war, but not one can give an order at present.

Morning Post, 22.12.14.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

YESTERDAY'S TOTAL £99,494

The Queen's Work for Women Fund yesterday reached a total of £99,494 13s. 1d. The subscription included:

	£	s.	d.
Collected by Katherine Duchess of Westminster	50	0
Jumble Sale Agency (second contribution)	50	0
Collected by Lady Thornycroft	26	4
Collected by the U.D.C. of Usk	25	6
Collected by the Mayoress of Plymouth	14	10
Miss B. N. Barker	10	0
Pupils of the Girls' Public Day School Trust, Sydenham	10	0
Women of Bedlinog (further instalment)	10	0

Eight sets of clothing which have been made in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment, with eight cradles made out of banana crates, have been sent to the Queen. The clothing consists of complete outfits for babies, clothes for mothers, and for school children. They have not been specially made, but have been taken from several workrooms, so that they represent very good samples of the women's work.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson. Hon. Treasurer, at the same address and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

Bristol Times, Dec: 21st. 1914. 653a

THE QUEEN'S "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

Over 100 unemployed women have already responded to Australia's invitation, through the Queen, to them. For £1, which the Queen's Fund will pay, the girls are to be taken to Australia, and work in domestic service found for them; £1 is also to be given to them on arrival, and complete outfits for each girl are being made in the workrooms initiated by the Central Committee on Women's Employment. So eager are widows to go—for the invitation is extended to them—that it is necessary to ask for birth certificates from women over 30. The age limit is 35 years. Marriage certificates have also been found necessary, for deserted wives are apt to think they are widows.

A great many business girls are going very willing to take up domestic service. Among them are typists, dressmakers, cashiers, shop-girls, and factory workers. The girl in whose career the Queen took such an interest on her visit to the Poplar workroom hopes to get a place as children's nurse in Australia. She has been called "Her Majesty" by the other girls since the Queen talked to her. "I've always wanted to go away," said the young emigrant, "but I knew if you emigrate it costs a lot of money. That's why I said I'd go whenever I heard the Queen was going to pay for us." There is no one to keep the girl in this country. Her father and mother are both dead, and the aunt with whom she lives "wouldn't stand in her light." "There's no one else to take any notice," the girl said, "and I shan't be homesick. I haven't got any friends, only acquaintances, and I shall save up and perhaps come home in about five years. They say there won't be much work here after the war, and I was ten weeks out before they took me into the workroom. My work's packing at a confectioner's, but I'm fond of children. Everyone gets on in Australia, don't they?"

"Do you think you can get us off by January 6th?" was the eager query of a young glove-maker who is going to Australia with her friend, a cashier. "I've been out of work for three weeks, and now I've got a temporary job for a fortnight, which finishes on Christmas Eve. I can't save anything on my money, for you have to keep up an appearance, or else you get the sack. And it's not that we spend it on amusements, for we never have any. My friend has been helping me when I've been out of work, but she can't do it any longer."

Morning Post, 23.12.14.

THE QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

£100,000 OBTAINED.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund reached a total of £100,000 yesterday. The latest list of subscriptions includes the following:

	£	s.	d.
Collected at the Jewish Religion Classes, per the Chief Rabbi	£100	0	8
Collected by the Mayoress of Llandovery	28	8	3
Collected by the Mayoress of Finsbury (further instalment)	20	12	7
Collected by the Mayoress of Clonmel	15	3	9
Congregational Church Sunday School, Churchfield-road, Acton	13	10	0
Finchley Centre of the Girls' Realm Guild of Service and Good Fellowship	10	10	0
E. Dreyfous	10	10	0
Mountpottinger Presbyterian Sunday School	10	0	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account."

Communications respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, hon. secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park-corner. Applicants for work should apply to the Secretary of the Local Representative Committee at the Town or County Hall or Urban District Offices in the locality in which they reside.

The Glasgow Record, 653 Dec: 23rd 1914.

WORK FOR WOMEN FUND.

QUEEN'S THANKS FOR £100,000 SUBSCRIBED.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund last night reached £100,000.

When her Majesty heard of it she at once sent her congratulations to Lady Roxburgh, the hon. secretary of the fund, in the following appreciative letter:—

"Buckingham Palace, Dec. 22, 1914.

"Dear Lady Roxburgh,—The Queen commands me to write and convey to you her warm congratulations on the announcement that her Majesty's 'Work for Women' Fund has reached its first £100,000.

"It is very gratifying to the Queen to feel that her appeal for money to finance schemes for the employment of women has had such a satisfactory result; and her Majesty wishes to take this opportunity of thanking you personally for the consummate tact and ability you have shown in organising and carrying out this important work.

"The Queen desires also to express her sincere appreciation of the valuable services rendered by the Committee and the ladies of the Council, together with all the members of the staff who have so willingly given their assistance.—(Signed) E. W. WALLINGTON."

It may be recalled that in the early days of September her Majesty personally inaugurated the fund "in the firm belief that prevention of distress is better than its relief, and that employment is better than charity" for those women who were thrown out of work by the war.

The money subscribed to the Queen's Fund is devoted entirely to assisting schemes of employment of women which are devised by the Central Committee on Women's Employment or approved by them.

Money is still urgently needed to help forward the work.

The ladies of the Queen's Council, in addition to the Lord Provosts and Provosts, are, at her Majesty's request, arranging collections in the following counties:—Aberdeen (the Countess of Aberdeen), Argyll (the Marchioness of Breadalbane), Ayrshire (the Countess of Eglinton), Clackmannan (the Countess of Mar and Kellie, the Lady Balfour of Burleigh), Dumbartonshire (the Lady Inverclyde), Dumfries (Lady Johnson Ferguson), Elgin (the Countess of Moray), Fife (the Countess of Elgin), Forfar (the Countess of Strathmore), Haddington (the Dowager Countess of Wemyss), Inverness (Mrs. Mackintosh), Kincardineshire (the Lady Clinton), Kirkcudbright (the Countess of Cassillis), Lanark (the Duchess of Hamilton), Linlithgow (the Marchioness of Linlithgow), Perth (the Hon. Mrs. Stirling of Keir), Ross and Cromarty (the Countess of Cromartie), Stirling (the Duchess of Montrose, Mrs. Steel Maitland), Wigtown (the Lady Borthwick), Skye (the Lady Macdonald). Other counties will shortly be organised.

Leeds Daily News, Dec: 23rd. 1914.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Some disappointment is felt among the workers under the Queen's Work for Women Fund that the public support has not been more generous. The total has not yet reached a hundred thousand pounds. It is recognised, of course, that there is an abnormal call being made upon the purses of the charitable at present, but a member of one of the local committees told me this morning that there was a strong feeling that, in view of the importance of this particular work, the support should have borne a somewhat closer relation to the splendid sum subscribed to the Prince of Wales's Fund. The promoters of the workrooms and training centres claim that they are doing a more fundamental work than any other agency, and carrying out the wishes expressed by the Government Committee that something more than mere relief should be aimed at. There has been some amount of criticism of the "threepence an hour maximum," but it is doubtful if this has affected the subscription list, and it certainly is difficult to see how a more generous allowance could be made on the present resources.

Picture World (Bir)
24-1-15

653

653a/7

Factory to Fruit Garden.

What Women are Doing for Out-of-Work Girls.

Miss Mary MacArthur, the Secretary of the Administrative Department of the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

SURELY it is an ill wind that blows nobody any good, and blessings do indeed come in queer disguise. Who could have anticipated that out of the distresses of war and unemployment, which fell upon multitudes of women never too well blessed with means, could have sprung schemes that should not only stem the tide of suffering now, but place the sufferers on a surer footing in life when peace time comes?

For that is what the administrators of the Queen's Work for Women Fund are aiming at. It is more than either those who have given their mite or those who have sent their cheques for thousands have dared to hope for.

Not only is the woman who is thrown out of employment given work for which she receives payment. She is given training, too, so that no matter what her line of work, when she enters again the general labour market she will be more skilled, more highly equipped, will find her wage-earning powers increased, and will be a greater national asset in every way. Thus the contributors to the fund are helping to build up a finer nation of more capable women, taught and trained to better home-making, to the better child-rearing that comes through technical knowledge, and to healthier and finer ideals for every-day life. The monotonous round of drudgery promises to make way for an incalculable uplift.

The ramifications of the administration of the Queen's Fund are never ending. New ideas open up new channels, workrooms multiply, and schemes materialise. The secretary of the administrative department is Miss Mary R. MacArthur, whose genius for organisation is as great, and whose sympathies for the working women are as deep and heartfelt, as her brain is clear to find means of alleviating their sufferings. She is a fair, handsome Scotswoman, still quite young, with a deep charm of personality, and a full, rounded voice that fails like a caress even when it has to refuse a request.

IMPORTANCE OF SPENDING WISELY.

The first thing in connection with the administration of a fund is to see that it shall be spent wisely and to the fullest advantage. The Central Committee on Women's Employment receives hundreds of letters from philanthropic workers in distress appealing for the opening of relief workrooms for women and girls, the workers to be paid by the fund, and has been able in certain cases, when a local factory has been closed down and the employees thrown out, to suggest means of reopening the factory for the production of some other article for which there exists a demand, and so keeping its old workers employed.

"When there is no other way out, and relief workrooms must be established," said the secretary, in a very interesting interview, "the first essential is that the relief work should not compete in any way with ordinary industry. The employment provided should either take the form of training or instruction or the production of articles which otherwise would not be produced or sold at all. That is why we are making maternity outfits, cradles, and clothing to be distributed free among those who have no purchasing power. And always the workers in the workrooms, are required to keep themselves registered at the Labour Exchange, so that they may return to their ordinary employment at the first opportunity.

"By the aid of the fund girls from 14 to 17 years of age, whose work has been stopped through the war, have been induced to go back to schools and other centres to continue their general education and to learn cookery, laundry work, needlework, housewifery, etc., for arrangements are made to pay them four shillings a week for doing this, and to give them a good mid-day meal five days out of seven.

"In the West Country, at one place where there are more than a hundred girls thrown out by the war, they are being instructed in all forms of fruit pulping, in drying vegetables, in bottling new unsweetened fruit preserves, and so on. This is a trade hitherto centred in Germany, and the work will provide supplies for the Army and for other public demands. There never was a time when the nation was more eager to be self-supporting, and to develop to the fullest extent its resources of food supplies, and the fund is training and helping girls and women to do their share. At Radlett, in Herts, some twenty acres of land have been lent, and there are twenty-eight East London girls—most of whom have been packers and bottle-washers, though some are dressmakers and typists—who are training as market gardeners and fruit growers. They are being taught by two lady gardeners; and their interest in their new work and delight with their successes with the things that grow are tremendous."

AUSTRALIA FOR THE EXPERIENCED.

Such an opportunity as the present crisis affords might never otherwise have come to the daily worker; and most of the workers themselves realise what a great chance it is for those who might always have been semi-skilled or unskilled workers to learn, whilst being paid, how to clean and cook, to cut out and make clothes, to learn how to purchase to the best advantage, to adapt themselves to this womanly work and that, to learn hygiene and the domestic system, and to eliminate the feeling of drudgery from work that is of value.

"Australia having made an offer of almost free passage to those who are experienced, or who wish to become so, in domestic service," continued Miss MacArthur, "the fund has been able to help them with money for necessaries, outfit, etc. There are workrooms where the paid workers are trained in cutting out garments and adapting one pattern for a number of articles for themselves and for their children. The making of every kind of garment, and in every way, is being taught. The whole plan of help reaches to every part of the country.

"In almost every case the workrooms have been lent. Some are private houses, some in country towns, villages, suburbs, etc., and the workers have often found themselves enjoying many of the privileges of invited guests from hostesses, who entertain them and provide nourishing refreshments. The help is far-reaching, but so has been the distress. Everywhere social workers, who are experts in their line, are ready to help, and all are working so that the home suffering may be reduced and kept to a minimum.

KATE LINTOTT.

Evening News 6/2/15

HAPPY EMIGRANTS.

Eighteen Girl Victims of the War Leave For Australia.

Eighteen young women, thrown out of employment owing to the war, left St. Pancras to-day for Australia.

They included typists, cashiers, a Post Office clerk, and one or two dressmakers, and all have expressed willingness to begin a new life down South as domestic servants.

The eighteen are the advance guard of 200 who are being assisted to emigrate by the Queen's Work for Women Fund.

Each girl wore a warm grey overcoat, made in the workrooms of the Central Committee, and each has been provided with a trunk containing a complete outfit of clothing and necessaries. On landing each will be handed £1.

Until work has been secured for them they will be provided for. Their fare to Australia is £3, and each girl is to repay £2 of this out of her wages.

Evening News

653

653a/8

GIRLS LEAVE FOR AUSTRALIA.

A merry party of about 120 girls who have been thrown out of work by the war left London on Saturday for Australia, where they are to try their fortune as domestic servants. They represent the first contingent of young women selected by the Queen's Work for Women Fund for emigration.

Each of the girls has received a complete outfit from the Queen's Fund, and, in addition, £1 towards her fare and £1 landing money. The fare is £3 for every girl, and each emigrant is required to repay £2 from her wages to the State in which she settles.

Christian Age.

OUR LATEST WOMEN'S INDUSTRY IN WARTIME.

The workers at the Hammersmith branch of the Queen's Work for Women Fund are here seen making garments for H.M. the Queen. These women, who have been thrown out of work by the war, have become expert embroiderers and needlewomen. They have produced fine garments which won the approval of Her Majesty, who ordered a number. The work has been exhibited for public inspection.

Daily Graphic. 20.4.15.

Each girl wore a warm grey overcoat, made in the workrooms of the Central Committee, and each has been provided with a trunk containing a complete outfit of clothing and necessaries. On landing each will be handed £1.

Until work has been secured for them they will be provided for. Their fare to Australia is £3, and each girl is to repay £2 of this out of her wages.

Christian Age.

OUR LATEST WOMEN'S INDUSTRY IN WARTIME.

The workers at the Hammersmith branch of the Queen's Work for Women Fund are here seen making garments for H.M. the Queen. These women, who have been thrown out of work by the war, have become expert embroiderers and needlewomen. They have produced fine garments which won the approval of Her Majesty, who ordered a number. The work has been exhibited for public inspection.

Daily Graphic. 20.4.15.

KNITTING MACHINES IN A PICCADILLY MANSION.

At the headquarters of the Queen's Work for Women Fund seventy hand-knitting machines have been installed in a room which was formerly a drawing-room. Here a number of women are daily at work making two million pairs of socks for the troops.

Daily Mail 27/2/18

653

THE QUEEN'S SURPRISE VISIT TO TOOTING.

Queen Mary leaving the Central Hall, Tooting, after her visit yesterday to the branch workroom there of her Work for Women Fund.

THE QUEEN AMONG HER WORKERS.

653a/9

CHILD'S DRESS MADE OUT OF A MAN'S FROCK-COAT.

Many happy incidents occurred during the Queen's visits yesterday to three of the workrooms established under her Work for Women Fund, which finds employment for women and girls—dressmakers, typists, and others—thrown out of work through the war.

At the Wesleyan Methodist Central Hall, Tooting Broadway, the oldest worker, Mrs. Moody, shyly offered the Queen a bunch of daffodils. Her Majesty had already a beautiful bouquet which she had accepted from the Mayoress of Wandsworth. This she handed to Lady Isobel Gathorne-Hardy, in attendance, and with "Thank you very much, and let me shake your hand," she took the daffodils and carried them during her visit.

A child's dress made out of a man's frock-coat greatly interested the Queen at the Latchmere-road Baths, Battersea, where over 150 women are employed daily. And she smiled as she looked at a handkerchief embroidered with her own initials and crown, saying that she liked to think of some little child having it.

SYMPATHY WITH REFUGEE.

One of the workers here, Mme. Dupont, a Belgian, afterwards at her home, 299, Lavender-hill, told a representative of The Daily Mail that the Queen noticed she was embroidering the crowns that are put on every article made, and asked her how long she had done that kind of work.

"I told her Majesty that I had never done needlework since I left school. Then she spoke to me in French, asking me what I was doing there. I told her I was a Belgian, and that because of the war my own work was stopped, and I was glad to undertake this. 'Where is your family?' the Queen asked. I replied that they are all in Belgium. 'I hope you hear from them,' she remarked. I said that I had not heard any news of them for three months. The Queen then said, 'It is very sad for you.'"

When her husband died six years ago, leaving her with a little son, Mme. Dupont continued his business of collecting and selling old prints, etc. She was in negotiation with the Heidelberg University Museum, with which she had done much business, for the sale of a water colour of the old castle by P. de Wint, 1835, and had asked £80 for it, when the war broke off the negotiations and also put an end to her business. Mme. Dupont's father was engineer-in-chief to the City of Brussels.

At the Lambeth workroom the Queen seemed anxious to know if the women were happy in this emergency work. Economy was a feature of the work here, shoes being knitted of strips of rags cut up, and old knitted socks being unravelled and knitted up again. The Queen asked Lady Isobel Gathorne-Hardy to explain how the wool could be stretched out by means of winding into skeins and damping overnight.

Times. 27. 3. 15.

6 5-3.

653a/10

THE QUEEN AND HER WORKROOMS.

VISIT TO A HOSIERY FACTORY.

The Queen yesterday afternoon visited the mayoral workrooms of her "Work fo Women" Fund at Willesden and Paddington, and afterwards went over the hosiery factory which has been started since the war by Miss Resdaile, a wholesale dressmaker, at her premises in Rathbone-place, to keep her workgirls in employment.

Her Majesty was received by Mr. J. J. Mallon, of the Contracts Department, Central Committee on Women's Employment, Miss Resdaile, Lady Askwith, and other members of the Central Committee were also present. The Queen first visited the room where socks for the Army were being made, asking many questions as to the output and price of the yarn. She was much interested in the small flat machines which Miss Resdaile bought when she heard that the Queen had entrusted to the Central Committee an order for 75,000 woollen body belts for the troops to form part of her gift to them.

With 100 of her girls stranded through the cessation of wholesale orders for dresses she determined to try for some part of this contract and was successful. The Queen learned that 15,000 belts were made on these machines, and that, finding the young dressmakers' skill increasing so rapidly, their employers tendered to the Contracts Department of the Central Committee for a million pairs of socks. The War Office accepted the tender, and there will be enough work for the hundred girls until well into the autumn.

The machinery was put in motion, and her Majesty watched the process of making the socks. She was informed that 3,000 dozen pairs a week could be made when the machinery was in full swing. Her Majesty also asked how the amount earned compared with the former pay, and was told that it was about the same, varying from £1 to 35s.

Before leaving this room the Queen went over to the windows overlooking several neighbouring factories where the girls, having learned the news, had deserted their work and were vigorously waving in the hopes of being seen. Her Majesty stood for a few minutes at the wide windows and smiled and waved back to them.

On the next floor were the machines for making cap comforters, of which 6,000 are dispatched in fulfilment of a War Office order every Friday. The Queen saw one girl working four power machines, and was told that on each machine one operator could turn out 250 yards of comforter each day. Her Majesty asked to see the material cut and "overlocked," the final process, and then left amid enthusiastic cheering from a large crowd which had assembled.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund yesterday reached a total of £143,379 15s. 1d.

The Morning Post,
May 10th. 1915.

QUEEN'S WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Queen's Work for Women Fund on Saturday reached a total of £155,586 19s. 2d. Recent subscriptions include:

	£	s.	d.
Collected by the Mayoress of Cambridge (including collection by Mrs. Stace, £22 16s. 3d.)	50	0	0
St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington Branch, of the Girls' Friendly Society	25	0	0
Collected by the Mayoress of Tunbridge Wells	14	3	6
Collected in Wirksworth, per Miss Emily E. Arkwright	10	10	0

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, Hon. Secretary, 33, Portland-place, London, and all cheques should be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's Work for Women Fund Account." All correspondence respecting the work of the Central Committee on Women's Employment must be addressed to Miss Mary R. Macarthur, Hon. Secretary, 8, Grosvenor-place, Hyde Park Corner, London.

The Yorkshire Observer,
May 24th. 1915.

THE "WORK FOR WOMEN" FUND.

GIRLS OF "THE QUEEN'S OWN."

The Melbourne mail brings news of the fortunes of the first party of girl emigrants who left London last February to start life afresh in Australia assisted by the Queen's "Work for Women" Fund. The girls who formed the party called themselves "The Queen's Own." They had what they were pleased to call their uniform made in the workrooms of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and approved, as they knew, by the Queen herself. As she departed for her new home each girl was given £1—the Queen's shilling—a gift from the "Work for Women" Fund, given so that no girl shall be without money in emergency. The registration fee of £1, which was the only fare required by the Government of Australia before sailing, was also paid by the fund.

"Ladies there would be ashamed not to be able to scrub a floor!" said one of the Queen's Own emphatically, "and they don't look down on you there as they do here if you're in service."

Melbourne was the city of the girls' dreams ever since they were shown limelight pictures of it at a tea party given by the British Women's Emigration Association at the Imperial Institute. Afterwards they collected all the booklets about it, and one girl even made expeditions to the institute to study the products. Long before they sailed they had traced their voyage on the map.

The girls are well armed with introductions. Each one carries with her two letters from Mrs. Harcourt, chairman of the Sub-committee for Emigration, to the ladies representing the Y.W.C.A. and the Victoria League in case they need help and advice, and before the girls sailed their names and home addresses were forwarded from the head London offices of the Victoria League and the Y.W.C.A to Australian representatives residing in the districts where the girls are employed.

In addition the girls also carry introductions to the representatives of the British Women's Emigration Association, who will willingly help them in any difficulty.

653a/11 653

The Times,
May 22nd. 1915.

THE QUEEN AND UNEMPLOYED GIRLS.

TOUR OF LONDON WORKROOMS.

The Queen and Princess Mary paid a visit yesterday to the Cordwainers' College, Bethnal-green-road, where girls who were thrown out of work through the war have been sent by the Central Committee on Women's Employment for three months' free training in boot-upper stitching and leather stitching. The training was offered by the London County Council and the Cordwainers' College, and the girls have now been 10 weeks at work, during which time they have had a maintenance grant from the Queen's "Work for Women" fund.

The Queen, who was accompanied by the Lady Bertha Dawkins and Mr. E. W. Wallington, followed the progress of the girls from the start. The results of the exercises in buttonholing, scalloping, and difficult turns were shown to her Majesty, who accepted one or two pieces to take away with her. The Queen was surprised at the variety of coloured patent leathers shown to her, pointing out those in gold and silver as her favourites. Oriental leather she had not seen before.

The Queen talked to a girl who is leaving next week for her first place in a boot factory and learned from her that she had formerly been a tie-boxer, but that she found the leather work very much more interesting. Her Majesty remarked on the skill with which the girls were "skiving"—cutting the leather edges so that they can be turned in—and she entered into the difficulties of "fitting."

Mr. Box King, a member of the Cordwainers' Company who was presented to her Majesty, said that he had had the honour of making her shoes when a child and also those of Queen Alexandra and Queen Victoria.

Afterwards her Majesty visited the branch work room of the Lambeth Committee, at Herne-hill, where work is being found for small independent dressmakers, who, being already past middle age, are not suitable for the work now available. Specimens of their work were shown to the Queen.

The Royal tour ended at the contract work room of the Central Committee, where a number of girls, chiefly from the printing trade, are employed on hand knitting machines, making socks for soldiers. The Queen was very anxious to know if the work was not harder than the girls had been accustomed to, questioning them herself as to whether they felt the shaking when the day was over. Her Majesty talked with the teachers, asking the time the girls took to learn, the rates of wages earned, and the output.

The Queen's "Work for Women" Fund yesterday reached a total of £156,857. The subscriptions included £37 collected by the Mayoress of Lewes.

All communications and gifts for sale should be addressed to Lady Roxburgh, hon. secretary, 33, Portland-place, London, W., and all cheques be made payable to Mrs. C. Arthur Pearson, hon. treasurer, at the same address, and crossed "Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund Account."

The New Statesman
26/6/15.

650
653 a 12

THE NEW STATESMAN

Blue Book Supplement

VOL. V. No. 116. SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1915. ADDITIONAL PAGES.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
THE "PRINCE OF WALES'S FUND"	1
THE CENSORSHIP	2
THE FOURTH BOER WAR	3
COUNTY COUNCILS AND LAND HUNGER	4
THE EXPORT OF INDIAN LABOUR	5
PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT	5
THE MUDDLE OF OUR ART COLLECTIONS	6
THE ABSTRACT OF LABOUR STATISTICS	7
COLONIAL REPORTS	8
THE PUBLIC TRUSTEE IN WAR-TIME	8
THE NEW WORLD	9
"UNSINKABLE SHIPS"	9
MIXED CHARITIES	10
NATIONAL INSURANCE FINANCE	10
THE POLICE AND THE WAR	10
SILVER IN WEST AFRICA	11
DISEASE IN THE TROPICS	11
CHRONIC LEAD POISONING	11
THE DISEASES OF ANIMALS	11
THE ALLEGED CORNERING OF AUSTRALIAN MEAT	11
SCOTTISH REFORMATORY SCHOOLS	12
LIST OF BRITISH GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS	12

THE "PRINCE OF WALES'S FUND"

Report on the Administration of the National Relief Fund up to March 31st, 1915. Cd. 7756. Price 2½d.

This is the somewhat belated Report of the proceedings of the Committee responsible for what is commonly referred to as the Prince of Wales's Fund. Down to March 31st the total subscribed was £4,907,000, and the total "allocated" was £1,960,000 (round numbers only are given). The fund is commonly assumed to have been raised for the purpose of relieving persons thrown out of work by the war. The phrase used by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in his appeal was the "considerable distress among the people of this country least able to bear it." But at the same time H.M. Queen Alexandra was appealing for subscriptions for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association. Within a week the two funds were amalgamated, the intention being definitely stated "to embrace within the scope of its philanthropic effort the relief of all hardship, whether arising directly from war casualties or through unemployment caused by the inevitable dislocation of trade." A third fund, that for the employment of women, started by H.M. the Queen, was also paid into the National Relief Fund, but was "earmarked for schemes of employment or training." This enlargement of purpose has been little understood by the public.

It is explained that the administration has been shared by no fewer than three independent central committees, to say nothing of the Local Government Board, the War Office, and the Admiralty, besides the hundreds of "Local Representative Committees," appointed by Mayors and Provosts on the invitation of the Local Government Board, and the equally numerous local committees of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association. The Prince of Wales appointed a committee "after consultation with the Prime Minister," which contained three Cabinet Ministers, and was at first presided over by a Government Whip. But the Government also appointed its own committee, mainly of Ministers, presided over by the President of the Local Government Board. The Queen presently appointed her own committee to manage that part of the fund that was to be devoted to schemes of employment or training for women. There were also separate committees for Scotland and Ireland; there were the independent authorities at the Admiralty and the War Office; and there was the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association. The present Report neither explains the reason for this multiplicity of central authorities, nor enables us to unravel the tangle among them.

The first job was the starving wives and families of the suddenly embodied or enlisted men, for whom the War Office failed to pay the separation allowance promptly. We are not told how many had to go to the workhouse. But down to March 31st £925,801 was spent by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association, over £700,000 of it apparently drawn from the National Relief Fund, in discharging the duty of the War Office and Admiralty. It is not stated what conditions the Fund Committee made with these two offices in thus coming to their help. It does not seem that duplicate payments were avoided, or that any considerable part of such duplicate payments was ever refunded. Meanwhile we are told that the Fund Committee has "approached the War Office with a view to a substantial grant from Army votes" being made to the Fund, merely "in recognition of the services which the Fund has rendered." It does not appear why the whole sum thus expended was not definitely reclaimed.

The inadequacy of the separation allowances was a cause of great trouble. It seems to have been bandied about among the different committees for months together. Meanwhile all sorts of extra allowances were paid (including a very substantial "Rent Allowance"—in proportion to the amount of rent paid!)

More equivocal are the payments which seem to have been made to other bodies, to be dispensed at their discretion for special objects. The Royal Patriotic Fund Corporation got £75,000 (again only round numbers) for widows and orphans, the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society £35,000, and the Blinded Soldiers' and Sailors' Hostel £5,000. The Professional Classes Sub-Committee successfully touted for grants to no fewer than twenty-one charitable societies, old and new, to the extent of £4,982. The Poor Clergy Relief Corporation, for instance, received £400 out of the Fund, in order to relieve the distress caused by the war among the clergy! The National Association for the Organisation of the Handmade Lace Industry got £100. It might be urged that these subsidies to other "charities" were not covered by the Prince of Wales's Appeal, and ought not to have been made out of the Fund thus collected.

The "civil distress" was less than was anticipated, owing to the enormous numbers of men for whom the Government provided "maintenance under training," with separation allowances for their wives, mothers, children, and other dependents. Practically nothing was done, either by the Central Committees or by the hapless Local Representative Committees, to meet such distress as arose by providing other employment, or (except as regards a small proportion £108,671 was issued to Local Representative Committees (besides £43,000 to Scotland and £20,000 to Ireland—sums that seem disproportionate) for the relief of the unemployed and distressed wage-earners. Birmingham, Bolton, and Burnley got the largest sums (over £10,000 each, whilst Islington drew £7,090).

The Queen's Fund for employing or training women, administered by its own Committee consisting principally of women, seems the only one to have been dealt with throughout on clear lines of principle. (For its separate report, see Cd. 7848). Altogether just upon £40,000 was spent in these schemes of educational employment for women.

It remains to be said that the administration expenses were only £6,358. No particulars are given as to the temporary investment of the huge sum of over five millions sterling, or of the amount received in interest. In fact, no revenue and expenditure account is given, and no balance sheet. Will the accounts of this essentially public fund be audited by the Comptroller and Auditor-General?

THE CENSORSHIP

Memorandum on the Censorship. Cd. 7679 1d

Memorandum on the Official Press Bureau. Cd. 7680. ½d.

The Censorship, we are told, has been designed with a threefold object: to prevent information of a military value from reaching the enemy; to acquire similar information for our own purposes; to check the spread of information likely to be of use to the enemy or prejudicial to the Allies. Apart from the vagueness of this third clause it is difficult to quarrel with these excellent principles, but the steady stream of abuse which is poured out over every branch of the censorship would suggest that no little difficulty is found in putting them into practice. It is not the place here to consider the justice of these complaints so much as to explain, so far as is possible from these two Memoranda, the constitution and workings of this necessary but evil product of the war.

Taking first the censorship of private and commercial correspondence, we find that it is conducted under the authority of the Army Council, through the direction of a General Officer responsible immediately to that body. It falls naturally into two sections—the cable censorship and the postal censorship—each controlled by a chief censor, both of which are senior officers of the General Staff. Apart from some 120 cable and wireless stations throughout the Empire, the Cable Censor controls in the United Kingdom all messages sent over Government and private cables. At the beginning of the war his authority extended also over press cables, but this section was later transferred to that much-discussed organisation, the Official Press Bureau, which will be described later. The number of cable censors employed in the United Kingdom is about 180, to which must be added about 400 for the rest of the Empire. In this country most of the cable censors are retired military and naval officers, "many of whom," we are somewhat naïvely told, "after years of distinguished service, have exchanged an official for a commercial career."

As in the United Kingdom alone some 30,000 to 50,000 telegrams pass through the hands of the Censor every twenty-four hours, it can be understood that considerable difficulty is found in maintaining uniformity of treatment, since so much must obviously be left to the individual censor. Broad general rules, it would appear, are established, and with the help of these the censor must make his decision. The chief difficulty is met in dealing with commercial cables. On the one hand, no effort must be spared to prevent the commercial cable being used for the conveyance of military information or for assisting any trading operation with the enemy; on the other, British and neutral trade must be interfered with as little as possible. That innocent trading has been handicapped is clear from the many complaints that have been made, although these at the same time, have been glad to learn that a certain number of commercial advisers had been called in to assist the retired naval and military officers, despite the fact that many of these have in the past "exchanged an official for a commercial career."

The postal censors, who number about 800, are for the most part civilians. They have been, we are told, "most carefully selected." This selection, however, would not, to judge from certain cases which have been commented on lately in the press, appear to be infallible; but perhaps this is impossible to expect when a staff of this size has to be created almost at a moment's notice. The regulations dealing with correspondence are particularly interesting, and it is astonishing, considering the number of those in England who have friends or relatives abroad, that they have not been made widely known long before this. Harmless letters, we are told, are transmitted even when coming from an enemy country or addressed to an alien enemy in this country. At the same time no letter can be transmitted to an enemy country unless the envelope is left open and is enclosed in a cover addressed to a neutral country. Letters containing code or any kind of secret writing are naturally liable to be stopped at once.

The correspondence dealt with is divided into three classes, each of which is supervised by a separate section of the Censorship. In the first comes all correspondence of prisoners of war in Britain and of British prisoners in hostile countries. In the second, or Trade Branch, comes all commercial correspondence with certain foreign countries. The third branch, for general correspondence, comprises letters from the Expeditionary Forces, letters and parcels to and from certain foreign countries, press messages sent abroad by other means than cable, and newspapers. Letters from the area of military operations are generally, as is well known, censored locally. Some, however, slip through, and these, if caught by the Post Office in England, are sent on to the censors for examination. The mails from certain foreign countries are naturally examined, although lists are supplied of certain classes of persons whose letters it is not necessary to open. It would be interesting to learn more details as to such lists, but dictates of caution prevent any explicitness on this point.

In reference to private correspondence the Memorandum uses the words "liable to censorship." That many letters are allowed to pass through unopened is well known to any who are in continual correspondence with the Continent. Obviously the difficulty of censoring a huge mass of correspondence is very great. At the same time, if we are to have a letter censorship—and have it we must—we can at least demand that the staff should be large enough to deal with its work efficiently. The transmission of newspapers in bulk between foreign countries and newsagents of repute in this country is not, we are told, subject to any restriction, and there is no restriction on the sale of enemy newspapers in this country. An assurance of this kind conflicts strangely with the difficulties that have been met by those who wished to discover our enemies' standpoint by reading hostile journals. It is possible, however, that the confusion of earlier regulations has now been modified, and, to judge at least by this Memorandum, there should be no difficulty in the way of any private person who wishes to order through his newsagent German or Austrian journals. This, at least, is a satisfactory step forward, which can be productive only of good in this country, since nothing is more likely to increase our feeling of determination than a daily acquaintance with the press of our enemies.

There remains the question of the Press Censorship. As far as cabled news is concerned it is controlled by very much the same regulations as those for private communications. Indeed, as has been already pointed out, the press cable censors were originally part of the general cable censorship, and were only brought under the authority of the Press Bureau towards the end of last year. The cable censors came in to the Press Bureau with a very clearly defined set 653.

Daily Chronicle

October 29th 1915.

653a/13

THE QUEEN'S MAGIC NET.

WOMEN SAVED FROM WAR'S PRIVATIONS.

MR. HAROLD BEGBIE'S STORIES OF NOBLE RESCUE WORK.

"Because she has lent to this difficult, heroic, and merciful work of women not only the high sanction of the throne, but the powerful aidance of her domestic spirit; because she cannot content herself with patronage for sorrow and doles for distress, but studies earnestly how best she may assuage the one and relieve the other; because she is wise yet simple, simple yet strong, strong yet gentle; because she reigns at the head of national life a reproof to the flippant, a light to those who waver, and a living sympathy to the good; because she hates evil and despises weakness; because she is so fair a woman and so pure a Queen—let me give you for finis to this brief chronicle of a great unselfish labour, inspired, organised and developed by women, the health and happiness of our Sovereign Lady.

"God save the Queen."

These words form the epilogue to Mr. Harold Begbie's book about the work done by the Queen's Work for Women Fund ("The Queen's Net: True stories of all sorts and conditions of women saved from the war flood of suffering and privation and despair . . . collected and told by Harold Begbie. Hodder and Stoughton, 6s.). And truly the Queen's net has dredged from the great ocean of humanity some rare specimens which are full of interest, not only to the sociologist, but to the student of life itself.

There is material for at least half a dozen novels in Mr. Begbie's little book, and the stories hardly need his art to make them profoundly interesting. But it is scarcely necessary to say that our author has handled his material with all his accustomed skill. We are introduced to the star artist in one of the Gilbert-Sullivan opera companies, to the lady detective, to the circus rider who "topped the bill" at Sanger's and Hengler's years ago, to the little governess stranded in England after the war with 1s. 6d. in her pocket, to the flower-seller, to the "home-helper," to the dolls' hat maker, to the girl gardeners.

HUNGER-CHEATING TRICKS.

All these, and more, told their stories to Mr. Begbie, and every one of them is of absorbing interest. Take the first one—a lady and her daughter living on the 10s. a week earned in one of the Queen's workrooms. There was the picture of the early country house, a delightful home surrounded by every luxury. Then came the death of the father, when everything vanished, leaving mother and daughters penniless. But she had a good voice, and managed to get into one of Mr. Doyly Carte's touring companies. After this, her life was spoilt by a brute of a husband, and the outbreak of the war found her completely stranded. And now life on 10s. a week!

She began to tell me of her tricks to cheat hunger. "Perhaps you have no idea how very cheaply one can live. For instance, with a tin of condensed milk and a few crusts of bread a person can manage to exist for several days. With sugar and currants added—I sometimes treat myself to a pennyworth of currants—the dish is quite appetising."

As for a cup of tea, she declares that the same leaves can be used at least three times.

The lady detective was a remarkable woman, who had built up a big connection as an "inquiry agent." But the war came, and with it a slump in crime of every kind, and detectives, however knowledgable and acute, had become a drug in the market. "The guilty game of hide-and-seek was at an end for the present. Lothario was learning to wind puttees round his shanks, and Messalina was knitting." So there was nothing in view but starvation until the Queen's net drew up this sinking waif of humanity. But her heart was in the old work, and she longed for the war to be over, so that she could return to the old life about which Mr. Begbie tells us many interesting stories.

Another study was that of the eldest of three sisters, members of a good Hampstead family, who had started a hat shop on the death of their father. But the first guns of the war shook down all the hats in their shop window. "Poor brave amateur milliners; they began to be hungry." Then one day—"when we were at our last gasp"—they read about the workrooms, and all three got work.

CIRCUS RIDER'S STORY.

Lulu began life as a circus rider, and when young she earned £18 and £20 a week; she appeared in most of the great circuses of the world. But as age came on work grew scarcer, and on the outbreak of war, Lulu had to be content with engagements from the cinema agencies—"I am pretty useful to these people; I know how to fall out of a window, and I can ride anything they give me." But the war stopped even this slender means of livelihood, and there seemed to be nothing for it but starvation until the Queen's Fund came along.

Perhaps the saddest story of all is that of the little governess who was stranded in Vienna after the war. Her early life reminds one of Tommy Traddles—she was adopted by a lady who had no children, and at the death of the latter she was turned out in the world penniless. She got employment in a fashionable school in Germany to teach English. "I was very happy with the German people," she told Mr. Begbie.

"But I remember once being very much surprised by the exclamation of a German countess. We were speaking about the Kaiser's daughter, and somebody began to speculate as to whom she should marry. I said, 'You have forgotten our Prince of Wales.' As I said this the countess threw up her hands and exclaimed, 'Oh! God save us from that!' Things like that make me feel the envy and dislike of England which is general in Germany."

After Germany came a position in Vienna, and when the war broke out she was expelled. On her way home she lost all her possessions, and landed in England friendless and penniless.

There are many more such stories in this deeply interesting book. And those who buy it will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are adding to the resources of Queen Mary's excellent Fund.

NIGHTDRESS PATTERN OFFERED FREE. (See Page 252).

HOME NOTES

Valentine

SEE POEM INSIDE

No 1101.
Vol. LXXXV.
Feb. 13, 1915.
ONE PENNY.

RAW WET WEATHER

Vi-Cocoa fortifies you against any weather; stimulates, warms, keeps you bright and cheerful, no matter how depressing the day.

Contains cocoa to warm and nourish—kola to strengthen and fortify—malt and hops to keep you fit and well.

DR TIBBLES' Vi-Cocoa

THE WATFORD MFG. CO. Ltd.

PROPRIETORS ALSO OF

Boisseliers Chocolates and Freemans Table Delicacies.

Sports Sweaters and Jerseys.

Receipts for new smart shapes for men and women, girls and boys, to be carried out in the famous BEEHIVE Scotch Fingering, 'the wool that stays woolly when washed.' BEEHIVE Booklet No. 14, post free for 2½d., from

J. & J. BALDWIN, HALIFAX.

Look for the BEEHIVE on every skein.

Trial Bottle. 6d.

SEEGER'S SEEGEROL

FOR GREY HAIR

Tints grey or faded hair any natural shade desired. Permanent, washable. Contains no lead, mercury, sulphur. Medical certificate accompanies each bottle. Trial bottle 7d., large case 2s. 2d. post free, secretly packed.

Chemists, Stores, Hairdressers everywhere; or direct—

HINDES LTD. Finsbury, London.

WHITE LIQUID PETROLEUM

THE SAFEST AND BEST APERIENT

Vaseline

(TRADE MARK REGISTERED)

ODORLESS - - AND - - TASTELESS

WHITE Liquid "Vaseline" has been used for many years with the utmost satisfaction, both by physicians and surgeons in the treatment of various diseases. Recently it has attracted world-wide attention by its use as a mechanical lubricant in chronic and general constipation and stasis. It has also proven valuable for the relief of old and standing adhesions and many diseases pertaining to the stomach, alimentary canal and intestines, as well as for use in abdominal surgery and in chronic and rheumatoid Arthritis.

By lubricating the passages and the intestinal tract, the White Liquid "Vaseline" offers a sure relief in cases of Flatulence and Dyspepsia. It assists an overtaxed system to free itself of undue burdens, to assimilate nutriment from food, and to expel the wastes and poisons of the body in a perfectly free and healthy manner, and is a useful aperient which may be safely employed for the youngest of infants. White Liquid "Vaseline" is the original liquid paraffin so widely used and recommended by the medical profession.

It cannot be too strongly urged that all due precaution is necessary in employing any curative agent internally. Hence it is well worth while insisting upon the Chesebrough Company's White Liquid "Vaseline."

In bottles, 1/-, 1/9, and 2/6.

CHESEBROUGH MANUFACTURING CO. (Consolidated), 42 Holborn Viaduct, LONDON.

Booklet telling of the many sovereign uses of Vaseline (in all its varieties) post free on receipt of postcard.

ITEM 653a/14

WOMEN IN THE TRENCHES.

This very interesting article, by a writer who knows a great deal about the war, tells you all about some of the plucky women who are actually working in the firing line.

Very carefully and gently the wounded are carried away by the intrepid "women in the trenches," to be attended to in the Field Hospital.

Lady Dorothie Feilding, the leader of as gallant a little band of workers as ever braved the enemy's fire.

Photos] ["Alfieri" and Swaine.

PERHAPS the most extraordinary feature of this altogether amazing war is the wonderful enterprise and courage shown by the women. Even those who have been in the trenches and shared the dangers and hardships of the men have never lost the cheery courage that so heartens the soldiers in their task.

Take Lady Dorothie Feilding, for instance—the little lady in the big hat and dark fur. Although she looked very winsome and sweet in her ball-dresses in the old days, somehow she seems to me to be much more at home in the very becoming Service kit she is wearing in the second picture on the next page, and her smiling face shows you that she holds the same point of view.

She is tremendously popular with the soldiers, who love her for her jolly ways and unaffected manners. One of our own boys in khaki, invalided home, saw this photograph of Lady Dorothie. "Why," he exclaimed with delight, "he's got her! Those camera fiends don't often fetch it off, but this is her to the life! She goes about the trenches grinning and joking just like one of ourselves."

And another Tommy I know was quite indignant because he found his heroine's name misspelt in a newspaper paragraph. "Dorothie, with a Y, and her surname just like the word that means a meadow!" he commented crossly. So please remember carefully, if you don't want to offend her many adorers, that the Lady Dorothie's Christian name must be spelt with an ie, and—reversing the order—her surname must have an ei.

* * * * * * *

Christina McNab in Burning Dixmude.

"A Lame Dog's Diary" is one of the books I never tire of reading. In it a soldier, disabled in the South African War, diaries up for us his human little love-story after he is back at home and being spoilt by his sister and friends. Well, the author of this charming book, Miss Macnaughtan, known to us also as Christina McNab, will surely have some wonderful stories to write when she is home again from the trenches.

She, like Lady Dorothie Feilding, was in shell-stricken Dixmude, helping to bring away the wounded during the fighting round about Ghent.

Mr. Philip Gibbs, in one of his splendid descriptive narratives, tells of the rescue party that took the ambulances right in amongst the bursting shells. The gallant leader was Lieutenant de

All rights reserved.] [Published by C. Arthur Pearson Limited.

Brogville. So intent was he on his work of rescue that he ordered off the first ambulance while yet he had much to see to, and Lady Dorothie and Mr. Gibbs discovered afterwards that he had somehow been left behind altogether.

Mr. Gleeson and Mr. Ashmead-Bartlet went back to search, but returned with no news of the lost hero. They walked sadly into the convent where they had brought the wounded. A table was laid for supper, and they sat down in silence, pretending to eat.

Suddenly, Lady Dorothie started up with a cry of joy, and Mr. Gibbs, turning, saw De Brogville walking briskly into the room. He had remained with the buildings crashing down around him, and in a momentary lull of the firing had miraculously managed to escape, making his way on foot to where an amazed and delighted welcome met him.

"The courage of Lady Dorothie and her comrades," said Mr. Gibbs, in describing this journey into the shell-torn ruins of Dixmude, "is one of those splendid things which gleam through this devil's work of war."

It is no wonder that "Tommy" adores his nurses, who run grave risks if necessary in order to bear him to safety.

Doesn't Lady Dorothie look happy in her very becoming "get-up"? Her ready smile and jest have won all hearts.

Amongst the names of women whose nobility and courage shine out steadily and serenely during these dark days, that of Queen Elisabeth of Belgium is surely the first and most deeply honoured.

Photos, "Alfieri," News Illustrations, and Boute.

* * * *

Our Dreadnought Duchesses.

The Duchesses' roll of honour is a lengthy one, but high on the list are the names of Millicent Duchess of Sutherland and the Duchess of Westminster.

The first-named Duchess is the sort of lightning worker who makes me, whenever I meet her, take a long breath, pull out my engagement book with feverish haste, and jot down an average of six more things per day that I positively must squeeze in, however crowded the list already noted! An officer, talking to me about her the other day, put it rather graphically: "When war was declared, she just made a wild dash for the Front, and then waved back to England a cheery 'There first!'"

She went to Brussels, I think it was, first of all, and when she saw what was wanted, wired instructions at such a rate that before the middle of August the ambulance bearing her name had reached Namur, and the Duchess herself was nursing the wounded in the very midst of a violent bombardment.

How she ever found time to write her already published book. "Six Weeks at the War," I can't think! Then, too, she managed to spare a week-end to run over to England and marry Major Desmond Fitzgerald, both of them making their way back to France immediately. Do you wonder she makes me breathless? And the list of industries and societies she has founded, and of charities she has helped is simply astounding in length!

* * * *

Brave Little Belgium's Queen.

Queen Elisabeth of Belgium is not only a skilled nurse, but she is a qualified doctor, and, moreover, a most courageous woman. She has gone, and still goes, everywhere with her hero-husband, "the young prince," as Anatole France has called him, "who rivals the best kings in wisdom and the roughest troopers in courage." And another great writer in his tribute sent to King Albert's book says, "He is the man who has given the faded glories of royal crowns a new splendour, and at his side stands his wife, a woman, who, from being Queen over a realm, rises to become the Holy Mother of a nation."

By the way, to my mind, it is the one flaw upon a noble book that no portrait of King Albert's Queen is included in the volume.

I was delighted to see, the other day, a portrait of Her Majesty in the possession of Miss Bennet Burleigh, the daughter of the famous war correspondent and another of our intrepid women of the trenches. The photograph is a pleasing one, and Queen Elisabeth signed it for Miss Bennet Burleigh, so you can imagine it is one of her most cherished possessions!

PRESENTS FOR A NEW BABY.

If you've got a new baby on your visiting list, and are wondering what gift would be most acceptable for this all-important young person, read this little article, which is full of useful suggestions.

WHEN we girls at the office heard that Helen White had got a wee son, we all made up our minds to send her some of the nicest presents we could think of for the newcomer. You see, we knew that Helen had been so busy preparing her husband's things before he went off to join his ship that the poor baby's "trousseau" had been rather neglected, and we felt certain that there must be heaps of things she wanted for the new arrival.

So, after office hours, we held a council of war and announced what presents we were going to send, so that there should be no duplicates. I also suggested that it would be much more exciting for Helen if we arranged to send her our gifts on different days, so that every morning the post would bring her some little surprise packet.

Helen told us later, when we were allowed to go and see her, that it was simply lovely having a mysterious little package to unwrap every day, and she added that she was sure that our little gifts did a great deal towards hastening her convalescence.

Postie's first package was three dear little towels made of the finest damask, and daintily embroidered with the single word "Baby." Each one was folded separately and tied with blue satin ribbon. Next morning a small square box covered with gay cretonne arrived. On opening it Helen found a spool of blue bébé ribbon with a threader stuck in the lid lining, while inside the box was the prettiest little pillow. On the following day, the sister of the donor of this gift completed it with three cases made of the finest linen, edged with hem-stitched frills to match.

Two of the girls crocheted bootees of different patterns, and another, whose sister made hats for a smart milliner, sent a bonnet which was so delightful that Helen put it away for the christening.

Several of the girls declared that they were no good at fine needlework, and they sent most original contributions. Helen thoroughly enjoyed the arrival of a miniature clothes-horse which had been scrubbed snowy-white and had the webbing bands concealed beneath smart bows of blue ribbon. A bath thermometer, whose ordinary plain wooden case had been ornamented with poker work, and a dainty hand-made flannel apron, which Helen donned on the first day that she proudly tubbed her son and heir, were also much appreciated.

A friend who had left the office and taken up "Beauty Specialist" work, sent a basket of her latest novelties. These were little "bath-bags," made out of small squares of butter-muslin filled with oatmeal and shredded Castile soap, very delicately scented and tied up with washing ribbon.

A cushion, replete with safety-pins of every possible size, a little hot-water bottle with a soft fluffy cover, a powder-box, brush and comb, and an eider-down quilt for baby's cot arrived in succession, and before Helen's nurse left, she told me she had never nursed a case that started so badly and so soon changed to "almost abnormally good."

Dainty little "bath-bags" are a welcome contribution to baby's trousseau, and they are so easily manufactured.

THE WIFE WHO ASKS TOO MUCH.

A thoughtful little talk on a subject of great importance to all married couples.

